PREFACE

In no particular have modern historical studies made greater progress than in the reproduction and publication of documentary sources from which our knowledge of the most varied peoples and periods is drawn. In American history whole libraries of such sources have appeared or are promised. These are chiefly in English, although the other languages of Europe are of course often largely represented. The employment of such sources from the early epochs of the world’s history involves either a knowledge of ancient languages on the part of the user, or a complete rendition of the documents into English. No attempt has ever been made to collect and present all the sources of Egyptian history in a modern language. A most laudable beginning in this direction, and one that has done great service, was the Records of the Past; but that series never attempted to be complete, and no amount of editing could make consistent with themselves the uncorrelated translations of the large number of contributors to that series.

The author is only too well aware of the difficulties involved in such a project. In mere bulk alone it has been a considerable enterprise, in view of the preliminary tasks made necessary by the state of the published texts. These I have indicated briefly in the chapter on the sources herein (Vol. I, §§ 27–32). Under these circumstances, the author’s first obligation has been to go behind the publications to the original documents themselves, wherever necessary. The method pursued has also been indicated herein (Vol. I, §§ 33–37). The task has consumed years, and demanded protracted sojourn among the great collections of Europe. In this work a related enterprise has been of the greatest assistance. A mission to the museums of Europe to collect and copy their Egyptian monuments for a commission of the four Royal Academies of Germany (Berlin, Leipzig, Göttingen, and Munich), in order to make these documents available for an exhaustive Egyptian Dictionary endowed by the German Emperor, enabled the author to copy from the originals practically all the historical monuments of Egypt in Europe. The other sources of material, and particularly the papers of the Dictionary just mentioned, have enabled the author to base the translations in these volumes directly, or practically so, upon the originals themselves in almost all cases.

Unfortunately, the possession of these materials is but the beginning of the difficulties which beset such an enterprise. In the preface to the first edition of his English Dictionary, Noah Webster complains of the difficulties caused by the new meanings taken on by English words as they are modified by the new environment which envelops them in America. If such changes are involved in the voyage across the Atlantic, and the lapse of a few generations, how much wider and deeper is the gulf due to the total difference between the semitropical northern Nile valley of millenniums ago, and the English-speaking world of this twentieth century! The psychology of early man is something with which we have as yet scarcely begun to operate. His whole world and his whole manner of thinking are sharply differentiated from our own. His organization, socially, industrially, commercially, politically; his tools, his house, his conveniences, constantly involve institutions, adjustments, and appliances totally unknown to this modern age and this western world. In the translation of the New Testament for the tribes of Alaska, I am told, there has been great difficulty in the rendition of the term "Good Shepherd," for the reason that many of these people never saw a sheep and never heard of a shepherd. Similarly, how shall one rehabilitate this ancient world of the Nile-dweller, and put his documents into intelligible English, when the ideas to be rendered are often unknown to the average modern and western reader, and, needless to say, there are no corresponding terms in the English language?

Another constant source of difficulty has been the lack of those indispensable helps, the legion of concordances, glossaries, handbooks, and compilations for ready reference, which the worker in Greek or Hebrew has constantly at his hand. In spite of the colossal industry of Brugsch, we are still without a dictionary of Egyptian to which one can turn with any hope of finding other examples of a rare word. Hardly any Old Kingdom documents at all were employed by Brugsch in the compilation of his dictionary, and, grateful as we are for what he was able to furnish us, we must still await the great Berlin Dictionary before we shall possess an exhaustive compendium of the language. I was able to employ the alphabetically arranged materials of the Dictionary here and there, but the compilation was not sufficiently far advanced at the conclusion of my work to be of much service. Wherever I have drawn examples from it, they are carefully acknowledged in the footnotes. A good many distinctions in the meanings of words have become evident to me in the course of the work upon the documents. Wherever such have become clear late in the progress of the work, it was impossible to go through the translations and revise the entire manuscript for the sake of such words alone. I have tried to control these cases as far as possible in the proofs, but I am confident that some such changes have been overlooked as the accumulation of alterations demanded in the proofreading was quite beyond my powers of observation in so large a mass of materials. Thus, for example, the common word \textit{sr} is usually translated "prince," and this is undoubtedly sometimes the meaning of the word; but it very frequently means "official," a fact which I did not observe until far along in the progress of the work.

Some danger of confusion also arises from the fact that titles indicative of rank or office suffer great change in meaning in the lapse of several thousand years. Thus the \textit{hnty} or "count" of the feudal and pre-feudal ages becomes a mere magistrate or town-mayor in the Empire, although in sporadic cases the word still retains its old meaning. The translation of titles has perhaps been the greatest source of difficulty in the entire course of the work. Many of the offices found cannot be determined with precision. We have as yet no history of titles—one of the most needed works in the entire range of Egyptian studies. Under these circumstances, it has been impossible always to define with precision the range and scope of a given office. Even when these were determinable, the corresponding term was often wanting in English, and could not be devised without the use of a whole phrase. In some cases awkward combinations have been necessary in the renderings of titles. Thus the compound "king's-son" was adopted because it is occasionally followed in the original by a pronoun referring to "king," which made the rendering "royal son" impossible. For this reason a series of such compounds has been employed: "king's-son," "king's-daughter," "king's-wife," "king's-mother," "king's-scribe," and the like. It is hoped to render all such matters clear in the index.

In general, the effort has been to render as literally as possible without wrenching English idiom. In this latter particular I probably have not always succeeded; but I have deliberately preferred this evil to a glib rendering which reads well and may be a long distance from the sense of the original. We have had so much of so-called "paraphrasing," which does not even remotely resemble the purport of the original, that I have felt justified in gratifying a righteous horror of such romancing, even at the cost of idiomatic English. The reader has a right to expect that the subjective fancies of the translator have been rigidly excluded, and a right to demand that he may put implicit dependence both upon the individual words and the general sense of the renderings. At the same time, the author would distinctly disclaim any desire to give to these translations the authority of monographs. The extent of the materials, and the amount of time expended in the collection, collation, and correction of the original texts before doing anything toward a formal version, have made it impossible to devote to the translation of each document as much time as one would deem necessary for the production of a monograph upon it. While the most conscientious attention has been given to the versions, and they have sometimes been revised three times (always once), yet it is undoubtedly the case that, in the course of rendering such a mass of materials, errors have crept in. Notice of any that may be observed by my fellow-workers in this field will be gratefully received, and utilized should a future edition of these volumes ever appear.

For the benefit of the general reader, it should be noted that a complete revolution in our knowledge of the Egyptian grammar has taken place in the last twenty-five years. The exhaustive study of syntax and of verbal forms which has been in progress for generations in the classic languages, or even in the Semitic group, has been going on for only a little over a quarter of a century in Egyptian. This is no reflection on the work of the first two generations of Egyptologists, for such work was impossible in their day. In this quarter-century, immense progress has been made and certain definite results have been attained. It cannot be said that these results have yet been applied to the understanding of the historical documents of Egypt as a whole. One of the main purposes of this work has been the attainment of this end. Indeed, its chief object may be indicated in this connection as: first, the attainment of copies which in correctness adequately reproduce the original document; and, second, an English version which shall embody our modern knowledge of the language. Every effort has been made to realize these two aims, and only in such degree as they may have been attained will these volumes form a contribution to knowledge.

In the selection of documents there has sometimes been difficulty in deciding what should and what should not be included by the term "historical document." All purely religious compositions, as well as all exclusively literary documents (belles-lettres), all science, like mathematics and medicine, and in most cases all business documents, have been excluded. In the Old Kingdom, however, the last have been included, in view of the limited materials surviving from that distant age. It is hoped that these other classes of documents will appear in further volumes of this series. In all cases, however, where the other classes of documents were of vital historical importance—that is, bore directly on events and conditions closely touching the career of the Egyptian state—they have been included here. These volumes, therefore, include the entire series of written documents from which we draw our knowledge. of the career of the Nile valley peoples as a nation, until the beginning of permanent foreign domination at the advent of the Persians in 525 B.C.

Besides furnishing an English version of these documents, the scope of this work also includes the proper introduction of the reader to their intelligent study; hence the versions are accompanied by notes and introductions. These are threefold in character. Firstly, in a footnote appended to the title of each document, the reader will find a brief description of it, indicating whether it is of stone or papyrus, a stela, a relief, an obelisk, or whatever it may be, with statement of its size and material whenever the data were obtainable. The state of preservation is noted, and then all the publications in which the text of the monument has appeared. In a word, this footnote contains the lower criticism of the document. No attempt has been made to add to the bibliography the various treatments and discussions of the monument which have at various times appeared. The bulk of these essays are long since obsolete, and the time has certainly come when we can detach our usable bibliography from this incumbering inheritance, without at the same time failing to recognize with gratitude the great service which it once rendered to the science. Furthermore, it has seemed a duty to indicate to the reader in this footnote, the comparative value of the more important publications of the text. If an edition of the text has proved inaccurate and untrustworthy, it is but right that it should be known as such. In a purely objective and impersonal manner, therefore, such materials have been characterized in these introductory footnotes.

Secondly, each monument is supplied with a usually short introduction, setting forth the historical significance of the document, its character, and, where necessary, a résumé of its content. It therefore contains in brief compass the higher criticism of the document. Much of the historical background, and literary value of the more important documents will be found set forth more fully in the author’s History of Egypt, which is based upon the documentary sources in these volumes. As a further aid in gaining a comprehensive idea of the content, the version of each document itself has been divided into logical paragraphs, each with a subtitle. It is intended that by this plan a given passage of the document may be referred to by number, thus furnishing a very brief system of reference to all the monuments, by means of the volume number (Roman) followed by the paragraph number (Arabic).

Thirdly, the version of each monument is accompanied by running footnotes explaining obscure matters in the text as far as possible. It has been impossible to make these any fuller, although the author is quite aware that many details requiring explanation have been left without comment. It has been his especial endeavor to adduce in the footnotes, or at least call attention to, all related matter, whether in this series of translations or elsewhere among the monuments of Egypt. It has often been more convenient to introduce a very brief or fragmentary inscription of a few words in a footnote attached to a related passage in some larger document, than to give such flotsam and jetsam independent heads as separate documents. It is expected to render these all easily discoverable in the index. The maps necessary to an understanding of the geography of the monuments will also appear with the index.

I have attempted to solve the unwelcome problem of the transliteration of Egyptian words and names by giving the proper names where necessary in two forms: first, a vocalized form for the layman; and, second, a purely consonantal transliteration placed after it in parentheses. As the layman for whom the first is intended knows nothing of Egyptian orthography, it is not important that he shall be able to recognize in the forms the consonants of the original. This vocalized form should, however, as nearly as possible reproduce the consonants upon which it is based, without introducing elements unintelligible to the layman. Hence I have ignored 3 and c, y becomes i or y, and w is indicated by u or w. The consonantal transliteration adopted is the most nearly satisfactory system yet evolved, viz., that of the Berlin school, with some slight modifications. It is as follows:

\begin{array}{llll}
\text{ס} &= \text{Semitic ס} & \text{n} &= \text{Semitic נ} & \text{s} &= \text{Semitic ס} \\ \text{Y} &= " י " & \text{r} &= " ר " \text{ or ל } & \text{k} &= " ק " \\
\text{W} &= " ו " & \text{h} &= " ח " & \text{k} &= " ק " \\
\text{C} &= " כ " & \text{h} &= " ח " & \text{g} &= " ג " \\
\text{B} &= " ב " & \text{h} &= " ח " & \text{t} &= " ת " \\
\text{P} &= " פ " & \text{h} &= " ח " & \text{t} &= " ת " \\
\text{M} &= \text{Semitic מ} & \text{s} &= " ס " & \text{q} &= " ק " \\

In the so-called "syllabic orthography" employed by the Egyptians in writing foreign words, only the first consonant of each biconsonantal sign has any significance. The second has no phonetic value in such words.

This is not the place to discuss the closer equivalences of these consonants. It is probable the ס (Eagle) diverges

"The nature of the difference between this and the following s is entirely obscure. From the Middle Kingdom on, they represent the same sound. Herein the distinction has been consistently indicated only in the Old Kingdom."
slightly from the pure aleph of the Semitic languages, while the initial y has frequently become an aleph. It has not seemed wise to burden a work of this character with such distinctions, and the y appearing in these volumes at the beginning of a word merely indicates that the initial consonant of the original word is "reed-leaf" without predicating anything as to whether its sound is " or ฿.

To the numerous colleagues in Europe who have been so ready with assistance whenever called upon, I would here publicly express the deepest obligation. For untrammeled access to their collections, and never-failing co-operation, my sincere acknowledgments are due to the authorities of the museums at Berlin, London (British Museum, University College, Petrie Collections), Paris (Louvre, Bibliothèque Nationale, Musée Guimet), Vienna (Hofmuseum), Leyden, Munich, Rome (Vatican, and Capitoline), Florence (Museo Archæologico), Bologna, Naples, Turin, Pisa, Geneva, Lyons, Liverpool, and some others. It is with the greatest pleasure that I recall the years of work in the Berlin Museum to which these volumes have called me. It would be impossible, were I to attempt it, to enumerate the daily kindnesses or tell of the constant co-operation which I have enjoyed there. For daily access to the materials of the academic Dictionary, already mentioned, I would express to Professor Erman, and the gentlemen of the Dictionary staff, my hearty thanks. For never-failing personal counsel and aid my thanks are also due to Erman, Schaefer, and Sethe;
while Steindorff, Borchardt, Spiegelberg, Gardiner, Bissing, Weigall, Newberry, Petrie, and Legrain have placed valuable copies, collations, photographs, or reports at my disposal.
The unremitting labors of Maspero and Wiedemann have given us indispensable bibliographies of the historical documents, and these have been of great service to me—a service for which I would express to them my sincere thanks. I did not, however, depend solely upon these works, but made an independent bibliography from the beginning—a plan which not infrequently turned up invaluable old sources not before employed.

To my friend, President William R. Harper, for his interest in this enterprise, and his unfailing support in arranging for my repeated absence in Europe for the prosecution of these studies, I owe a debt of gratitude. Likewise to the Board of Trustees of the University of Chicago, for the same privileges, it is an agreeable duty to express my appreciation here.

Finally my thanks are due the staff of the University of Chicago Press for unremitting attention to the difficult typographical work of these volumes—an attention to which the appearance of the work is of itself sufficient evidence. I should add that circumstances entirely beyond my control have obliged me to read the proofs of the volumes very rapidly, and it is probable that they contain more typographical errors due to this fact than I could wish. For great assistance in reading the proofs I am indebted to my brother-in-law Dr. R. S. Padan, and for like aid to my wife and her sister, Miss Imogen Hart.

EXPLANATION OF TYPOGRAPHICAL SIGNS AND SPECIAL CHARACTERS

1. The introductions to the documents are in twelve-point type, like these lines.

2. All of the translations are in ten-point type, like this line.

3. In the footnotes and introductions all quotations from the documents in the original words of the translation are in italics, inclosed in quotation marks. Italics are not employed in the text of the volumes for any other purpose except for titles.

4. The lines of the original document are indicated in the translation by superior numbers.

5. The loss of a word in the original is indicated by —, two words by ——, three words by ———, four words by ————, five words by ————, and more than five by ————. A word in the original is estimated at a “square” as known to Egyptologists, and the estimate can be but a very rough one.

6. When any of the dashes, like those of No. 5, are inclosed in half-brackets, the dashes so inclosed indicate not lost, but uncertain words. Thus r—1 represents one uncertain word, r——1 two uncertain words, and r———1 more than five uncertain words.

7. When a word or group of words are inclosed in half-brackets, the words so inclosed are uncertain in meaning; that is, the translation is not above question.

8. Roman numerals I, II, III, and IV, not preceded by the title of any book or journal, refer to these four volumes of Historical Documents. The Arabic numerals following such Romans refer to the numbered paragraphs of these volumes. All paragraph marks ($$ and $$§, without a Roman) refer to paragraphs of the same volume.

THE DOCUMENTARY SOURCES OF EGYPTIAN HISTORY

1. The general course and the gradual development of Egyptian civilization are in some respects roughly traceable in its surviving material documents, in the products of the artist and the craftsman, which we are accustomed to assign to the domain of the archaeologist. With these invaluable material documents the present volumes of course do not deal. They purpose to present only those written documents from which the career of the Nile valley peoples may be drawn at the present day. A rapid survey of the materials herein presented may enable the non-Egyptologist to gain some preliminary conception of their general character.

2. Comparatively speaking, but very little of the rich and productive civilization which flourished for at least five millennia before Christ on the banks of the lower Nile, has survived in written documents for our enlightenment. Accident has preserved but here and there the merest scrap of the vast mass of written records which the incessant political, legal, administrative, religious, industrial, commercial, and literary activities filling the life of this ancient people, were constantly putting forth. We may make one exception: the religious literature, doubtless the least instructive, as a whole, of all their literary documents, has survived in an incalculable mass of temple inscriptions and papyri, which have never even been adequately published, much less exhaustively studied.

3. It is with those documents in which the national career as a whole can be traced that we have here to deal. From the pre-dynastic age onward the kings kept a series of annals, recording in each year the great deeds and achievements of the Pharaoh which he thought worthy of perpetuation. Of such annals only two fragments have survived: the Palermo Stone, part of a record extending from the earliest times down into the Fifth Dynasty; and the annals of Thutmose III's wars, of which a few extracts were excerpted by a priestly scribe and recorded on the walls of the Karnak temple. Had we the annals of the Pharaohs in complete form, we might perhaps write almost as full a history of Egypt as it is possible to do for the Middle Ages of European history. Without these, we are dependent upon a miscellaneous mass of documents of the most varied character and value, which chance and circumstance have preserved from destruction these thousands of years. In general, such documents show more literary character and picturesqueness than the Assyro-Babylonian records; but the latter dry and formal annals possess greater historical value, and exhibit a preciseness which indues them with a rare availability as sources. The Egyptian records which chance has preserved to us are, as a whole, so vague and indefinite in their references to peoples, localities, persons, and the character of events, that they are often tantalizing in what they do not tell us. Thus in records of whole campaigns of Thutmose III in Syria the hostile Syrian king is designated merely as "that foe" (lit. "fallen one"), and we are uncertain whether the king of Kadesh, of Mitanni, of Aleppo, or of some other realm is meant. The real excerpts from Thutmose III's Annals (II, 391 ff.), however, show that such records contained an elaboration of detail not less precise and historically available than the cuneiform annals. So much the more must we deplore their loss.

4. How hazardous was the life of such a document may be well illustrated by the great building inscription, upon a huge stone stela, erected by Sesostris I nearly two thousand years before Christ, in his new temple at Heliopolis. The great block itself has since perished utterly; but the practice-copy made by a scribe, who was whiling away an idle hour in the sunny temple court, has survived, and the fragile roll of leather (§§ 498 ff.) upon which he was thus exercising his pen, has transmitted to us what the massive stone could not preserve.

5. That we possess any documents at all from the Old Kingdom (2980–2400 B. C.) is chiefly due to the massive masonry tombs of that age, in which they were recorded. The exceptions are inscriptions on foreign soil, and a few scanty fragments of papyrus containing accounts and letters. The vast quantity of such papyrus documents which once existed is evidenced by the constant appearance of the scribe with his rolls, his pens, and his ink palette, in the tomb reliefs. Such hints from the numerous reliefs in the tombs of this age are the source of our knowledge of the material culture of the time. The chief inscriptions which accompany them consist almost exclusively of the name and many titles of the owner of the tomb. Now and again the legal enactment by which the tomb was endowed and maintained is recorded on the wall. Such wills and conveyances are, of course, invaluable cultural documents.

6. Gradually the nobles were inclined to add a few biographical details to the series of bare titles. The first of such scanty biographies appears at the end of the Third Dynasty (§§ 170 ff.), after which there is a growing fondness for recording at least the chief honors received by the deceased from the Pharaoh, especially the furnishing and equipment of his tomb at the king’s expense. The daily intercourse of the deceased with the king, the privileges which he enjoyed in connection with the royal person, or now and then the copy of a letter from the king to his favorite—all these serve to make such biographies of inestimable value in completing our picture of the culture of the time. In the Sixth Dynasty these biographies become real narratives of the career of the departed noble, or at least of his most notable achievements in the service of the Pharaoh. The most important documents of this character are the biographies of Uni (§§ 291 ff.), and the nobles of Elephantine (§§ 325 ff., 355 ff., 362 ff.), one of whom has included therein a personal letter from the king (§§ 350 ff.).

7. As the aggressiveness of the Pharaohs increased, their foreign enterprises found record on the rocks in a number of distant regions (outside of Egypt proper), where they still exist. In the Peninsula of Sinai they appear in the First Dynasty (began 3400 B. C.); by the Fifth Dynasty (ended by 2580 B. C.) the officials who led such expeditions commenced to add their own records below the mere relief depicting the triumphant king, a scene to which heretofore only the name of the king was appended. From the Fourth Dynasty such memorials begin to appear in the alabaster quarries of Hatnub, behind Amarna; and from the reign of Isesi, in the Fifth Dynasty, they become more and more numerous in the quarries of Hammamat in the eastern desert, on the road from Coptos to the Red Sea. Practically all that we know, for example, of the power and deeds of the Eleventh Dynasty (2160–2000 B. C.) is drawn from records in these quarries.

8. They soon become so regular that their stoppage is almost certain evidence of an interruption in the orderly course of government in the Nile valley. Similar inscriptions on the rocks at the first cataract (§§ 316 ff.) begin in the time of Mernere, of the Sixth Dynasty (2625–2475 B. C.). The earliest inscription (§§ 472, 473) above the cataract in Nubia itself dates from the reign of Amenemhet I, the first king of the Twelfth Dynasty (2000–1788 B.C.). Under the Empire such records on foreign soil appear also in Syria and Palestine (III, 297). Quarry inscriptions within the borders of Egypt do not begin until the Middle Kingdom, when we find them in the limestone quarries of Ayan (Turra-Ma²-sara) just south of Cairo (§§ 739, 740); at the sandstone quarries of Silsileh they first appear under the Empire.

9. From the Middle Kingdom (2160–1788 B.C.) on, the memorial stelae at Abydos are exceedingly valuable. Officials on various commissions, whose business carried them to the holy city, improved the opportunity to erect memorial stones craving the favor of Osiris, the great god of the dead, for themselves and their relatives. Now and again such an officer narrates the circumstances which called him to Abydos; thus Ikhernofret, the treasurer of Sesostris III, records on his stela (§§ 661–70) not only the occasion of his visit, but also a copy of the royal letter which contained the command dispatching him thither.

10. In this age the tomb biographies become extremely valuable, because of their tendency to fulness and family details—a tendency already visible in the Tenth Dynasty tombs at Siut (§§ 391 ff.). But unfortunately only the tombs of Middle Egypt, chiefly at Benihasan (§§ 619 ff.), are preserved. Royal monuments with inscribed records become more plentiful, especially in Nubia, where the boundary stelae of Sesostris III (§§ 651–60) are especially noteworthy; and in the quarries of Hammamat and the mines of Sinai. Papyri of any kind in the Middle Kingdom are still none too plentiful. Literary papyri are well represented by aThe great Old Kingdom inscription of Uni at Abydos hardly belongs to the class of memorial stelae here designated. The inscription of Zau (§§ 344–49), of the Sixth Dynasty, however, should probably be included in this class; but it is unique in its time.

several magnificent manuscripts. Of business and administrative documents, like letters, bills, accounts and tax lists, we have examples in the Kahun Papyri, of which the second find, now at Berlin, is still unpublished. But papyrus documents of strictly historical import, such as we can include here, are still rare in this age.

11. Under the Empire (1580–1150 B.C.) the available documents both in quantity and quality for the first time approach the minimum which in European history would be regarded as adequate to a moderately full presentation of the career of the nation. Scores of important questions, however, still remain unanswered, in whatever direction we turn. Nevertheless, a rough framework of the governmental organization, the constitution of society, the most important achievements of the kings, and to a limited extent the spirit of the imperial age, may be discerned and sketched, in the main outlines, with clearness and fair precision, even though it is only here and there that the sources enable us to fill in the detail.

12. It is especially royal monuments which are more plentiful in the Empire, as compared with earlier times. The first and most important class of such documents is found in the temples—a source which in the earlier periods has totally perished. It was customary already at the beginning of the dynasties for the king to commemorate his victories in the temples. This custom led in the Empire to extensive and magnificent records on the temple walls, on a scale not before attempted. Such documents were less records than triumphal memorials, and as historical sources they are therefore very insufficient. They dealt with events with which all were familiar at the time of their erection, and hence specific references to the said events are rare, or, if present at all, are couched in such vague and general terms that little can be drawn from them at the present day.

13. They consist chiefly in extensive reliefs on the temple walls, depicting the victorious Pharaoh in battle, capturing prisoners, or presenting prisoners and spoil to Amon. They are accompanied by descriptive and explanatory inscriptions, which unfortunately consist, for the most part, in conventional phrases in laudation of the Pharaoh as a mighty ruler. As the temples of the Eighteenth Dynasty have to a large extent perished, the priceless records of that imperial family have perished with them. We have three great series of reliefs: one representing the birth of Queen Hatshepsut (II, 187 ff.), and a duplicate depicting the birth of Amenhotep III (II, 841 ff.), while the third pictures the voyage of Hatshepsut to the land of Punt (II, 246 ff.). More valuable are the extracts from the annals of Thutmose III on the walls of the Karnak temple (II, 391 ff.), already mentioned, and a similar record of his son Amenhotep II on a large stela at Karnak (II, 780 ff.). The temple records of the Nineteenth and Twentieth Dynasties are much more plentiful; but they are almost exclusively of the unprecise character above described. Besides the great record of Merneptah's Libyan war, (III, 569-617), which is a much better source, they are chiefly memorials of the wars of Seti I (III, 80-156), of his son, Ramses II (IV, 294–391, 448–91), and of Ramses III, of the Twentieth Dynasty (IV, 1–145).

14. Another class of temple records is the building inscriptions. Apart from their value as records of building enterprises, they contain valuable references to the history of the builder. In a number of cases the early career of the builder and the manner in which he came to the throne are prefixed as an introduction to the record of the building itself. This is observable as far back as the building inscription of Sesostris I, in the Twelfth Dynasty (§§ 498 ff.); in the Eighteenth Dynasty (1580-1350 B.C.) we gain invaluable hints of the early life of Thutmose III from his great building inscription in the Karnak temple (II, 131 ff.). Such building records not infrequently also contain priceless references to the wars and campaigns of the Pharaoh, whence he may have obtained the wealth for the edifice in question. Notable examples of this class are the stela of Thutmose III in the Ptah temple at Karnak (II, 609 ff.), and the great summary of the buildings of Amenhotep III left by him on a stela in his mortuary temple at Thebes (II, 878 ff.).

15. Records of restorations are not less valuable. The restoration record of Hatshepsut at Benihasan (II, 296 ff.) throws a significant sidelight on the reasons necessitating such restoration of the temples, after their neglect by the Hyksos; while the short remarks of Harmhab and Seti I, recording their restorations after the revolution of Ikhnaton, are invaluable indications of the widespread activity of the latter (II, 878). Again, we gain a hint of the anarchy following this revolution, from the record of Harmhab's restoration of the mummy of Thutmose IV, after its violation by tomb-robbers (III, 32 A ff.).

16. Stelæ dedicating the finished temple to the god were set up in the holy of holies, at the place where the king stood in the performance of the royal ritual. Some of these were of enormous size, that of Amenhotep III in his temple behind the Memnon colossi being no less than thirty feet high, and hewn of a single block (II, 904 ff.). The content of these dedication stelæ does not differ essentially from that of the building inscriptions; they likewise contain references to the wars of the kings erecting them. The most important of these now surviving are the two in duplicate erected by Amenhotep II at Amâda and Elephantine
DOCUMENTARY SOURCES

(II, 791 ff.). The temple obelisks also occasionally bear inscriptions of historical importance, and among these the inscriptions of Hatshepsut (II, 304 ff.), of Thutmose III (II, 623 ff.), and of Thutmose IV (II, 830 ff.) furnish very useful data.

17. All these temple records, being for the glory of the Pharaoh, are couched in language very poetic and highly colored, although the poetic form is not always discernible. Among them, however, are found poems in praise of the sovereign, exhibiting strictly poetic structure, with rigid division into strophes. Some of these contain references and allusions which, in view of the scantiness of our materials, may be employed historically. Such hymns probably existed from the earliest days of the dynasties, but the earliest example preserved is dedicated to the praise of Sesostris III, of the Twelfth Dynasty. In the Empire the most notable example celebrates the fame of Thutmose III (II, 655 ff.). It is the earliest of such poems possessing real historical importance.

18. Royal records not of this class of temple memorials are not numerous. Of actual state documents we possess very few. The viceroy of Kush recorded on stone the decree in which Thutmose I announced his coronation, and of this rescript we possess two copies (II, 54 ff.). At the opening of the Nineteenth Dynasty (1350–1205 B.C.) we have the royal decree instituting the administrative reforms of Harmhab; it is possibly in its original form (III, 45–67). Another great example of a state document is the famous treaty between Ramses II and the Hittite king Khetasar (III, 367–91). The remarkable report of the unfortunate envoy to Syria, Wenamon, may also be a few pages from the royal archives at Thebes (IV, 557 ff.). A few letters from the king personally (e.g., §§ 350 ff., 664, 665) and some legal records (IV, 499–557) complete the list of state documents. The remaining royal documents are of a miscellaneous character, like the unique memorial scarabs of Amenhotep III (II, 860 ff.), or the huge stelae erected as landmarks by Ikhnaton for the purpose of demarking the limits of his new capital at Amarna (II, 949 ff.). Finally, the greatest of all royal documents is the enormous Papyrus Harris, recording the good deeds of Ramses III (1198–1167 B.C.) to gods and men, compiled for his tomb, as a title to consideration at the hands of the gods in the future life (IV, 151–412).

19. The private monuments of the Empire are also more numerous than before and contribute greatly to our knowledge of it. The tombs of the Pharaoh's grandees have now become more personal monuments than ever before. These men, who were guiding Egypt on her imperial career, delighted to perpetuate in their tombs some record of the brilliant part which they were playing in these great events. The generals and administrative officials who under the Pharaoh governed the Empire, now sleep in rock-hewn tombs at Thebes, the chambers of which still bear magnificently painted scenes from their active and adventurous lives. Here we behold the reception of tribute from the remotest limits of the Empire, borne on the shoulders of Palestinians, Syrians, or northern islanders, the whole being accompanied by explanatory inscriptions. The various duties and activities of the greatest officials of the government are here depicted, and from these scenes and the appended inscriptions we can draw fuller data respecting the Empire and its organization than from any other source.

20. These tomb chapels, besides the Amarna Letters, are also the only surviving contemporary source for the civilization of Syria and Palestine in the second millennium before Christ. The most important of such tombs is that of Rekhmire, the vizier of Thutmose III (II, 663–762). The biographies of the generals preserved in these tomb chapels are not infrequently our only source for entire wars of the Pharaoh, of which we should not otherwise have known anything at all—not even that they took place. Besides these tomb inscriptions, the nobles also recorded their biographies, or at least some of their achievements, on the statues accorded them by the Pharaoh in the Karnak temple. Examples of such records are the statue of Senmut (II, 345 ff.), or that of Beknekhonsu (III, 561 ff.). After the Eighteenth Dynasty the Empire abounds in papyri: letters, bills, receipts, administrative and legal documents, memoranda, numerous literary compositions, scientific treatises like those on medicine, mathematics, or astronomy, religious documents, and innumerable ostraca, or potsherds and flakes of limestone bearing receipts, letters, memoranda, or literary fragments. These, for the most part, fall outside of the scope of the present volumes and will appear in later series of these Ancient Records.

21. Such are the main sources for the history of the Empire; there are, of course, numerous unimportant miscellaneous monuments which we have not mentioned; nor do we recall all the classes of documents already referred to in the older epochs, like the inscriptions abroad, which now become very plentiful. Indeed, the rocks of the first cataract under the Empire became a veritable visitors' register of the officials and functionaries who, passing on some commission in Nubia, left a record of the errand, or merely name and titles, engraved on the rocks above the reach of the inundation (e. g., II, 675 ff.). Inscriptions of the emperors are found in Nubia as far south as the island of Tombos, and mere cartouches with titles up to the fourth cataract.

22. With the decline of Thebes in the Decadence (1150–663 B.C.), and the transference of the seat of power to the North, the great mass of records of the royal houses was produced, and their monuments were erected, in the Delta, where almost the whole has perished forever, with the destruction of the exposed Delta cities, overwhelmed by invasion after invasion from abroad, and gradually engulfed by the rising soil as deposited from century to century by the inundation. The fortunes of the northern dynasties can therefore be traced only in the scanty monuments of Thebes, in which the Pharaohs no longer built largely, and at Memphis, where we have a series of dated stelae recording Apis burials in the Serapeum. These are of great value from the Twenty-second to the Twenty-sixth Dynasty. At Thebes the records of the restoration of royal mummies extend from the last generation of the Twentieth into the Twenty-second Dynasty (IV, 592 ff., 636 ff., 661 ff., 664 ff., 688 ff., 690 ff., 699 f.); and a series of dated Nile levels on the quay at Karnak continues from the Twenty-second to the Twenty-sixth Dynasty (IV, 693 ff.). We have at Thebes also a few temple records from the priest-kings of the Twenty-first Dynasty (1090–945 B.C.), a series of decrees of Amon (IV, 614 ff., 650 ff., 669 ff.), and some not very important building records of the high priests of Amon, during the same period. The same is true in the Twenty-second Dynasty (945–755 B.C.), through the brief Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Dynasties (755–712 B.C.), and the Ethiopian period (Twenty-fifth Dynasty, 712–663 B.C.). At this point, fortunately, the scanty monuments of the Delta are supplemented by the historical stelae erected by the Ethiopians at Gebel Barkal (Napata). Among these, the narrative of his conquest of Egypt by Piankhi is one of the most remarkable documents of ancient Egypt (IV, 796-883).

23. The paucity of documents, so painfully evident during the Decadence, is even worse under the Restoration (Twenty-sixth Dynasty, 663-525 B. C.). Besides the great adoption stela of Psamtik I at Thebes (IV, 935 ff.), a few Serapeum stelae, important for the chronology, a small number of statue inscriptions of noblemen of the time, and some miscellaneous stelae of little importance, we possess almost nothing from the Restoration. Unhappily, the papyri, which are so plentiful during the Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-first Dynasties, are few and unimportant throughout the remainder of the Decadence and the whole of the Restoration. Fortunately, Herodotus, and the Greek historians after him, enter at this point with invaluable accounts of the history and civilization of the Restoration epoch; but these foreign sources do not fall within the province of these volumes.

24. Besides these contemporary native sources, we possess also a series of later native versions of important events in the history of the nation. These documents are either merely folk-tales, of course differing strikingly in form from the more formal contemporary records; or they are products of the later priesthoods, which, in the form of a tale, give an account of some earlier event, which they so interpret or so distort as to bring reputation, or even material gain, to their sanctuaries. Of the folk-tales we have three of importance: Papyrus Westcar, relating the prodigies attending the birth of the first three Fifth Dynasty kings; Papyrus Sallier I, narrating the cause of the war with the Hyksos; and Papyrus Harris 500, in which is told the story of the capture of Joppa by one of Thutmoside III’s generals, named Thutiy. As tales these documents have no place in this series, although each is based on some actual historical incident, which may be obscurely discerned in the narrative. The priestly tales are likewise three in number: the Sehel inscription, recounting the gift of the Dodekaschoinos at the first cataract to Khnum by King Zoser of the Third Dynasty; the Sphinx Stela (II, 810 ff.), recording the accession of Thutmoside IV to the kingship, because as prince he cleared the Sphinx of sand; and finally the Bentresh Stela, containing a tale in honor of one of the Theban Khonsus, by showing that he was carried to a distant Asiatic kingdom in order to heal its king’s daughter, in the days of Ramses II (III, 429–47). The last two stories seemed of sufficient importance to be included here. It was with tales in common circulation like these that Herodotus’ informants regaled him, and the narrative portions of Manetho’s history were largely made up of just such stories, of which further examples from Ptolemaic times have survived in Demotic dress.

25. It will be seen that the great mass of the documents available are found in Upper Egypt, and but a scanty few in the Delta. This unfortunate fact makes all our knowledge one-sided, and the history of the Delta, the civilization of which must have risen at a very remote date, remains for the most part unknown to us. Our loss is here like that in Greek history, in which we know almost nothing of the great civilization in the powerful cities of Asia Minor, from which the culture of the early states in Greece drew so much.

26. The documents thus briefly surveyed have reached us, with very few exceptions, in a state of sad mutilation. This mutilation and gradual destruction are a ceaseless process, which, if not as rapid as formerly, nevertheless proceeds without cessation at the present day. In Egypt, the exposed monuments, like the great geographical list of Sheshonk I, are perishing with appalling rapidity, and many of them without ever having been properly copied or published. Even the portable stone monuments at present in the museums of Europe suffer more or less; and I have seen valuable stelae so attacked by the moist air of northern Europe that whole layers might be blown from the inscribed surface by a whiff of the breath. Such an inscription is doomed to disappear in a few years. Papyri when mounted between hermetically sealed glass plates survive indefinitely.

27. These monuments, as employed in Egyptological science, are, for the most part, not accessible in the originals, but are consulted chiefly in publications. Such publications, to omit earlier and cruder attempts, began as far back as the colossal report issued in huge folios by the members of Napoleon I's expedition. Notable and useful as this great work was, its copies of the inscriptions are now quite unusable. To copy an inscription of any kind with accuracy is not easy. So close and fine an observer of material documents as Ruskin, could copy a short Latin inscription with surprising inaccuracy. In his incomparable Mornings in Florence he reproduces the brief inscription on the marble slab covering the tomb which he so admired in the church of Santa Croce; and in his copy of these eight short lines, which I compared with the original, he misspells one word, and omits two entire words ("et magister") of the mediæval Latin.

28. This experience of the great art critic is not infrequently that of the schooled and careful paleographer as well. The best-known of the Politarch inscriptions appeared in eight different publications, each of which diverges in some more or less important respect from all the rest, before a correct copy was obtained. The Greek and Latin inscriptions on the bronze crab from the base of the New York obelisk were long incorrectly read, and the mistake in the date led Mommsen to a false theory of the early Roman prefects of Egypt.\footnote{See II, 632, note.} In working on a mutilated inscription, the best of copyists will now and again overlook traces which his successors may discover and utilize, while now and then he will "nap," and be guilty of some egregious blunder of omission or misreading in a clear and perfectly preserved passage. Under these circumstances, an inexperienced or careless copyist will commit the most incredible blunders, and every line of his copy will contain many such. In the early days of Egyptology, when a reading knowledge of hieroglyphic was still impossible, it required a copyist of exceptional ability to produce a copy which can be used at the present day.

29. This difficulty was sorely felt by accurate and discerning scholars as far back as the days of Chabas, who in 1872 remarked, concerning the inscriptions of Ramses III: "Ces deux publications [Rosellini and Burton] sont très imparfaites; et les signes inexactement reproduits ajoutent à la difficulté causée par les lacunes."\footnote{Études sur l'antiquité historique, 227 f.} The introduction of hieroglyphic type, while very useful in some respects, has also proved disastrous to accuracy, and the persistence of the old loose methods was bemoaned by Brugsch in the introduction to the last volume of his \textit{Thesaurus} thirteen years ago. Brugsch already showed surprising appreciation of the necessity of modern methods in such work. He wrote:

The indispensable demands upon the publisher of known or unknown texts may be comprehended in a few words. In the first place, it is not a task to be undertaken by laymen and mere amateurs . . . . but only by the schooled specialist, who is thoroughly familiar with the language and writing of the ancient Egyptians, and with the researches and results in all departments of Egyptological investigation. How largely such a conviction is still lacking is proved . . . . by a number of publications by Egyptological tyros [Halbwisser] and laymen, who do not yet seem to have learned that Egyptology has ceased to be the pursuit of amateurs, and has become a very serious study, demanding a man's entire strength and entire time.a

30. Not long after this, Griffith called attention to the hurried, inaccurate, and insufficient methods still often observable, so that numerous publications could only be regarded as provisional.b Two years later he referred to such work in these words: "Too often almost every third sign in the printed texts has had to be corrected according to probabilities by the would-be reader."c This condition of things has gone so far that we have had publications issued at government expense, containing texts in vertical columns copied with the lines numbered backward, and even translated in this inverted order of the lines.d It is safe to say that such a condition of things cannot be found in any other branch of paleographical science.

31. This is not the place to discuss the proper methods to be observed in the publication of ancient documents, but there is no doubt that better methods are constantly gaining ground. From decade to decade the publication of inscriptions has steadily improved, but it is only within the last ten or fifteen years that Egyptian documents on stone have in some cases appeared in a form which satisfies the demands of modern paleographic accuracy. With the exception of aThesaurus, VI, vi.

cIbid., 1895–96, 21.
dIn the old publications plenty of examples of such inversion exist, especially in Mariette's books; nor are instances lacking in which modern scholars have employed such texts without discovering the inversion.
such perfectly preserved rolls as the great Papyrus Harris, which was long ago accurately published, the same remark is in general true of the papyri also.

32. The result of all this is that many of the most important documents of ancient Egypt are at present accessible to the Egyptologist only in publications so incorrect that in many cases they are absolutely unusable. It will be evident, therefore, that he who wishes to know exactly what the original documents of ancient Egypt state cannot work exclusively in his library, but must go behind the publications and turn back to the originals themselves, in Egypt and the museums of Europe.

33. For the purposes of these volumes it was therefore absolutely indispensable in most cases to go back of the publications. The author, therefore, made and repeatedly revised his own copies of practically all the historical monuments in Europe, before the originals themselves. In the few cases where the original was not accessible, good squeezes and photographs supplied the deficiency, or professional colleagues furnished from the originals specially collated readings of doubtful passages. Of the monuments in Egypt the author copied a great many at all the more important sites, especially Thebes and Amarna, where he made a complete copy of all the historical inscriptions; and in the museum at Cairo (formerly Gizeh). Of monuments in Egypt not included in the author's copies, squeezes were in most cases found in the enormous collection made by Lepsius, and now in the Berlin Museum. Where none of these sources furnished the desired monument, the author had access to the extensive collations made for the Berlin Egyptian Dictionary; and where these failed, he was able, in all important cases, to secure large-scale photographs of the originals. The final remainder of monuments for which the author was dependent upon the publications alone is very small, and in most such cases the publication was one made on modern methods and almost as good as the original itself.

34. Nevertheless, it must not be supposed that the old publications, however inaccurate, can be ignored. Some monuments have perished entirely since publication, and almost all have lost more or less important portions of the text. In the case of all the longer and more important texts, often reproduced in the old folios, the author took the best copy as a basis and collated with it all the other publications, noting in parallel columns all the variant readings. By this laborious means, some readings were secured which have since disappeared from the original, and all that is now available, whether in publications or in the original, was thus incorporated in the final composite copy, from which the translation was made. In a few cases the author was spared this labor by the industry of a modern editor of the document, as in the publication of the Benihasan tombs or those of Siut; but ordinarily the modern editor has not given himself this trouble, as in the last publication of Der el-Bahri.

35. The dangers involved in such neglect are evident. Thus so careful a scholar as Chabas discussed the so-called "eclipse inscription" (IV, 756 ff.) of Takelot II, using only the publication of Lepsius; whereupon Goodwin called his attention to the fact that the very conscientious plate of Lepsius had nevertheless introduced confusion into the text by the accidental misplacement of a piece of the paper squeeze from which his copy was made, thus inverting the proper order of two sections of the very obscure text. Had Chabas also employed Young's otherwise obsolete copy of the original, this embarrassing error would not have occurred.

36. Chabas\textsuperscript{a} himself convicted Lenormant of a similar error in discussing Ramses II’s victory over the Hittites at Kadesh. Lenormant\textsuperscript{b} employed only the Abusimbel version of the report of the battle, not noticing that the ancient Egyptian scribe had omitted an entire line of the document, as is shown by the Ramesseum version. This omitted line happens to be of vital importance to a proper understanding of the battle, and the failure to observe its omission is fatal to any discussion of the conflict. The same error, nevertheless, has since been repeated in at least one notable modern treatise on the same battle.\textsuperscript{a} Further examples might be adduced in illustration of the danger incurred in making a study of any inscription as found in a single publication of the text.

37. The translations in the following volumes, we repeat, are therefore based upon all the available material for the reconstruction of each document, whether in the original or in old publications made at a time when the original was possibly in a better state of preservation. In no other way can all the available material be obtained, and scholars who would compare the renderings herein with the original documents themselves will in many cases be able to do so only by reconstructing the text in the same way.

CHRONOLOGY

38. The state of our modern chronology of early Egyptian history is so confused that a brief presentation of the system herein employed seemed indispensable, although space will not permit even partial discussion of the materials upon which it is based. The following presentation, moreover, will attempt nothing more than an explanation of the elementary factors of the problem, as even these are unknown to some who have nevertheless arbitrarily rejected their invaluable data.

39. The Egyptians, as far back as the fifth millennium before Christ, had discovered approximately the length of the year. They, like all other peoples, had suffered from the vexatious fact that the lunar month is not an even divisor of the year. Instead of attempting to adjust this obstinate incommensurability by constant and complicated intercalations, they showed amazing appreciation of the practical demands which a calendar should satisfy, and boldly abandoned the lunar month as the basis of the calendar. Believing the year to be 365 days long, they divided it into twelve months of thirty days each, and an intercalated period of five days at the end of the year. The creation of this convenient and practical, though artificial, calendar was an achievement unparalleled in any other ancient civilization. It was as useful to men of science as to civil life in general, and for this reason it was in later times aSince this brief discussion was written, the admirable essay of Meyer ("Aegyptische Chronologie," Abhandlungen der Königlichen Preussischen Akademie, 1904) has appeared, from which the author has frequently added valuable observations to the above presentation. The literature of the subject is large, but Meyer's invaluable treatise furnishes a compendium of the whole obscure and difficult field.

adopted by the Greek astronomers as the basis of all their computations.

40. The Egyptian began his year at the advent of the inundation, and this event, by a happy accident, approximately coincided with the reappearance of Sirius (Sothis) at sunrise on the eastern horizon, after he had been for some length of time invisible. This occurred each year on July 19 (Julian). The interval between such heliacal risings of Sothis was thus fortunately approximately a solar year. The feast of the Rising of Sothis on July 19 was therefore the New Year's feast of the Egyptians. The year was also arbitrarily divided into three seasons, each containing four months of thirty days each. These were: the season of verdure, or the inundation; the season of winter or sowing; and the season of summer or harvest. When this remarkably rational calendar was introduced, it of course coincided with the seasons as determined for the people by the sun and the inundation. But the Sothic year was almost exactly, and in 3231 B. C. was exactly, a quarter of a day longer than the new calendar year of 365 days. Every four years, therefore, the calendar reached the end of the year and began the next year one day too soon, so that the rising of Sirius fell on the second day of the new year. As this process continued, and each calendar New Year's Day arrived earlier and earlier, it finally passed gradually around the whole year and again fell on the astronomical New Year's Day. This process consumed four times as many years as a It took place on July 19 (Julian) as the normal date, in the latitude of Memphis, for many thousands of years B. C., until far down in the last thousand years B. C., when the Sothic year had sufficiently lengthened to shift the heliacal rising of Sothis to July 20. (See Meyer, op. cit., 1904, 17 ff.)

b Neither the solar nor the Sothic year is constant in length, and at present they are slowly diverging.

there were days in the calendar year; that is, 1,460 years; or we may say: 1,461 calendar years = 1,460 Sothic (Julian) years.

Without knowing it, the Egyptian was thus dealing with three different years: a

1. His calendar year of 365 days, by which most of the business of civil life was transacted and all documents were dated.

2. The Sothic (or Julian) year of 365\(\frac{3}{4}\) days, on the first of which the people celebrated the feast of the Rising of Sothis.

3. The solar (or Gregorian) year of a little less than 365\(\frac{3}{4}\) days (which was therefore slowly diverging from the Sothic year).

41. The Egyptian, as we have intimated, never learned that the Sothic (Julian) and the solar years were not identical; the divergence b was so slow, and so slight, that it was entirely imperceptible to the masses, or possibly even to the learned, of the time. On the contrary, the difference between his calendar and the feast of the heliacal Rising of Sothis (that is, 1 and 2) must have been early observed. Nevertheless, the actual shift within an average lifetime was not so great as to occasion inconvenience. Thus each generation accepted the place of the calendar in the seasons as they found it, and without remark considered it as a matter of course that the beginning of the inundation, or the advent of summer heat, fell on about such and such a day of a certain month. Both these events had occurred

b In 4231 B.C. the summer solstice fell on July 28 (Julian); but as it was always eighteen hours and forty minutes earlier than the Sothic rising each century, it had advanced thirty-one days, to June 27, by 231 B.C. In the thirty-first century (3001-3100) B.C. it coincided with the Sothic rising on July 19 (Julian). (See Meyer, op. cit., 14 f.) at about that time since their earliest remembrance. A peasant of fifty or sixty—that is, at the end of an average life—hardly remarked that the seasons were now ten or twelve days later in the calendar than when he was a lad of ten. Unfortunately, references to the place of the seasons, or of astronomical events, in the calendar are rare; nevertheless, there are enough of such references to trace the gradual revolution of the calendar on the seasons.

42. In the Sixth Dynasty, Uni, a nobleman who had been sent to Assuan to procure granite from the quarries there, narrates that he succeeded in landing his cargo at the king’s pyramid, although it was in the eleventh month, when, he adds (as everyone knew), there was no water for such transportation. The time of advancing low water, terminating heavy transportation of this sort, normally in the eighth to the ninth month of the calendar, thus fell two months later in Uni’s time (§ 323).a In the Middle Kingdom a hitherto misunderstood inscription (§§ 735 ff.) narrates how an unfortunate official, dispatched to the mines of Sinai, arrived there in the third month of (calendar) winter, when he and his men suffered greatly from the summer heat! This shows a divergence of seven or eight months; as we should expect, in the centuries which have elapsed since the Old Kingdom the calendar had shifted several months. A letterb from a priest in the 120th year of the Twelfth Dynasty, notifying his subordinates that the feast of the Rising of Sothis would occur on the fifteenth of the eighth month,c shows us the exact amount of the shift at that time; for the feast thus fell exactly 225 days (seven months and fifteen days) after New Year's Day in the calendar.

43. The divergence steadily increased, and in the early part of the Eighteenth Dynasty, in the ninth year of Amenhotep I, it was exactly 308 days. A Sothic date somewhere between 47 and 101 years later, in the reign of Thutmose III, shows that it had then increased to 327 days (II, 410, note). It is, furthermore, roughly indicated by the dates of his campaigns in Syria (II, 409 ff.), which, as we know, always occurred from April to October. His son Amenhotep II's campaigns carry the divergence a little farther, and some 150 years later its continuance is shown by the dates of Ramses II's campaigns (III, 307). For nearly six centuries after this we have no indication of the place of the calendar, but in the third year of Shabataka, about 700 B.C., the first day of high Nile is recorded at Thebes as occurring on the fifth of the ninth month of the calendar (IV, 887). The calendar had thus completed its revolution around the seasons, and had also shifted nearly 180 days in another revolution, since the reign of Thutmose III. The shift of the calendar can thus be traced for some 2,000 years, as determined by six different dates of astronomical or seasonal events, and a series of other significant occurrences, in terms of the calendar.\(^c\)

\(^a\)Calendar of Papyrus Ebers.

\(^b\)The date of the high water in the reign of Osorkon II, in the Twenty-second Dynasty (IV, 742 ff.), will be of assistance when the correct date is known; but as given by Daressy (Recueil, 18, 181) it has certainly been incorrectly transliterated from the hieratic. The calendar of Ramses III (largely copied from an almost completely lost original of Ramses II), which places the Rising of Sothis on New Year's Day, is of course a normal calendar intended to avoid constant readjusting of its long list of dates from time to time. Such a calendar of feasts could be perpetually used without alteration, by merely allowing in each date for the then amount of the divergence.

\(^c\)The conjecture (\(eo ipso\) very improbable) that the calendar was at irregular intervals readjusted to the astronomical year, is completely disproved by the procession exhibited by the above series.
44. These data are of significance and value in two respects. In the first place, they demonstrate the very early advance of the Egyptians in the discernment and calculation of astronomical and calendrical phenomena. For we know from the use of the Egyptian year by classic astronomers and mathematicians that the calendar coincided with the Sothic year, and that a new Sothic cycle began, some time in the period 140/41 to 143/44 A. D.\textsuperscript{a} It must therefore also have coincided with the Sothic year 1,460 years earlier; that is, in 1320 B. C.; and still earlier, in 2780 B. C.\textsuperscript{b} Now, it is impossible that this calendar was first introduced so late as the twenty-eighth century, in the midst of the highest culture of the Old Kingdom. Moreover, the five intercalary days at the end of the year, proving the use of the shifting year of 365 days, are mentioned in the pyramid texts, which are far older than the Old Kingdom.

45. The calendar, therefore, existed before the Old Kingdom; but if this be true, we must seek its invention at a time when its three seasons coincided roughly with those of nature, as they must have done at its introduction. This carries us 1,460 years back of their coincidence in the Old Kingdom; that is, the calendar was introduced in the middle of the forty-third century B. C. (4241 B. C.). This is the oldest fixed date in history. This fact demonstrates not only a remarkable degree of scientific knowledge in that remote age, but also stable political conditions, and a wide recognition of central authority, which could gradually introduce such an innovation. The date employed was that for the rising of Sothis in the latitude of Memphis or the southern Delta, and this fact is a significant indication of the high culture prevailing in the north at this time.\textsuperscript{c}

\footnote{\textsuperscript{c}See Meyer, \textit{op. cit.}, 38 ff.}
46. In a second respect the calendar is of inestimable value to us in establishing the chronology of Egyptian history. Where the heliacal rising of Sothis is recorded in terms of the calendar, it is a matter of the simplest arithmetic to determine, within a margin of four years, in what year B.C. the rising occurred. As we have seen, three such dates are preserved to us, two of which each give the year of the king’s reign, and from these the entire Twelfth Dynasty, and the reign of Amenhotep I in the Eighteenth Dynasty, are established within four years in terms B.C. They show that the Twelfth Dynasty began in 2000 B.C., and the reign of Amenhotep I in 1557 B.C., thus determining the accession of the Eighteenth Dynasty as 1580 B.C. The third Sothic rising, in the reign of Thutmose III, is not dated in a particular year of the reign, so that it furnishes only a rough approximation of the date of his reign, proving that the year 1470 B.C. fell within his reign. This approximation may be rendered precise by a computation based upon the feasts of the New Moon, which Thutmose III is recorded to have celebrated in his twenty-third and twenty-fourth years (II, 430). These new-moon dates establish the date of Thutmose III’s reign as May 3, 1501, to March 17, 1447 B.C. The two other early dates are chiefly of aThus: The rising of Sothis at the beginning occurs on the first day of the calendar year. From a given calendar date of its rising the amount of the shift of the calendar can be computed in an instant. In the 120th year of the Twelfth Dynasty Sothis arose 225 days after New Year’s Day. As the shift occurred at the rate of one day in four years, the 225 days’ shift had taken place in 900 years since the calendar coincided with nature; that is, since 2780 B.C. The 120th year of the Twelfth Dynasty was thus 1880 B.C., and the dynasty began in 2000 B.C. (or between 2000 and 1996 B.C.).

bMeyer, op. cit., 46 ff.

cThe phases of the moon occupy the same position in the calendar every nineteen years. The date of Thutmose III’s reign being roughly determined by the Sothic rising, the new-moon dates can then be employed to place this reign more precisely. Without the Sothic date the new-moon dates would be of no use, as they merely present conditions recurring every nineteen years.

significance in demonstrating the fact of the shift of the calendar in the Old and Middle Kingdoms, but are not precise enough to determine with exactness the date B. C.

47. Besides the above astronomical method, minimum dates as far back as the beginning of the Eighteenth Dynasty can be determined by dead reckoning back from a fixed starting-point. The result thus obtained, without reference to the astronomically determined dates, can then be compared with these, for the sake of testing both. The dates by dead reckoning are obtained by simply adding together the totals of reigns and dynasties, and with these reckoning back from the accession of the Persians in 525 B. C. In this process I have employed only the testimony of the contemporary monuments.a

48. Our first task is to determine the length of the dynasties preceding the invasion of the Persians; that is, the Eighteenth to the Twenty-sixth Dynasty. The method is first to seek the highest known date in each reign of a dynasty, and thus to determine the minimum length of the dynasty. In the use of royal dates given in years of the reign only, there is danger both of over- and of under-reckoning. Thus Ramses III reigned thirty-one years and forty days; but a date from his thirty-second year might lead one to think he had reigned thirty-two years, which is nearly a year in excess of the truth. As the newly crowned successor to the throne began to number his years from the death of his predecessor, it will be seen that the remainder of what would have been Ramses III's complete thirty-second year is included in the reign of his successor.b If counted in both reigns, it is therefore counted twice. It has therefore

b This is supposing that, as in the Eighteenth Dynasty, the years of a king began with the day of his accession, and not on the New Year's Day preceding his accession, as in the Middle Kingdom and the Twenty-sixth Dynasty.
been thought necessary to deduct one year for every transfer of the crown.\textsuperscript{a} This method, however, is extreme, as we shall show. In the first place, it applies only when the maximum date preserved is actually the respective king's last year. Again, it does not always apply even then. Thutmose III reigned fifty-four years lacking thirty-four days. The reign of his successor, therefore, included only the last thirty-four days of what would have been Thutmose III's complete fifty-fourth year. To deduct a year at this transfer of the crown is as extreme as to count the thirty-second year of Ramses III's reign. It is evident that the last year of a king's reign is as likely to be nearly complete as it is to be scarcely begun; hence the only fair method of reduction for double counting at the transfers of the crown is to count the number of transfers in an entire dynasty, and for each transfer to deduct a half-year; that is, a mean between the two extremes of deducting a whole year for each transfer, or of deducting nothing. In the course of a whole dynasty the errors both ways will probably compensate each other.\textsuperscript{b}

49. In the following table I have made no deduction for transfer of the crown either to or from a king from whose reign we have no dates, but in all such reigns (marked $x$) such deduction has been included in the estimate of the reign. It is needless to add that in cases of coregency such deduction is unnecessary. In estimating the $x$, or unknown years in a given reign, the historical facts of the reign, if any, have been duly considered, though there has not always been space to note the said facts. That this is absolutely necessary will be evident. Thus Sheshonk I took out the stone from the Silsileh quarry for his Karnak building in his twenty-first year. The vast forecourt of the Karnak temple of Amon, or the enormous front pylon, was then built by him. Yet his highest date is that of the said quarry operations in the twenty-first year. It is clear, therefore, that he must have ruled several years more, and no fair chronological reckoning can disregard these years.

50. Observing the above precautions, we obtain as a minimum for the Empire and following dynasties, down to the accession of the Persians, the following figures:

As the accession of the Persians occurred in 525 B.C., the beginning of the Eighteenth Dynasty will have been 1,052 years earlier, or about 1577 B.C.

51. Our second task is now to compare with this result the dates in the Eighteenth Dynasty obtained by astronomi-

*A detailed table by reigns will be found §§ 58-75; and for the Twenty-first, Twenty-second, and Twenty-sixth Dynasties still further details will be found in IV, 604-7, 693-98, 959, 974, 984, 1026, 1027.

*This result of a dead reckoning from minimum dates cannot be brought down any later. Mr. Cecil Torr's attempt (Memphis and Mycenae) to establish a much later date for the beginning of the Eighteenth Dynasty by the same process was extreme in method, and rested upon incomplete material.
cal means, which place the accession of Ahmose I within the four years from 1580 on.\textsuperscript{a} It will be seen that the result of the astronomical calculation is remarkably corroborated by the dead reckoning with minimum dynastic totals. It should be noted, however, that the above date for the beginning of the Eighteenth Dynasty, based upon the Sothic date in the ninth year of Amenhotep I, is corroborated, not only by the above dead reckoning, but also by the Sothic and new-moon dates in the reign of Thutmose III, a calculation from which places this king's reign at just the right remove from that of Amenhotep I, as determined by the Sothic date (see § 46).

52. The existing contemporary monuments do not suffice to determine by dead reckoning the length of the obscure period which preceded the Eighteenth Dynasty, including the Hyksos. It should be noted, however, that these monuments do not indicate a long\textsuperscript{b} period. They are few and scanty. There is nothing to show that the long list of kings which the Turin Papyrus places in this period were not partially contemporaneous. The same document gives no indication in its enumeration of the kings of the Twelfth Dynasty that they were partially contemporary; and it is only in the sum-total of the dynasty that parallel years are deducted. The same was evidently done for this long series of kings between the Twelfth and Eighteenth Dynasties. Two hundred years is ample for the whole period, including the Hyksos.\textsuperscript{c} The Sothic date from the Twelfth \textsuperscript{a}There is no choice between these limits; but as a round number is convenient, I have taken 1580, which brings the end of the Eighteenth Dynasty to 1350 B. C.

Dynasty, placing its fall in 1788 B.C., determines the maximum length of the period as 208 years.\(^a\) The Eleventh Dynasty, as shown herein (§§ 415–18), lasted at least 160 years, so that the second dark age, between the Old and Middle Kingdoms, terminated about 2160 B.C.

53. The data for determining the length of the dark period preceding the Middle Kingdom are scanty. Its beginning, in Manetho's so-called Seventh Dynasty, is hopelessly obscure, but fortunately the time during which this Seventh Dynasty ruled, as well as the length of the Eighth Dynasty also, is included by the Turin Papyrus in a summation of the time which elapsed from the rise of the Sixth Dynasty to the fall of Memphis (180 years),\(^b\) and also in a grand total of the length of the whole period from the accession of Menes to the close of Memphite supremacy, which terminated with the fall of the Eighth Dynasty. The Heracleopolitan rule, which falls between the end of Memphite and the beginning of Theban domination, is therefore the uncertain factor. Manetho divides the Heracleopolitans into two dynasties, the Ninth and the Tenth. The Turin Papyrus had a dynasty of eighteen kings immediately preceding the Eleventh, and these must be the Heracleopolitans, as is shown by the occurrence of Manetho's second Akhthoes, near the beginning of the series. We have no means of determining how long these eighteen Heracleopolitans ruled, for Manetho's data (with nineteen kings

\(^{a}\)The proposal to push back the said Sothic date by a whole Sothic cycle, thus lengthening the above period between the Twelfth and Eighteenth Dynasties by 1,460 years, is hardly worthy of a serious answer. It involves the assumption that nearly fifteen hundred years of history have been enacted in the Nile valley without leaving a trace behind! It is like imagining that in European history we could insert at will a period equal to that from the fall of Rome to the present!

\(^{b}\)That this summation includes the Eighth Dynasty is shown by the fact that the Heracleopolitans (the Ninth and Tenth Dynasties) immediately follow. So also Meyer, op. cit., 171 ff.
in each of his Heracleopolitan dynasties), like most of his figures, are not to be accepted, unless clearly supported by the contemporary monuments. These eighteen Heracleopolitans vouched for by the Turin Papyrus, if given sixteen years each (a sum below the customary average, in a long period of time\(^a\) under orderly conditions of government), reigned, in round numbers, 285 years. It will be evident that this estimate is extremely uncertain. The period is the only undetermined epoch in the dynastic chronology, and it introduces a margin of uncertainty of several generations in all dates back of the Eleventh Dynasty.

54. The Turin Papyrus gives the length of the Sixth Dynasty (with which it merges the Eighth, ignoring the Seventh\(^b\)) as 181 years. The length of the Fourth and Fifth together is determined by the Turin Papyrus and the contemporary monuments as follows: The royal favorite Mertiyôtes, after having been in the harem of Snefru and Khufu successively, was still living under Khafre (§§ 188 ff.). Prince Sekhemkere lived under Khafre, Menkure, Shepseskaf, Userkaf, and Sahure.\(^c\) With Snefru counted in the Third Dynasty, and Userkaf and Sahure (together nineteen years\(^d\)) falling in the Fifth, the length of the Fourth cannot have been more than 150 years, as measured by part of two successive human lives. A third lifetime connects the latter part of the Fourth and the first part of the Fifth. Thus Ptahshepses, the son-in-law of

\(^a\)The Fourth and Fifth Dynasties (including Snefru at the beginning of the Fourth) show an average of 16.6 years for each ruler (Meyer, op. cit., 151); that is, 18 kings ruled 300 years. Again, at the beginning of the dynastic age 18 kings (First and Second Dynasties) ruled 420 years—an average of over 23 years each. The first 53 kings of the Turin Papyrus (from the First to the Eighth Dynasty) ruled 995 years—an average of nearly 19 years. But among these, it should not be forgotten, there are 15 reigns of less than 10 years each, footing up to only 70 years.

King Shepseskaf, was born under Menkure and lived into the reign of Nuserre, the sixth king of the Fifth Dynasty (§§ 254 ff.). Now, granting him a long life, he could not have lived more than 40 or 50 years in the Fifth Dynasty. The Turin Papyrus has preserved the length of the reigns at the end of the Fifth Dynasty from Nuserre on, making a total, including him, of about 100 years. If Ptahshepses survived 10 years under Nuserre, the length of the dynasty was at most 130 years, more probably 125 years. The lengths of seven out of the nine reigns are preserved in the Turin Papyrus, and make a total of 122 years + x.

55. The overlapping of these three lifetimes is very significant:

Three lifetimes somewhat overlapping, a matter of 200 years at most, run parallel, as stated above, with the end of the Third Dynasty, the whole Fourth, and the first half of the Fifth. The Fourth and Fifth Dynasties thus lasted together not more than 300 years.

56. Now, the Turin Papyrus has preserved the length of the reigns in the Third Dynasty, and they foot up to about 80 years (including Snefru). The Palermo Stone insures at least 500 years for the first three dynasties, leaving about 420 years for the first two dynasties. This gives us a total of 950–75 years for the entire period from the beginning of the dynasties to the final fall of Memphis. Now, it is practically certain that the total of 955 years on a fragment of the Turin Papyrus is a summary of the same period, belonging at the end of the Memphite kings. Deducting the length of the Memphite dynasties (535 years) from this total of 955 years, we have left 420 years for the preceding Thinite period (First and Second Dynasties), just as shown by the Palermo Stone. We thus reach the date 3400 B.C. for the beginning of the dynasties, and 3400 to 2980 B.C. as the Thinite age, the first two dynasties. It is highly improbable that future discovery will shift these dates more than a century in either direction.

57. To recapitulate, in the following table it should be remembered that the dates in the Twelfth Dynasty are astronomically computed and correct within three years. The early part of the Eighteenth is closely correct (all dates astronomically established are starred), and the latter part probably within a decade of error. The margin of error is doubtless somewhat greater between the close of the Eighteenth and the accession of the Twenty-sixth Dynasty, where the dates are again accurate. Back of the Middle Kingdom, the unknown length of the dark age (from the Seventh to the Tenth Dynasty) produces the wide limits of uncertainty affecting all the preceding dynasties (from the First to the Tenth), the end of which period fell about 2160 B.C. It is back of 2160 B.C., therefore, that our chronology of Egyptian history becomes unstable and exhibits a margin of uncertainty of at most two centuries; that is, a century either way.

f Determined by the two limits: the accession of Amenhotep I in 1557 and that of Thutmose III in 1501, both these dates being astronomically fixed.

g He celebrated his thirty-years' jubilee, and, as he was never crown prince, he must have ruled at least 30 years. He reached old age (II, 64).

h Really a little less (see II, 592). The date of this reign is astronomically established by means of a Sothic date and two calendar dates of the new moon in Thutmose III!s Annals (II, 430). Mahler computes his accession as 1504 (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1888, 97); Lehmann noticed that such a calculation must be based on the actual appearance of the new moon, and not on a calculation of when it astronomically occurred. Lehmann thus dated the accession of Thutmose III in 1515 (Zwei Hauptprobleme, 154-58). Meyer accepted Lehmann's method, but showed a slight error in L.'s figures, thus finally placing the date of Thutmose III!s accession in 1501 B. C. (Meyer, op. cit., 50). The exact limits are May 3, 1501, to March 17, 1447 B. C.

\(^e\)In the reign of Ramses II, in the records of a legal suit, reference is made to legal proceedings in year 59 of Harmhab. As it is evident that Harmhab was not a young man at his accession, it is exceedingly improbable that he reigned nearly 60 years. The highest known date on any monument of his reign is year 21. It is therefore probable that in the early Nineteenth Dynasty, when the chronology for the government files of the immediately preceding reigns was being made up, the series of Ikhnaton and his successors was added to the reign of Harmhab, and the names of the kings at any time implicated in the Aton heresy were swept from the records. We thus have at least 59 years from year 1 of Ikhnaton to the end of Harmhab’s reign, of which at least 25 must be credited to Ikhnaton and his successors (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 39, 10, 1. 8).

a For this period we have no dates, but it is limited by the following facts:
1. The term of Setau as high priest at El Kab (IV, 415);
2. The succession of the high-priests of Amon; Amenhotep, known as high priest under Ramses IX at least from year 10 (IV, 487) to year 17 (Papyrus Amherst, ed. Newberry, No. VII, p. 1, l. 5), was the son of Ramsesnakht, high-priest known under Ramses IV, year 3. The term of Setau will not permit lengthening the uncertain interim beyond 15 years; nor is it likely to have been less in view of the succession of high-priests.

c. IV, 535. This year is a coregency with Ramses IX.

e. A fuller statement of this dynasty will be found in IV, 604 ff.

See IV, 693, and Daressy (Recueil, XV, 174-75), who is undoubtedly correct in recognizing Takelot I on a stela of year 23.

a The x at the end of Osorkon II’s reign falls outside of this total, as his son’s reign is counted from his own year 23.

b This dynasty will be found fully discussed, with table, in the introduction to the Piankhi Stela (IV, 811 ff.).

c IV, 794, 4.

d Only known as coregent with Osorkon III. The years between Osorkon III and Bekneranef may be filled up by Takelot III or by the two kings, Psammus and Zet, placed by Africanus after Osorkon III.

e Africanus gives a total of 89 years, and Syncellus 44, to this dynasty. The 27 is merely the amount necessary to fill up the gap between the end of the Twenty-second Dynasty and Bekneranef.

g From here on, the date B. C. is obtained by dead reckoning back from the accession of the Twenty-sixth Dynasty in 663 B. C.

A letter from Eduard Meyer calls my attention to a fragmentary relief in the tomb of Thutnakht (El Bersheh, II, Pls. 8 and 9) which shows that the flax harvest in the middle of the twentieth century B.C. took place between the twenty-third and twenty-seventh of the fourth month. This harvest at the present day in the province of Minieh occurs during the early part of April. Thus the 113th–117th days of the calendar, which normally fell between November 9 and 13 (Julian), then fell in early April, showing a shift of the calendar of over 200 days, and corresponding completely with the shift of 225 days indicated by the Kahun Sothic date (§§42, 46). The date of the Twelfth Dynasty is thus confirmed beyond a doubt.
THE PALERMO STONE
FIRST TO THE FIFTH DYNASTIES
THE PALERMO STONE.a

76. The content of this document, remarkable as it is, is perhaps not more valuable than the revelation it furnishes of the existence of royal annals of an official character, regularly kept by the kings of Egypt in the Old Kingdom and extending back into the time of the two kingdoms of the North and South. They reveal a great and powerful kingdom from the beginning of the dynasties, enjoying ordered government under a highly developed and aggressive state, and exhibiting a high degree of culture and civilization such as we could not have anticipated in this remote age.

77. While a translation of the document, owing to its unique and archaic character, is accompanied by many uncertainties, yet the whole is of an importance which justifies a sufficient presentation of the content to make clear the character, scope, and arrangement of these oldest annals of Egypt.b The voluminous commentary necessary for the explanation of many obscure references and allusions is unavoidably omitted here; but the obscurity of these para A fragment of "Diorite anfibolica," 6.5 cm. thick, 0.435 m. high, and 0.25 m. wide; since 1877 in the Museum of Palermo, and commonly known as the "Palermo Stone." It was published by Pellegrini (Archivio storico Siciliano, nuova serie, anno XX, 297-316, and 3 plates); by Schaefer, who first recognized its real character (Ein Bruchstück altaegyptischer Königsannalen [Anhang zu den Abhandlungen der Königlichen Preussischen Akademie, 1902], with 2 plates); and by Naville (La pierre de Palerme, Rec. XXV, 1-20, with 2 plates). Besides the interpretations of the above scholars, see Maspero (Revue critique, 1899, I, I, and 1901, I, 383), who was the first to recognize the character of the year-names; also Spiegelberg, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, XXXV, 10.

b The following translation is largely an editing of the rendering of Schaefer and Sethe; but, although space and time for commentary fail me, I have made some changes and additions, like the expedition of Snefru to Syria.
ticular points does not affect the significance of the whole document, which will be clear to everyone.

78. The fragment herewith presented was broken out of the middle of a large slab some seven feet long and over two feet high, as it stood on the long edge. It was inscribed on both sides with a series of royal annals, beginning with the predynastic kings of the period before the union of the North and the South, and continuing into the dynastic age to the middle of the Fifth Dynasty. The arrangement of these records can be best understood from the figure (—). The upper line of the front contains at present nine names of predynastic kings of Lower Egypt (the Delta). If the line was full, there were possibly some 120 predynastic kings here enumerated, each rectangle of line 1 (front) containing one name, with no indication of how long each king reigned. In the Fifth Dynasty, therefore, the predynastic kings, the last of whom had reigned some seven centuries before the preparation of this table, were already merely a series of names. Other reasons for the mere citation of the bare names are, however, quite conceivable, such as lack of interest in the predynastic kings on the part of the scribe.

79. But, while the length of the predynastic reigns remains totally uncertain, the date of the beginning of the dynastic period is certainly established by this monument within narrower limits than ever before; and the period from the accession of Menes to the beginning of the Fourth Dynasty is determined within reasonable margins for the first time. The dynastic kings are probably arranged as aMeyer has identified the place of these kings of Lower Egypt in the Turin Papyrus, where no corresponding kings of Upper Egypt were included, and in Manetho (Aegyptische Chronologie, 199 ff., 203 f.). They follow the gods and precede the “Worshipers of Horus,” the immediate predecessors of the dynasties.

bMeyer believes that this row must have begun with the gods (ibid., 203).
follows: the First Dynasty occupied ll. 2 and 3, following directly upon the predynastic kings; ll. 4 and 5 contained the Second Dynasty; there is some uncertainty about the disposition of reigns in l. 6, but as the first line of the back contained the end of the Fourth Dynasty, the last two lines\(^b\) (7 and 8) of the front must have contained the bulk of the Fourth, which in all probability throws the Third Dynasty back to l. 6,\(^c\) including possibly the end of l. 5. The larger part of the back was occupied with the three reigns of the Fifth Dynasty, which filled up ll. 2–5, and perhaps continued (in two lines) into the reign of Nuserre.

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Year</th>
</tr>
</thead>

\(81\). The vertical line on the right of each rectangle has the form of the hieroglyphic sign for "year." Each year-rectangle contains the chief events which occurred in that year, one of which furnished the official name for that year. Thus we have the "Year of the Battle and Smiting

\(^a\)The Turin Papyrus of kings shows no clear dynastic division for this period, and hence such division rests solely on the lists of Manetho. But Sethe has shown (Untersuchungen, III) that such division is practically certain in our monument, and Meyer indicates that it is probable in the Turin Papyrus.

of the Northerners,” dating a jar of King Besh (Bš) in Philadelphia; or the “Year of Smiting the Troglodytes” in our fragment (front, l. 6, §104). This was parallel with the same usage in early Babylonia, as has been long known. As time passed, it became more and more common to name the year after the corresponding fiscal enumeration, thus: “Year of the Second Occurrence of the Numbering of all Large and Small Cattle of the North and the South” (§ 339), or “Year of the Seventh Occurrence of the Numbering of Gold and Lands” (front, l. 5, §135). This was often abbreviated to “Year of the x’th Occurrence of the Numbering,” or still more to “Year of the x’th Occurrence.”

82. All other events were then gradually abandoned as designations of the years, and by the Fifth Dynasty the fiscal numberings were almost exclusively used. These occurred every two years, in uninterrupted sequence, irrespective of the changes in reign, and hence it was necessary to call a year when no numbering took place, the “Year after the x’th Occurrence (of the Numbering).” Finally, when the numberings became annual, each year received the name of a new numbering, and this was the system of dating in Egypt from the Sixth Dynasty on. It amounted to numbering the years themselves, and gradually became nothing else. The Palermo stone thus furnishes us the origin of the Egyptian system of dating.

83. In addition to the chief events of the year, each year-rectangle contained, at the bottom in the middle, a datum giving a number of cubits, palms, and fingers, which have been thought to be the height of the inundation for each year; but this is very uncertain.

*aMeasured from some fixed point only a few cubits below high water; but the fine subdivisions in the measurements (down to fractions of a finger-breadth) are against the theory.
84. In ll. 2–5 (front), containing the First and Second Dynasties, the events of each year are for the most part celebrations of religious feasts and the like, and in the latter part the "numberings" appear. With the Third Dynasty (l. 6) the events known to the chronicler become more numerous, increasing and making irregular in size the year-rectangles. They become still larger in the Fourth and Fifth. Small as are the rectangles of the First and Second Dynasties, they are in each line of the same size, and this offers the basis for a rough estimate of the number of years in these dynasties, if we can gain even a distant approximation of the total length of the stone.

85. An examination of the back shows that from one-tenth to one-eighth of the total length of the lines is preserved on the fragment. This insures roughly five hundred years for the length of the first three dynasties, of which only about eighty would belong to the Third Dynasty.®

86. In this computation the stone offers little for determining the length of the Third Dynasty. This is, however, shown by the Turin Papyrus to have been only fifty-five years before Snefru; or, with Snefru, seventy-nine years, x months; or, in round numbers, eighty years. That Snefru belonged to the Third Dynasty is favored by the arrangement of the stone, although the Manethonian tradi-

First Dynasty (ll. 2–3) ......................... 253 years
Second Dynasty (ll. 4–5) ......................... 302 years
Third Dynasty (l. 6) ..................... maximum, 100–110 years

These pioneer results have been modified by Meyer (Aegyptische Chronologie) to the following:

First Dynasty (ll. 2–3) ......................... 210 years
Second Dynasty (ll. 4–5) ......................... 243 years

The possible difference is thus about a century. Meyer's results are certainly a minimum, and Sethe's a maximum, but the principle employed by Meyer would now doubtless be accepted by Sethe.
tion perhaps placed him at the head of the Fourth Dynasty. It should be remembered that this difficulty with the Third Dynasty is not peculiar to any theory of restoration of the stone. We cannot, on any scheme of restoration, push the Third Dynasty back into l. 5 (front), for the birth of Khase-khemui, a king of the latter part of the Second Dynasty, is recorded in l. 5 (No. 4). Nor can we assume that Snefru is here reckoned with the Fourth Dynasty, which would leave only the first half of l. 6 for the whole Third Dynasty. Finally, as Snefru is reckoned with the Third Dynasty, and we know that he was its last king (for he was the predecessor of Khufu), all his predecessors in the dynasty, as well as at least six years of his own reign, must have been included in the first half of l. 6. If all the rectangles of the first half of l. 6 were as small as those of l. 2, this would leave perhaps fifty years for his predecessors in the dynasty. The supposition that more lines are lost at the bottom would not at all affect the Third Dynasty. Again, any great prolongation of the lines is forbidden by the back.

87. The stone offers little aid as to the length of the Fourth Dynasty, as most of that dynasty is lost at the bottom of the front, but it furnishes valuable hints as to the close of the Fourth and the first half of the Fifth Dynasty. The short reigns at the close of the Fourth are fragmentarily indicated in l. 1, and the lengths of the short reigns of the first three kings of the Fifth Dynasty roughly corroborate those indicated in the Turin Papyrus.

88. It will be seen that the monument is invaluable as a source for the chronology of the earliest dynasties. Accepting 2900 B. C. as the date for the accession of the Fourth Dynasty, the Palermo Stone furnishes us an assured minimum of 3400 B. C. as the beginning of the dynastic period and the accession of Menes. This date is only affected by the uncertainty attending all our dates back of the Heracleopolitan rule. Future discovery may reduce the date of Menes by at most a century.

89. The content of these annals is also of great importance, but, as they are themselves only a summary, we cannot epitomize them here. Such facts as the dispatch of a fleet of forty vessels to bring cedar from Lebanon under Snefru are, of course, invaluable.

\(^a\)This is an expedition by sea to Lebanon. The omission of the prepositions (here \(m\), "with") is common in this inscription, having been copied without change by the Fifth Dynasty scribe, from the ancient original of Snefru’s time, in which, as commonly in the archaic inscriptions, the prepositions were lacking.

\(^b\)Some particular kind of building is meant.

\(^c\)These are the names of two gates or parts of the palace of Snefru: one for the South and one for the North. We have thus the double name of a double palace, which, like the organs of the government, was double, to correspond with the old kingdoms of South and North. These two gates are still preserved in the palace of the Empire as seen in the Amarna tombs. The palace front was always referred to as the "double façade" or "double gate" \((Rwy)\); hence also the dual determinative of \(pr\)-. The state temples also were double; each had a "double façade," and the hypostyle was divided into north and south by the central aisle. The division of the palace audience hall will have been the same. That the two names in § 148 do not refer to two separate buildings is shown by the record of the making of the doors in the next remark, as in the year 7 of Miebis.

\(^b\)The number is unfortunately not quite certain, but the margin of uncertainty is not great. The Turin Papyrus gives Sahure twelve years, and Manetho gives him thirteen, both of which numbers might be practically correct, as one might take account of the nine months of the last year, and count the thirteenth year as complete.

THE THIRD DYNASTY
168. Although the Pharaohs had operated in the copper region of Sinai as far back as the First Dynasty, Snefru was later regarded as the great founder of the Egyptian mining there. He became a patron god of the region (§ 722), he gave his name to the roads and stations of the eastern Delta (§ 493, l. 9), and officials boasting of their achievements there claimed that nothing like them had been done since the time of Snefru (§ 731).

Being the only existing inscriptions record of achievement by Snefru, this document is of especial importance. The relief to which the inscriptions belong is as important as they. It represents the king in the etef-crown, with upraised war-club about to smite a Bedwi, whom he has forced to kneel, holding him by the hair of his head. This, of course, symbolizes Snefru's victory over the Bedwin of this region, during his mining operations here.

169. The inscriptions contain only titles and names of Snefru; they are:

- King of Upper and Lower Egypt; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Lord of Truth; Golden Horus: Snefru. Snefru, Great God, who is given Satisfaction, Stability, Life, Health, all Joy forever.

bThis form of relief is as old as the early First Dynasty. Such a scene had already been left here by King Semerkhet, of the early dynastic age (Weill, Revue archéologique, II [1903], 231); and an ivory tablet shows King Usephais, of the First Dynasty, smiting a Bedwi native in the same way (Macgregor Collection, Spiegelberg, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, XXXV, 8).

170. This is the earliest biography which we possess, and it clearly betrays its primitive character. It is impossible to determine with certainty the succession of the parts distributed on the different walls, and the language is so bald, abbreviated, and obscure that some of the narrative remains unintelligible. Apart from the fact that it is our earliest document of the kind, and the only one from the Third Dynasty, the biography is especially valuable because it deals with the geography and government of the North, narrating Methen’s activity in the Delta, of the administration of which at this early period we otherwise know almost nothing. The narrative tells of his gradual rise, from a beginning as scribe and overseer of a provision magazine, until he governs a considerable number of towns and districts in the Delta. He also obtained in Upper Egypt the rule of the eastern part of the Fayum and the Anubis nome (Seventeenth). He was liberally rewarded with gifts of lands, became master of the hunt, and tells us the size of his house, with some account of the grounds; all of which, from an age so remote, is of especial interest. He died in the reign of Snefru; all his affiliations were with the families preceding Snefru, and he was naturally buried beside the terraced pyramid of Zoser, of the earlier part of the Third Dynasty.

177. The references to the Sphinx, and the so-called temple beside it in the time of Khufu, have made this monument from the first an object of great interest.

These references would be of the highest importance if the monument were contemporaneous with Khufu; but the orthographic evidences of its late date are entirely conclusive, and the reference to the temple of a goddess whose cult arose as late as that of Isis, as well as the title of Isis, viz., "mistress of the pyramid," prove conclusively that the present stela is not a copy of an older document. The fact that the priests of Pesebkhenno's time regarded the building beside the Sphinx, as the temple of "Osiris of Rosta" (R²-st²) is, however, of great interest, but does not determine for us the original character of that structure.

178. He made (it) for his mother, Isis, Divine Mother; Hathor, Mistress of Nun. The investigation was placed on a stela. He gave to her an offering anew, and he built her temple of stone again. He found these gods in her place.

179. The inscription in the lowermost section of the sunken panel is also of importance in connection with § 180.

bIt is well to recall that in the Empire the true character of the Sphinx had been forgotten or misunderstood. The same might equally well have happened in the case of the building alongside it. [Later: It is now known that the building is a monumental portal, the entrance to the causeway leading up to the second pyramid.]
dText has the three nw signs used in writing Nun.
eOf her titles to the land? It is probably this remark which led Maspero to conclude that this stela is a copy of an older document. The word translated "investigation" (sp·t for s·yp·t) occurs also in Dümichen, Bauwriknde des Denderatempsels, 16, in the same connection; cf. Brugsch, Hieroglyphisch-demotisches Wörterbuch, 1206, and a better example in Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1223, top line (time of Ramses II).
fA reference to the statues of the gods enumerated in the sunken panel. The stela is really an inventory of such statues; see § 180.
The district of the Sphinx of Harmakhis (ꜣꜣꜣ r-m-yꜣꜣꜣ lwꜣꜣꜣ) is on the south of the house of Isis, Mistress of the Pyramid; on the north of Osiris, Lord of Rosta (ꜣꜣꜣ Rꜣꜣꜣ-stꜣꜣ). The writings of the goddess of Harmakhis, were brought, in order to investigate.

— may he grow; may he live forever and ever, looking toward the east.

The sunken panel occupying the greater part of the stela contains only reliefs representing the statues of gods, belonging to the temple, and texts giving their names, the materials of which they were made, and their dimensions. The following texts occupy the raised margin and the edge:

Live the Horus: Mezer (Mdr), King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Khufu, who is given life. He found the house of Isis, Mistress of the Pyramid, beside the house of the Sphinx of Harmakhis on the northwest of the house of Osiris, Lord of Rosta (ꜣꜣꜣ Rꜣꜣꜣ-stꜣꜣ w). He built his pyramid beside the temple of this goddess, and he built a pyramid for the king's-daughter Henutsen (Hnwt-sn) beside this temple.

aOne expects "house of."
bIsis?

cThe connection between this sentence and the preceding is probably that the limits of "The district of the Sphinx" were investigated as found recorded in "the writings (viz., the records) of the goddess." (It is possibly this statement also which leads Maspero to believe the document is a copy of an older one.) The same word (stp) is used in reference to the investigation of old titles, e.g., in Khnumhotep's tomb, Benihasan (§ 625, l. 44.).

dBut see § 179.

fThis is also her title in the sunken panel.

gThe genitive n shows that "Harmakhis" as found in the same phrase in the sunken panel, has been omitted.

bThat this would identify the so-called "temple of the Sphinx" as the temple of "Osiris of Rosta" was early noticed by Mariette (cf. Le Sérapéum, p. 99); but the fact seems to have been unnoticed, and does not find mention in any of the archaeologies. The mere statement that the king "found" the Isis temple is unusual; one expects m ws: "in ruins" as so very often, and this is confirmed by the statement of the left side: "He built her temple again."

According to Herodotus, the middle of the three small pyramids east of the Great Pyramid, belonged to Khufu's daughter (Herodotus, II, 126). Henutsen is mentioned in a contemporary tomb at Gizeh (Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1231).

According to this statement, the little Isis-temple east of the Great Pyramid was standing on the Gizeh plateau before any of the pyramids were built! If Maspero accepts this statement, he should add this Isis-temple to the buildings which he believes were the predecessors of the pyramids on the Gizeh plateau (Maspero, Dawn of Civilisation, 365, n. 2).
EXAMPLES OF DEDICATION INSCRIPTIONS BY SONS

181. Many of the larger mastabas of the Old Kingdom contain long inscriptions by the sons of the deceased nobles relating their pious solicitude for the tombs of their departed fathers. In some cases the tomb was even built by the son after the father's death. All these longer inscriptions will be found herein; the following are only the more important shorter ones. They are all from the Fourth and Fifth Dynasties.

four years as the length of Khafre's reign. The king's son, Nekure, was then old enough to feel the necessity of making a will. It is the only document of the kind from the Old Kingdom, which has survived in such excellent preservation.

191. The fortune which Prince Nekure bequeathed to his heirs consisted of fourteen towns, and two estates in the pyramid-city of his father. The latter doubtless consisted of his "town-house" and gardens. These he had left to a daughter, but she had evidently died, and on the reversion of the legacy to himself he left it to his wife. The fourteen towns he distributed among five heirs, of whom one was his wife, and three were his children, while the name of one is lost. Eleven of the fourteen towns are named after Khafre, and there is no reason to doubt that the other three were also so named, but they are now unreadable. Besides these fourteen towns, Prince Nekure had at least twelve towns in the mortuary endowment of his tomb, of which nine were named after Khafre. It is impossible to determine whether these had belonged to the prince's estate, or whether they were given by the reigning king at the prince's death.

192. Year of the twelfth [occurrence] of the numbering of large and small cattle.

Introduction

193. King's son, Nekure (R^3-n-k^2-w) — — he makes the (following) ['command'], (while) living upon his two feet without ailing in any respect.

^aSee Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 15, b. There could not have been more than fourteen towns, as no more than two are broken out.

^c"Being of sound mind." This line (2) is engraved horizontally over the following columns, and is evidently the prescript or title of the will. There are eight of the subjoined columns, each column being headed by the name of an heir, below which is entered the legacy bequeathed him. Each legacy is a town or towns; the district or nome is given first and then the town-name, or names, each of which is compounded with that of Khafre, the king.
First Legacy

194. I have given to the king's-confidant, Nekennebti (N-k²-n-nbty), (in) —, (the towns of) "Khafre- —," and "Khafre- —."

Second Legacy

Third Legacy

aA nome-name is lost.
bTwo towns at least.
cThe formula "I have given" is omitted after its occurrence once for all in l. 3; hence "his son" instead of "my son."
dThree towns, from the size of the lacuna.
eTwentieth nome of Upper Egypt.
fTwo small subcolumns, each containing a designation of some piece of property, but they are no longer legible; it is doubtless the estate, or part of the estate, of a deceased daughter, which, after its reversion to him, he now leaves to his wife. Hence her occurrence twice in the will.
THE TESTAMENTARY ENACTMENT OF AN UNKNOWN OFFICIAL, ESTABLISHING THE ENDOWatMENT OF HIS TOMB BY THE PYRAMID OF KHAFRE

200. As a revelation of the legal organization of this remote age, this document, like the similar instrument of Senuonekh (§§231 ff.), is of great interest. Economically it is of importance to note that the king gives whole towns as mortuary endowment, to keep the tomb of the deceased constantly supplied with offerings.

Introduction

201. While he was alive upon his two feet, even the sole companion, lord of Nekhen, member of the king's court every day . . . local governor of "Praise-of-Horus-First-of-Heaven," these mortuary priests forever.

Endowment is Entailed

202. This is the decree which I made concerning it: I have not empowered — any of [my brothers], [my sisters, or my daughter's children, inferior mortuary priests, or assistant mortuary priests, [to take lands],] people, or anything which I have conveyed to them, for making mortuary offerings to me therewith, whether their man-servant [or their maid-servant], their brothers or their sisters, save to make mortuary offerings [to me therewith, in the cemetery in] my eternal tomb which is at the pyramid, "Great-is-Khafre;" according to the portion of lands, people, and [everything, which I have conveyed to them, for making mortuary offerings to me] therewith.

epProbably so rather than "endowment," for "these mortuary priests of the endowment" is expressed by ḫn-k  SetProperty (Sethe, Urkunden, I, 36, 1. 1).

ffProbably a lacuna of more than one line.
Line of Entailment

203. I have not empowered any mortuary priest of the endowment, to give the lands, people or [anything which I have conveyed to them, for making mortuary offerings to me] therewith, in payment to any person; or to give as property to any person, except that [they] shall give [it to their children], entitled to the division of it with any mortuary priest among these mortuary priests.a

Violation of Endowment

Endowment not Involved in Suits of Priests

205. Whosoever mortuary priest of the endowment shall institute legal proceedings against his fellow, and he shall make a writ of his claim against the mortuary priest, by which [the defendant?] forfeits the portion in his possession; the lands, people and everything shall be taken from him, which I gave to him for making mortuary offerings to me therewith. It shall be conveyed back to him because of not instituting proceedings before the officials, concerning the lands, people and everything, which I conveyed to the mortuary priests of the endowment, for making mortuary offerings to me therewith, in my eternal tomb, which is in the cemetery at [the pyramid: “Great-is-Khafre”].

Transfer of Priests to Other Service

206. Whosoever mortuary priest of the endowment shall go forth to other service, in the presence of the officials, the aNot all their children were entitled to a share in the division, but only those who became mortuary priests; hence the document distinguishes particularly those “entitled to (lit., belonging to) the division of it (the property) with any given (ymn) mortuary priest of these mortuary priests” (viz., those endowed by this document). The paragraph occurs again in the enactment of Senuonekh (§ 233).

bSethe suggests for the lacuna; “for or by the (priestly) order, to which he belongs,” as in l. 17.

Land Given by King

207. As for this field, which the king gave to me, to honor me — — — — — 20for making mortuary offerings to me therewith in the cemetery.

Alienation of Endowment

208. As for whatsoever shall be paid out, of that which I gave to them, [I will enter into judgment with them in the place] 21wherein judgment is had. REIGN OF MENKURE

DEBHEN’S INSCRIPTION, RECOUNTING KING MENKURE’S ERECTION OF A TOMB FOR HIM

210. The unfinished condition of this interesting inscription renders it extremely fragmentary. But mutilated as it is, it tells us plainly enough of the king’s visit to the Gizeh cemetery to inspect the work on his family pyramids, and of his detailing fifty men to build a tomb for Debhen. Later the king orders his own people, who are bringing limestone for a temple, to bring also the necessary false doors, etc., for Debhen’s tomb from the quarry at Troja.

The Royal Command

211. a He saith:

As for this tomb, it was the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkure, [living forever], who caused that it be [made], when [his majesty] was [upon] the road beside the pyramid, Hirc (Hr), in order to inspect the work on the pyramid: “Divine-is-Menkure.”

— — — [there came] the [naval] commander and the two high priests of Memphis, and the [work]men, standing upon it, to inspect aFrom his tomb (No. 90 on Lepsius’ plan) at Gizeh; published by Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 37, b; Sethe, Urkunden, I, 18–21 (collated with Berlin drawing, No. 284). The inscription was left unfinished by the sculptor. The artist had drawn all the hieroglyphs in ink, but they were only partially cut, and the uncut portions of the lines disappeared.

bThis line contained his titles, as the sole remaining sign shows.

cName of pyramid usually supposed to be that of Menkure. It is, however, evidently one of the smaller three beside his own pyramid, the name of which here follows. “Hir” will have belonged to one of his family. That the two pyramids were close together is evident from the text. The king stands on the road by the Hir-pyramid to inspect the other. This disposes of the idea that the former was in Abu Roash (Petrie, History of Egypt, I, 56).

dOnly the plural determinative of “men” is visible.

Building of the Tomb

212. 6His majesty commanded to clear the place of rubbish this tomb. His majesty commanded to hack in order to clear the rubbish. [His majesty commanded] that the two treasurers of the god should come; [said his majesty to them] — given to them men, whom his majesty judged, that he should go around the work exacted in his — that there be brought stone from Troja (R 3 - w) to clothe with limestone the temple there, together with two false doors, and a front for this tomb, by the naval commander and the two high priests of Ptah, together with the king's master-builder, who came [that there] be [brought] for me a statue much greater than life every — every day. c Verb cyn, meaning "to build or clothe with limestone of Ayan (cyn)."

e The remainder of the inscription was never executed.
THE FIFTH DYNASTY
REIGN OF USERKAFA

TESTAMENTARY ENACTMENT OF NEKONEKHA

213. Besides being the most elaborate document of the kind preserved to us, there are important historical facts contained in these inscriptions. They chiefly concern the disposal of two parcels of land of sixty stat each, given by King Menkure: the one as endowment of the temple of the local Hathor of Royenet (Tehneh); the other as a wakf or endowment of the tomb of Khenuka, a nobleman of Menkure's time. Both endowments were administered by one priesthood, who served at the same time as priests of Hathor and as mortuary priests of Khenuka. At the beginning of the Fifth Dynasty, its first king had honored one of his favorites, a steward of the palace named Nekonekh, by conveying to his single person the offices of priest of Hathor at Tehneh and of mortuary priest of Khenuka. In so doing—though, of course, nothing is said about it in these inscriptions—Userkaf, as the first king of the Fifth Dynasty was plainly dispossessing some supporter of the old dynasty, and strengthening his own house by winning the allegiance of another noble family. a. c. L.

214. Nekonekh, having the right to bequeath the two land-endowments to whom he will, now makes a will, stating the origin of both endowments in Menkure's time, and his own title to them by appointment from Userkaf, and decreeing that they shall now be distributed among his children, acting corporately as his successor in both offices. Each child is annually to serve one month as priest of Hathor, and another month as mortuary priest of Khenuka. For this purpose twelve children were required, and, as Nekonekh had thirteen, he gave to eleven a month each, and divided the remaining month between two. The income from the land was also divided, each of the eleven children receiving the income from five stat for the Hathor temple, and five stat for Khenuka, while the remaining two each received half of this. The twelve months of the year were thus all provided for, the sixty stat belonging to each endowment were completely disposed of, and the thirteen children all made legatees. It is of importance to notice that the mortuary endowment, established in the latter half of the Fourth Dynasty, is still respected and continued in the Fifth Dynasty.

215. Nekonekh's will disposing of his own estate is also among the inscriptions in the tomb (§§ 223–25), though very fragmentary. Another document establishes and adjusts his own mortuary priesthood (§§ 226, 227), and in conclusion he and his wife, probably after decease, receive mortuary statues from two of their children (§§ 228–30).

I. THE PRIESTHOOD OF HATHOR

Introduction

216. aSteward of the Palace, governor of the New Towns, superior prophet of Hathor, mistress of Royenet, king's-confidant, Nekonekh (N-k²-c nh); bhis wife [Hezethekenu (Hdt-hknw)], revered by [Hathor].

cHe makes a decree to his children, to be priests of Hathor, mistress of Royenet.

aThe lines are too short at the beginning to number them all.
List of the Priests of Hathor

217. 9 These are the prophets whom I have made, of my children, of the endowment,\textsuperscript{a} to be priests of Hathor. Now, it was King Menkure who conveyed two pieces\textsuperscript{b} of land, to these prophets to be priest therewith.

10 King's-confidant, steward of the Palace, Nekonekh; his wife, the king's-confidante, Hezethekenu; her children.

\textsuperscript{b}This was probably not a unit of measure, for the document afterward assigns 120 stat, 60 for the Hathor temple, and 60 for the mortuary service of Khenuka; and these 120 stat are obviously the itemization of the two pieces of land above mentioned (the 5 stat of l. 21 are not to be counted).

Notes:
- A: Written b h t and determining the reading of this season. (Later: See Sethe, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 41, 89.)
- B: In the original, the names are arranged in perpendicular columns, and a figure of the person named is depicted below each name. I have added the sex of the person in each case. The first column is therefore the priests, the second (double) column is the time of service for each priest, and the third is the amount of land from which each draws the necessary income.
- C: This is an error of the scribe as the other table shows, for in it the entire line, date and all are vacant.
The Decree

219. It was the majesty of Userkaf who commanded that I should be priest of Hathor, mistress of Royenet; whatsoever was paid into the temple, it was I who was priest over everything that came into the temple. Now, it is these my children who shall act as priests of Hathor, mistress of Royenet, as I myself did, while I journey to the beautiful west, as one revered, — — in charge of these my children.

II. THE MORTUARY PRIESTHOOD OF KHENUKA

List of Priests of Khenuka

220. Now, it is these people who make the mortuary offerings to the king's-confidant, Khenuka (Hnw-k), his father, his mother, his children, and all his house.

a The text is perfectly clear and correct; emendation is entirely unnecessary.
b Read wgb (as Sethe has done) after the inscription of Persen (Urkunden, I, 37).

aThis table corresponds exactly with the preceding, and as it contains no column for the land, it is probable that the land column of the first table was intended to serve for both instead of repeating it. Thus both parcels of land mentioned in l. 9 were used: one for Hathor, and one for Khenuka.
The Decree

222. Now, it is these my children who make the mortuary offerings to the king's-confidant, Khenuka, his father, his mother, and all his household, at the feast of Wag, the feast of Thoth, and every feast-day.

III. NEKONEKH'S WILL

223. The document is largely lost; the fragments beside the statues are possibly not parts of it, but are relevant, as showing Nekonekh’s own enactments regarding these persons.

Introduction

224. The steward of the Palace, king's-confidant, Nekonekh, revered; the king's-confidante, Hezethekenu; — said — — — [to] his children, while he was upon his two feet, alive before the king

By Two Statues of Henhathor

— [given] to her [for] the ration of bread and beer as property, [while] upon my seat, — — as property. May they deliver the [ration of] bread and beer to this my heir, as they did [to] myself.

IV. NEKONEKH'S MORTUARY PRIESTHOOD

Scene

226. The deceased Nekonekh sits before a table of food-offerings, while his eight mortuary priests approach from behind in pairs, each pair being designated as under the authority of one of Nekonekh's sons.

a This figure is doubtless beside the mother, the other beside the father. Fraser's description is not explicit in this particular.

b Only one pair is perfectly preserved, and one is entirely lost, but the remains indicate that all four pairs were alike.
The Decree

227. [These mortuary priests\(^a\)] are under the authority of these my children. I have not empowered [any] person\(^b\) to take them for any forced labor, save to make mortuary offerings which are divided in this house — — — these mortuary priests. As for these my children, who shall do any work with these mortuary priests, and as for any man who shall violate (this will), I will enter into judgment with him.

V. NEKONEKHS MORTUARY STATUE

228. A man and woman, the latter the daughter of Nekonekh, had three statues made, representing Nekonekh and themselves. The inscriptions are these:

Dedication

229. His daughter and his son, who made this for him, according to his honor with him.

TESTAMENTARY ENACTMENT OF SENUONEKH, REGULATING HIS MORTUARY PRIESTHOOD\(^c\)

231. Senuonekh was a priest of Userkaf and Sahure. This decree from his tomb closely resembles and, in some parts, is identical with the decree of Khafre's unknown official (§§ 200–209), but it is better preserved, and also clearer in the wording.

\(^{b}\)The connection renders Sethe's restoration certain.

Installation of Priests and Descendants

232. These mortuary priests of the endowment, and their children and further the children of their children whom they shall bear forever, are ————

Entailment of Endowment

233. I have not empowered them [to give] (it)\textsuperscript{a} in payment as property to any person; but they shall give (it) to their children, entitled to the division of [it with any mortuary priest of these mortuary priests].\textsuperscript{b}

Transfer of a Priest

234. As for any mortuary priest among them who shall default\textsuperscript{1}, or who shall be taken for other service, everything which I have given to him shall revert to the mortuary priests who are in his (priestly) order. I have not empowered ————.

Endowment not Involved in Suits

REIGN OF SAHURE
SINAI INSCRIPTIONS

Relief

236. King in the crown of Upper Egypt, smites kneeling Bedwi as in §§ 168, 169. The texts, as in §§ 168, 169, and 176, contain only names and titles of the king:

Horus: Lord of Diadems; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Sahure (S³ hw-R); who is given life forever.
Smiter of all countries.
The Great God smites the Asiatics (mntw) of all countries.

TOMB STELA OF NENEKHSEKHMET

237. The stela is a well-executed false door of Turra limestone, contrasting strikingly with the poor material and mediocre workmanship of the modest tomb to which it belonged. The cause of this contrast is indicated in the inscription, viz., that the stela was a gift from the king.

The Request

238. The chief physician, Nenekhsekhmet (Shmt-n-ṣnh) spoke before his majesty: “May thy person, beloved of Re, command that there be given to me a false door of stone for this my tomb of the cemetery.”
King's Compliance

239. His majesty caused that there be brought for him two false doors\(^a\) from Troja \((R^3 - w)\) of stone, that they be laid in the audience-hall\(^b\) of the house (called): "Sahure-Shines-with-Crowns," and that the two high priests of Memphis and the artisans of the \(\text{f}_\text{i}\) be assigned to them, that the work on them might be done in the presence of the king himself. The stone-work\(^c\) went on every day; there was an inspection of that which was done on them in the court daily. His majesty had \(\text{f}_\text{c}\) put on them, and had them painted in blue.

Presentation of the Gift

240. His majesty\(^d\) said to the chief physician Nenekhsekhmet:
"As these my nostrils enjoy health, as the gods love me, mayest thou depart into the cemetery at an advanced old age as one revered."
I praised the king greatly and lauded every god for Sahure's sake, for he knows the desire of the entire suite. When anything goes forth from the mouth of his majesty, it immediately comes to pass. For the god has given to him knowledge of things that are in the body,\(^e\) because he is more august than any god. If ye love Re, ye shall praise every god for Sahure's sake, who did this for me. I was his revered one; never did I do anything evil toward any person.

TOMB INSCRIPTION OF PERSEN\(^f\)

241. This inscription is over a scene showing people in the act of bringing mortuary offerings of food for Persen's tomb. According to the inscription, these offerings are

\(^a\) Erman suggests that a double false door is meant. The same reference to a double false door is found in the tomb of Debhen (\(Dbhn\)). This is the same word (\(\text{rwty}\)) used later for a temple façade, which would explain the dual.

REIGN OF NEFERIRKERE

TOMB INSCRIPTIONS OF THE VIZIER, CHIEF JUDGE, AND CHIEF ARCHITECT WESHPTAH

242. It is much to be regretted that this unusually interesting inscription has suffered so sadly at the hands of time. Weshptah was the greatest man at the court of Neferirkere, being vizier, chief judge, and chief architect.
His son Mernuterseteni was called upon to build his father’s tomb, and thus narrates how this happened. The king, his family and the court were one day inspecting a new building in course of construction under Weshptah’s superintendence as chief architect. All admire the work, and the king turns to praise his faithful minister, when he notices that Weshptah does not hear the words of royal favor. The king’s exclamation alarms the courtiers, the stricken minister is quickly carried to the court, and the priests and chief physicians are hurriedly summoned. The king has a case of medical rolls brought; but all is in vain; the physicians declare his condition hopeless. The king is smitten with sorrow, and retires to his chamber, where he prays to Re.
He then makes all arrangements for Weshptah’s burial, ordering an ebony coffin made and having the body anointed in his own presence. Weshptah’s eldest son, Mernuterseteni, was then empowered to build the tomb, the king furnishing and endowing it. The son therefore erected it by the pyramid of Sahure, and, as we have said, recorded the whole story on its walls.

Erection of the Tomb by His Son

243. It was his eldest [son], first under the king, advocate of the people, Mernuterseteni (Stny-mr-ntr), who made (it) for him, while he was in his tomb of the cemetery.

King Visits a New Building

244. Neferirkere (Nfr-yr-k3-Rc) came to see the beauty of when he came forth upon them. His majesty [caused] that it be the royal children [s]aw and they wondered very greatly beyond [everything]. Then, lo, his majesty praised him because of it.

Weshptah’s Sudden Illness

245. His majesty saw him, however, that he heard not. When the royal children and companions, who were of the court, heard, great fear was in their hearts.

He is Conveyed to Court, and Dies

246. [[He was conveyed to]] the court, and his majesty had the royal children, companions, ritual priests, and chief physicians come. His majesty [had] brought for him a case of writings. They said before his majesty that he was lost. The heart of his majesty was exceedingly sad beyond everything; his majesty said that he would do everything according to his heart’s desire, and returned to the privy chamber.

King Furnishes Him Sepulture

His Eldest Son Builds the Tomb

248. [It was] his eldest son, etc., there was for him a flight of steps plenty. When that he [might be consigned] therein to the earth he had him come all — from the court one caused that it be put into writing upon [his tomb] [His majesty praised him] on account of it, and he praised the god for him (thanked him) exceedingly.

King Endows His Tomb

249. From the scanty fragments of a fourth inscription of the same length, it is evident that the king established a mortuary endowment for Weshptah's tomb "which was by the pyramid: The-Soul-of-Sahure-Shines."

REIGN OF NUSERRE
SINAI INSCRIPTIONa

Relief

250. King in crown of Upper Egypt smiting a Bedwi as in § 168. The texts, as in the similar Sinai tablets, contain only names and titles of the king.

Great God, Lord of the Two Lands, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Favorite (Y's·t-yb);b Golden Horus: Nuter (N'tr); Nuserre (N-wst-R)c d; ...................... Smiter of all countries.

cThis name is to be read N-wst-R. It is of the same formation as the name of Amenemhet III: N-m²st-R for which we have the Greek Ἀμαμηθ. It is a common formation in proper names, e.g., N-kbs-w-Re, N-kbs-w-Pth, N-ê bhy-Stm²t, etc., in all of which the divine name, written first, is to be read last.

dThere is uncertainty in the arrangement of signs here; the title “Son of Re,” inserted at this point, is later followed by the name “Yn” (Cf. Rougé, Recherches sur les monuments qu’on peut attribuer aux VI premières dynasties, 88, 89), and the cartouche containing it perhaps stood under the title in the space now broken away. Likewise the following “Buto” must belong to something lost below. The order of the fivefold titulary of the Middle Kingdom has not yet developed.

them to make mortuary offerings to him, is of especial interest. He offers to commend them to the god, just as Seti I later intercedes with the gods for Ramses II, his son (III, 253), and as Ramses III also did for his son (IV, 246 et passim).

252. 1 Judge, attached to Nekhen, Hotephiryakhet (y² h₃w· t-h₃tp-hr); he saith:

"I have made this tomb as a just possession, and never have I taken a thing belonging to any person. 2 Whosoever shall make offering to me therein, I will do (it) for them; I will commend them to the god for it very greatly; I will do this for them, 3 for bread, for beer, for clothing, for ointment, and for grain, in great quantity. Never have I done aught 4 of violence toward any person. As the god loves a true matter, I was in honor with the king.

253. 1 Judge, eldest of the hall, Hotephiryakhet; he saith:

"I have made this my tomb upon the western arm in a pure place. There was no tomb of any person therein, in order that the possessions of him, who has gone to his ka, might be protected. As for any people who shall enter into this tomb as their mortuary property or shall do an evil thing to it, judgment shall be had with them for it, 4 by the great god. I have made this tomb as my shelter; I was honored by the king, who brought for me a sarcophagus."

INSCRIPTION OF PTAHSHEPSES

254. This document is especially important for the concluding history of the Fourth Dynasty, and the chronology of the first half of the Fifth. Ptahshepses was born under Menkure, of the Fourth Dynasty, and was still living under Nuserre, the fifth king of the Fifth Dynasty;  b thus determining that the period from the last years of Menkure to the first of Nuserre was not longer than a man’s lifetime. Unfortunately, the upper ends of the eight vertical lines containing the inscription are broken off at the top. The first two lines are occupied by two reigns, showing that Ptahshepses is narrating his life by reigns. Now, ll. 4, 5, 6, and 7 all begin alike at the point where the loss at the top ends. It is perfectly clear, therefore, that they each contain a reign. Line 3 is different and has “his majesty” so close to the top that it can hardly refer to a new king, but probably continues the reign of Shepseskaf from 1. 2. As we know that Ptahshepses lived into the reign of Nuserre, we must insert this king at the top of the last line. Omitting the brief reign of Shepseskaf’s successor, and the probably equally brief reign of Khaneferre in the Fifth Dynasty, the kings enumerated by Ptahshepses were not improbably as in following section.

a Confer the same wording in the reigns of Menkure and Shepseskaf.

b Ptahshepses has omitted two reigns between Menkure and Shepseskaf, hence the other omissions assumed are not wholly arbitrary.

REIGN OF MENKUHOR

SINAI INSCRIPTION

263. The relief, if there was any, has cracked off. The text is as follows:

Horus: Menkhu ($Mn\cdot h^c w$); King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Menkuhor ($Mn k^2 w-Hr$), who is given life, stability [like Re, forever]. Commission of [the king],$^b$ which $^c$ executed.

The inscription is the earliest in Sinai in which the leader of the expedition has ventured to insert a commemoration of himself beside that of the king. Such a record of the leader and his followers now becomes customary.

$f$ I take it that the whole of this is a date, followed by the name of the king, and then the event below. A "writing of the god himself" is the customary designation of any ancient document. Some stela of their ancestors led them to the desired vein.

TOMB INSCRIPTIONS OF SENEZEMIB, CHIEF JUDGE, VIZIER, AND CHIEF ARCHITECT

268. The most powerful man at Isesi's court here narrates his favors with the king, in the course of which he includes verbatim two letters from his lord, one of which his... majesty wrote with his own hand. A lake of 1,200 cubits’ length is planned for by the architect, and the king expresses his delight with the plan. Unfortunately, the fragmentary state of the inscription renders the narrative very obscure.

269. The closing inscriptions were the work of Senezemib’s son, who after his father’s death recorded in the tomb the mortuary endowment of his father, and the presentation of the sarcophagus by the king.

Senezemib’s Fidelity and Honors

270. a[I was one who pleased the king as master of secret things of his majesty, as favorite of his majesty in everything, 2— — — As for any work which his majesty commanded to do, I did (it) according to the desire of his majesty’s heart toward it 3——— his majesty, while he was in the place of writings. Endowment of Tomb

274. In the next section^h Senezemib's son, Senezemib, called Mehi (Mhy) says that "a command was issued" to "[gather the princes]" and other people. The command evidently concerned the endowment of his father's tomb, called "this his tomb which I made for him in only one year and three months, while he was in the eternal house which is at the pyramid: 'Iseši 4-is-[Beautiful].'"

The son then adds: *There was brought grain from the accounting of the divine offerings, from the North and the South, with a reference, after a break in the text, to the continuance of the offerings "until today as new. Then his majesty caused decrees to be sealed with the seal of writings," of course for the perpetuation of the mortuary offerings. A long lacuna doubtless contained other benefactions, after which we find, "he appointed mortuary priests [of the endowment], and I had it put into writing.' The record of it was placed in the tomb where "it was engraved by the artists." The mortuary priests were "divided into phyles," and the son then asked the king to give the equipment and furniture of the tomb, referring to the well-known quarry of Troja, whence came so much of the stone used in the Old Kingdom cemeteries.

Sarcophagus

275. Another inscription, now very fragmentary, narrates the bringing of the sarcophagus, etc., for which the son had asked. After a statement of the king's command, we find the usual officials "on a jerry-boat. Everything was done by these sailors, according to that which had been commanded" concerning it in the court. This sarcophagus, together with [its lid], arrived at the pyramid: 'Horizon-of-Khufu,'" where the tomb of Senezemib was located. The officers who conducted the work were praised by the king, and "this sarcophagus" was conveyed to its "place."

Relief

276. This inscription is accompanied by a relief, showing the transport of the sarcophagus across the river. Over the relief are the words:

- The great tow-boat, the name of which is "Mighty-is-Isesi."

Three men on the bow are designated as: Overseer of ten; [naval] commander; overseer of (sb); while one in the stern is called "captain." The sarcophagus and lid are shown, accompanied by the words "sarcophagus" and "lid."

Son's Inscription

277. The son Senezemib, called Mehi, left in his father's tomb a short inscription stating that he placed the above records on the walls of his father's tomb. Only the ends of the three lines remain, but the son closes the record of his pious work with a reminder to his own son by referring to himself as one "whose son shall do the like for him."

MORTUARY INSCRIPTION OF NEZEMIB

278. A short mortuary prayer, interesting for its quaint claim that the deceased was never beaten! Nezemib (Ndm-yb) was probably a private citizen of the middle class, from whom very few monuments have descended to us.

279. O ye living who are (yet) upon earth, who pass by this tomb; let water be poured out for me, for I was a master of secret things. Let a mortuary offering of that which is with you come forth for me, for I was one beloved of the people. Never was I beaten in the presence of any official since my birth; never did I take the property of any man by violence; (but) I was a doer of that which pleased all men.

TOMB INSCRIPTION OF THE NOMARCH HENKU

280. This nomarch, with his brother, was ruler of the Cerastes-Mountain nome, the twelfth nome of Upper Egypt, opposite the Lycopolite, or thirteenth, nome. He flourished late in the Fifth or early in the Sixth Dynasty, and his descendants enjoyed the favor of the Sixth Dynasty Pharaohs (§§ 344 ff.). So little is known of the nomarchs of the Old Kingdom that the meager data of this inscription are of importance. Especially noteworthy are the statements regarding the settlement of people from other nomes in his nome. Besides being much mutilated, the inscription is frequently very obscure. I have only rendered the more important passages and those which are most intelligible.

281. O all ye people of the Cerastes-Mountain; O ye great lords of other nomes, who shall pass by this tomb, I, Henku (Hnkw), tell good things:

I gave bread to all the hungry of the Cerastes-Mountain; I clothed him who was naked therein. I filled its shores with large cattle, and its lowlands with small cattle. I satisfied the wolves of the mountain and the fowl of heaven with flesh of small cattle . . . . . . . . . . I was lord and overseer of southern grain in this nome . . . . . . . . . . I settled the feeble towns in this nome with the people of other nomes;

THE SIXTH DYNASTY
Reign of Teti

Inscriptions of Sabu, Also Called Ibebi

282. Sabu, called also Ibebi, was a favorite official at the courts of Unis, the last king of the Fifth, and Teti, the first king of the Sixth Dynasty. Under both he held the important office of high priest of Ptah at Memphis, and to this oft-repeated title he adds also his other offices, mingled with a long series of self-laudatory epithets and phrases. Of these the inscriptions chiefly consist, but he gives us also a few interesting statements which throw light on the career of such a noble at court. The inscriptions are rendered below with all repetitions, as an unaltered example of such records in the Old Kingdom. In some phrases Sabu's inscription is identical with that of Ptahshepses (§§ 254 ff.).

Career under Unis

283. Attached to (King) Unis, high priest of Ptah, more honored by the king than any servant. He descended into every barge; a member of the court, [when he entered] the ways of [the southern palace] at feasts, Sabu (Sbw), whose beautiful name was Ibebi (Ybby).

284. Honored by the king, doing his pleasure, one whom his lord

INSCRIPTION OF SABU, ALSO CALLED THETY

287. This Sabu was the successor of Sabu, called also Ibebi (§§ 282 ff.), as High Priest of Ptah. His inscription is of importance as showing that before his time there were always two high priests of Ptah.

288. Today in the presence of his majesty. His majesty appointed me [as High Priest of Memphis alone]. [The temple] of "Ptah-South-of-His-Wall" in its every place was under my charge, although there never was [a single High Priest of Ptah before]. Sokar in Shetyt (ŠĮ), all the sacred possessions and all duties which two high priests of Ptah did. His majesty appointed me under my charge, although their offices were like (those of) [their] fathers under my charge, which was done in the whole land; the heart of his majesty being mightier than anything that is done therein.

INSCRIPTION OF AN UNKNOWN BUILDER

289. The unknown, a mere fragment of whose tomb inscription here follows, was perhaps the builder of the pyramid-temple of Teti, for he relates a royal commission to conduct the work on a ka-temple (ḥt-kꜣ) for which the materials came from the Troja quarry, opposite the Sakkara cemetery where Teti's pyramid stands.

INSCRIPTION OF UNI

291. This is the longest narrative inscription and the most important historical document from the Old Kingdom. Uni's career is narrated from its beginning under King Teti, through the entire reign of Pepi I, to its termination under Mernere. Besides the general instructiveness of the life of a great lord of the court in the Old Kingdom, Uni's narrative tells us of the only important wars of the Old Kingdom of which we are informed.

The biography falls into three parts:
I. Career under Teti (l. 1), §§ 292-94.
II. Career under Pepi I (l. 2-32), §§ 306-15.
III. Career under Mernere (l. 32-50) §§ 319-24.

It occupies a single block of limestone 1 m., 10 high and 2 m. 70 wide, which formed one of the walls of the exterior chapel of the mastaba (Catalogue général d'Abydos, 84, No. 522). It is now in Cairo. Published by de Rougé, Mémoires de l'Académie des Inscriptions et belles-lettres, XXV, (Paris, 1866); Rougé, Recherches sur les monuments qu'on peut attribuer aux VI premières dynasties, VII-VIII; Mariette, Abydos, II, 44; Erman, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1882, 1-27 (text collated with copies by Brugsch and Golénischeff); a collation of Erman with the original by Piehl, ibid., 1888, 111 f.; Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1470-77; Grébaut, Musée, Pl. 27, 28 (photo.); Sethe, Urkunden, I, 98-110. Grébaut's photograph and Sethe's copy from the Berlin squeeze (No. 1541) are the only correct texts. Beside Sethe, I had also a copy collated with the original by Erman and Borchardt.
I. CAREER UNDER KING TETI

292. Under this king Uni passed his childhood and entered upon his official career at the bottom of the ladder as an under-custodian of a royal domain.

Introduction

293. [Count, governor of the South], chamber-attendant, attached to Nekhen, lord of Nekheb, sole companion, revered before Osiris, First of the Westerners, Uni (Wny). He says:

Beginning of Career

294. [I was a child] who fastened on the girdle under the majesty of Teti (Tty); my office was that of supervisor of [ ] and I filled* the office of inferior custodian of the domain of Pharaoh.*

a Restored from the stela of Simontu (§ 597, l. 5); that we are to read "girdle" here, and not "crown" (Maspero, Dawn, 417), is shown by a pyramid passage (Pepi I, l. 428); see Erman; also Piehl, Sphinx, II, 134. Hence, the current description of the garland-wearing children is without support from the inscriptions.

b Lit.: "made," as often elsewhere.

c Perhaps a word lost at end of line here.
REIGN OF PEPI I

HAMMAMAT INSCRIPTIONS

295. It is a question whether these inscriptions are the record of three expeditions or of one. If only one party left these records, it is probable that the jealousies between the bureau service and the practical craftsmen can be discerned in them. They are further interesting, because the master pyramid-builder accompanied the expedition, the object of which must therefore have been the securing of the hard and costly stone for the finer portions of Pepi I's pyramid and its temple at Sakkara.

I. THE KING'S INSCRIPTIONS

296. The royal memorial of this expedition occurs twice: in the first the king's figure appears twice, back to back, enthroned in the jubilee-hall, accompanied by his titulary and the words: "First occurrence of the Sed Jubilee." The second shows the king with staff and war-club standing before the ithyphallic Min; above is his titulary, and in front: "Beloved of the lord of Coptos (Min)." Behind the king: "First occurrence of the Sed Jubilee."

II. THE EXPEDITION'S INSCRIPTION\(^a\)

297. This is the inscription recording the expedition as a whole, led by the chief architect and the two treasurers of the god.

298. Year\(^b\) after the eighteenth occurrence (of the numbering), third month of the third season (twelfth month), day 27 of the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Merire (Pepi I), who lives forever; first occurrence of the Sed Jubilee. Royal commission which the chief of all works of the king, the sole companion, master-builder of the king, attached to the Double House, Merire-meriptah-onekh; his son, the ritual priest, Merire-meriptah-onekh; and the treasurers of the god, Ikhi (\(Y\text{hy}\)) and Ihu (\(Y\text{hw}\)), carried out.

The names of five "assistant artisans" and of three "king's-confidants and master-builders" are then recorded below.

III. CHIEF ARCHITECT'S INSCRIPTION\(^c\)

299. This record places all the bureau officers first and the two treasurers of the god last.

Year after — — —.

\(^b\) The date of the Sinai inscription, which is also coincident with the Sed Jubilee, is eleven days later. The discrepancy is easily explained by the fact that these expeditions were both sent out to secure materials for monuments in the year of this festival; the dates given were not intended to indicate its exact day. If the numberings took place every two years, then the first Sed festival occurred in the thirty-sixth or thirty-seventh year, which we know is impossible. Meyer supposes that the numberings had now become more frequent (Aegyptische Chronologie, 169–70), which is probable. See also Sethe, Untersuchungen, III.

\(^c\) Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 115, k; Sethe, Urkunden, I, 94.

IV. INSCRIPTION OF THE TREASURER OF THE GOD, IKHI

300. One of the two treasurers of the god, perhaps incensed at being placed at the foot of the list in the preceding inscription, has in this inscription recorded himself alone as the leader of the expedition, omitting the chief architect and the bureau officials entirely, and even his colleague, Ihu.

At the extreme right, framed between two scepters and the sign for heaven at the top, is the titulary of Pepi I, accompanied by the words: “First occurrence of the Sed Jubilee.” At the left of this appears the inscription:

301. Royal commission which the treasurer of the god, Ikhi (Yḥy), carried out.
   His son, the ship-captain Ikhi.

Below appear the names of five “assistant artisans of the palace” and the “master pyramid-builder, Thethi.”

302. 1. The titulary of the king in one line at the top is: “King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Favorite of the Two Goddesses; Merikhet (Mry-ht); Merire (Mry-Rc), Pepi I, given all life forever." It surmounts two reliefs: that on the right contains the Horus-name of the king: "Meri-towe (mryy-t2wı, 'Beloved of the Two Lands')," and the figure of the king striding as at a ceremonial, preceded by the words: "First occurrence of the Sed Jubilee." Establishment of the field —. The relief on the left shows Pepi I smiting the Asiatics in the manner conventional since prehistoric times.

303. 2. Below the reliefs is the inscription of the officers of the expedition, as follows:

Year after the eighteenth occurrence (of the numbering), fourth month of the third season (twelfth month), day 6. Commission which the commander of the army Ibdu (Ybdw), son of the commander of the troops Merire-onekh, carried out.

Then follows a list of fifteen subordinate officials and members of the expedition; such a list, better preserved will be found in § 343.

INSRIPTION IN THE HATNUB QUARRY

304. In the year of the twenty-fifth numbering, Pepi I sent an expedition to the alabaster quarries of Hatnub, back of Tell el-Amarna, under charge of the nomarch of the Hare nome (XV) of Upper Egypt. Attached to the king's name is the phrase "First occurrence of the Sed Jubilee," and on any theory of the Sed Jubilee this date is in glaring contradiction of Pepi I's Sed Jubilee in the year of the eighteenth

II. CAREER UNDER PEPI I

306. Pepi I promoted the obscure under-custodian of the royal domains, to be a judge of the Nekhen court; at the same time giving him rank among the courtiers and an income as inferior prophet of the pyramid-temple. As judge he soon gained the confidence of his superiors. The king granted him the equipment for his tomb, which was brought from the Troja quarry for him, and then promoted him to a superior custodianship of the royal domain. He rapidly gained royal favor, and when it became necessary to prosecute one of the king's wives, probably for conspiracy, he was chosen to hear the case with only one colleague. He was then called upon to organize an army for a campaign against the Bedwin north of Sinai, and five times he was sent to quell revolts in this region. He finally pushed up into southern Palestine, which is the first Egyptian invasion of that country known in history.

Equipment of His Tomb by the King

308. Then I [be] sought — the majesty of the king that there be brought for me a limestone sarcophagus from Troja (R 2 - w). The king had the treasurer of the god ferry over, together with a troop of sailors under his hand, in order to bring for me this sarcophagus from Troja; and he arrived with it, in a large ship belonging to the court, together with [its] lid, the false door; the setting 1 , two 1 , and one offering-tablet. Never was the like done for any servant, for I was excellent to the heart of his majesty, for I was pleasant to the heart of his majesty, for his majesty loved me.

Appointment as Superior Custodian

Prosecution of the Queen

310. bWhen legal procedure was instituted in private b in the harem against the queen, c Imtes (Ymts) d his majesty caused me to enter, in order to hear (the case) alone. No 11 chief judge and vizier at all, no prince at all was there, but only I alone, because I was excellent, because I was pleasant to the heart of his majesty; because his majesty loved me. I alone was the one who put (it) in writing, 12 together with a single judge attached to Nekhen; while my office was (only) that of superior custodian of the domain of Pharaoh. Never before had one like me heard the secret of the royal harem, except that the king caused me to hear (it), because I was more excellent to the heart of his majesty than any official of his, than any noble of his, than any servant of his.

War against the Bedwin

311. His majesty e made war on e the Asiatic Sand-dwellers (m-hryw-š) and 14 his majesty made an army of many ten thousands: in the entire South, southward to Elephantine, f and northward to Aphroditopolis; in the Northland on both sides g entire in the stronghold, h and in the midst of the strongholds, i among the Irteth (yr't) negroes, the Mazoi (Md) negroes, the Yam (Ym) negroes, 16 among the Wawat (Ww) negroes, among the Kau (Kw) negroes, and in the land of Temeh (Tm').

The discovery of the Harkhuf inscription has thrown light on the location of Yam, showing that the journey thither and return occupied seven months.
Uni Leads the Campaign

312. His majesty sent me at the head of this army while the counts, while the wearers of the royal seal, while the sole companions of the palace, while the nomarchs and commanders of strongholds belonging to the South and the Northland; the companions, the caravan-conductors, the superior prophets belonging to the South and the Northland, the overseers of the crown-possessions, were (each) at the head of a troop of the South or the Northland, of the strongholds and cities which they commanded, and of the negroes of these countries. While I was of this rank everything, I inspected the number of these troops, (although) never had any servant inspected.

313. dAre these three places in apposition or are they three different localities? Erman (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1891, 120, n. 1) thinks we should, as in some other analogous cases, consider the two following names as partitive appositions denoting two places located in the "northern isle." The latter is, I think, the same as the "Isle of Snefru," reached by Sinuhe on his flight through the same region (§ 493, 1. 9). In view of the "bend of Snefru" above, this is at least very probable. The name is of course due to the activity of Snefru in this frontier region necessitated by his opening the mines in the Sinai peninsula.

fThis verb is regularly used of the return from Asiatic campaigns in the Empire, and must have the same meaning here.
safety, (after) it had thrown fire in all its [troops]; this army returned in safety, (after) it had slain troops therein, in many ten thousands; this army returned in safety (after) [it had carried away] therefrom a great multitude as living captives. His majesty praised me on account of it above everything.

Revolts of the Bedwin

314. His majesty sent me to despatch [this army] five times, in order to traverse the land of the Sand-dwellers at each of their rebellions, with these troops. I did so that [his] majesty praised me [on account of it].

Campaign in Southern Palestine

315. When it was said there were revolters because of a matter among these barbarians in the land of Gazelle-nose, I crossed over in troop-ships with these troops, and I voyaged to the back of the height of the ridge on the north of the Sand-dwellers. When this army had been brought in the highway, I came and smote them all and every revolter among them was slain.

There was probably a first object before ymḥ, with which "multitude" was in apposition.

The reading "Tība" for this name, given by Maspero (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 64) is not supported by the careful collation of Erman and Borchardt, nor by Piehl (ibid., 26, 112); nor by Sethe.

The same use of m as in Harkhuf, ll. 6 and 8, et passim in that text.

The Palestinian highlands; Maspero in placing this region between Gaza and the Serbonis Lake seems to have overlooked the word "ridge;" there are no highlands in the locality defined by him. Uni must have landed a little farther north and reached the highlands of southern Palestine. See also Müller, Asien und Europa, 33.

The end of Uni's career under Pepi I is marked by a line of separation on the stone.
REIGN OF MERNERE

INSCRIPTIONS AT THE FIRST CATARACT

316. These important inscriptions, which record a visit of Mernere to the region immediately above the first cataract, are supported in their statement that the Nubian chiefs came to do him obeisance, by the biography of Uni (ll. 46-47, § 324), whom Mernere sent to excavate a channel through the cataract. The same negro tribes who furnished the wood for Uni’s quarry-boats, here do reverence to his king. This visit and his construction of the canal, are important evidences of Mernere’s activity on the Nubian frontier, thus preparing the way for the conquest of lower Nubia in the Twelfth Dynasty.

Northern Inscription\(^a\)

317. The king stands leaning upon his staff, with the lion’s tail as his only symbol of royalty. Behind him is the god Khnum, and before him the chiefs of Nubia.\(^b\) Over his head are the usual name and titles:\(^c\) “King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Mernere;” behind him the words:\(^d\) “Beloved of Khnum, Lord of the Cataract;” below him the date: “Year 5, second month of the third season\(^e\) (tenth month), day 28.”

\(^a\)Roughly cut on a block of granite south of the first cataract “on the eastern bank of the Nile, facing the southern extremity of the island of El-Hesseh;” (not “on” the island as stated, Egypt Exploration Fund Archaeological Report, 1903-1904, 12); text by Sayce, Recueil, XV, 147; manuscript copy by Borchardt; Sethe, Urkunden, I, 110.

Before the king is a column of text, as follows:

The coming of the king himself, standing behind the hill-country, while the chiefs of Mazoi (Mdz), Irtet (Yrtt), and Wawat (Wwlt), did obeisance and gave great praise.

Southern Inscription

318. This is practically a duplicate of the preceding, but there is no date; one of the Nubian chiefs is still visible standing before the king, and the accompanying record is slightly fuller, thus:

The coming of the king himself, appearing behind the hill-country, that he might see that which is in the hill-country, while the chiefs of, etc. (as above).

sary stone for the royal pyramid. Likewise he led another expedition to the quarry of Hatnub, back of Amarna, to procure an alabaster altar of vast size for the pyramid-temple. He then canalized the first cataract, excavating five channels, probably the first ever made there. This is in accordance with the interest in Nubia, displayed by Mernere, who visited the cataract in person and received the homage of the lower Nubian chiefs (§§ 316 ff.). Finally, under Mernere, short as his reign was, Uni seems to have died.

Appointment as Governor of the South

320. When I was master of the footstool of the palace and sandal-bearer, the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Mernere (Mrn-R), my lord, who lives forever, made me count (h²ty-), and governor of the South, southward to Elephantine, and northward to Aphroditopolis; for I was excellent to the heart of his majesty, for I was pleasant to the heart of his majesty, for his majesty loved me.

34 When I was master of the footstool and sandal-bearer, his majesty praised me for the watchfulness and vigilance, which I showed in the place of audience, above his every official, above [his every] noble, above his every servant. Never before was this office conferred upon any servant. I acted as governor of the South to his satisfaction. Not one therein with [his] neighbor. I accomplished all tasks; I numbered everything that is counted to (the credit of) the court in this South twice; all the corvée that is counted to (the credit of) the court in this South twice. I performed the in this

322. His majesty sent me to Elephantine to bring a false door of granite, together with its offering-tablet, doors and settings of granite; to bring doorways and offering-tablets of granite, belonging to the upper chamber of the pyramid (called): "Mernere-Shines-and-is-Beautiful," of the queen. Then I sailed down-stream to the pyramid (called): "Mernere-Shines-and-is-Beautiful," with 6 cargo-boats, 3 tow-boats and 3 boats to only one warship. Never had Ibhet

*aThis unknown quarry must be in the vicinity of Assuan, where black granite is found; the material of the sarcophagus (not given here) as discovered in Mernere's pyramid at Sakkara in January, 1881, by Mariette (just a few days before his death) is a fine black granite. (See Maspero, Recueil, IX, 178, and Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XI, 312). Brugsch however says: "aus rothgesprenkeltem Granit" (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1881, 4, and Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1478). Maspero is corroborated by Petrie (History of Egypt, I, 97). The lid mentioned in our text is pushed back, but still lying on the sarcophagus, within which Mariette's native assistant, Mustapha, found the body of the king Mernere, now in Cairo Museum.— The "pyramidion" or final capstone of the pyramid was of finer material than the other masonry; it is no longer preserved, but tomb paintings often show this final block colored black by the artist. Cf. Maspero, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XI, 312.

*bThe exact place and meaning of the last three words are uncertain; possibly they refer to a burial place of the queen in connection with the pyramid.

*cThis voyage was made in connection with the preceding, as Ibhet could not have been far from Elephantine (see l. 42).

*dLit.: "Granite, a false door."

*eThese terms have been compared with the pyramid as existent today by Maspero (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XI, 304-17). The meaning of rw’t "false door" and st "offering-tablet" had already been established by Erman (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1882, 22 and Festschrift für Georg Ebers, 431); the *c w or "doors" Maspero thinks are the three portcullises found in the entrance passage; and the rw’y t, he thinks are the granite settings in the side walls in which the portcullises played. His identification of the "upper chamber" with the exterior chapel is obvious (so also Erman).

I brought down this offering-table for him in only 17 days, it having been quarried\textsuperscript{e} in Hatnub, and I had it proceed down-stream in this\textsuperscript{f} cargo-boat. 44I hewed for him a cargo-boat of acacia wood of 60 cubits in its length, and 30 cubits in its breadth, built\textsuperscript{g} in only 17 days, in the third month of the third season (eleventh month). Although there was no 45water on the river, I landed in safety at the pyramid (called): "Mernere-Shines-and-is-Beautiful;" and the whole was carried out by my hand, according to the mandate which the majesty of my lord had commanded me.

\textit{Second Expedition to Southern Quarries}

INSCRIPTIONS OF HARKHUF

The same chiefs do obeisance to King Mernere at Assuan in the year 5. See §§ 316 ff.

The tombs of the Assuan nobles were first noticed (1885) and excavations in them were begun by Mustafa, British consular agent at Aswan. They were then excavated by Gen. Sir F. W. Grenfell (1885), assisted by Budge in 1886. See Budge, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, X, 4-40, and Bouriant, Recueil, X, 181-98 (supplemented by Scheil, Recueil, XIV, 94-96), who published the shorter texts, discovered before the end of 1886. The entire series of inscribed tombs discovered up to date has been published with plans by de Morgan (Catalogue des monuments, 141-201). They are seventeen in number, and unfortunately de Morgan's copyists have collated so carelessly that the more difficult texts are worthless. Only three of the tombs have furnished texts of length or great historical importance: that of Sebni (§§ 362 ff.), of Pepi-nakht (§§ 355 ff.), and Harkhuf. Curiously enough, the fellahin on the island of Elephantine discovered a mass of correspondence on papyrus belonging to the same noblemen who are interred in the cliffs opposite. These papyri of the Old Kingdom are in a very fragmentary condition, but will be published by the Berlin Museum, where they now are. One letter has already been translated by Erman in Aus den Papyri der Königlichen Museen, Berlin, 1899, 91, 92.

south, involving indirect traffic with the Sudan. Harkhuf was the most successful of the energetic caravan-leaders among the Assuan nobles. He made four journeys to the distant southern Nubian country of Yam and finally thence westward into unknown regions. Three of these journeys were under Mernere (§§ 332–35) and the last under Pepi II (§§ 350 ff.). His inscriptions and those of the other Assuan nobles, for the first time reveal to us the active commerce with the south conducted by these nobles residing on the southern frontier.

326. Harkhuf’s full titles were: a “Count (ḫ³ty-ᴖ), governor of the South, b wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, ritual priest, caravan-conductor.” Besides these offices, he was also, “chamber-attendant, attached to Nekhen, lord of Nekheb.”

327. He first enumerates some of the less important incidents of his life, in connection with some of the qualities of his character.

328. I came today from my city, I descended from my nome, I built a house, I set up the doors. I dug a lake, and I planted trees. The king praised me. My father made a will for me, (for) I was excellent ———— [one beloved] of his father, praised of his mother,

The entire tomb with plan and texts is published by de Morgan (Catalogue des monuments, I, 162–73), but very inaccurately. As Erman’s text (in Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache) is based on indistinct photographs, no accurate text has yet been published. The accompanying translation is based upon my copy of the Berlin squeezes, photographs by Borchardt, and Erman’s recent collation of the original, which he kindly placed at my disposal.

Since writing the above, the excellent text of Sethe has appeared (Urkunden, I, 120–31).

First Journey

333. He says:
The majesty of Mernere (Mr-n-Rc) my lord, sent me, together with months, and I brought all (kinds of) gifts from it. I was very greatly praised for it.

Second Journey

334. His majesty sent me a second time alone; I went forth upon the Elephantine road, and I descended from Irthet (Yrtt), Mekher (Mr'hr), Tereres (Trrs), Irtheth (Yrtt), being an affair of eight months. When I descended I brought gifts from this country in very great quantity. Never before was the like brought to this land. I descended from the dwelling of the chief of Sethu (Stw) and Irthet (Yrtt), after I had explored these countries. Never had any companion or caravan-conductor who went forth to Yam (Y stm) before this, done (it).a

Third Journey

335. His majesty now sent me a third time to Yam; I went forth from the Elephantine road, and I found the chief of Yam going to the land of Temeh (Tmh) to smite Temeh as far as the western corner of heaven. I went forth after him to the land of Temeh, and I pacified him, until he praised all the gods for the king's sake.

fThe conclusion of this journey describes the unusual road taken to reach home, after he has already narrated the journey out, and the gifts brought back.

hAccording to the analogy of l. 6 ("Elephantine road"), Uhet must be the starting-point of the road. Hence Griffith's proposal to identify this word with "oasis," seems to me improbable (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XVI, 50). The verb "wb" commonly means "to quarry stone;" may this not be a word for "quarry," and the road is then the old quarry road still used at the cataract? Harkhuf then later crosses to the west side.

REIGN OF PEPI II

CONVEYANCE OF LAND BY IDU, CALLED ALSO SENENI

337. Idu, or Seneni, was priest of Pepi I, Mernere, and Pepi II. This document recorded in his tomb constitutes a gift of land to his wife, apparently as her mortuary endowment, though it is not so called. Strangely enough, the location, size, and limits of the field are not given.

338. ¹Senen, he saith:

"As for this field, which I have conveyed which I have given to my beloved wife, Disnek (Dyy's-nk) [it is her] true possession. As for any persons who shall take it from this Disnek, they shall be for it by the great god, lord of heaven, and I will seize them [like] wild fowl. I am (now) an — and excellent spirit. Disnek, she saith:

"I was one amiable, beloved of her entire city. As for any persons who shall take this land from me, I will enter into judgment with them, by the great god."

STELA OF THE TWO QUEENS, ENEKHNES-MERIRE

344. The history of the royal family disclosed by this stela is of great interest as well as of historical importance. Zau, the vizier and chief justice under Pepi II, and perhaps earlier, erected the monument in memory of his brothers and sisters at Abydos. He was the son of a prince, named Khui, and his mother’s name was Nebet. Both his sisters married king Pepi I; one became the mother of Mernere, the other of Pepi II, so that besides being half-brothers, the two kings were on the mother’s side also cousins. The family tree appears thus:

Khui—Nebet
  /        \
Enekhnes-Merire I—Pepi I—Enekhnes-Merire II Zau
   \       |
     Mernere Pepi II

With both his sisters queens and likewise successively the mother of the king, we can see how Zau became vizier

LETTER OF PEPI II

350. Harkhuf has made a fourth voyage to Yam, and having sent word to the king of his safe return with many products of the south and especially a dancing dwarf, the king writes him a letter of thanks, promising great rewards, etc., if the dwarf is safely brought to court. This letter, Harkhuf had engraved on the façade of his tomb, which was already complete, so that a further space for the letter had to be smoothed on the extreme right of the façade, where none of the other Assuan tombs has any inscriptions at all. Thus was preserved to us the only complete royal letter of the Old Kingdom. It is as follows:

a Same as preceding title of Neferkere. Both these kings were deceased at this time, as they do not receive the predicate "who lives forever."

b An oath.

c With the exception of the Berlin papyrus fragments (§ 325, note) and the fragmentary letters (§§ 271, 273), it is the only letter of any kind surviving from the Old Kingdom.
Date and Introduction

351. 1Royal seal, year 2, third month of the first season, (third month), day 15.
2Royal decree (to) a the sole companion, the ritual priest and caravan-conductor, Harkhuf (Hr-hw).

Acknowledgment of Harkhuf's Letter

3I have noted the matter of this thy letter, which thou hast sent to the king, to the palace, in order that one b might know that thou hast descended 4in safety from Yam with the army which was with thee. Thou hast said [in] this thy letter, that thou hast brought 5all great and beautiful gifts, which Hathor, mistress of Imu (Vm^32 w) hath given to the ka of the 6king of Upper and Lower Egypt Neferkere (Njr-R c), who liveth forever and ever. Thou hast said in this thy letter, 6that thou hast brought a dancing dwarf d of the god from the land of spirits, like the dwarf which e the treasurer of the god Burded (B^2-wr-dd) brought from Punt in the time of Isesi (Yssy). Thou hast said to my majesty: “Never 9before has one like him been brought by any other who has visited e Yam.”

Harkhuf's Rewards

352. Each year 9—1 thee 10doing that which thy lord desires and praises; thou spendest day and night 11with the caravan 1 in doing that which 11thy lord desires, praises and commands. His majesty will make 12thy many excellent honors to be an ornament for the son of thy son forever, so that all people will say 13when they hear what my majesty doeth for thee: “Is there anything like this e which was done for the sole companion, Harkhuf, 14when he descended from Yam, because of the vigilance which he showed, to do that which his lord desired, praised and commanded!"

King’s Instructions

353. Come northward to the court immediately; thou shalt bring this dwarf with thee, which thou bringest living, prosperous and healthy from the land of spirits, for the dances of the god, to rejoice and gladden the heart of the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Neferkere, who lives forever. When he goes down with thee into the vessel, appoint excellent people, who shall be beside him on each side of the vessel; take care lest he fall into the water. When [he] sleeps at night appoint excellent people, who shall sleep beside him in his tent; inspect ten times a night. My majesty desires to see this dwarf more than the gifts of Sinai and of Punt (Pwn†). If thou arrivest at court this dwarf being with thee alive, prosperous and healthy, my majesty will do for thee a greater thing than that which was done for the treasurer of the god, Burded in the time of Isesi, according to the heart’s desire of my majesty to see this dwarf.

354. Commands have been sent to the chief of the New Towns, the companion, and superior prophet, to command that sustenance be taken from him in every store-city and every temple, without stinting therein.

INSCRIPTIONS OF PEPI-NAKHT

355. This nobleman of Elephantine was of high rank, and was entrusted with important commissions by King Pepi II.

He led two campaigns in Nubia (§§ 358, 359), and a remarkable expedition to the north Red Sea for the rescue of the body of a nobleman bound for Punt, who had been killed by the Sand-dwellers while building his ship for the voyage (§ 360).

356. His titles were as follows:

1. Custodian of the domain, scribe of the phyle of the pyramid (called): "Neferkere-Remains-Alive," wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, Hekib (Hk^2-yb); b governor of the pyramid-city: "Pepi-Remains-Beautiful," sole companion, ritual priest, caravan-conductor, who brings the products of the countries to his lord, Pepi-nakht; 3 chief of the phyle of the pyramid: "Mernere-Shines-and-is-Beautiful;" who sets the terror of Horus [among] the countries, the revered Hekib, 4 count, sole companion, chamber-attendant, judge attached to Nekhen, lord of Nekheb, revered by the great god, Pepi-nakht.

One more title: "Governor of foreign countries," is found in column 14.

357. His narrative inscription c is as follows:

Pepi-nakht’s Character

I was one who said that which was good, and repeated that which was loved. Never did I say anything evil to a powerful one against any people, (for) I desired that it be well with me in the great god’s presence. I gave bread to the hungry, and clothing to the naked. Never aIt is probable that this fragment of four lines (of which only two are preserved) form the conclusion of the expedition against the Asiatics. Sethe has also inserted them here.

bPepi-nakht’s name and title.

cIn the cliffs opposite Assuan; No. 9 on de Morgan’s plan (Catalogue des monuments, 142); texts, ibid., 157, 158, but so badly that it is very difficult to use them, and I unfortunately had no other copy (for this tomb was overlooked by both Budge and Bouriant, see § 325, note on excavation), for my note (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, May, 1901, 238), where text is also published. Sethe has since published the same text (Urkunden, I, 140, 141), and his explanation is more probable than mine, though it does not affect the conclusions of my note.

dIt is quite incomprehensible that Klim’s name should not appear here as the lord of Khnemhotep. Hence Sethe’s restoration is very probable. This Thethi’s tomb is located in the same cliff (de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, 199); besides the titles above, he bore the title: “who brings the products of the southern countries to the king,” which we should expect of one who voyaged to Kush.

eLit.: “done,” as in Uni, § 322, l. 41 and Harkhuf, Letter, § 351, l. 9.

fFrom his tomb hewn in the cliffs on the west shore at Assuan (for the excavation see § 325, note); it bears the No. 26, and is called No. 2 on de Morgan’s plan (Catalogue des monuments, 14). It is the largest tomb at Assuan. It is described by Budge with plan (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, X, 16–23) and by Bouriant (Recueil, X, 182–85) both of whom took squeezes and ministrative, and historical data, coming from a period of which we know so very little. Unfortunately, we possess only the second half of the narrative, and this in a condition so fragmentary that a general outline is necessary in order to make the contents clear.

363. The first half, now no longer legible, must have contained the narrative of an expedition into Nubia by Sebni's father, Mekhu. On this expedition Mekhu in some way meets his death. Here the surviving portion of the inscription begins; information of Mekhu's death is brought to his son Sebni, and he sets out with troops and 100 asses, laden with presents to rescue his father's body for embal­ment; otherwise of course there would be no life hereafter for Mekhu (ll. 1–3). He sent messengers to the king to inform promised (1887) soon to publish the long text. It was finally published (1893) by de Morgan (Catalogue des monuments, 147, 148), but his copyists have clearly spent no time on the difficult collation, and the publication is unusable; the inscrip­tion has never been translated or treated. The long text occupies nineteen columns on the right of the door; these are the continuation from the beginning on the left of the door, which has now unfortunately almost totally disappeared. The nineteen columns are crossed by six wide horizontal cracks, some of which were filled up and did not interrupt the scribe's writing, and some of which he jumped over. It is always a question whether the crack has caused a lacuna, e. g., in ll. 11–17 in the third crack from the top there are no lacunae. Moreover, the whole text is very badly weathered, and one can sit for hours pouring over one line in varying lights, without being certain of the reading. The accompanying translation is based on my copy of the Berlin squeezes, collated with Erman's collation of the original; Erman and I then spent an entire day going over the doubtful passages in the squeezes together, and it is to be hoped that the text is now fixed. Sethe has since published all our readings and his own collation of the squeeze (Urkun­den, I, 135–40).

It is certainly remarkable that of the three narrative inscriptions of Assuan, two contain accounts of the death of a nobleman on a foreign expedition and the rescue of the body: Mekhu in Nubia and Enenkhet on the northern shores of the Red Sea (§ 360). For the tomb of an Egyptian buried in Sinai, see Borchardt, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1897, 112. Another Egyptian who apparently perished in the desolate quarries of Hammamat is commemorated on the rocks as follows: “O ye living, the ones who come to this land, who desire to return to the king, bearing their gifts to their lord; say ye, ‘1000 loaves, 1000 jars of beer, etc., etc., for the wearer of the royal seal, etc., Sheme (Sm-).’” Text in Golénischeff, Hammamat, III, No. 1.
him of his departure and the purpose of his journey (l. 3). He reached Wawat, and pacified it and its further neighbors, secured the body of his father and started upon the return (ll. 3–6). On reaching Wawat again, he sent the officer Iri and two companions to the court with some of the native products which his father had acquired (ll. 6, 7). They were evidently instructed to return with embalmers and equipment for embalming the deceased Mekhu, for as Sebni descended the river he met Iri returning from the court with all the people and paraphernalia necessary for the embalming (ll. 8–10). Iri brought also written instructions from the king to Sebni, containing promises of great reward for his pious deed (ll. 10–12). Sebni then buried his father and proceeded to Memphis with the Nubian products which his father had gotten (ll. 12, 13). He was highly praised by the king, and given very rich gifts (ll. 14–16). Later a communication from the vizier reached him, conveying to him a gift of land, either as a further reward for his good deed to refund him his expenses, or as an endowment of his father’s tomb (ll. 17–19).

364. Sebni’s titles are: a Count, wearer of the royal seal, governor of the South, sole companion, ritual priest, Sebni (Sbn).

365. The long text is as follows:

INSCRIPTIONS OF IBI

375. The nomarch, Ibi, begins the history of a new family in the twelfth nome, whose relations with the royal house are especially instructive. In all probability Ibi was the son of the powerful Zau of Abydos (§§344 ff.), nomarch of the Thinite nome, whose two sisters became the queens of Pepi I. Ibi was a contemporary of Pepi I, Mernere, and Pepi II during the first part of his reign. Although Mernere appointed him to the nomarchy of the Cerastes-Mountain, it is also probable that he was appointed to it in confirmation of his title to it through his marriage to a lady named Rahenem (\(R^5\text{hnm}\)), in whom we may recognize the heiress to the said nome. He thus became the head, not only of his hereditary nome of Thinis, the ancient capital of Egypt, but also of the twelfth nome. To the latter for some reason he transferred his residence. It is possible that he had not at first received the Thinite nome, and that on his marriage, he went to the Cerastes-Mountain first, as his only nome, and remained there even after his appointment to the Thinite nome. But it is his office in the latter of which he is most proud.

376. The office of "great lord" or at least that of "count" (\(h^2\text{ty-\(\ddot{c}\)}\)) of a nome, was at this time evidently one of appointment by favor of Pharaoh. The royal house thus maintained control of the landed lords, who were the descendants of the local governors of the Fourth and Fifth Dynasties.

Ibi introduced a severe and effective discipline into the organization of the nome, and must have prospered greatly from its revenues. His son Zau-Shemai succeeded him in both nomes.\(^a\) (§ 380)

INSCRIPTION OF ZAU

This nomarch of the Cerastes-Mountain was the grandson of Ibi whom Mernere had appointed to this nome. Ibi's son Zau-Shemai died early, and his son Zau succeeded him. He was a contemporary of Pepi II, under whom he held the office of "keeper of the door of the South," an office usually belonging to the nobles of Elephantine. At his father's death he was obliged to petition the king that he might succeed to the paternal nomarchy. His account

I say: "I ḫỉ, was one beloved of his father, praised of his mother, ḫỉ, whom his brothers and sisters loved.

Father's Burial

382. I buried 6my father the count, Zau, beyond the splendor, beyond the goodliness of any [equal] of his ḫỉ, who was in this South. I requested as an honor 8from the majesty of my lord, the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Neferkere (Pepi II), who lives forever, that ḫỉ there be taken 8a coffin, clothing, and festival perfume for this ḫỉ, Zau. His majesty caused ḫỉ that the custodian of the royal domain should bring a coffin of wood, festival perfume, ḫỉ oil, clothing, 200 (pieces) of prime (h tw) linen, ḫỉ and of fine southern linen of ḫỉ, taken from the double White House of the court for this Zau. Never had it been done ḫỉ to another of his rank.

Son's Burial

383. Now, I caused that I should be buried in the same tomb ḫỉ with this Zau, in order that I might be with him in one place; ḫỉ not, however, because I was not in a position ḫỉ to make a second tomb; but I did this in order that ḫỉ I might see this Zau every day, in order that I might be with him in one place."

Zau Succeeds His Father

385. I requested ḫ9[fro]m [his majesty]a that I might fulfil the office of count, of this Zau. His majesty caused that there be issued (lit., made) the decree appointing himb count, as an offering which the king gives.c

aSomething similar must have been in the lacuna (nearly one-third line); there is not room for "as an honor from," as in ll. 7, 8.

bThe change of person is very sudden, but Zau can be referring to no other than himself, from the standpoint of the command issued.

cThe mode of obtaining the office of ḫ3ty-c "count" at this time, points clearly to its source in the royal favor. The designation of the appointment as "an offering which the king gives." the usual term for a mortuary gift of the king, certainly indicates that this term did not originally designate solely a mortuary gift, but must have at first enjoyed a wider application, which in course of time was narrowed to exclusively funerary largesses of the king. [Later: A letter from Eduard Meyer suggests that the rank of count was given to the deceased father after his death as a mortuary honor. This would explain its designation as a mortuary gift, and the pronoun "him." ]
REIGN OF ITY

HAMMAMAT INSCRIPTION

386. This is the only inscription of King Ity known. His pyramid mentioned in the inscription has never been found and the place of the king in the series of Pharaohs is uncertain. The inscription is dated in his first year, and records an expedition which was sent to procure the finer stone necessary for the king’s pyramid.

387. Year of the first occurrence (of the numbering), fourth month of the first season, day 2.

HAMMAMAT INSCRIPTION

388. This unknown king, from whom we have no other documents, sent his eldest son Zaty, who held the office of treasurer of the god, as well as that of general in the army, to the Hammamat quarries to procure a monument, possibly a statue for the king. Zaty left the following record of the enterprise:

THE NINTH AND TENTH DYNASTIES
INSCRIPTIONS OF SIUT\(^a\)

391. Of the five inscribed tombs of Siut, three\(^b\) date from the period of the Ninth and Tenth Dynasties, and form our only contemporary source of information for that obscure epoch. They belonged to three princes of the Lycopolite nome: Tefibi (§§ 393–97), his son Kheti I (§§ 398–404), and another Kheti (II) (§§ 405–14), whose relation to the two others is not clear. These princes as nomarchs all bore the same titles: "Hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, superior prophet of Upwawet, lord of Siut." They were the continual friends and supporters of the weak Heracleopolitan kings, forming a buffer state, warding off the attacks of the rebellious Theban princes, who are the ancestors of the Eleventh Dynasty.\(^c\) Unfortunately, they do not mention any of the Thebans against whom they fought, and only one of the Heracleopolitans whom they served—Merikere.

392. The language of these texts is exceedingly obscure and difficult; these hindrances, together with the very

First copied by the expedition of Napoleon, they were almost wholly neglected till late in last century, having in the interim been frightfully mutilated (serving as a stone quarry!). Finally, after repeated visits, from 1886 to 1888, Mr. F. Ll. Griffith published a careful text, not only of the difficult original, but, where necessary, also of all existing earlier fragmentary copies (The Inscriptions of Siut and Dér Riféh, London, 1889). Mr. Griffith furnished an account of his edition, and a digest of the content of the texts in the Babylonian and Oriental Record, III, 121–29, 164–68, 174–84, 244–52, where he also gives an exhaustive bibliography. Maspero (Revue critique, II (1889), 410–21) reviewed Griffith's work and gave a very free paraphrase of the texts, some of which is repeated, Dawn, 456–58.

fragmentary state of the texts, often make translation quite impossible. The restorations make no claim to reproduce the lost words, but merely indicate the probable connection.

I. INSCRIPTION OF TEFIBI

393. The conflict with the South is here clearer than anywhere else, but unfortunately the unfinished condition of the inscription (see l. 16, n., § 396) breaks all continuity. The content in outline is as follows: Tefibi adjures all passers-by to pray for him (l. 1). He sets forth the beneficence of his rule—a rule without distinction of persons, maintaining the security of all, even if abroad at night (ll. 2–12). Because of his beneficent rule his son, when a child, succeeded him without opposition (ll. 13–15). On his (Tefibi’s) first campaign, the southern nomes from Elephantine to an uncertain point on the north were united against him (l. 16). He defeated them first on the west shore, driving them as far as “the fortress of the port of the South” (Abydos? ll. 16–18). He then crossed to the east shore, where he defeated a second army of the enemy (ll. 19–22) and also discomfited a hostile fleet (ll. 23, 24). He thus suppressed rebellion and had opportunity to promote deserving officers (ll. 25–27). The result was widespread respect for his energetic government, prosperity of the temples, and envy of the evil-minded (ll. 36–40).

Address to Passers who shall pass by this bend, a those who shall enter into this tomb, those who shall see that which is in it; as Upwawet, lord of Siut and

a Lines 16–40 were never finished; the lower third was never cut (my restorations chiefly indicate the probable connection). Moreover, they were plastered over, and a new inscription containing the conventional encomium was painted on the plaster. As the content of this very portion of the text is political, this must have been the motive for effacing it. See Griffith, Babylonian and Oriental Record, III, 128. As the effacement was done before the inscription was finished, it would seem that there was interference from the south during the construction of the tomb.

b The word “southern” is broken and not quite certain. It exactly fits the remaining traces as well as the context, and later course of the war.

c Maspero reads “Gaou” (Kau), (Revue critique, 1889, II, 416), but wisely adds? The same name occurs at Benihasan (§ 620, note), but cannot be located.

d The southern boundary of the Heracleopolitan kings (?), which was then not far north of Abydos; cf. § 423. In this case there would have been an invasion of the Heracleopolitan kingdom by the Thebans, who were then driven out.

e A reference to his campaign on the west shore of the river; the east shore follows in l. 19.

f This must have been a city on the frontier between the territory of the north and south, for he has just passed “the southern boundary,” and in the next line reaches “the fortress of the port of the South.”

g About one-third line.

b See Erman (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1891, 120), who suggests that rp rsy is really the south, and sm middle Egypt. This distinction is apparently maintained in these Siut texts, and is clear at this point, where Tefibi drives his enemy as far as the southern (rsy) border of the Northern Kingdom, and then “as far as the fortress of the port of the South (tp rsy).” The northernmost point to which rp rsy is applied is the Thinite nome. Now, the Theban king, Intef (Horus: W 3h cny), states that he captured all of the Thinite (Abydos) nome, and “opened all her fortresses” (§ 423), using the very word for fortress (yht) employed in l. 18, above. He also made the Aphroditopolite nome (just north of the Thinite nome) “the door of the North” (ibid.). Remembering that Tefibi’s campaign is thus far confined to the west shore, one would suspect that Tefibi’s “port of the South” is Intef’s “door of the North.” All the indications, therefore, point to this region as the southern extremity of Tefibi’s campaign.

II. INSCRIPTION OF KHETI ID

Kheti (called Ie to distinguish him from Kheti II of the next tomb) was the son of Tefibi of the preceding tomb. He inherited the lands and titles of his father, being a nomarch by inheritance from his mother (l. 8). Besides the usual functions of the Assiut nomarchs, he was also

About one-third line. bOf the pursuer.

The following lines, to l. 35, inclusive, are very fragmentary and obscure. In l. 28 there is reference to "the South" ("Oh, speak a word to the South (tp rṣy)").

In l. 33 the goddesses "Bast of the South" (Bṣstnt tp-rṣy) and Hereret (Ḥrrt) are mentioned, and the following lines (to l. 35, inclusive) consist of epithets in the feminine, referring to one of them. In l. 35 there is reference to Middle Egypt (šm ḫ) and the building of "its fortresses."

In the middle tomb (IV) of the three on the same terrace, on the north wall, opposite the scene of the soldiers with large shields. Text in Griffith, Siut, Pls. 13, 14, 20. See also § 391.

Griffith, Siut, IV, 75; cf. Kheti II's title, § 410.
"military commander of the whole land." His inscription is of great importance for the inner history of the Heracleopolitan kingdom, but is unfortunately fragmentary and obscure. After some references to Kheti’s services to the king, Merikere (ll. 1-7), and the ancient origin of Kheti’s family (ll. 7-9), it is stated that he has chastised Middle Egypt for the king’s sake (l. 10), a clear indication of insurrection within the Heracleopolitan kingdom. This trouble quelled, Kheti conducts the king up-river, probably to receive the homage of the kingdom, which, including the nobles of Ehnas, was in great fear, as Kheti’s enormous fleet passed up (ll. 10-15). Returning to Ehnas-Heracleopolis, the king is received with acclamation by old and young (ll. 16, 17). Kheti now returns to his home and is commissioned to restore the ancient temple of Upwawet, which, at the present day, lies somewhere beneath the modern buildings of Siut (ll. 17-31). The people lived in peace and security during the remainder of Kheti’s reign (ll. 31-34).

399. Of the first seven lines only the upper portion (from a third to a half line) is preserved. The content was important, but only the merest scraps are now intelligible. They show that the text is an address to the deceased Kheti, of historical import, and are as follows:

"a stock* of ancient time ............................................. 3. . . . . . . . . . . .
King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Merikere (Mry-k^2-R^5) ............................................. 6 of Heracleopolis. Thou overthrest the rebels. ........................... 7 lord of the two regions, beloved of the god, shade of the whole land." These last epithets (l. 7) refer to the king; and probably Kheti’s services to him in overthrowing the rebels, furnish the connection. The text now becomes more connected, though still very obscure in places.

aGriffith (Babylonian and Oriental Record, III, 164) and later Maspero (Revue critique, II [1889], 413) have interpreted this passage as indicating that Kheti was the descendant of five princes. It seems to me there are two convincing objections to this: (1) five princes could be written in Egyptian only by employing the usual construction with the numeral 5, not by repeating the word “prince” (hk*) five times! (2) The usual method of indicating a line of descent is the one employed in this very passage, by repeating the paternity of the parent (s > s > hkh*); hence a male descent through five generations of princes would be written (s > hkh*) “son of a ruler,” repeated five times. (I have rendered the politically very unprecise title hkh* by the equally unprecise “ruler;” it is probably synonymous with nomarch in this passage.) Of the 5 hkh*-signs, the first is genitive after a lost noun preceding, as shown by the surviving n; the second is nomen regens of a genitive construction in which the following plural of hkh* (written three times as often) is nomen rectum. The last construction, written in the same way with four hkh*-signs, is found in Sirenpowet's tomb (Assuan, de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, 185, 1. 8), and often with other words, e.g., in the name of Amenhotep IV’s queen (nfr-nfrw with four nfr-signs).

Building the Temple

403. Thy city-god loves thee, Tefibi's son, Kheti. He hath presented thee, that he might look to the future in order to restore his temple, in order to raise the ancient walls, the original places of offering, to the venerable ground, which Ptah built with his fingers, which Thoth founded, for Upwawet, lord of Siut, command of the king, the ruler of the Two Lands, the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Merikere, to make a monument for the souls of Anubis, the great god; that he (the king) might spend for him (the god) millions of years, that he might repeat Sed Jubilees; under the leadership of the confidant of the king, Tefibi's son, Kheti, great lord of Middle aThe reading of this second locality is unfortunately quite uncertain. Maspero reads "Hou" (Revue critique, II (1889), 418). Sheshotep is the modern Shatb (Baedeker's Egypt, 1902, 205), just south of Assiut, while Hou is 125 miles farther up-river. It is impossible that the fleet should have been 125 miles long. Moreover, the direction of the fleet's movement (l. 10) is up-river, so that the rear must have been at a place below Sheshotep. The return down-river is narrated in l. 16 following. [Since writing the above, I notice that Maspero (Dawn, 457) has changed "Hou" to "Gebel-Abufodah," which would make the fleet about 30 miles long; but this is a guess like "Hou."] bAs the preceding paragraph closes very abruptly, it is possible that the following paragraph contains the words of the rejoicing multitude to the king as he enters the city.

cHis own approach to the house, meaning the tomb of his ancestors; hence his death.

dThis "by" would of course not refer to the building by the gods, but to the proposed restoration.

eMeaning that the building of the temple is to be under Kheti's leadership.

Peaceful Rule

404. How beautiful is that which happens in thy time, the city is satisfied with thee. That which was concealed from the people, thou hast done it openly, in order to make gifts to Siut, — by thy plan alone. Every official was at his post, there was no one fighting, nor any shooting an arrow. The child was not smitten beside his mother, (nor) the citizen beside his wife. There was no evil-doer, nor any one doing violence against his house. Thy city-god, thy father who loveth thee, leadeth thee.

III. INSCRIPTION OF KHETI II

405. Kheti II's relation to the two preceding nomarchs is not quite certain, but the unmolested rule which he enjoyed would seem to indicate that he lived before the war with the Thebans, and hence before Tefibi. His inscription curiously inverts the order of his life, placing his youth last, but does not mention the name of his father. On the death of his maternal grandfather, who was lord of the Lycopolite nome, Kheti's mother ruled until he grew up to succeed to his maternal heritage (ll. 40-25). Meantime, he was educated with the royal children by the king (ll.

*aPronoun refers to Kheti. bThe text has a dittography of n kt. cSee Sethe, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1893, 113. dThe intervening lines contain praise of Kheti as builder of the temple. The text then proceeds to the government of the nome. eIn tomb V, the northernmost of the three tombs on the same terrace, in a false door on the back wall (ll. 1-24) and on the south wall, inner half. and was installed in his nome at an early age (l. 21). His life was peaceful and prosperous, and devoted to the development of the material resources of the nome. He dug a much-needed irrigation canal, conducting the water to land unreached by the inundation (ll. i–8). He was rich in grain, which he dispensed to the people (ll. 9, 10). He remitted taxes (ll. 10, 11), and his herds greatly multiplied (ll. 11–14). He built in the temple, increased its offerings (ll. 14–16), was a good soldier, and, as military commander of Middle Egypt, he raised a troop (ll. 16–18); like Kheti I, he had a navy (ll. 18, 19). His people and those of Heracleopolis were pleased with his government, and recognized the instruction of a king in it (ll. 23, 24). It is possible that Kheti II became an official of the contemporary Theban king (Eleventh Dynasty) after the triumph of Thebes and the consolidation of the country (see note on l. 38).

406. The inscription opens with the usual titles of the Siut nomarchs, and Kheti states that there is no falsehood in his narrative, but that all which he did was done in the face of the people (ll. 1, 2); and then proceeds:

New Canal

407. I brought a gift for this city, in which there were no families of the Northland, nor people of Middle Egypt (ṣm'); making a monument in ---- I substituted a channel of ten cubits. I excavated for it upon the arable land. I equipped a gate for its ---- it

bThe determinative shows that people of some sort are meant, parallel with "families." The remarkable statement perhaps means that no forced labor was employed on the canal, from any part of Egypt composing the Heracleopolitan kingdom, viz., the "Northland" (Delta) and "Middle Egypt."

cAbout one-third line is lost; it doubtless contained some reference to an insufficient canal. Kheti's gift to the city, is a larger canal "of 10 cubits," probably in breadth.

Wealth and Generosity

408. 9I was rich in grain. When the land was in need, I maintained the city with khaf and with heket.f I allowed the citizen to carry away for himself grain; and his wife, the widow and her son. I remitted all imposts which I found counted by my fathers. I filled the pastures with cattle, [every] man had many colors; the cows brought forth twofold, the folds were full of calves. I was kind to the cow, when she said, "It is ——." I was one rich in bulls — his ox; — he lived well.

bThe determinative is a man. The word itself hsb means "to reckon." Maspero says: "Hobsou (reading the root as hbs) est l'homme qui paie la redevance annuelle, le contribuable" (Revue critique, II (1889), 413, n. 8), and hence renders "sujet," but I cannot find any such usage elsewhere. Furthermore, the grammatical construction is not clear.

cThe same word (c-mnw) is used in enumerating the duties of the vizier (II, 698), among which was care of the water-supply in the whole land.

dThis means Siut. Maspero (loc. cit., 414, n. 2) calls it Thebes. But 3m in these inscriptions means Middle Egypt, not South; and "this city" in a nomarch's inscription means his own city; see II, 11.

eThe sign for mountain is certain, but an uncertain sign precedes it; the parallelism with "highland" demands a word like "mountain."

fHb and hkt are measures of capacity referring here to grain. See Griffith, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology. XIV, 425.

gDoubtless referring to breeds of cattle.

hThe text has "bulls" (!) misread from l. 13, where the word "bulls" occurs with "many" before it, as in this line.

iCompare the talking cows in Papyrus d'Orbigny.

aThe Kheti who appears with an unidentified Intef offering homage to Nibkhru-Re = Mentuhotep at Shatt er-Regâl (cf. § 425) is elsewhere an official of the same king (§ 426), and his mother's name is Sitre. This renders it possible that he is the same as the Siut Kheti of our text whose mother was “Si[t] —.” Our Kheti II may therefore have become an official of the Theban Mentuhotep II after the subjugation of the North. His tomb and inscriptions would then have been made before the union of North and South, and show no trace of it.

bThe deceased is the grandfather of Kheti.

THE ELEVENTH DYNASTY

415. The plan of these volumes does not include dynastic discussion, but a few reasons must nevertheless be offered for the order of the kings here adopted. Any arrangement of the Eleventh Dynasty must proceed from the fact that the war between the Heracleopolitans and Thebans was still going on in the reign of Horus-Wahenekh-Intef. Now, a great-grandson of a Thinite official of this king erected his tombstone at Abydos in the thirty-third year of Sesostris I (§§ 529 ff.). It was therefore not less than four generations from the reign of the said Intef to the thirty-third year of Sesostris I. Allowing 40 years to the generation, this period was some 160 years in length, of which 53 years fell in the Twelfth Dynasty. The close of this Intef's reign was therefore not later than about 100 years before the accession of the Twelfth Dynasty. The war between Thebes and the North, therefore, continued perhaps as late as 100 years before the accession of the Twelfth Dynasty, and Wahenekh-Intef's accession was not later than 150 years before the end of the Eleventh Dynasty, as we know that he reigned at least 50 years (§ 423).

416. Now, the Turin Papyrus gives 160 years as the length of the Eleventh Dynasty, which corresponds admirably with the above result, viz., that the Eleventh Dynasty must have succeeded the Heracleopolitans at the latest 150 years before the rise of the Twelfth Dynasty. The Turin Papyrus had a Other indications will be found in connection with the following translations. See also my essay, "New Light on the History of the Eleventh Dynasty," American Journal of Semitic Languages, XXI, 163 ff.

b The number is 160 + x, the x not being more than 9 years, of course. That this total refers to the Eleventh Dynasty is perfectly certain; it immediately precedes the heading of the Twelfth Dynasty, and does not reach back to a beginning point behind the Eleventh Dynasty, because there is a summation preceding the seven kings of the Eleventh Dynasty. See Wilkinson, fragg. 61 and 64.
seven kings in the Eleventh Dynasty, of whom Nibkhrure-Mentuhotep, Senekhkere-Mentuhotep, and a lost name at the end were the last three. The last king, whose name is lost, was, of course, one who ruled the whole country, and whose reign shows no trace of war with the North. Among the remaining kings of the time the only one who clearly fulfils these conditions is Nibtowere-Mentuhotep. The second half of the dynasty is thus fairly certain. Working back from Nibkhrure-Mentuhotep, we find that he was suzerain of a vassal king, Intef (§ 424), giving us then an Intef and three Mentuhoteps as the order of this group, thus:

Intef (other names unknown),
Nibkhrure-Mentuhotep, Senekhkere-Mentuhotep, Nibtowere-Mentuhotep.

417. The first and second of these three Mentuhoteps reigned not less than 74 years. The third had a prosperous reign, as the inscriptions of his second year in Hammat show; so that the above three Mentuhoteps may easily have reigned in all 80 years, and the whole group more than this. Now, Horus-Wahenekh-Intef was still reigning some 100 years before the end of the dynasty. He therefore did not long precede the above group of four. But he never ruled north of Abydos, for on his tombstone in his fiftieth year he tells of having established his northern frontier there (§ 423), and his treasurer, Thethi, corroborates this (§ 423D). He must therefore have preceded Nibhotep-Mentuhotep, who openly boasts of having gained the Two Lands by conquest. But as Wahenekh-Intef was succeeded by his son, a second Intef, both these Intefs must have preceded Nibhotep-Mentuhotep, forming a group of three which evidently immediately preceded the above group of four. The only other ruler of the period remaining is the nomarch Intef, who of course should head the line; but he was not included in the Turin Papyrus.

418. We thus obtain seven names in the dynasty, as the Turin Papyrus prescribes. As four of these are Mentuhoteps, we have another proof that there were not more than three Intefs in the Eleventh Dynasty. Thus reconstructed, the dynasty is as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>

Total: 126 (+x)

As the Turin Papyrus gives at least 160 years to the dynasty, we have at least 34 years to be distributed among the seven above x's.

aAs in the erratic Karnak list, Lepsius, Auswahl der wichtigsten Urkunden, I: better in Zwölfte Dynastie; Prisse, Monuments, I; Burton, Excerpta hieroglyphica, I. The publications are all very inaccurate; Prisse being probably the best. I had my own copy of the original in the Bibliothèque Nationale. That there may have been a series of Theban kings preceding the list of the dynasty as given in the Turin Papyrus, is perhaps probable, in view of the Intefs and the Mentuhotep who follow the nomarch Intef in the Karnak list.

bSteindorff has shown that we have contemporary monuments from only three Intefs before the Twelfth Dynasty (besides the nomarch, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1895, 77-96). No one without preconceived opinions will appeal to the Karnak list to prove that the Intefs all ruled before the Twelfth Dynasty. If we are to depend on the Karnak list, then Sesostris I ruled immediately before or after the Seventeenth Dynasty! And such absurdities abound in this list. But accepting this preposterous list as usable, we find that it puts Nb-hpr (w)-Re, Intef either just before or just after the Seventeenth Dynasty. Hence Petrie's statement (History of Egypt, I, 5th ed., xxi) that “the ancient lists are entirely against” the above arrangement of the Intefs must be rejected. All the other evidence, moreover, is in favor of dividing the Intefs into two groups.

dEduard Meyer writes me that he would not include this vassal king in the dynasty, but would gain the seven kings demanded by the Turin Papyrus, by inserting a Mentuhotep before Intef I, as in the Karnak list. This would give us five Mentuhoteps, thus: Mentuhotep I, two Intefs and four Mentuhoteps in succession; but the value of the erratic Karnak list seems to me very dubious.

eTurin Stela of Meru, No. 1447, Cat. I, 117.

fHis highest date is the year 8; his successor celebrated a Sed Jubilee in his second year, and must therefore have been appointed crown prince 30 years earlier by Mentuhotep III, who thus reigned at least 28 years.

8I, 435.
419. The Karnak list places as first of the Intefs a nomarch, without royal title. He is the founder of the Theban line, and is so recognized by Sesostris I, who dedicated a statue to him in Karnak with the inscription: "The king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Kheperkere (Sesostris I); he made it as his monument for his father, the hereditary prince \((\text{rp} \cdot \text{ty})\), Intefo, \ldots \ldots \ldots born of Ikui (Ykwy)." The following mortuary stela probably belonged to him.

420. At the top is a three-line inscription, beginning with the usual mortuary formula, for the benefit of

The hereditary prince, count, great lord of the Theban nome, satisfying the king as keeper of the Door of the South, great pillar of him, who makes his Two Lands to live, superior prophet, \ldots \ldots \ldots \ldots \ldots Intef.

bLepsius, Auswahl der wichtigsten Urkunden, I. (See §417, note.)

cThe family came from Hermonthis, where they were nomarchs. Inscriptions from the tomb of an Intef, one of these nomarchs, are in Copenhagen and Berlin (No. 13272; see Lange, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 34, 25–35, and plate).

dDiscovered by Legrain, in March, 1899 (Recueil, XXII, 64). The addition of \(o\) \((\text{c})\), "great," is not found in the royal list of Karnak with the name of the \(\text{rp} \cdot \text{ty}\) Intef; but as there is only one \(\text{rp} \cdot \text{ty}\) in the Karnak list, the two must be identical.

fThis participial epithet is usually applied to Intef, but this is impossible; for Intef, who acknowledges a king in the phrase, "satisfying the king," cannot speak of himself, a mere nomarch, as "making his two lands live." Nor can "two lands," so commonly in parallelism with the title "King of Upper and Lower Egypt," be made to mean the two shores of the river in Intef's nome. Compare, e.g., §441, l. 8. \(\text{s} \cdot \text{nh} \cdot \text{swy}\) is an epithet, like \(\text{s} \cdot \text{mnh}-\text{sw}\), designating the king. It is in excellent parallelism with "king," and indeed serves as king Senekhkare's Horus-name. This Intef therefore ruled before the rebellion against the North, and the "king" referred to is an Heracleopolitan.
421. This is the stela referred to in the remarkable passage in the Papyrus Abbott (IV, 514), where it is described as bearing a figure of the king standing with one of his dogs. The name of the dog given in the papyrus, Behka, is still preserved on the stela. It is a Berber name, and the stela accompanies it with a translation into Egyptian. The king stands on the right with his five dogs; before him were seven columns of inscription, of which only the lower half is preserved. The first two lines were occupied with an account of the king's good works for the gods; among these we may discern the following:

I filled his (Amon's) temple with august vases, in order to offer libations. ... I built their temples, wrought their stairways, restored their gates, established their divine offerings for all eternity. I "found" a Lower portion of a large limestone stela, now about 80 cm. high and 130 cm. wide; now in Cairo, No. 20512. It was discovered in 1860, by Mariette, in the brick pyramid of Intef II, at Drah abu-3 n-Neggah (Thebes). After making an incomplete and inaccurate copy, Mariette left the stela where he found it, to be taken by a fellah, twenty years later, and broken up for use in a sâkieh. Two years later some of the fragments were rescued with much difficulty by Maspero, and installed at Bulâq (now Cairo; cf. Guide du Visiteur, 67, and Mariette, Monuments divers, Texte, 15; Transactions of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, IV, 193, 194). Apparently no search has ever been made on the spot for the upper portion, already lacking in Mariette's time. His copy was published in Monuments divers, 49 (p. 15 also); another copy by E. de Rouge (Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 161, 162). I have collated these with a careful copy of the original in Schaefer's manuscript of the Cairo catalogue.

b On the Berber name of one of these dogs, see Maspero, Transactions of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, V, 127, and Études de mythologie et d'archéologie, III, 331). The others also bore foreign names, and the ancient scribe has appended a translation to each. Daressy (Recueil, XI, 79, 80) found a fifth dog; Basset (Sphinx, I, 87-92) admits a second name as possibly Berber; see also Birch, Transactions of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, IV, 172-86. Finally, Maspero explains another name as Berber (Recueil, XXI, 136).
422. The statement of his good works is followed by a narrative of his conquest of territory on his northern frontier. He does not state against whom he contended, but it is of course against the Heracleopolitans, defended by the princes of Siut (see § 391). It is the only distinct reference in the Eleventh Dynasty inscriptions to the geographical location of the northern enemy in the civil wars which raged between North (Heracleopolis) and South (Thebes) for at least several generations before the overthrow of the Heracleopolitans.

423. Her northern boundary as far as the nome of Aphroditopolis. I drove in the mooring-stake in the sacred valley, I captured the entire Thinite nome, I opened all her fortresses, I made her the Door of the North.

like a flood, great in possessions, like a sea, splendid for the glory of Thebes (nsw.t), great for the of this land, which I myself have bequeathed to my son, There is no lie that has come forth from my mouth, there is no word like that which I have spoken. There was no violence for one (dwelling) upon his sandy land, nor for one in possession of his paternal property, nor them forever and ever.

Year 50, when this stela was set up by Horus, Wahenekh (W²h²nh), King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Son of Re, Intef, the great (Yn[t²f²]).

Read the serpent and feather. That this is the proper reading is rendered almost certain by the connected data. King Intef is here speaking of the establishment of his northern boundary. The inscription of Intefoker (§§ 529 ff.) shows that he ruled as far north as Akhmim, which is directly across the river from the nome of Aphroditopolis, and the latter is just north of the Thinite nome.

This is parallel with the phrase "Door of the South" applied to Elephantine. Thus the Aphroditopolite nome under this Intef occupied the same frontier position in the North as the region of the first cataract in the South (see § 396, l. 18, note). I have retained the gender of the pronouns to show this; the Thinite nome is masculine.

This is corroborated by the treasurer Thethi (§ 423G).

Partially broken out; read κρ.; it is evidently a synonym of the first word (κρ[color] with determinative of bowstring), rendered "violence," with which it is parallel.

This is the proper reading of the name as shown by l. 7, where it occurs as above restored, preceded by the same Horus-name.
REIGN OF HORUS-NAKHTNEB-TEPNEFER-INTEF II

STELA OF THETHI

423A. This new and important document contains the autobiography of Thethi, the chief treasurer of Intef I and II. It is the first document from the Eleventh Dynasty clearly narrating the succession of the kingship from father to son, and it also places for us the Horus-name of Intef II for the first time. Besides these facts it also gives us the northern and southern boundaries of Intef I’s kingdom, although the southern limit given cannot be identified with certainty as yet. The northern boundary is given as Thinis, corroborating Intef I’s tomb stela (§423); but as Thethi’s stela was made after Intef I’s death, it is evident that this king never reigned north of that point. The account of Thethi’s appointment and duties is also of the greatest interest.

Career under Intef I

423D. I was one beloved of his lord, his favorite every day. I passed a long period of years under the majesty of my lord, Horus, Wahenekh, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Son of Re, Intef, this land being under his authority up-river as far as Thes and down-river as far as Thinis; while I was his servant, his subject, his real subordinate. He made me great, he advanced my seat, he set me in his confidential office, in his palace because of the treasury was put in my charge (m̱y), under my seal-ring, as one chosen for the sake of every good thing brought to the majesty of my lord, from South and from North at every accounting; for the sake of pleasing (the king) with the tribute of this whole land; because of his apprehension lest this land diminish that which was brought to the majesty of my lord from the sheiks who are in the Red Land; and because of his apprehension lest the highlands diminish. Then he gave this (office) to me, recognizing the excellence of my ability. Then I reported it to him; never was anything lacking therein because of my great wisdom.

I supplied myself with my own things, which the majesty of my lord gave to me because he so greatly loved me, (even) Horus, Wahenekh, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Son of Re, Intef (I), living like Re, forever; until he journeyed to his horizon (tomb).

Then, when his son assumed his place, (even) Horus, Nakhtneb-Tepnefer, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Son of Re, Intef (II), fashioner of beauty, living like Re, forever, I followed him to all his good seats of pleasure. Never did he therein, because of my great wisdom. He gave me the function which I had in the time of his father, making it to prosper under his majesty, without anything being lacking therein. REIGN OF NIBHOTEP-MENTUHOTEP I

TEMPLE FRAGMENTS FROM GEBELEN

423H. These scanty fragments tell a remarkable story, not yet noticed, as far as I know, in any of the histories. The first block bears the Horus-name of the king, and thus identifies him as Nibhotep-Mentuhotep (I). It represents him smiting an enemy bearing the inscription: ‘Chief of Tehenu and [—].’ The second block represents the king again smiting the enemy, four in number. The king bears the inscription: ‘Son of Hathor, Mistress of Dendera, Mentuhotep.’ The first enemy is without inscription, but represents an Egyptian! The other three are designated as: ‘Nubians, Asiatics (ṣityw), Libyans.’ Over the whole is the inscription: ‘Binding the chiefs of the Two Lands, capturing the South and Northland, the highlands and the two regions, the Nine Bows and the Two Lands’ (sic!). The king makes no distinction between his victories over foreign foes and his conquest of Egypt itself, and actually places the figure of the conquered Egyptian among those of the barbarians on the temple wall. Mentuhotep I therefore acquired the land of Egypt by conquest, and made no effort to conceal the source of his title by pretense to legitimacy. It was evidently this conquest which overthrew the Heracleopolitans of the Tenth Dynasty. Hence the reign of Mentuhotep I marks the conclusion of the war with the North. The place of his reign is clearly after Intef II, and before the last three Mentuhoteps who controlled the whole country.¹

¹Schaefer states that similar representations were found by Borchardt in the temple of Nuserre at Abusir. The conception may therefore be more general than I have supposed above. See also Papyrus Anastasi II, II, 7, for similar statements concerning Ramses II.
REIGNS OF INTEF III AND NIBKHRURE-MENTUHOTEP II

RELIEFS NEAR ASSUAN

424. The Intef whom we have called the third, appears in no other monuments which can be identified as his, because we do not know his other names. He can hardly be the same as the preceding Intef II, from whom he is separated by Mentuhotep I. He was obliged to give way to another member of the family, Mentuhotep II, who permitted him to reign as a vassal.

425. The most important of Mentuhotep II's monuments is the relief on the rocks at Shatt er-Regâl, near Assuan, where, accompanied by his mother, a lady not of royal lineage, he receives the homage of this vassal, King Intef, who is ushered into the royal presence by Mentuhotep II's chief treasurer, Kheti. This Kheti was an important officer, who appears again on the rocks near Assuan in the presence of Mentuhotep II, with the following inscription:

426. Year 41, under (the majesty of) Nibkhrure (\(N\text{-}h\text{-}hrw-R\)), came the wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, chief treasurer, Kheti, born of Sitre, triumphant; and ships to Wawat.

\(c\)Petrie, Season in Egypt, VIII, No. 213. I had also a photograph, kindly loaned me by Professor Petrie.

\(d\)His highest date, "year 40," is on the tablet of Meru at Turin (No. 1447, Catalogue Turin, I, 117).

\(e\)This Kheti may be the same as Kheti II at Assiut. See § 405, and § 414, l. 38, note.
This was doubtless an expedition against the Nubians of Wawat. Mentuhotep II's inscriptions are elsewhere not infrequent, but contain only a word or two, chiefly his titles. His appearance on the monuments of later generations is such as to show that he was regarded as the first great king of the Theban line.
REIGN OF SENEKHKERE-MENTUHOTEP III

HAMMAMAT INSCRIPTION OF HENU

427. As the only document of Mentuhotep III, this inscription is of great historical importance. The lists of Sakkara and Abydos show him as the immediate predecessor of the Twelfth Dynasty and the successor of the powerful Mentuhotep II; but the Turin Papyrus has after his, a lost name belonging to the last king of the dynasty. Mentuhotep III's minister, Henu, drew men for this Hammamat expedition from territory between Oxyrhynchus and Gebelen (l. 10), which shows that practically all of Egypt above the Delta was under this king's rule. The Delta was also certainly subject to Senekhkere, for Henu calls himself (l. 8) one "who quells the Haunebu," the peoples of the distant north in the Mediterranean, who could only be reached in the Delta.

Introduction

428. 1Year 8, first month of the third season (ninth month), day 3; 1his real favorite servant, who does all that he praises every day, wearer of the royal seal, [sole com[panion], — overseer of that which is and that which is not, overseer of the temples, overseer of the granary and White House, 3overseer of horn and hoof, chief of the six courts of justice, high-voiced in proclaiming the name of the king on the day of warding off r—1 who judges the prisoner according to his desert.

the Door of the South; over the administration of the nomes of the South, chief treasurer who quells the Haunebu (Ḏḥ-nbw), to whom the Two Lands come bowing down, to whom every office reports; wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, the steward, Henu says:

Preparation for the Expedition

429. [My lord, life, prosperity], a health! sent me to dispatch a ship to Punt to bring for him fresh myrrh from the sheiks over the Red Land, by reason of the fear of him in the highlands. Then I went forth from Koptos upon the road, which his majesty commanded me. There was with me an army of the South from — of the Oxyrhynchus nome, the beginning thereof as far as Gebelen; the end thereof as far as —; every office of the king's house, those who were in town and field, united, came after me. The army cleared the way before, overthrowing those hostile toward the king, the hunters and the children of the highlands were posted as the protection of my limbs. Every official body of his majesty was placed under my authority. They reported messengers to me, as one alone commanding, to whom many hearken.

Departure and Provisions

430. I went forth with an army of 3,000 men. I made the road a river, and the Red Land (desert) a stretch of field, for I gave a leather bottle, a carrying pole (ṣuṭš), 2 jars of water and 20 loaves to each one among them every day. The asses were laden with sandals.
Wells Dug

431. Now, I made 12 wells in the bush, and two wells in Idehet (Iby, 20) square cubits in one, and 31² square cubits in the other. I made another in Iheteb (Iby), 20 by 20 cubits on each side.

Ship Built and Sent

432. Then I reached the (Red) Sea; then I made this ship, and I dispatched it with everything, when I had made for it a great oblation of cattle, bulls and ibexes.

Return and Quarrying at Hammamat

433. Now, after my return from the (Red) Sea, I executed the command of his majesty, and I brought for him all the gifts, which I had found in the regions of God's-Land. I returned through the valley of Hammamat, I brought for him august blocks for statues belonging to the temple. Never was brought down the like thereof for the king’s court; never was done the like of this by any king’s-confidant sent out since the time of the god. I did this for the majesty of my lord because he so much loved me.

a Mr. Griffith (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XIV, 420), has read the sign before 12 as a measure of area; giving “a well of 12 —?” As this would leave the word “well” without either determinative or feminine ending, it is improbable. The sign in question is more probably a part of the word for well (nmt), giving hymt as usual.

c Henu only equipped and dispatched the ship, but did not accompany it to Punt; he then returned to Egypt by way of Hammamat (l. 14).

d Possibly Wøg, another land.

e Further asseverations of the king’s favor follow. The same obscure phrases also Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 149, e, l. 13 = Golénischeff, Hammamat, XIII l. 13.
434. These are among the most important of the Hammamat inscriptions. Besides their unusual archaeological interest, they throw great light on the reign of Nibtowere-Mentuhotep (IV), from whom we have no other inscriptive material. They show clearly that the wars with the North (Heracleopolis), had long ceased, and that the North was now united under his rule; for he had an army of 3,000 men from the Delta to transport the lid block of his sarcophagus to Egypt (§ 453, l. 21; similar indications in § 451, 3, ll. 8–10). The only place that he can have held in the series of Eleventh Dynasty kings is therefore at the end of that dynasty. The place of Mentuhotep II and III is certain from the Turin Papyrus. Our Mentuhotep cannot precede Mentuhotep II, who supplanted an Intef; nor does the Turin Papyrus permit him to follow Mentuhotep II. The only place open after the close of the war with the North is at the end of the dynasty after Mentuhotep III, where the Turin Papyrus shows a lost name.

I. THE FIRST WONDER

435. A relief shows the king offering wine before Min of Coptos; behind the king are the words: "First occurrence of the Sed Jubilee; at the top the date: Year 2, a second month of the first season (second month), day 3."

436. Then the following:

'This wonder which happened to his majesty: that the beasts of the highlands came down to him; there came a gazelle great with young, going with her face toward the people before her, while her eyes looked backward; (but) she did not turn back, until she arrived at this august mountain, at this block, it being still in its place, (intended) for this lid of this sarcophagus. She dropped her young upon it while this army of the king was looking. Then they cut off her neck before it (the block) and brought fire. It descended in safety.

437. Now, it was the majesty of this august god, lord of the highlands, who gave the offering (m☞) to his son, Nibtowere (Nb-t☞wy-R☞), Mentuhotep IV, living forever, in order that his heart might be joyful, that he might live upon his throne forever and forever, that he might celebrate millions of Sed Jubilees.

438. The hereditary prince, count, governor of the city and vizier, chief of all nobles of judicial office, supervisor of that which heaven gives, the earth creates, and the Nile brings, supervisor of everything in this whole land, the vizier, Amenemhet.

II. THE OFFICIAL TABLET

439. The above prodigy, which doubtless occurred soon after their arrival, found record twelve days before the official record of the expedition, which is as follows:

aThis king was therefore nominated as crown prince 28 years before his father's death, as he celebrates his 30-years' jubilee in his second year. Thus Mentuhotep III reigned at least 28 years.

bSuggested by Gardiner; Erman: "Gebirgs (Arbeiter)."

cUndoubtedly this explanation of Erman is correct.

dRead hnt-hbr? l'Hôte shows a 3ms-sign before hr; and Gardiner saw a similar sign. The soldiers sacrificed the gazelle upon the block.

eThat is, the block reached Egypt in safety.

fThe leader of the expedition here adds his name and titles. A double line separates them from the king's inscription above them.

440. ¹Year 2, second month of the first season, day 15, ²(of) Nibtowere-Mentuhotep³ (IV) living forever.

Erection of Stela

441. ³His majesty commanded to erect⁴ this stela to his father Min, lord of the highlands in this ⁵august, primeval mountain, ......... ⁶in order that his ka may be satisfied and that the god may ⁷in his desire, as ⁸does a king who is upon the great throne, first in thrones; enduring in monuments, excellent god, lord of joy, ⁹mighty in fear, great in love, heir of Horus in his Two Lands, whom ¹⁰the divine Isis, Min, and Mut, the great sorceress reared for the dominion ¹¹of the two regions of Horus, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nibtowere (Mentuhotep IV), living like Re, forever; ¹²he says:

442. My majesty sent forth the hereditary prince, governor of the city and vizier, chief of ¹³works, favorite of the king, Amenemhet, with an army of ¹⁴men ¹⁵from the southern nomes, Middle ¹⁶Egypt, and the ¹⁷of the Oxyrrhyncus ¹⁸nome; to bring for me an august block of the pure costly stone which is in this mountain, ¹⁹whose ²⁰excellent things ²¹Min makes; for a sarcophagus, an eternal memorial, and for monuments ²²in the temples of Middle Egypt, according as a king over the Two Lands sends ²³to bring for himself the desire of his heart, from the highlands of his father Min.

³Full five-name titulary.
⁵Eulogistic epithets of the god.
⁶Gardiner gives the sign as certain; Golénischeff also has apparently a finger (= 10,000); both give the top pointing wrong, but this is a peculiarity of the Hammamat inscriptions (cf. Henu, Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 150, a, l. 7, thrice!) and is only one of many instances of the influence of the hieratic in these texts. This peculiarity occurs frequently also in the Assiut texts of the same period. Cf. the 8,368 men of a later expedition, IV, 466.
⁷Šm < w, perhaps "South."
⁸Ḥnty written only with the nose; determinative house.
⁹Referring to "stone" (feminine).

Dedication

443. He made (it) as his monument for his father Min of Koptos, lord of the highlands, head of the Troglobytes, in order that he (the king) might celebrate very many [Sed Jubilees], living like Re, forever.\(^a\)

III. THE COMMANDER’S TABLET\(^b\)

444. On the same day, Amenemhet, the commander of the expedition, engraved his own record of the achievement, as follows:

Date and Introduction

445. Year 2, second month of the first season, day 15. Royal commission, executed by the hereditary prince, count, governor of the city, chief judge, favorite of the king, chief of works, distinguished in his office, great in his rank, with advanced place in the house of his lord, commanding the official body, chief of the six courts of justice, judging the people (\(\rho\c\cdot t\)) and the inhabitants (\(r\h y\cdot t\)), and hearing causes; to whom the great come bowing down, and the whole land, prone upon the belly; whose offices his lord advanced; his favorite, as keeper of the Door of the South; conducting for him millions of the inhabitants (\(r\h y\cdot t\)) to do for him the desire of his heart toward his monuments, enduring on earth; magnate of the King of Upper Egypt, great one of the King of Lower Egypt, conductor of the palace, — in stretching the measuring-cord; judging without partiality, governor of the whole South, to whom is reported that which is and that which is not; conducting the administration of the Lord of the Two Lands; zealous of heart upon a royal commission; commander of those that command, conductor of overseers; the vizier of the king, at his audiences, Amenemhet, says:

Choice of Amenemhet

446. My lord, the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nibtowere (\(Nb\cdot t\c\cdot wy\cdot Rc\), Mentuhotep IV) living forever, sent me, as one sending, in whom are divine members; to establish his monument in this land. He chose me before his city, I was preferred before his court.

\(^a\)There is an appendix here of the twenty-seventh or twenty-eighth day, which is the latest date in the series; it is translated at the end (§§ 452, 453).

Personnel of Expedition

447. Now, his majesty commanded that there go forth to this august highland an army with me, men of the choicest of the whole land: miners, artificers, quarrymen, artists, draughtsmen, stoneworkers,1 treasurers of Pharaoh, of every department of the White House, and every office of the king's-house, united behind me. I made the highlands a river, and the upper valleys a water-way.a

Return with Sarcophagus

448. I brought for him a sarcophagus, an eternal memorial, an everlasting reminder. Never descended its like in this highland since the time of the god. My soldiers descended without loss; not a man perished, not a troop was missing, not an ass died, not a workman was enfeebled. It happened for the majesty of my lord as a distinction, which Min wrought for him because he so much loved him, that his ka might endure upon the great throne in the kingdom of the two regions of Horus. He made (it) as something greater than it. I am his favorite servant, who does all that he praises every day.

IV. THE SECOND WONDER

449. Eight days after the erection of the two preceding records, a second wonder occurred, which was immediately recorded on the rocks, as follows:

Date

450. 1King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nibtowere (Nb-t'wy-R c, Mentuhotep IV) who liveth forever, born of the king's mother, Imi (Ymy), second month of the first season, day 23.

aReferring to the desert march. See the similar, but more explicit, statement of Henu on the same march, § 430, l. 12. According to the figures given there, this expedition consumed 200,000 loaves a day! (See note, ibid.)

bGrammatically, the sentence is clear, but its meaning? The same phrase in Henu, l. 16.

cGolenischeff, Hammamat, XIV = Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 149 f.
Rain and a Well

451. One set\textsuperscript{a} to work in this mountain on the \textsuperscript{1}lid\textsuperscript{b} block of the sarcophagus. The wonder was repeated, rain was made, the forms of this god appeared, \textsuperscript{3}his fame was shown to men, the highland was made a lake,\textsuperscript{c} the water went to the \textsuperscript{1}margin\textsuperscript{d} of the stone,\textsuperscript{d} a well was found in the midst of the valley, \textsuperscript{4}10 cubits by 10 cubits on its every side, filled with fresh water, to its edge, undefiled, kept pure and cleansed from gazelles, concealed \textsuperscript{6}from Troglodyte barbarians. Soldiers of old, and kings who had lived aforetime, went out and returned by its side, no eye had seen it, the face of man had not fallen upon it, (but) to his majesty himself it was revealed. \textsuperscript{8}\textsuperscript{e} Those who were in Egypt (\textsuperscript{T}3-mry) heard it, \textsuperscript{9}the people who were in Egypt (\textsuperscript{Km·t}), South and Northland (Delta),\textsuperscript{f} they bowed their heads to the ground, \textsuperscript{10}they praised the goodness of his majesty forever and ever.

V. COMPLETION OF THE WORK\textsuperscript{g}

452. On the twenty-eighth day of the month the work was completed, and the following appendix was added to the king's official stela:

453. \textsuperscript{19}Day 28. The lid of this sarcophagus descended, being a block 4 cubits, by 8 cubits, by 2 cubits,\textsuperscript{h} on coming forth from the work. Cattle were slaughtered, goats were slain, incense was put \textsuperscript{21}on the fire. Behold, an army of 3,000 sailors of the nomes of the Northland (Delta) followed it in safety to Egypt.

\textsuperscript{a}Lit.: "laying the hand on the work." The form is an infinitive, the same construction continuing to the end of l. 5.

\textsuperscript{c}Water in the highland was always remarkable; compare Kheti's feat (§407) who "made the elevated land a swamp" by means of a canal.

\textsuperscript{d}Might also be "lake."

\textsuperscript{f}It is clear that Nibtowere governs all Egypt.

\textsuperscript{h}About 6 feet, 9 inches wide, 13 feet, 9 inches long, and 3 feet, 5 inches thick.
This tablet does not belong to the same expedition as the preceding, but it narrates the attempts to settle with people the desert stations in Hammamat, and along the road from Coptos to the Red Sea.

Nibtowere (Mentuhotep IV), living forever. Commander of troops in the highlands, steward in Egypt, commander of troops on the river, Senekh (S^nkh), says:

I was commander of the troops of this entire land in this highland, equipped with water skins (Sdw), baskets, with bread, beer, and every fresh vegetable of the South. I made its valleys green, and its heights pools of water; settled with children throughout, southward to Thau (T^c w) and northward to Menet-Khufu (Mn^c-t-Hjw). I went forth to the sea (Red Sea), I hunted adults, I hunted cattle. I went forth to this highland with 60 people of years, and 70 young ones of the children of one (woman). I did all correctly for Nibtowere (Mentuhotep IV), living forever.

STELA OF ETI

This biography of an active official is of interest as showing the agricultural and industrial conditions in the Middle Kingdom, when the skilful administration of resources by the governing princes was necessary to prevent a famine. Eti was so successful in this respect that he even conveyed surplus grain to neighboring towns, and Thebes, sent to him for supplies.

Cut on the rocks at Wadi Hammamat; published by Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 149, g; and Newberry, Beni Hasân, II, 18 (where the translation is misleading). I had also a collation of the Berlin squeeze, kindly loaned to me by Mr. Alan H. Gardiner.

Gardiner.

Or: "I went forth to this desert as a man of 60 years, and 70 little children, the offspring of one (woman);" "offspring" or "children" (ms^w) is of course used in sense of "descendants."

Limestone stela (0.47 m. by 0.75 m.) from Gebelên, now in Cairo, Catalogue, 20001; also published by Daressy, Recueil, XIV, 21.
458. An interesting reference in ll. 7, 8, where Eti states, "I followed my great lord, I followed my small lord," may possibly indicate that we are to refer this document to the early Eleventh Dynasty, when the Theban princes ruled above Thebes, but were not yet kings. The powerful Theban prince would then be Eti's "great lord," and the local nomarch his "small lord." In accordance with this, his field of activity did not extend below Thebes.

459. The assistant treasurer Eti\(^a\) (\(Y\)ty\)); he says:

"I was an excellent citizen (\(m\)\(\delta\)\(s\)), achieving with his strength, the great pillar \(^b\) in the nome of Thebes, Nehebkau\(^b\) in the upper country (\(h\)nt\(y\)\(t\)). I sustained (\(s\).\(\delta\)\(n\)\(h\))\(^c\) Gebel\(\delta\)\(n\)\(^d\) during unfruitful years, there being 400 men \(^e\) in distress. But I took not the daughter of a man, I took not his field. I made ten herds of goats, \(^f\) with people in charge of each herd; I made two herds of cattle and a herd of asses. I raised all (kinds of) small cattle. I made 30 ships, (then) 630 other ships, and I brought grain (\(r\)\(s\)\(y\)) for Eni (\(Y\)ny)\(^d\) and Hefat\(^e\) (\(H\)\(\beta\)\(t\)), after Gebel\(\delta\)\(n\) was sustained. The nome of Thebes \(^f\) went up-stream.\(^f\) Never \(^g\) did one below or above Gebel\(\delta\)\(n\) bring to another district.\(^g\) I followed my great lord, I followed my small lord, and nothing was lost therein. I built a house \(^h\)----, filled with every luxury. The people said: "He is innocent of violence to another."

His beloved eldest son,\(^h\)— made it for him.

\(^a\)He was also "weaver of the royal seal, and sole companion."
\(^b\)An uncertain epithet, "who controls his k\(a\)'s," also applied to a well-known mortuary god.
\(^c\)\(Y\)w-\(m\)\(y\)\(tr\)w.
\(^d\)Eni is probably Esneh (\(Y\)ny\(t\)).
\(^e\)Tuphium. Same as the Ophieion of the Cornelius Gallus inscription at Philae; see Sethe, Sitzungsberichte der Berliner Akademie, 1896, 482; it is located on the east bank of the Nile, between Thebes and Hermonthis.
\(^f\)Probably for supplies.
\(^g\)Or: "never did Gebel\(\delta\)\(n\) send down-stream or up-stream (\(\delta\)\(y\)\(d\) \(h\)\(d\) \(h\)\(nt\)) to another district" (namely, to procure supplies).
\(^h\)The name of the son is lacking, but one surviving sign would indicate that it was also \(Y\)ty.
THE TWELFTH DYNASTY
CHRONOLOGY OF THE TWELFTH DYNASTY

460. As the chronology of the Twelfth Dynasty is more fully and accurately known to us than that of any dynasty in or before the Empire, it has seemed necessary to insert a statement of it, with a reconstruction based on the latest data from the monuments. The contemporary monuments and the Turin Papyrus enable us to make the following table of the dynasty (excluding coregencies):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

\(^c\)Amenemhet I died in the thirtieth year of his reign. See Tale of Sinuhe (§ 491).
\(^d\)On the stela of Simontu (§ 594), Sesostris I is still living in the third year of Amenemhet II.
\(^e\)The inscription of Hapu at Assuan (§ 614).
\(^f\)Kahun papyri of the second find, fragment transliterated by Borchardt and distributed in private copies at the Congress of Orientalists, Rome, 1899.
\(^g\)The highest date on the monuments is year 33 (Griffith, Kahun Papyri, II, 85). Sethe's reconstruction of the Turin Papyrus proves that 38 is to be restored.
\(^h\)The year 44 of Sesostris II is uncertain (Lepsius, Auswahl der wichtigsten Urkunden, Pl. 10; Lepsius, Zwölftte Dynastie, II, No. 4; also my own photograph of the original; and the Turin Papyrus gives him 45 years, so that he must have ruled 3 years with his son.
\(^i\)The highest date is year 46 (ibid., 86); 48 is certain from Sethe's reconstruction.
\(^j\)Lepsius, Auswahl der wichtigsten Urkunden, 10; Prisse, Monuments égyptiens, 9; its length is unknown.
\(^k\)Turin Papyrus, see above.
461. The Turin Papyrus gives 213 years, 1 month, and 17 days, as the total length of the dynasty.

The Sothis date in the Kahun Papyri enables us to establish the date of the accession of Amenemhet I as 2000 B.C.\(^a\)

462. We may then construct the following table:\(^b\)

\(^a\)Borchardt, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 99 ff.; Mahler, ibid., 40, 83; Meyer’s calculation (Aegyptische Chronologie, 51, 52, 57, 58) has slightly modified the date as calculated by Borchardt and Mahler, without affecting the principle employed, carrying back the beginning of the dynasty to 2000 B.C.

\(^b\)This table differs considerably in the last four reigns from that given by Mahler (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 40, 83–85, and Orientalistische Literaturzeitung, June, 1902, 248 f.), as he unfortunately has overlooked the higher dates in the reigns of Sesostris III and Amenemhet III, found since the publication of Brugsch’s and Meyer’s tables, upon which Mahler depends.

\(^c\)The coronation of Amenemhet III as coregent with his father was narrated on the walls of a temple probably that of Crocodilopolis in the Fayûm. Fragments of the inscription are preserved in Berlin (Nos. 15801–4), and published in Aegyptische Inschriften aus den Königlichen Museen, III, 138. The coronation inscription of Hatshepsut at Der el-Bahri was copied from this of Amenemhet III. I am indebted for these facts to my friend, Mr. Alan H. Gardiner, who kindly called my attention to them.

The opposite table is as nearly correct as the astronomical data will permit, the most nearly accurate of all the Egyptian dynasties back of the Twenty-sixth, and the earliest series of absolute dates known in history, in spite of the margin of four years within which each date falls.
REIGN OF AMENEMHET I

INSCRIPTION OF KHNUMHOTEP I

463. Khnumhotep I was the first of the powerful Benihasan nobles in the Twelfth Dynasty of whom we have any account. He was evidently of service to Amenemhet I during that king's final and successful struggle for the mastery and the crown of Egypt. The text is in such a fragmentary state that much must be read between the lines. It is, however, clear that Khnumhotep accompanied the king on an expedition in which "20 ships of cedar" were engaged, which resulted in expelling a certain foe from Egypt (l. 5). This foe, referred to only by the pronoun "him," whom it was necessary to expel from Egypt, must almost certainly have been one of Amenemhet's rivals for the crown. Then follows the submission of foreign foes, the Asiatic in the North and the Negro in the South, and of highland and lowland alike ("the two regions," l. 6). This accomplished, the king rewards his faithful adherents, and Khnumhotep is made "count of Menet-Khufu" (l. 7) where he ruled to the complete satisfaction of the king.

464. His titles are:\b "Hereditary prince and count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, [—] great lord of the Oryx nome [—] —1, attached to Nekhen (judge)." This shows that he was later intrusted with the entire principality of the Oryx, in agreement with the statements of his grandson, Khnumhotep II, whose long inscription narrates the

HAMMAMAT INSCRIPTION OF INTEFb

466. This inscription records the only official expedition of Amenemhet I to Hammamat of which we know anything. Only one block is mentioned, for which Intef spent eight days in a vain search, and only succeeded in finding it after propitiating the local gods.

aThere must have been a geographical name here, which is corrupt in the original or has been imperfectly read.

bCut on the rocks of Wadi Hammamat; published by Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 118, d=Golénisheff, Hammamat, VIII=Maspero, VIIe Congrès International des Orientalistes, Section africaine, 50-54. I had also a collation of the Berlin squeeze, kindly loaned me by Gardiner. It is, like all the Hammamat inscriptions, strongly influenced by the hieratic; the graver, who did not know hieratic, has then so corrupted the scribe’s sketch that much of it is unintelligible.

cThe other Hammamat inscription bearing his name (Golénisheff, Hammamat, II, 4=Maspero, ibid., 156), is incomplete; it does not record an official, but a private expedition, and the introduction, containing references to the safe conduct of the expedition (“I returned . . . none missing, none dead”) does not 467. Above is the full titulary of Amenemehet I, without further date. Then follow the titles of Intef:

"Hereditary prince and count, wearer of the royal [seal], sole companion, royal messenger, superior prophet of Min."

After the conventional series of personal epithets (I. 2–6), his narrative then proceeds:

468. My lord sent me to Hammamat, to bring this august stone; never was brought its like since the time of the god. There was no hunter who knew the marvel of it, none that sought it reached it. I spent 8 days searching this highland; I knew not the place wherein it was. I prostrated myself to Min, to Mut, to Great-in-Magic, and all the gods of this highland, giving to them incense upon the fire. The land brightened at early morning, I went forth to the mountain Hammamat, the being behind me, and the people scattered upon the mountains, searching this whole desert. Then I found it, and the were in festivity, the entire army was praising, it rejoiced with obeisance; I gave praise to Montu.

mention the name of the leader as usual. Then follows (I. 3): "Fourth month of the third season, day 3; came the wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, inferior prophet, privy councilor of the treasurer of the god, Idi (Ydy), (I. 4) to bring down stone for the merinuter priest, the hereditary prince, ritual priest, sole companion, superior prophet, governor of the South [superior prophet of Min] (restored from Golénischeff, Hammamat, III, 3, I. 3), Putoker (P^2wt-ykr) (I. 5). I brought down for him 2 blocks, each one (I. 6) 10 cubits (over 17 feet) in length, — cubits in its width." Idi has another inscription in the vicinity (Golénischeff, Hammamat, III, 3 = Maspero, ibid., 157) as follows: "Year third month of the third season, day 1; came the . . . . . (titles) Idi, to bring down stone for . . . . (titles) Putoker. I brought down for him a block of 12 cubits (about 20 feet, 6 inches), with 200 men. I brought 2 oxen, 50 asses, 15 f-1. It is clear that Idi is here executing the commissions of Putoker, an official of high rank, not those of the king.

According to I. 6, his name may have been Sebeknakht, and his father's name Intef.

Read dw ^ dw, as in Sinuhe, I. 248.
Suggested by Gardiner.
Read r dr'j?
Read sn-t?

The last line was omitted by Lepsius, and it is possible that even in Golénischeff's copy the conclusion is lacking, for the concluding phrase above is very abrupt.
INSCRIPTION OF NESSUMONTU

469. The stela is dated at the top in the "year -- 4" of Amenemhet I, and adds the titulary of Sesostris I. As Sesostris I was associated with his father in the twentieth year of the latter, we must restore the above date as "year 24."

470. The stela contains the conventional mortuary texts and representations, but in the lower right-hand corner adds nine short columns of historical content: showing that Nessumontu led expeditions against the Bedwin ("Sand-dwellers") and other Asiatics at the north end of Egypt's eastern frontier.

471. Respecting every word of this tablet, it is truth, which happened by my arm, it is that which I did in reality. There is no deceit, and there is no lie therein. I defeated the Asiatic Troglydotes, the Sand-dwellers. I overthrew the strongholds of the nomads, as if they had never been. I coursed through the field, I went a Stela in Louvre (C i); the top lines containing the date are published by Lepsius, Auswahl der wichtigsten Urkunden, 10, and Lepsius, Zwölfte Dynastie, II, 3. The entire text: Maspero in Report of First International Congress of Orientalists at Paris, 1873, II, 48–61, and again in Maspero, Études de mythologie et d'archéologie, III, 153–64; Pierret, Inscriptions, 2, 27; Gayet, Stèles, I. All these are inaccurate. A good text is given by Piehl, Inscriptions, I, I–II, but he unfortunately overlooked the nine lines of historical text and copied them from Maspero. Brugsch (Thesaurus, VI, 1467) copied them from Pierret. These nine lines alone have been carefully given by Müller (Orientalistische Literaturzeitung, 1900, 47–48), who, however, does not consider his copy "einen völlig abschliessenden Text." I therefore carefully copied and collated the original (in January, 1901, for the Berlin Dictionary) under excellent light, which insured some additional readings, and it is probable that my text may be regarded as final. I have since published it, American Journal of Semitic Languages and Literatures, XXI, 153 ff. Müller also gives a translation, from which mine differs in several places, but is indebted to him for several suggestions.

b It is unfortunately only this important corner of the stela which is badly broken and weathered, seriously mutilating the text.

d The word cannot be $h n$, "tent," as Müller suggests, for it ended in feminine $t$, while $h n$, "tent," is masculine, as shown by Harkhuf, Letter, I. 20. The feminine form cited by Müller from the Israel stela is not "tent," but "water skin" ($h n$ $t$). I connect our word with $h n$ $t$, "prison."

INSCRIPTION OF KORUSKO

472. The Nubian conquests of the Twelfth Dynasty, were already begun by Amenemhet I, and the place where the following inscription was discovered, over half-way up to the second cataract, indicates that the statement in the king's "Teaching" (§ 483) is trustworthy.

THE TEACHING OF AMENEMHET

474. This composition purports to be the practical injunctions of the old king, Amenemhet I, to his son and coregent, Sesostris I. Maspero thinks they were posthu-

\[b\] Cut on a rock at the entrance of the valley road leading from Korusko to Abu Hamed. It was discovered by Dr. Lütte in 1875, and by him shown to Brugsch (Geschichte, 117, 118), who published it seven years later, Zeitsschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1882, 30; and in Thesaurus, V, 1213.

\[c\] Maspero's statement (Dawn, 478, n. 2) that this inscription belongs to the "XXXth year" must be an oversight.

\[d\] The text is preserved in seven hieratic manuscripts of the Empire, mostly incomplete, as follows:

1. Millingen Papyrus (original lost), published from copy of Peyron, by Maspero, Recueil, II, 70, and XVII, 64.
3. Papyrus Sallier, I, 8, Verso (= Millingen, I, II, 1).

7. Leather Manuscript Louvre, 4920, "now completely spoiled." "All these appear to be of about one period, perhaps from the end of the reign of Ramses II to the reign of Seti II" (Griffith, Zeitsschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 34, 36; Millingen mous,\textsuperscript{a} but Griffith does not agree.\textsuperscript{b} It can hardly be doubted that the composition is a work of the Twelfth Dynasty, and there is no serious reason why it should not be attributed to the old king, whose "\textit{teaching}" the introduction distinctly states it is. Griffith regards the occasion of the work as the attempt on his life when the king determines "to announce his son's succession in a formal manner." This would date the work from the beginning of the coregency in the twentieth year of Amenemhet I. There is a reference in the document, however, which would indicate a later date. In III, 2, the king speaks of his campaign against Nubia. Now, the only campaign of Amenemhet I in Nubia known to us was in his twenty-ninth year (§ 473).\textsuperscript{c} This reference, therefore, would date the work not long before the king's death in his thirtieth year, and is an indication that we have in it his final instructions to his son.

475. Its chief purpose was to warn the young Sesostris against any confidences or intimate associations with those about him. To enforce this warning, the old king dwells on the kindness and beneficence, the order and prosperity, of his reign; in contrast with which he bitterly depicts the treachery and ingratitude which have been his reward. There is an element of pathos in these words of the old man, which do not fail of their effect even after nearly four thousand years.

\item may be later), and are in a frightful state of corruption. The best manuscript, Millingen, is unfortunately incomplete, almost all of the third page being lost. The latest and best treatment and text, employing all the manuscripts, are by Griffith (\textit{Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache}, 34, 35-49), from whom the above statement of materials is taken. An excellent translation of the clearer passages by Erman also in \textit{Aus den Papyrus des königlichen Museums zu Berlin}, 44, 45. To both these the present version is much indebted. The older "translations" are very free paraphrases; for bibliography of them, see Maspero, \textit{Dawn}, 467, n. 2.

476. The composition is in poetic form, and the lines are separated as usual in the New Kingdom by a dot at the end of each line.\(^a\) It must have been a favorite composition, to judge from the number of manuscripts which have survived. They are all, however, so excessively corrupt that much is unintelligible, and has been omitted in the version below.

477. Whether the historical statements in the document are authentic or not, there is no reason to doubt their truth; on the contrary, all but the attempt upon the king’s life are corroborated by conclusive external evidence. These statements, in the order of their occurrence, are as follows: (1) the attempt on the king’s life (I, ii—II, 4); (2) Sesostris I’s coregency (II, 5, 6); (3) the king’s reorganization of Egypt (II, io, ii); (4) the agricultural prosperity (II, ii—III, 1); (5) foreign conquests in Nubia and among the Bedwin (III, 2, 3); (6) building of a palace (III, 2–6). There seems to be no chronological order in this enumeration, for the reorganization of the country took place in the first years, long before the coregency. It is fair to conclude, however, that the attempt on the king’s life was the cause of the association of Sesostris on the throne.

a But see Gardiner's careful grammatical analysis of this line (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, 24, 353 f.). He renders: "That cometh to pass, to whose terrors no thought has been given." This is grammatically better than the above rendering, although it does not fit either the preceding or following context.

cThis line is slightly doubtful, but compare similar phrase, Piankhi, l. 3.

dNot being able to destroy it. The remainder of p. III, for which Papyrus Millingen is wanting, is too corrupt for translation.
DEDICATION INSCRIPTION

484. A relic of Amenemhet I's building activity at Karnak, is preserved in this dedication, found on the base of a shrine from the Karnak temple of Amon, whence it had been taken to the Ptah-temple:

Amenemhet I; he made it as his monument for his father Amon-Re, lord of Thebes (Nṣ·wt-t²wy), making for him a shrine of pink granite, that he may thereby be given life forever.

485. Another dedication at Bubastis runs as follows:

Amenemhet I; he made it as his monument for his mother Bast, making for her a gate.

THE TALE OF SINUHE

486. The tale of Sinuhe is a highly artificial piece of "fine writing" in poetical form, most of which is lost to our modern taste. It is, however, so rational and sober throughout, and breathes such an air of reality, that it is not to be disregarded as a historical source.

a Annales, III, 102.
b Naville, Bubastis I, Pl. 33A.
c An s has been omitted, either in the publication or by the ancient scribe.
d The bulk of this tale (311 lines) is preserved in a hieratic papyrus of the Middle Kingdom, now in Berlin (P. 3022), published by Lepsius, Denkmäler, VI, 104-7. The beginning, lacking in the Berlin Papyrus, is preserved in a hieratic ostracon (a large flake of limestone) discovered in a Twentieth Dynasty tomb by Maspero (now in Cairo, No. 27149), and published by him in Mémoires de l'Institut égyptien, II, 1-23, and Pls. I, II, 1886. This fragment, excessively corrupt, is supplemented by eleven lines from the Amherst Papyrus (Newberry, Amherst Papyri, Pl. I), which have been incorporated with the Cairo ostracon and published in transcription by Griffith (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XIV, 453, 454). The whole has been translated by Erman in Aus den Papyrus des königlichen Museums zu Berlin, 14-29. My materials were: all the above publications except Maspero's (which was not accessible), the Berlin original, and especially a transcription of the Cairo ostracon, made by Erman from the original, which he kindly placed at my disposal.

e The Cairo ostracon containing the beginning separates the lines by red dots, and divides into stanzas. The above translation preserves these lines and stanzas as far as the ostracon goes, after which the division is uncertain.
The hero, Sinuhe, a noble of high rank, is with the young coregent, Prince Sesostris I, in the western Delta, on a campaign against the Libyans, when the message announcing the death of the old king, Amenemhet I, reaches the camp. Sesostris I does not allow the news to be made public, but secretly returns to the royal residence, in order firmly to establish himself as king before any pretender can precede him. Sinuhe accidentally overhears the message, and, evidently for political reasons, immediately flees the country, making Palestine his goal. Here he spends many years, experiencing manifold adventures, until in old age, after becoming rich and powerful, he is pardoned by Sesostris I, and permitted to return to Egypt.

The date of Amenemhet's death, given in the tale as in the thirtieth year of his reign, is corroborated by the monuments, where his highest date is also the thirtieth year; hence the introductory narrative may probably be accepted as essentially historical. Moreover, the style of the writing in the Berlin papyrus shows that the document could not have been written very much later than the reign of Sesostris I, when the historical facts were still well known.

The geography of the flight is correct as far as traceable, but the error of Upper Tenu for Upper Retenu, the Empire term for Palestine, shows unfamiliarity with one of the most important, and later the most frequent, designations in the Egyptian's geography of Asia. But it is the earliest occurrence of the name; for the tale offers us dFound only in the Empire text. eUnknown land.

fLit.: "the great black," the earlier northern extension of the Gulf of Suez. See Maspero, Dawn, 351, n. 3, and 471, n. 3, who renders "the very (wr't) black," although the writing is always wr (= "great," without t); and Müller, Asien und Europa, 39-43.
gHere the Cairo ostracon stops, and the verse division is from here on uncertain.
hPerhaps a nautical term.
iFrom "sun," "to trade," evidently a trading-post on the Asiatic frontier, like Sun (Assuan) on that of Nubia.
I arrived at Kedema (Kdm);
I spent 3½ a year and a half there.

494. Emuienshi, that sheik of Upper Tenu, brought me forth Saying to me: "Happy art thou with me,
(For) thou hearest the speech of Egypt."
He said this, (for) he knew my character,
He had heard of my wisdom;
The Egyptians who were there with him, bare witness of me.

495. Emuienshi now questions Sinuhe as to the reason of his flight, and the latter responds evasively, merging his reply into a long hymn in praise of the king (ll. 34–77). Whereupon Emuienshi replies:

496. "Behold, thou shalt now abide with me;
Good is that which I shall do for thee."
He put me at the head of his children,
He married me to his eldest daughter,
He made me select for myself of his land,
Of the choicest of that which he had,
On his boundary with another land.
It was a goodly land, named Yaa (Y); There were figs in it and vines,
More plentiful than water was its wine,
Copious was its honey, plenteous its oil;
All fruits were upon its trees.
Barley was there, and spelt,
Without end all cattle.
Moreover, great was that which came to me,
Which came for love of me,
When he appointed me sheik of the tribe, a Long misread "Edom;" first corrected by Erman, in 1885, Aegypten, 495. The region was east of Jordan and the Dead Sea, and receives the same name in the Old Testament.

b This is the first occurrence of Upper (Re)Tenu, the usual designation, in the Empire for the higher portions of Palestine. That the text has omitted an r is almost certain. See Müller, Asien und Europa, 47.

c An unknown district in Palestine; it is written as if it were the name of some plant.
From the choicest of his land.
I portioned the daily bread,
And wine for every day,
Cooked flesh, and fowl in roast;
Besides the wild goats of the hills,
Which were trapped for me, and brought to me;
Besides that which my dogs captured for me.
There was much — made for me,
And milk in every sort of cooked dish.
I spent many years,
My children became strong,
Each the mighty man of his tribe.
The messenger going north,
Or passing southward to the court, a
He turned in to me.
For I had all men turn in (to me).

497. The tale now proceeds with examples of the personal prowess of Sinuhe, but the remainder of over 200 lines contains nothing of historical importance. b aThe court of Egypt is meant.

bThe remainder of the story can be read in the latest and far the best translation by Erman, Aus den Papyri des königlichen Museums zu Berlin, 20–29 (German), or a very free paraphrase by Maspero, Contes populaires, or an English version after Maspero, by Petrie, Egyptian Tales.
498. This building inscription in its present form has a very interesting history. It is not preserved to us upon a great stela, to which such inscriptions were usually intrusted, but has reached us on more fragile material—a roll of leather. This had been used by a scribe in the third year of Amenhotep II for scratching down various data, either for the sake of practice or for temporary preservation; for they were often washed off and replaced by others. At present we can read, although half washed out, part of the legal proceedings of a sculptor against his own son, and notes regarding the receipt and issue of lumber. To one of these notes he has fortunately fixed the date, as given above. On the other side of the leather our scribe copied the beginning of the dedicatory building inscription of Sesostris I, placed by him on a great stone stela in his temple at Heliopolis. In the time of our scribe the stela had already been standing five hundred years. It has since utterly perished, with the temple in which it stood, and thus the great king's building inscription has survived only in the accidental copy of a humble scribe.

A hieratic manuscript, written in two columns on one side of a piece of leather; bought in Thebes by Brugsch, 1858 (Geschichte, 123); first published by Stern, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1874, 85 ff.; then by Birch, Egyptian Texts, 49-58. It has been translated by Stern, Records of the Past, XII, and by Erman, Aus den Papyrus des königlichen Museums zu Berlin, 59-63. My materials were the original now in Berlin (P. 3029) and a transcription by Erman. The above translation depends, with a few exceptions, upon his version in loc. cit.

Not Amenhotep IV, as read by Stern.

See § 501, 1. 5.
499. In form the inscription was a poem, and its lines have been separated by the scribe by red dots, as usual in the Empire. The content is obscured by elaborate phraseology, but its drift is nevertheless evident. In his third year Sesostris I called together his court, and announced his purpose of erecting a temple to the sun-god at Heliopolis (§§ 501–3). The court responds with the conventional encomium (§ 504), and the king then deputes the treasurer to undertake the building (§ 505). An interval of time having elapsed of which there is no indication in the narrative, the ground plan of the building is laid out with the customary ceremony (§ 506). As usual in such inscriptions, there must have followed some description of the construction, material, and furniture of the temple, but the scribe unfortunately copied no farther.

500. This was of course not the first temple at Heliopolis, but an extension of the old, undoubtedly on a much larger scale. A fragment of a building inscription from the same temple perhaps belonged to Sesostris I. It shows that he, or one of his name, built throughout Egypt. It reads:

This list of the king's good works for the gods doubtless comes from the Heliopolis temple, the building of which is recorded in our leather roll, as follows:

501. \(^1\)Year 3
Third month of the first season, day —, under
The majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Kheperkere, Son of Re, Sesostris (I), triumphant.e

\(^b\)Second nome of Upper Egypt.

\(^c\)The inscription here passes around the corner of the block; it is uncertain whether the two faces should be connected as above.

\(^f\)This hall \((d^2 \cdot \text{dw})\) is mentioned also in the reign of Sahure (see § 239), where it was part of a house called: "Sahure-Shines-or-Appears-Without-Crowns." The name also occurs in the Fourth Dynasty in the same connection (Sethe, Urkunden, I, 22, l. 14), and must be an audience-hall.
The princes at the place of [---].

TWELFTH DYNASTY: SESOSTRIS I

INSCRIPTION OF MERI

507. The usual texts of the Middle Kingdom mortuary stelae are here preceded by seven lines referring to the building of Sesostris I's pyramid-chapel, which was intrusted to Meri. The mention of columns and gates may indicate that only the chapel, and not the pyramid entire, is meant. If the date at the top is, as we may suppose, that of Meri's death, then Sesostris I had completed his mortuary chapel, and perhaps his pyramid at Lisht, by his ninth year.

508. 'Year 9, second month of the first season, day 20, under the majesty of Sesostris I, living like Re, forever. His real servant, his favorite, who does all that which he praises every day, the revered assistant treasurer, Meri (Mry), born of Menkhet (Mnh't), says:

509. I was a zealous servant, great in character, amiable in love. My lord sent me with a commission, because I was so very zealous, to execute for him an eternal dwelling, greater in name than Rosta, and more excellent in appointments than any place, the excellent district of the gods. Its columns pierced heaven; the lake which was dug, it reached the river; the gates, towering heavenward, were of limestone of Troja. Osiris, First of the Westerners, rejoiced over all the monuments of my lord; I myself rejoiced, and my heart was glad at that which I had executed.

aMortuary stela in the Louvre (C 3), published by Pierret, Inscriptions, II, 104, 105; Gayet, Stèles, IV, V; Maspero, Mélanges d'archéologie égyptienne, II, 221 f.; again Maspero, Études de mythologie et d'archéologie, III, 208 f.; and Piehl, Inscriptions, I, II-IV. Of these, the only careful copy is Piehl's. He also offers an excellent translation (ibid., 3-5).

bThis chapel and pyramid at Lisht were excavated by J. E. Gautier (Mémoire sur les fouilles de Licht par J. E. Gautier et G. Jéquier [Cairo, 1902], 3-43; in Mémoires de l'Institut, VI, fasc. 1).

cFull titulary. dThe pyramid; it is lit., "an eternal seat."

eLit.: "More advanced."

fRead wcr't, originally a bend in the cliffs or river. Maspero reads whmt, "repeating, reproducing the excellences of the gods." Compare Piehl, Inscriptions, I, 4.

gPiehl's text has "walls."

hThis may be figurative, viz., "reached," in the sense of "equaled," which suits the context.

iBelonging to the chapel on the east side.
WADI HALFA INSCRIPTION OF MENTUHOTEP

510. This carries the Nubian wars of Sesostris I to their southernmost point. It was set up in the eighteenth year, by the general, Mentuhotep.

At the top is a relief showing Sesostris I standing, facing "Montu, Lord of Thebes," who says: "I have brought for thee all countries which are in Nubia (T³-pd·t), beneath thy feet, Good God." Suiting these words, the god leads and presents to the king a line of bound captives, symbolizing Nubian towns. The head and shoulders of each captive surmount an oval, containing the name of the town represented. There were originally ten of these towns (of which four have disappeared), as follows: (1) k³s, (2) y r — 1, a A sandstone stela found in the sanctuary of the northernmost of the two temples on the west shore opposite Wadi Halfa village. First noticed by Ricci, it was taken out by Champollon and Rosellini in 1829, who failed to notice that they had left the lower portion in situ under the sand. This upper portion has been in Florence for many years (No. 1542). Some sixty years later, (1893) Captain Lyons took out the lower portion, and it is now in Florence; only one intermediate line has been lost, for the two parts fit together, at one corner. The upper portion has often been published, but with no approach to accuracy: Rosellini, Monumenti Storici, XXV, 4; Champollon, Monuments, I, 1; Champollon, Notices descriptives, I, 34–36; II, 692; Schiaparelli, Catalogue, I, 243–46; Berend, Monuments du Musée égyptien de Florence, 51, 52; Brugsch, Thesaurus, 1444 f.; a photograph in Petrie's Italian Photographs, No. 46. The lower portion was published by Pellegrini in Bessarione, Anno V, Vol. IX, Nos. 59, 60. I photographed and copied both portions (the readings from my copy were incorporated in Pellegrini's publication), repeatedly collated the original, and the Berlin squeeze (A 1375) of the upper portion, as well as the old publications for signs now lost, and published the whole in Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, May, 1901, 231–35, and three plates.

b Another expedition under Sesostris I, which extended an uncertain distance southward, was accompanied by the nomarch of Elephantine, Sirenpowet. It is recorded in his Assuan tomb (de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, 183), but is so fragmentary and so badly published, that very little can be made of it. The following is discernible: "His majesty ['sent me or came'] to overthrow K[ush] —— the vile ............ His majesty ['came' bringing ............"

Before the latter phrase an elephant is mentioned, to which there is probably reference in the last line: "Four men brought him ——."

c The date and name of the officer are furnished by the newly discovered lower portion (§ 512).

d All ten were still partially readable in Champollon's time, and he gives the complete list (Notices descriptives, II, 693); the later publications all give only six, and do not add Champollon's material.
(3) prw, (4) ym²w, (5) h²⁻¹, (6) w⁻²w, (7) tyrkyn, (8) s²⁶₄t, (9) h²y, (10) šmyk. The Kummeh temple of Thutmose III was built of "good white stone of s²⁶₄t," the eighth district in this list, which must therefore have been in the vicinity of Kummeh, some thirty-seven miles above Wadi Halfa where our monument was set up. It is safe to conclude that none of the others, although little known, was far south of Kummeh. Thus the conquests of Sesostris I had already reached the southern limit, later marked, and fortified by Sesostris III (§§651–60).

511. Below the relief were two inscriptions; the first belonging to the king—the second to Mentuhotep. Of the king's inscription only fragments of six lines survive, showing the titulary of Sesostris I, followed by the epithet, "Horus who seizes in an instant" (l. 1). Other phrases discernible are: "[Light] of the eyes, star of the South, illuminating the Two Lands, white Bull, trampling the Trogloodytes" (l. 2); and in l. 4 is a reference to "smiting Nubia." On the lower, more recently recovered portion, two more, fragmentary lines, continue similar epithets of the king.

512. Mentuhotep's inscription begins with his titles, as follows:

°Hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, favorite of the king ————local governor, attached to Dep, lord

[a] According to Champollion, Notices descriptives, but the original shows the goose as the last sign, and not w; w with w and eagle is also suspicious.
[b] Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 67, b; Brugsch, Thesaurus, 1444.
[c] Preserved completely in Champollion, Monuments, but misplaced at the beginning of l. 1, although it belongs at the end after the royal name.
[e] The king's inscription is in horizontal lines, and the following inscription of Mentuhotep is in vertical lines.
of Pe. ........................a commander of recruits, commander of the army, ——— 12Sesostris I made me ———. 13Year 18, first (month) of the second season, day 8, the day of 14broad in stride, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, [Kheper|ke|re] (Sesostris I). 16Their life is finished, b slain, ——— 17fire in the tents c ———. 18Her grain cast to the Nile, d ——— 19zealous, not transgressing [the command of the palace] ——— 20a man in the strength of his ka, in ——— 21forever, the Son of Re, Sesostris (I) ——— 22I myself swear, this happened in e 23very truth; I, the general of the army, 24Amu's son, (cmw) Mentuhotep.

513. It is clear that ll. 12 and 13, and probably two lines before, contained important historical statements, of which the merest fragments are now discernible. The description is similar to the one on the second Semneh stela of Sesostris III (§§ 655–60).

514. Below at the left was the figure of Mentuhotep, of which only the top of the head is preserved. This is not the only place where his figure appeared on the stela. In the upper relief behind the king is the figure of a hawk-headed deity, very rudely done and not of the same workmanship as the other figures. A close examination reveals hieroglyphics under this figure. Over its head is a fan, the handle of which cuts across the head and shoulders of the figure. f It is clear, then, that this hawk-headed figure is not original, but was cut in later to displace the figure of

b This phrase is common in the Twentieth Dynasty; hence the reading here with km-sign inverted is certain.

c The determinative is lost; it may be that we have Yam (Y > m).

d This phrase (k > m n ytr) occurs also in Papyrus Westcar (IV, 10), where the unfaithful wife is burned and "cast to the Nile," and on the Mentuhotep stela (§ 748), l. 19.

e I read m wn m c>; there is no loss at the end of l. 17; for it is like ll. 18 and 19, which are stopped by Mentuhotep's head, the top of which can barely be seen under the lines, the rest of the head and figure being lost.

f None of this appears in any of the old publications.
a fan-bearer, who could have been no one else but Mentuhotep. He must have fallen into disfavor, and for some reason have been displaced from his position of honor behind the king.

INSCRIPTION OF AMENEMHET\(a\) (AMENI)

515. Amenemhet was one of the most powerful of the Benihasan\(b\) princes. He succeeded his father (I, 465, ll. 7–8) Khnumhotep I, the founder of the Benihasan family, in the eighteenth year of Sesostris I, and ruled twenty-five years. He records three royal expeditions, the first of which he accompanied as commander of the military contingent from his nome, in a war against Nubia. It cannot be certainly identified with any of the Nubian expeditions of Sesostris I recorded in other sources.

516. The second and third expeditions were both for the purpose of bringing gold; the destination of the third was the mines back of Coptos,\(c\) and that of the second, although not stated, was probably the same.

517. The inscription concludes with an interesting and important description of Amenemhet's administration of his principality.

Manuscript No. 29813, 84, 85); by Wilkinson in 1834 (Manuscripts, II, 22–26); by Lepsius in 1842, published (Denkmäler, II, 122); from Lepsius by Birch, Egyptian Texts, 7–11; and Bunsen, Egypt's Place, 2d ed., V., 724 f.; finally by Newberry (Beni Hasan, I, Pl. First Expedition

\( 519. \) I followed my lord when \( ? \) he sailed southward to overthrow his enemies among the four\(^b\) barbarians. I sailed southward, as the son of a count, wearer of the royal seal, and commander in chief of the troops of \(^8\) the Oryx nome, as a man represents his old father,\(^c\) according to [his] favor in the palace and his love in the court. I passed Kush, \(^9\) sailing southward, I advanced the boundary of the land, I brought all gifts; my praise, it reached heaven. Then \(^10\) his majesty returned in safety, having overthrown his enemies in Kush the vile. I returned, following him, with ready face.\(^d\) \(^11\) There was no loss among my soldiers.

Second Expedition

\( 520. \) I sailed southward, to bring gold ore for the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Kheperkere (Sesostris I), living forever and ever. \(^12\) I sailed southward together with the hereditary prince, count, oldest son of the king, of his body, Ameni.\(^e\) I sailed southward, with a number, 400 of all the choicest of \(^13\) my troops, who returned in safety, having suffered no loss. I brought the gold exacted of me; I was praised for it in the palace;\(^f\) \(^14\) the king's-son praised god for me.

\(^a\)The full form of this nomarch's name is Amenemhet (\( Ymn-m-h 3 \cdot t = "Amon is in front" \)). In place of this, another form of name is frequently used in these inscriptions, viz., Ameni (\( Ymn = "Belonging to Amon" \)), sometimes defectively written "Amen."

\(^b\)Compare the "four eastern countries," § 675, l. 9.

\(^c\)This shows that he must have succeeded his father in the Oryx nome. Although his father's name is lacking here, it must have been Khnumhotep (I), the first of the Benihasan family (see § 627, l. 56).

\(^d\)Orders were always given "in the face of" an officer; an officer prepared for efficient service is therefore "ready of face" in the Egyptian idiom.

\(^e\)This is the crown prince, who afterward became King Amenemhet II; his name, like that of our nomarch Amenemhet often, is here in the form Ameni.

Third Expedition

521. Then I sailed southward to bring ore, to the city of Coptos, together with the hereditary prince, count, governor of the city and vizier, Sesostris. I sailed southward with a number, 600 of all the bravest of the Oryx nome. I returned in safety, my soldiers uninjured; having done all that had been told me.

Ameni's Able Administration

522. I was amiable, and greatly loved, a ruler beloved of his city. Now, I passed years as ruler in the Oryx nome. All the imposts of the king's house passed through my hand. The gang-overseers of the crown possessions of the shepherds of the Oryx nome gave to me 3,000 bulls in their yokes. I was praised on account of it in the palace each year of the loan-herds. I carried all their dues to the king's house; there were no arrears against me in any office of his. The entire Oryx nome labored for me in —.

Ameni's Impartiality and Benevolence

523. There was no citizen's daughter whom I misused, there was no widow whom I oppressed, there was no peasant whom I repulsed, there was no shepherd whom I repelled, there was no overseer of serf-laborers whose people I took for (unpaid) imposts, there was none wretched in my community, there was none hungry in my time. When years of famine came I plowed all the fields of the Oryx nome, as far as its southern and northern boundary, preserving its people alive a This means that Amenemhet received a herd of 3,000 cattle from the royal herds, to be maintained by him on shares. He kept them so well that he was praised for it each year when his payments fell due. The cattle of the king on the estate of Thuthotep (Bersheh, I, Pl. XII) are also clearly distinguished from his own; thus: "great numbers of his cattle from the king, and his cattle of the estate in the districts of the Hare nome;" his own cattle being those of "the estate."

b The dues for the herds which he had received. On this entire transaction, see Müller, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1885, 85, 86.

c To labor or work for a king or nobleman is to pay him an impost from the results or products of one's labor. It is used of entire countries in the Empire.

and furnishing its food so that there was none hungry therein. I gave to the widow as (to) her who had a husband; "I did not exalt the great above the small in all that I gave. Then came great Niles, a possessors of grain and all things, (but) I did not collect the arrears of the field.

STELA OF IKUDIDI d

524. This stela was erected at Abydos on the occasion of Ikudidi's visit there, while on an expedition to the oases which lie in the desert behind Abydos. It is the mention by him of the occasion of his visit which makes his stela of importance; for this is the earliest expedition to these peoples of which we know anything.

The inscription is very crude and difficult, and contains many hieratic signs which the artist could not put into hieroglyphic.

Date

525. 1Year 34 under the majesty of the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Kheperkere, the Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Lord of Offering, Beloved of All Gods, Son of Re, Sesostris (I), living forever and ever.

Prayer

526. 3An offering which the king gives, etc., . . . . 4 . . . . e for the revered one 5before the great god, the lord of heaven, the steward, Ikudidi (Ykw-dydy).

aInundations.
bMeaning that the inundations brought these things; two kinds of grain were apparently mentioned.
cMeaning that he did not collect the balance due after the short payments of taxes during the unfruitful years.

eThe usual mortuary prayer in the name of Osiris.
Expedition

527. I came from Thebes, as a king's-confidant, doing all his pleasure, in command of the youth of the recruits, to visit the land of the Oasis-dwellers, as an excellent official, whom his lord knows, effective in plan, whom the officials of the palace exalt.

Tomb

528. I have made this tomb at the stairway of the great god, in order that I may be among his followers, while the soldiers who follow his majesty give to my ka of his bread and his provision, just as the king's-messenger does, who comes inspecting the boundaries of his majesty.

INSCRIPTION OF INTEFYOKER

529. In striking corroboration of the stela of Intef I is that of Intefyoker. Above is the date: "Year 33 under the majesty of Kheperkere (Sesostris I), living forever." The usual mortuary offering is then invoked:

"For the revered, scribe of supervisor of fields in the Thinite, nome of the South (tp rsy), Imsu (Ymsw), southward as far as the Crocodile nome, northward as far as the Panopolite nome. The

The historical portion was first published by de Rouge, Revue archéologique, 1st ser., VI, 560; then completely by Piehl, Inscriptions, III, XXI–XXII. I had also an excellent copy from the original by Sethe, which he kindly loaned me.

c Brugsch (Geographical Inscriptions, I, 211) states that this is the "Hinterland" of the Thinite nome.

e In the list of Ramses II at Abydos (Mariette, Abydos, I, 11, a) and in the oldest of all the lists, discovered February, 1900 (MS. Borchardt's Tagebuch) by Borchardt at Abusir, the Crocodile nome occupies the sixth place from Elephantine, and the order is Thebes, Coptos, Crocodile (end of Abusir list), Diospolis parva, Abydos, Akhmim. Hence the ancient Thinite (Abydos) nome was bounded on the north by the Panopolite (Akhmim) nome, and on the south by the Crocodile nome; the nome of Diospolis parva being a later division. father's father of my father was field-scribe in the waters of Abydos of the Thinite nome, since the time of Horus: Wahenekh ($W^3 h^-c nh$), King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Son of Re, Intef (I)."

INSCRIPTIONS OF MENTUHOTEP

530. The inscriptions of Mentuhotep contain little of historical importance, but were regarded as so excellent in style and content that they were partially copied on the mortuary stela of Sehetepibre, a nobleman living under Sesostris III and Amenemhet III. Their favor continued even into the Empire, when a nobleman under Queen Ahhotep also copied them on his stela. The text on the front, beginning with the names of Sesostris I, proceeds as follows:

531. Hereditary prince, vizier and chief judge, attached to Nekhen, prophet of Mat (goddess of Truth), giver of laws, advancer of offices, confirming the boundary records, separating a land-owner from his neighbor, pilot of the people, satisfying the whole land, a man of truth before the Two Lands, accustomed to justice like Thoth, his like in satisfying the Two Lands, hereditary prince in judging the Two Lands, supreme head in judgment, putting matters in order, wearer of the royal seal, chief treasurer, Mentuhotep.

Hereditary prince, count, chief of all works of the king, making the offerings of the gods to flourish, setting this land according to the command of the god, sending forth two brothers satisfied with the utterances of his mouth, upon whose tongue is the writing of Thoth, more accurate than the weight, likeness of the balances, fellow of the king in counseling, giving attention to hear words, like a god in his hour, excellent in heart, skilled in his fingers, exercising an office like him who holds it, favorite of the king before the Two Lands, his beloved among the companions, powerful among the officials, having an advanced seat to approach the throne of the king, a man of confidences to whom the heart opens.

532. Hereditary prince over the of the (royal) castle (wsh't), finding the speech of the palace, knowing that which is in every body (heart), putting a man into his real place, finding matters in which there is irregularity, giving the lie to him that speaks it, and the truth to him that brings it, giving attention, without an equal, good at listening, profitable in speaking, an official loosening the (difficult) knot, whom the king (lit., god) exalts above millions, as an excellent man, whose name he knew, true likeness of love, free from doing deceit, whose steps the court heeds, overthrowing him that rebels against the king, hearing the house of the council of thirty, who puts his terror among the barbarians (ḥ3s·tyw), when he has silenced the Sand-dwellers, pacifying the rebels because of their deeds, whose actions prevail in the two regions, lord of the Black Land and the Red Land, giving commands to the South, counting the number of the Northland, in whose brilliance all men move, pilot of the people, giver of food, advancing offices, lord of designs, great in love, associate of the king in the great castle (wsh't), hereditary prince, count, chief treasurer, Mentuhotep, he says:

533. "I am a companion beloved of his lord, doing that which pleases his god daily, prince, count, sem priest, master of every wardrobe of Horus, prophet of Anubis of the ḫry ydb, Mentuhotep, prince in the seats of Splendor, at whose voice they (are permitted to) speak in the king's-house, in charge of the silencing of the courtiers, unique one of the king, without his like, who sends up the truth to the

He says: ...............

534. Here follows a mortuary prayer, after which the concluding lines (22, 23) refer specifically to his building commissions at Abydos, as follows: "I conducted the work in the temple, built his house (pr), and dug the lake; I masoned the well, by command of the majesty of Horus." The back also contains references to buildings at Abydos:

I conducted the work in the temple, built of stone of Ayan.............
I conducted the work on the sacred barque (msm.t), I fashioned its colors. ............... — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — — offering-tables of lapis lazuli, of bronze, of electrum, and silver; copper was plentiful without end, bronze without limit, collars of real malachite, ornaments (mn-nfr.t) of every kind of costly stone. — — — of the choicest of everything, which are given to a god at his processions, by virtue of my office of master of secret things.

This must refer to the king or the god.

The text of the back as copied very copiously by Sehetepibre, has been translated only once, to save space (see §§ 746 ff.). Only the references to building are translated here. The back begins with a royal decree, commanding that there be built for Mentuhotep "a tomb at the stairway of the great god, lord of Abydos, recording all thy offices and all the pleasing things which thou didst." It was to be furnished with statues and endowments; but the conclusion is illegible.
THE CONTRACTS OF HEPZEFI

535. Legal documents from civil, as distinguished from criminal, processes of early Egypt are so rare, and the contracts of Hepzefi also throw so much light on both political and social conditions in the Middle Kingdom, that it seemed necessary to include them in these historical translations. They offer nothing in the political history of the family of the Siut nobles, and it is not possible to connect the nomarch, Hepzefi, in any way with the earlier generations, known to us at Siut in the Tenth and Eleventh Dynasties (§ 391). He doubtless marks a new family installed here by the powerful Twelfth Dynasty, in preference to the earlier family, which had been friendly to the northern dynasty.

The ten contracts were made solely to secure to Hepzefi, after his death, certain ceremonies and offerings from the priesthoods of Siut. Similar contracts were customarily made with the priests of Abydos. Mentuhotep and Sehetepeibre, nobles of the same time, say on their Abydos tombstones: "I gave contracts for the remuneration of the prophets of Abydos" (§ 746). The kings did the same (§ 765).

536. The form of the contracts is sufficiently clear; but the language is very involved, and burdened with an excess of relative clauses. Space will not permit the full commentary which they need in many places; but attention

*Engraved upon the east wall of the great hall in Hepzefi's cliff-tomb at Assiut (see § 391 and note). The only complete copy is that published by Mr. Griffith (F. L. Griffith, The Inscriptions of Siut and Dér Rijeh, London, 1889), which is a model of care and accuracy. It is unnecessary to refer to the earlier publications, as Mr. Griffith has collated them all. The first adequate treatment was that of Erman, written, unfortunately, before the appearance of Mr. Griffith's text (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1882, 159–84), which fact necessitated leaving some obscure passages unrendered. Cf. also Maspero, Etudes de mythologie et d'archéologie, I, 62–74.

should at least be called to the sixth contract which Hepzefi as count made with himself as superior prophet of Upwawet.

Two facts in the socio-political organization of the time are brought out by these contracts: (1) The property of the prince was held under two different titles, viz., (a) by inheritance from his father, the property being called the "paternal estate" (\textit{nw-pr-\textsuperscript{y}t}), which he could bequeath at will; and (b) by virtue of his appointment\textsuperscript{a} as "count" (\textit{h\textsuperscript{2} ty-\textsuperscript{3}}) by the king, the property being called the "count's estate" (\textit{pr-h\textsuperscript{2} ty-\textsuperscript{3}}), which he could not legally bequeath. The distinction between these two estates is clearly maintained throughout, and whenever Hepzefi bequeathes anything from his "count's estate" he concedes that such a title can endure only so long as his successors are willing to recognize it, and by appeal to the common feeling in such matters, he urges his successors to recognize it (e. g., § 547, ll. 280, 281)

(2) There are in the contracts four classes of society: the "count" (\textit{h cty-\textsuperscript{3}}), or nomarch; the official (\textit{sr}); the "citizen" (\textit{nds}, lit., "the small"), and the "peasant" (\textit{y chty}), lit., "belonging to the field," enumerated in descending scale. The interrelations of the four are not wholly discernible. The "citizen," like the count, gives to the temple from fields called "his field," which he therefore either owned or held in rental. The peasant is called "his (the citizen's) peasant," and may therefore have been his serf or slave. He cultivated the field for the citizen, and carried the harvest offering to the temple for him (cf. ll. 280, 281). The "official" (\textit{sr}) may have been of the same social class as the "citizen."

The importance of these contracts in a study of the mortuary customs and beliefs is evident, but a discussion of these questions does not fall within the scope of the present translations.\textsuperscript{a}

537. There is a title above (l. 260):\textsuperscript{b} "The command, which the hereditary prince and count, etc., Hepzefi, made," which belongs to an introduction, giving instructions to Hepzefi's mortuary priest, as follows:

538. \textsuperscript{269}The hereditary prince and count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi; he says to his mortuary priest:\textsuperscript{c} "Behold, all these things, which I have secured by contract from these priests, are under thy charge. For, behold, it is the mortuary priest of a man, who should maintain his possessions and maintain his offering.\textsuperscript{270} Behold, I have informed thee; (as for) these things, which I have given to these (\textit{\( w^c b^c \)}) priests, as compensation for these things, which they have given to me, take heed lest anything among them be lacking. (As for) every word of my lists, which I have given to them, let thy son hear it, thy heir, \textsuperscript{271} who shall act as my mortuary priest. Behold, I have endowed thee with fields, with people, with cattle, with gardens (and) with everything, as every count of Siut (does), in order that thou mayest make offerings to me with contented heart. Thou standest over all my possessions, which I have put \textsuperscript{272} under thy hand. Behold, they are before thee in writing.\textsuperscript{d} These things shall belong to thy particular son, whom thou lovest, who shall act as my mortuary priest, before thy (other) children, as food which I have \textsuperscript{1} bequeathed to him; not permitting that he divide them to his children, (but) according to this word which I have commanded thee."

I. FIRST CONTRACT

Title

539. \textsuperscript{273}Contract which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made, with the lay priests of the temple of Upwawet, lord of Siut, to-wit:

\textsuperscript{b}The numbering of lines follows Griffith's edition.
\textsuperscript{c}Lit., "servant of his ka" (\( k^b \)), indicating his office very clearly as a mortuary one; hence the above rendering.
\textsuperscript{d}Referring either to these inscriptions or papyrus originals in possession of the mortuary priest.
§ 545] THE CONTRACTS OF HEPZEFI

What Hepzefi Receives

540. There shall be given* to him: A white loaf per individual (wcb-) priest, for his statue, which is in the temple of Anubis, lord of Rekreret (Rkr) on the first of the 5 intercalary days, when Upwawet, lord of Siut, proceeds to this temple.

What He Pays

541. He hath given* to them for it his share in the bull offered to Upwawet, lord of Siut, in this temple, when he proceeds to it, consisting of his quarter, due to the count.

Source of Payment

542. Lo, he spake to them, saying: "Behold ye, I have given to you this quarter due to me from this temple, in order that this white bread may be endowed, which ye give to me." Lo, they had given to him the inherited portion of the bull, for his statue, (which is) in charge of his mortuary priest, before he gave to them of this quarter.

Conclusion

543. Lo, they were satisfied with it.

II. SECOND CONTRACT

Title

544. Contract, which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made with the lay priests of the temple of Upwawet, lord of Siut, to-wit:

What Hepzefi Receives

545. There shall be given to him:

(a) White bread by each one among them, for his statue, (which is) in charge of his mortuary priest, in the first month of the first season on the first day, New Year's Day, when the house makes gifts to its lord, when the fire is kindled in the temple.

*The verbal forms are regularly in the first clause an infinitive (lit., "concerning giving to him") and in the second a relative form ("what he hath given").
(b) And they shall go forth following his mortuary priest, at his glorification, until they reach the northern corner of the temple, as they do, when they glorify their own noble ones, on the day of kindling the fire.

What He Pays

546. He hath given to them for it a heket of grain from every field of the estate (pr-Dt), from the first of the harvest of the count's estate; as every citizen of Siut does, from the first of his harvest. Now, behold, he begins with having his every peasant give it into this temple, from the first of his field.

Injunction to Future Nomarchs

547. Lo, he said: "Behold, ye know that, as for anything which any official (dr) or any citizen gives into the temple, from the first of his harvest, it is not agreeable to him, that there should be lack therein. Therefore shall no future count diminish to future priests, that which is secured by contract of another count. This grain shall belong to the lay priests, each by himself; no priest, who shall give to me this white bread, shall divide (it) to his colleagues; because they give this white bread, each by himself."

Conclusion

548. Lo, they were satisfied with it.

III. THIRD CONTRACT

Title

549. Contract which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made, with the official body of the temple, to-wit:

What Hepzefi Receives

550. There shall be given to him bread and beer in the first month of the first season, on the eighteenth day, the day of the Wag-feast. List of that which shall be given:

---

a An infinitive construction continued from the first clause (lit., "besides the going forth on their part").

b The dead.

What He Pays

551. He hath given to them for it, 22 temple-days, from his property of his paternal estate, but not from the property of the count’s estate: 554 days to the superior prophet, and 2 days to each one among them.

Definition of “Temple-Day”

552. Lo, he hath said to them: “Behold, as for a temple-day, it is 1/360 of a year. When ye therefore divide everything that comes into this temple, consisting of bread, of beer, and of meat for each day, that which makes 1/360 of the bread, of the beer, and of everything, which comes into this temple, is the unit in these temple-days which I have given to you. Behold, it is my property of my paternal estate, but it is not the property of the count’s estate; for I am a priest’s (w.b) son, like each one of you. Behold, these days shall belong to every future official staff of the temple, since they deliver to me this bread and beer, which they give to me.”

Conclusion

553. Lo, they were satisfied with it.

IV. FOURTH CONTRACT

Title

554. Contract which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made with the lay priests of Upwawet, lord of Siut, to wit:

a I do not understand the ḥmt inserted here.

Lit., “the per annum” (ḥr ṭḥ), as we use per centum; ḥr is here the distributive preposition as in all the passages, indicating the individual priest.
What Hepzef Receives

555. There shall be given to him:

(a) A white loaf per each individual among them, for his statue, which is in the temple, in the first month of the first season, on the eighteenth day, the day of the Wag-feast.

(b) And they shall go forth, following his mortuary priest, at his glorification, when the fire is kindled for him, as they do when they glorify their own noble ones, on the day of kindling the fire in the temple. Now, this white bread shall be under the charge of my mortuary priest.

What He Pays

556. He hath given to them for it:

(a) A khar\(^a\) (\(k^{2}r\)) of fuel for every bull, and an uheta\(^a\) (\(wh^{2}t\)) of fuel for every goat, which they give into the storehouse of the count, when each bull and each goat is offered to the temple, as ancient\(^b\) (dues) which they give into the storehouse of the count. Lo, he hath remitted it to them, not collecting it from them.

(b) And hath given to them 22 jars (\(kby\)) of beer and 2,200 flat loaves which the official body of the temple give to him in the first month of the first season, on the eighteenth day, as compensation, for their giving white bread per each individual among them, from that which is due to them from the temple, and (as compensation for) his glorification.

Further Specification

557. Lo, he spake to them, saying: "If this fuel be reckoned against you\(^c\) by a future count; behold, this bread and beer shall not be diminished, which the official body of the temple deliver to me, which I have given to you. Behold, I have secured it by contract from them."

\(^a\)Measures of bulk. The meaning of this clause is obscure; but probably it means that each bull or goat due the prince (of those offered to the temple) is given him by the priests together with fuel. This latter he now remits as part payment for the white bread.

\(^c\)Lit., "reckoned from you," probably meaning: "as due from you." The fuel, etc., could not be legally conveyed by the count, because they belonged to the count's and not to the paternal estate. If payment of the fuel, etc., should be ultimately exacted, the lay priests would still have the bread and beer which the prince has secured by contract from the "official body" of the Upwawet temple (see third contract).
Conclusion

558. Lo, they were satisfied with it.

V. FIFTH CONTRACT

Title

559. Contract, which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made with the keeper of the wardrobe of the temple, concerning:

What Hepzefi Receives

560. Three wicks with which the fire is kindled for the god.

What He Pays

561. While he (the count) has given to him (the keeper) for it: 3 temple-days. Now, these 3 temple-days shall be due to every future keeper of the wardrobe, because these 3 wicks are due to him (the count).

Disposition of Wicks

562. 1. Lo, he spake to him, saying: "One of them shall be given to my mortuary priest, when he goes forth, kindling the fire with it for the god, on the fifth of the 5 intercalary days, New Year's night, by the keeper of the wardrobe. He shall deliver it to my mortuary priest after he does that which he does with it in the temple."

563. 2. "He shall give another on New Year's Day, in the morning, when the house makes gifts to its lord, when the lay priests of the temple give to me this white bread, which they give to me per individual priest (wcb), on New Year's Day. It shall be due from my mortuary priest at my glorification."

564. 3. "He shall give another in the first month of the first season on the eighteenth day, the day of the Wag-feast, at the same time with the white bread, which they give to me per individual priest (wcb). This wick shall be due from my mortuary priest when glorifying me, together with the lay priests."

Lo, he said to him:

aReally the evening before New Year's Day.
Definition of "Temple-Day"

565. 3°°°Behold, as for a temple-day, it is $\frac{1}{360}$ of a year.\(^a\) When ye\(^b\) therefore divide everything that comes into the temple, consisting of bread, beer, and everything for each day, that which makes $\frac{1}{360}$ of the bread, of the beer, and of everything which comes into this temple, is the unit in these temple-days which I have given 3°°°to thee. Behold, it is my property, of my paternal estate, but not of the count's estate."

Future Validity of Agreement

566. "Now, these 3 temple-days shall belong to every future 'keeper of the wardrobe,\(^1\) because these 3 'wicks\(^3\) are due to him, which thou hast given to me for these 3 temple-days, which I have given to thee."

Conclusion

567. Lo, he was satisfied with it.

VI. SIXTH CONTRACT

Title

568. 3°°°Contract which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made with the superior prophet of Upwawet,\(^c\) concerning:

What Hepzefi Receives

569. The roast of meat which is due upon the altar, which is placed upon the oblation-table, for every bull which is slaughtered in the temple.

And one (št°-) jar for (every) (ds-) jar of beer every day 3°°°of a procession; which shall be due to every future superior prophet.

What He Pays

570. He (the count) hath given him (the superior prophet) for it, 2 temple-days from his property, of his paternal estate, but not from the property of the count's estate.

\(^b\)Although speaking to the keeper of the wardrobe, as the conclusion (l. 301) shows.

\(^c\)That is, with himself! In his capacity as count he makes a contract with himself in his capacity as superior prophet of Upwawet.
Disposition of Meat

571. Lo, the count Hepzefi spake, saying: "When this roast of meat and this jar of beer come for every day of a procession, they are due to my statue, (which is) in charge of my mortuary priest."

Conclusion

Lo, he was satisfied therewith, in the presence of the official body of the temple.

VII. SEVENTH CONTRACT

Title

572. Contract which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made, with the great priest of Anubis, concerning:

What Hepzefi Receives

573. Three wicks due to him, with which the fire is kindled in the temple of Anubis:
   One on the fifth of the intercalary days, the New Year's night.
   Another on New Year's Day.
   Another in the first month of the first season, on the seventeenth day, the night of the Wag-feast.

What He Pays

574. He hath given to him for it: 1,000 measures of land in from the fields of his father, as compensation for these 3 wicks, which he gives to my mortuary priest, in order to kindle the light for me therewith.

Conclusion

575. Lo, he was satisfied therewith.

VIII. EIGHTH CONTRACT

Title

576. Contract which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made, with the lay priests of the temple of Anubis; to-wit:

aSm3·r5y = "the southern union," a designation of some locality in Hepzefi's estate.
What Hepzefi Receives

577. There shall be given to him:

(a) A white loaf per each individual among them, for his statue, in the first month of the first season, on the seventeenth day, the night of the Wag-feast.

(b) And that they shall go forth, following his mortuary priest, and kindle for him (the count), the fire at 308 his glorification, until they reach the lower steps of his tomb, just as they glorify their noble ones, on the day of kindling the fire.

(c) And that the priest belonging in each month shall give \( \text{\(\text{\text{\text{\textdollar}}}} \) of bread (\( \text{\(\text{\text{\textdollar}} \text{\(\text{\text{\textdollar}}}} \) and a jar of beer for his statue, which is on the lower steps of his tomb, when he comes forth from offering in 309 the temple every day.

What He Pays

578. He hath given to them for it: grain from the first of the harvest of every field of the count's estate, as every citizen of Siut does from the first of his harvest. Now, behold, he begins with having his every peasant give it from the first of his field into the temple of 310 Anubis.

Injunction to Future Nomarchs

579. Lo, the count, Hepzefi, said: "Behold, ye know, that, as for every official (\( \text{\(\text{\text{\textdollar}} \) and every citizen, who gives the first of his harvest into the temple, it is not agreeable to him, that there should be lack therein. Therefore shall no future count diminish to future priests that which is secured by contract of another count."

Individual Payment and Remuneration

580. 311 This grain shall belong to the lay priests, per each individual priest, who shall give to me this white bread. He shall not divide it to his colleagues, because they give this white bread, each by himself.

\[a\] This would imply that the temple of Anubis was close to the necropolis and Hepzefi's tomb, a similar indication is seen in the fact that the officials of the necropolis receive the wicks from the "great priest" of Anubis to be carried to the mortuary priest. The temple of Upwawet was, on the contrary, in the town. See Erman, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1882, 165.

\[b\] Heretofore this idea has been expressed by the distributive preposition \( \text{\(\text{\text{\textdollar}} \text{\(\text{\text{\textdollar}}}} \) "per," but in this passage a remarkable idiom appears, lit., "by the mouth of the head of each priest."
Conclusion

581. Lo, they were satisfied therewith.

IX. NINTH CONTRACT

Title

582. Contract which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzefi, triumphant, made, with the overseer of the necropolis, and with the mountaineers, to-wit:

What Hepzefi Receives

583. There shall be given:

(a) That they go to the house of Anubis, on the fifth of the 5 intercalary days, (being) New Year's night, and on New Year's Day, to receive 2 'wicks', which the great priest (\(w^c b\)) of Anubis gives to the count, Hepzefi.

(b) And that they go, at his glorification, until they reach his tomb.

(c) And that they give this one 'wick' to his mortuary priest, after they glorify him, just as they glorify their noble ones.

What He Pays

584. He hath given to them for it:

(a) 2,200 (\(h^2 \cdot t\)) measures of land in the \(f-\), from his property of the paternal estate, but not of the count's estate:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

<tr>
<td>Overseer of the Necropolis</td>
<td>400</td>

<tr>
<td>Chief of the Highland</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eight mountaineers</td>
<td>1,600</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(b) Besides giving to them the foot of the leg of every bull, that shall be slaughtered upon this highland, in every temple.

\(a\) Lit., "those who are upon the mountain" (\(t\pyw-dw\)); they must also be connected with the necropolis, and receive their name from its location in the mountainous cliffs.

\(b\) The usual "to him" is omitted.

\(c\) \(W^3 b \cdot t\).
What Hepzebi Further Receives

585. They have given to him:

The Overseer of the Necropolis, 2 (ds-) jars of beer; 100 flat loaves; 10 white loaves.

The Chief of the Highland, 1 (ds-) jar of beer; 50 flat loaves; 5 white loaves.

Eight mountaineers, 8 (ds-) jars of beer; 400 flat loaves; 40 white loaves.

For his statue, (which is) in charge of his mortuary priest, in the first month of the first season, on the first day, (being) New Year's Day, when they glorify him.

Future Validity of Contract

586. Lo, he said to them: "Behold, these (h²t-) measures of land, which I have given to you, shall belong to every overseer of the necropolis, to every chief of the highland, and to every mountaineer who shall come (hereafter), because they shall deliver to me this bread and beer."

Additional Stipulation

587. "And ye shall be behind [my] statue which is in my garden, following it when ————, at every feast of the beginning of a season, which is celebrated in this temple."

Conclusion

588. Lo, they were satisfied therewith.

X. TENTH CONTRACT

Title

589. Contract which the count, the superior prophet, Hepzebi, made, with the overseer of the highland, to-wit:

a The addition of a second stipulation of payments to the count is in violation of the usual form.

b Mr. Griffith saw traces of / ("him") in this place, which is broken, but the context demands "you."

c From l. 316 on, the lines are shorter, so that not more than five or six words are lost here.
What Hepzefi Receives

590. There shall be given to him 1 (ḥbn·ṯ-) jar of beer, 320i large (— rrt-) loaf, 500 flat loaves, and 10 white loaves, for his statue, (which is) in charge of his mortuary priest, in the first month of the first season, on the seventeenth day, the night of the Wag-feast.

What He Pays

591. 321He hath given to him for it:
(a) 1,000 (ḥp·ṯ-) measures of land in —1, from his property of his paternal estate, but not from the property of the count’s estate.
(b) And 322a quarter of every bull that is slaughtered on this highland in every temple.

Future Validity of Contract

592. Lo, he said to the overseer of the highland: 323“Behold, these (ḥp·ṯ-) measures of land shall belong to every future overseer of the highland, because he delivers to me this 324bread and beer.”

Conclusion

593. Lo, he was satisfied therewith.
REIGN OF AMENEMHET II

INSCRIPTION OF SIMONTU

594. Besides determining the succession of the first three kings of the Twelfth Dynasty, this stela is also important because it shows that Sesostris I was living in the third year of his son, Amenemhet II's reign. They were therefore coregent at least that long.

None of these texts is without considerable divergence from the rest. A collation of the Berlin squeeze (No. 1083), and later of the original in London, shows that no copy is without error.

ᵇSee the same phrase § 294, l. 1.

ᶜPiehl has shown from the well-known parallel examples of the Old Kingdom (Sphinx, II, 135) that the words here: “proceeded, departed, or passed on in peace,” mean “died.” This is undoubtedly correct, but the question is: Whose death is referred to? It cannot be the death of Sesostris I, who is called “living forever,”

INSCRIPTION OF SIHATHOR e

599. Sihathor's sole title is that of "assistant treasurer," an office which he really administered, and one which called him to varied enterprises of historical importance, the chief of which were his expeditions to Nubia and Sinai. After the usual mortuary formularies follow the biographical remarks.

and was therefore still living when the inscription was made. Grammatically, it is also impossible to accept Sesostris as subject of the verb, when verb and adverbial phrase precede the subject. Hence the verb must be a pseudo-participle, in a temporal clause, belonging to the preceding sentence. This leaves Sesostris without a verb, so that it must be an anticipatory subject, in apposition with "his majesty," of l. 6.

a Is this the official called sdm in the Empire?

These texts are so bad that it is difficult to use them at all. The translation is made from my own copy of the original. See also Brugsch, Geschichte, 136 ff.
Sihathor’s Many Commissions

600. I was real “beloved of his lord,” the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nubkure (\(Nb-k^2w-R\)) Amenemhet II), living forever. He commanded, he sent me many times on every excellent commission, the things which his majesty desired should be done according to the desire of the heart of his majesty.

Pyramid Statues

601. His majesty commanded that I should be brought to the pyramid: Amenu-khererp (\(Ymnw-hrp\)), a living forever, to superintend the work on his 16th statues of hard stone of millions of years, which happened within a day of two months. Never happened the like with any superintendent.

602. I visited the Mine-land (Sinai) as a youth, and I forced the (Nubian) chiefs to wash gold. I brought malachite, I reached Nubia (\(t^2-pd\cdot t\)) of the negroes. I went, overturning by the fear of the Lord of the Two Lands; I came [\(ito\)] He (\(H^3\)), I went around its islands, I brought away its produce.

603. a This is the pyramid of Amenemhet II. A similar reference to him, with name Amen for Amenemhet, occurs at Benihasan (§ 520). (See Griffith, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology, XIV, 39 f.) The name of the pyramid is also written Ameni-khererp on the Stela No. 839 in the British Museum.

b So the original; the publications all have 15.

d On the verb \(yry\) (“make”) in the sense of “visit,” see § 351, I. 9, note. The Mine-land (\(By^3\)) is here written with feminine \(t\); it is elsewhere masculine, so that it is possible that we should render it merely “mine.”

e \(F^2h^2\cdot t\) is of course to be read \(mF^2h^2\cdot t\) as in the Pyramid Texts, see the same writing § 266. This is equivalent to saying “I visited Sinai,” and this gives us a second antithetic parallelism with Sinai and Nubia; that is, north and south, as the extremes.

f Read \(hr fr\cdot t\)?

Birch’s and Brugsch’s reading “\(Heha\)” is impossible, otherwise one would identify the place with Heh (\(Hh\)) = Semneh. It is near Abu Simbel; see III, 496.

Verb of the relative clause; a similar record under the same king, but without the year, is in the vicinity (Weill, Sinai, 159).
This stela is chiefly occupied with a pompous recitation of honors, such as is characteristic of the time. Many of the noble’s functions in connection with the royal person—he had charge of the king’s wardrobe—are entirely unintelligible. The interest and importance of the monument lie in Khentemsemeti’s meager record of a journey of inspection among the temples of Egypt, undertaken by command of the king. He went up the river as far as Elephantine, and on his return stopped at Abydos, where he improved the opportunity of his official visit, as so many other functionaries did, to erect a memorial stela at the sanctuary of the great god of the dead. This is the stela with which we are dealing.

Introduction

Amenemhet II, beloved of Osiris, First of the Westerners; given life. His real favorite servant, master of secret things of the king’s wardrobe, Khentemsemeti (Hnt-m-smy’ty); he says:

His Honors

“His majesty set me at his feet in youth, my name was mentioned before my equals. His majesty greeted me, he a daily marvel, and I was verily b I was praised today more than yesterday. I became real king’s-confidant, and his majesty received my approaches. When the officials were placed in their stations, I held office before them; priest of the Southern Crown, (of) the Northern Crown, (of) Khnum; servant of the royal toilet, adjusting (the crown called) “Great-in-Magic,” supporting the White Crown in the “Great House” (Pr-wr). Great lord of Nekheb (El Kab), servant of Neit in the northern palace, to whom (the goddess)

b At royal audiences.
Rekhet gives the hand, one whose approach is avoided, when adjusting the Red Crown, when bringing forth in splendor, Horus, lord of the palace. Nurse of the god (Pharaoh) in the private chamber. Chief of Sais, in the administration of private affairs, lord of fear in the houses of Neit, great companion in the gold-house, at the birth of the god in the morning.

His Appointment to Inspect Temples

610. I came at the front in the presence of his majesty, he had me inspect the divine fathers, to expel evil and to prosper the fashion of their work, in eternal affairs. I commanded to fashion their offering-tables (wdh), the electrum was under my seal.

Arrival at Elephantine

611. I reached Elephantine according to this command; I kissed the earth before the lord of the cataract (Khnum).

Return to Abydos

612. I returned by the way over which I had passed. I drove in the mooring-stake at Abydos.

Erection of Stela

613. I fixed my name at the place where is the god Osiris, First of the Westerners, lord of eternity, ruler of the West, (the place) to which all that is, flees, for the sake of the benefit therein, in the midst of the followers of the lord of life, that I might eat his loaf, and come forth by day; that my spirit might enjoy the ceremonies of people, kind in heart toward my tomb, and in hand toward my stela. For I have not done; that the god may be favorable to me in judgment, when I am "there;" that I may labor, being a spirit in the necropolis-cliff, the ruler of eternity; that I may operate the rudder, that I may descend into the sacred barque (nSm\'t); that I may smell the earth before Upwawet. Khentemsemeti, triumphant, lord of reverence.

614. The following inscription contains a double date, showing that Sesostris II was associated as coregent with his father in the latter's thirty-second year, the coregency continuing at least three years. It also shows that the forts in Nubia were subject from time to time to inspection by officers especially sent thither for the purpose; but, unfortunately, not all have recorded their mission on the rocks as did the officer Hapu.

615. On the right is the name of Amenemhet II, "beloved of Satet, mistress of Elephantine;" on the left is the name of Sesostris II, "beloved of Khnum, lord of the cataract region;" between them is the following inscription:

616. Made in the year 3, under the majesty of Horus: Seshmutowe (Siw-twy=Horus-name of Sesostris II), corresponding to the year 35 under the majesty of Horus: Hekenemmat (Hkn-m-t=Amenemhet II). The Hapu (Hpwy) came, in order to make an inspection in the fortresses of Wawat.\(^d\)

I also had Lepsius' squeeze (No. 360, a) which I collated with all the publications; the text of de Morgan, ibid., is almost as bad as Young's.

\(^b\) So all the texts except de Morgan's (Catalogue des monuments, 25), which has 36! As we have a double date here, this would increase the reign of Amenemhet II by an entire year, if correct. The squeeze is quite clearly 35; this was also the opinion of Sethe, who examined the squeeze with me.

INSCRIPTION OF THE TREASURER KHNUMHOTEP

617. Above stands Sesostris II, before the god Soped, from whom he receives the symbol of life. Below stands Khnumhotep, accompanied by the following inscription:

618. 'Year 1, his monument in God's-Land was executed. The treasurer of the god, real king's-confidant, his beloved, his favorite, the darling of his lord, knowing the law, discreet in executing (it); zealous for him who favors him; not trespassing against the injunction of the palace, the command of the court; favorite of the crown, being in the palace, praiser of Horus, Lord of the Two Lands; presenting the court to the king, truly accurate like Thoth, master of the double cabinet, Khnumhotep.'

INSCRIPTION OF KHNUMHOTEP II

619. The inscription of Khnumhotep II is our fullest and most important source for a study of the relations between the powerful nomarchs, the local counts or barons of the Twelfth Dynasty, and their contemporary kings. Like the nobles of El Kab at the rise of the Eighteenth Dynasty, the princes of Benihasan were a mainstay of the royal house in the early Twelfth. Their domain was the principality of

XXV, XXVI). The last, the publication of the Archaeological Survey of the Egypt Exploration Fund, contains in two volumes the entire Benihasan necropolis. Its text of the great inscription of Khnumhotep II the Oryx (the sixteenth nome of Upper Egypt), which included both banks of the river between the Hare nome on the south and the Jackal nome on the north. The desert cliffs are not far from the river on the east shore, and the narrow strip thus inclosed was sometimes detached from the Oryx nome, as a separate principality, known as "Horizon of Horus," designated usually by its chief town, Menet-Khufu, the birthplace of the great Fourth Dynasty king, Khufu. The sole witnesses to the ancient power and prosperity of this principality are its tombs, those of the Middle Kingdom being located at Benihasan, 169 miles above Cairo.

620. The first of the family in this principality, Khnumhotep II's grandfather, Khnumhotep I, was appointed by Amenemhet I; at first as count only of Menet-Khufu, and finally of the entire Oryx nome (§§625, 626). The narrative of the appointment refers significantly to Amenemhet I's personal visit to the principality, establishing the boundary lines, "when he cast out evil," meaning of course rebellion, or at least of unjust aggression, the last expiring struggles of other ambitious noblemen in their opposition to the new dynasty, a marking the close of the long obscure period of such wars, between the Old and the Middle Kingdom. As is much the best. The texts of Maspero (Recueil, I, 169–81) and Krebs (De Chnemothis nomarchi inscriptione aegyptiaca commentatio, Berlin, 1890) are taken from the publications. The original text contains many patent blunders of the scribe, which render certain parts unintelligible; Mr. Griffith furnishes some useful emendations of such passages (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, 1890, 263–68), and some others I have added, which will be evident from the notes. The lines of the original are so short, that the translation could not be so often divided, and only every fifth line is there numbered. It has not been practicable to cut up the inscription, and assign each portion to the reign which it concerns; hence the whole has been put in the reign from which it dates.

a The reference is not so clear as those in the inscription of Ahmose of El Kab, who narrates three rebellions against King Ahmose I at the rise of the Eighteenth Dynasty (II, 11, 15, 16).
a special favor of the king, Sesostris I, Khnumhotep I's sons received the same domain; Nakht being appointed to Menet-Khufu (§627), and Amenemhet receiving the Oryx nome, in the king's eighteenth year (§§ 518, ll. 1-3, and 627). At the same time, the sister of these two princes, Khnumhotep I's daughter Beket, married a powerful official at the court, the vizier and governor of the royal residence city. Nehri, who was also probably prince of the neighboring Hare nome (§628). Of this union was born Khnumhotep II, who received Menet-Khufu as his just claim through his mother, on the death of his predecessor, his uncle, Nakht, in the nineteenth year of Amenemhet II. He ruled with great prosperity until at least the sixth year of Sesostris II, in which year a party of thirty-seven Bedwin visited him, bringing gifts and probably desiring traffic. Khnumhotep II greatly strengthened his family by marrying Kheti, the eldest daughter of the prince of the Jackal nome. His eldest son, Nakht, was therefore appointed to the princedom of the Jackal nome as his inheritance from his mother, while his next son, Khnumhotep (III), after honors at

bNakht had held the principality, therefore, 43 years.

cThis is the latest date in the tomb (Newberry, Beni Hasan, I, Pl. XXXVIII), so that Khnumhotep II ruled at least nineteen years. If born not long after his uncle Nakht's accession, he would have been not less than forty years of age at his own accession, and nearly sixty years old at the above latest date in his tomb.

dThis is the subject of the famous scene in his tomb, naïvely identified by early Egyptologists with Abraham's visit to Egypt, with which, it is needless to say, it had nothing to do. The accompanying inscription is as follows: "The arrival, bringing eye-paint, which 37 Asians bring to him" (Newberry, Beni Hasan, I, Pl. XXX). Their leader is called: "Sheik of the highlands, Ihshe (Yb-s)," a good Hebrew name. The report handed in by Khnumhotep's secretary dates the event in the sixth year of Sesostris II, and calls them "Asiatics of the desert" (C3 mw n sw, ibid., Pl. XXXVIII).

eFor a similar inheritance through the mother, of the grandfather's office at Siut, see §§ 413 ff.
court, was appointed to his father's countship of Menet-Khufu.\(^a\)

621. We are thus able to trace the history of the family through four generations in this great inscription, but the Benihasan tombs do not carry the career of these princes farther, and, perhaps because of increasing power and centralization on the part of the kings, these tombs cease abruptly at this point in the middle of the Twelfth Dynasty.

Introduction

622. \(^{1}\)The hereditary prince, count, king's-confidant, whom his god loves, governor of the eastern highlands, Nehri's (N\(h\)r\(y\)) son, Khnumhotep, triumphant; born of a count's (\(h^2 t y^-\)) daughter, the matron, Beket (\(B^2 k^t\)), triumphant.

The Tomb, its Paintings and Inscriptions

\(^a\)This is not stated in the great inscription, but is referred to in a hunting scene (Newberry, Beni Hasan, I, Pl. XXXII): "to whom was given the rule (\(hk^3 t\)) of Khnumhotep (II) triumphant, in Menet-Khufu, when his son was appointed to the rule of \(1\) -- \(1\)." To whom the last son refers is not clear, and the name of the princedom is unknown. It occurs also at Siut (§ 396, l. 16), as the northern limit from which the troops of the south were mustered against Siut, and must therefore be south of Siut, and not near Benihasan.

_His Grandfather Appointed Prince of Oryx Nome_

626. Lo, he appointed him to be hereditary prince, count, $^{1—3}$great lord of the Oryx nome. Khnumhotep II's Birth

628. This my chief nobility is my birth, my mother having gone to be hereditary princess, and countess, as the daughter of the ruler (hk^3) of the Oryx nome, to Hat-Sehetepibre . . . . . . . to be the wife of the hereditary prince, count, ruler (hk^3) of the "New Towns," the T—N of the king of Upper Egypt, the T—N of the king of Lower Egypt, in his rank of governor of the residence city, Nehri (Nhry), triumphant, revered.

His Appointment as Count of Menet-Khufu

629. The King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nubkure (Amenemhet II), who is given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever, brought me, being the son of a count (h^3ty-c), into the inheritance of the rule (hk^3t) of my mother's father, because he so greatly loved justice. He is Atum himself, Nubkure (Amenemhet II), who is given life, stability, satisfaction, gladness of his heart, like Re, forever. He appointed me to be count (h^3ty-c) in the year 19, in Menet-Khufu.

aAlthough the fact remains for some reason not mentioned here, it is clear that the Oryx nome, that is, the bulk of the principality, goes to Amenemhet, who began his rule in the eighteenth year of Sesostris I (§ 618, ll. 1-3), for the Oryx nome here remains unaccounted for, during the life of Nakht I.

As Nehri was "governor of the residence city," this must be the name of the city where the king lived. The residence city of Amenemhet I was Ithtowe (Yt-t^3wy) between Medum and Memphis, and probably that of Sesostris I, also. Griffith thinks therefore that Hat-Sehetepibre is simply another name for Ithtowe (Griffith, Kahun Papyri, II, 88), a very plausible conclusion.

bRendered by Krebs campus hostium, and treated as a proper name. The determinative of hww is not that of the enemy as in Krebs' text, but merely a falling man, as might be expected after the root hr. It has a second determinative of land, and the word is not unknown as "low land," the best, most fertile land, next the river.

cThe passage was rendered with essential correctness thirty years ago by Maspero (Recueil, I, 166) giving "quinze stèles-frontières" and "Ouob" = Oxyrrhyncus. It is therefore an oversight as now rendered in his history (Dawn, 524), recording the gift to Khnumhotep of fifteen nomes extending "from Aphroditopolis to Thebes," thus making one nomarch ruler of three-fourths of Upper Egypt. The careful establishment of the northern boundary by erecting 15 landmarks was natural, as Oxyrrhyncus is in the vicinity of the home of the hostile northern families, the descendants of the Ninth and Tenth Dynasties who fought the rising Thebans of the Middle Kingdom (see §§ 391 ff.).

dMeaning the king had not yet determined the limits in this nome, and the settling of the limits just mentioned was a result of this request.

His Restoration of Ancestors’ Tombs

634. I kept alive the name of my fathers, which I found obliterated upon the doorways, (making them) legible in form; accurate in reading, not putting one in the place of another. Behold, it is an excellent son, who restores the name of the ancestors; Nehri’s son, Khnumhotep, triumphant, revered.

His Father’s Mortuary Buildings

635. My chief nobility was: I executed a cliff-tomb, (for) a man should imitate that which his father does. My father made for himself a house of the ka in the town of Mernofret, of good stone of Ayan, in order to perpetuate his name forever and establish it eternally; that his name might live in the mouth of the people and abide in the mouth of the living, upon his tomb of the necropolis, in his excellent house of eternity, his seat of everlastingness; according to the favor of the king’s presence, his love in the court.

His Father’s Excellent Administration

the manner of his tongue, the moderation of his character, Sebek-enekh's son, Nehri, triumphant, revered, whom he exalted before his nobles to be ruler (hk) of his city.

His Own Buildings

637. The achievements of the count, Khnumhotep: I made a monument in the midst of my city; I built a colonnaded hall which I found in ruin; I erected it with columns anew, inscribed with my own name. I perpetuated the name of my father upon them. I [recorded] my deeds upon every monument.

I made a door of 7 cubits, of cedar wood without r for the first doorway of the tomb; double doors for an opening of 5 cubits, 2 palms, for the shrine of the august chamber, which is in this tomb. A prayer for offerings, the mortuary oblations of bread, beer, oxen, geese, was upon every monument, which I made. I greater in monuments this city than the fathers; a child of this city, more excellent in monuments of its burial place than the ancestors, in the buildings made before me.

This stands in place of the usual m ws "in ruin," and probably means something similar. (See Loret, Revue égyptologique, X, 87-94.) What this building in the city was, it is impossible to say; all city buildings having perished. Compare also the work of Kheti another member of the family, as recorded thus: "Prince and count, sole companion, great lord of the Oryx nome, who made eternal monuments in the temple (ht-ntr) of Khnum, lord of Herur (Hr-wr)" (Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 354).

N and plural strokes are lost in the lacuna; the feminine s could not have stood alone, for the building is masculine.

Lit., "of.

The first doorway is, as we should expect, the main entrance to the tomb chapel. A comparison of the height of the "door" given above (7 cubits) with the surviving doorway shows that the door was enough higher than the doorway to lap slightly at top and bottom. The second doorway was for double doors; the only double doors in the tomb of Khnumhotep are those of the shrine containing his statue, in the back wall of the chapel chamber. A comparison of the height of this doorway, given by the inscription, with the surviving doorway itself, shows exact correspondence. On the whole passage, see Breasted, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology, XXII, 88-90.

These lines are unintelligible.

The syntax of both these comparisons is doubtful in several places; it is clear in both that he is comparing his own building activity with that of his ancestors; the first comparison referring to his works in the city, and the second to those in the highland of the necropolis.
Crafts Encouraged

REIGN OF SESOSTRIS III

THE CONQUEST OF NUBIA

640. Sesostris III completed the conquest of Nubia, begun by his predecessors nearly one hundred years before, and was known in the Empire as the real conqueror of the region between the first and second cataracts. He conducted not less than four campaigns in this district, and probably more; and by his canalization of the cataract passages, and the erection of fortresses at strategic points, he made this country a permanent possession of the Pharaohs, which was never lost except for a time during the Hyksos period, until the dissolution of the Empire. Important material documents, like the fortresses of Kummeh and Semneh, are graphic witnesses of the character and permanence of this conquest.®

641. The documentary materials for Sesostris III's operations in Nubia are as follows:

I. The Canal Inscriptions (§§ 642-48).
II. The Elephantine Inscription (§§ 649, 650).
III. The First Semneh Stela (§§ 651-52).
IV. The Second Semneh Stela (§§ 653-60).
V. Inscription of Ikhernofret (§§ 661-70).
VI. Inscription of Sisatet (§§ 671, 672; see also §§ 676 ff., and 687).

I. THE CANAL INSCRIPTIONS

642. In order to establish unbroken water communication with the country above the first cataract, Sesostris III

cleared a channel\(^a\) which permitted the passage of his war fleets, and later doubtless of much commerce also. Although this enterprise had been begun in the Sixth Dynasty, it was now over five hundred years since Uni's attempts to pierce the cataract (§ 324). Sesostris III's achievement was recorded in the two following inscriptions, cut on the rocks of the Island of Sehel. The first, recording the "making" of the canal, is undated, but as the second states, he repaired ("made anew")\(^b\) the canal in the eighth year, it must have been made before this date, and probably in anticipation of the campaign of that year.

First Inscription\(^c\)

643. A scene above, represents the king, Sesostris III, standing before the goddess Anuket, exactly as below (§ 646) before Satet; below them is the inscription:

644. He made (it) as his monument for Anuket, mistress of Nubia \((T^*\cdot-pd\cdot t)\) — — — , making for her a canal, whose name is: "Beautiful-Are-the-Ways-of-Khekure" (Sesostris III), that he may live forever.

645. In the eighth year the channel was already in need of repair, and had to be cleared for the passage of the expedition of that year. This is recorded in the

\(^a\)Mr. Wilbour and Mr. Somers Clarke found a rock-cut canal south of Sehel, but its dimensions do not coincide with those given in the inscription (see Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1894, 63, 64).

\(^b\)But it should be remembered that "aneu" may possibly mean "for the first time" as it later sometimes does.

\(^c\)Text published by Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 136, \(b\) = de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, 87, No. 39. This inscription was known fifty years before Mr. Wilbour's discovery below, but the name of the canal was misunderstood as that of a city (e. g., Wiedemann, Ägyptische Geschichte, 252). The inscription did not become clear until the publication of Mr. Wilbour's discovery (cf. quotation of Erman's letter, Recueil, XIII, 203). The old misunderstanding still survives, and the canal appears as "an emporium" bearing the name "Ways of Khâkert" in some publications.
Second Inscription\(^a\)

646. In a scene at the top stands the king, Sesostris III, wearing the crowns of Upper and Lower Egypt, and bearing the \((\text{w}^3\text{s}-)\) scepter and \((\text{hrp}-)\) baton. The goddess "Satet, mistress of Elephantine," stands before him, presenting him with life; while behind him is the "chief treasurer . . . . chief of works."\(^b\) Below is the following inscription:

647. Year 8 under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Khekure \((\text{H}^\text{c}-\text{k}^\text{p}^\text{w}-\text{R}^\text{c}, \text{Sesostris III}), \text{living forever}.\) His majesty commanded to make the canal anew,\(^c\) the name of this canal being: "Beautiful-Are-the-Ways-of-Khekure-[Living]-Forever," when his majesty proceeded up-river to overthrow Kush, the wretched.

Length of this canal, 150 cubits; width, 20; depth, 15.

648. The canal was still in use in the New Kingdom, and was cleared again by Thutmose I and III (II, 75, 76, 649, 650).

II. ELEPHANTINE INSCRIPTION\(^d\)

649. In addition to the great works on the canal, Sesostris III also gave some attention to the fortress\(^e\) of Elephantine as he passed southward on the campaign of the eighth year. The work was recorded there by Ameni, the officer commissioned to do it, in the following inscription:

\(^a\)Discovered by Mr. Charles Wilbour, and published by him in Recueil, XIII, 202–4; later by de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, 86, No. 20.

\(^b\)He has been omitted by Wilbour, and his name is lacking in de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments.

\(^c\)Or possibly: "for the first time."

\(^d\)From a small stela now in the British Museum (No. 852); it was published by Birch (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1875, 50), and again, Egyptian Texts, 12, 13. I used my own copy of the original, as that of Birch contains a number of inaccuracies.

\(^e\)The fortress is supposed by Maspero (Recueil, XIII, 204) to be the wall connecting Assuan and Philae, of which there are considerable remains at the present day.
650. Year 9, a third month of the third season under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Khekure (Sesostris III) beloved of Satet, mistress of Elephantine, living forever. Command of his majesty to the Magnate of the South, Ameni, [to make] a doorway in the fortress of Elephantine, to make a —— (a building) for the crown-possessions of the South —— people in the region of Elephantine; when [my lord, life! prosperity! health! journeyed to overthrow the wretched Kush.

III. THE FIRST SEMNEH STELA

651. Sesostris III, having, in his eighth year, pushed his southern advance above the second cataract, to a point about thirty-seven miles south of Wadi Halfa, set up his landmark, the stone marking the southern boundary of his realm. His great-grandfather, Sesostris I, had already conquered to this point (§§ 510 ff.), but Sesostris III was now prepared to maintain the conquest.

652. a Birch has 8, but the original has 9: the last unit on the left is very faint, and was therefore overlooked. This is doubtless the date on which the work was finished, the order having been given as the king passed, a year previously. It is hardly probable that there was another campaign in the ninth year after that of the eighth.

allowing \textsuperscript{b}a ship of the Negroes to pass by Heh\textsuperscript{b} (مادة), going down-

IV. THE SECOND SEMNEH STELA\textsuperscript{c}

653. After the campaign of the eighth year, it was again necessary in the twelfth year to chastise the Nubians. Of this expedition only the meagerest record has reached us in an inscription\textsuperscript{d} on the rocks at Assuan, of which, beside the date and the name of Sesostris III, we can read only the following: \textit{"His majesty journeyed to overthrow Kush."}

654. Already in the sixteenth year further disturbances in Kush again called the king thither, and this expedition is twice recorded: on the second Semneh stela; and on a duplicate found on the island of Uronarti, just below Semneh. The duplicate contains in the first line, after the \textsuperscript{b}Modern Semneh (see Baedeker\textquoteright s \textit{Egypt}, 1902, 379), on the west side of the river, about thirty-seven miles above Wadi Halfa. Here and at Kummeh, on the eastern side, Sesostris III erected two fortresses for enforcing the blockade above decreed.

\textsuperscript{c}Red granite stela set up on the west shore at Semneh in the temple in the fortress of Sesostris III (see § 640). It has had a remarkable history since its discovery by Lepsius in July, 1844. Broken into two pieces, the upper portion after packing, was forgotten by Lepsius\textquoteright workmen, and with the \textit{"First Semneh Stela"} (§§ 651 f.) was left in Semneh, so that only the lower portion of the \textit{"Second Stela"} reached Berlin. Some forty years later (1886) the forgotten pieces were found by Insinger on the banks of the river, still in Lepsius\textquoteright boxes. They were taken to Cairo, where they remained in the Gizeh (Bulak) collection for many years, but were at last secured by the Berlin Museum, and the two portions of the \textit{"Second Semneh Stela"} were rejoined in 1899, after a separation of over fifty years (Berlin, No. 1157). Published by Lepsius (\textit{Denkmäler}, II, 136, \textit{h}); I also had a copy from the original, kindly loaned me by Professor Erman.

\textsuperscript{e}It was discovered by Steindorff, Borchardt, and Schaefer in March, 1900.
It is not yet published, and I collate the variants from a copy by Borchardt, cited in the note as U. An account of it, with a copy of the title, is given by Steindorff

king's name, a variant of great historical importance, as follows: "Stela made in the year 16, third month of the second season, when the fortress: 'Repulse-of-the-Troglodytes' a was built.'

655. It was on this campaign, therefore, that the Uronarti fortress was built. The temple in the Semneh fortress was already built for a feast, likewise called "Repulse-of-the-Troglodytes," b doubtless in commemoration of this victory, which was celebrated in it on the twenty-first of Pharmuthi, a month later. This feast continued to be celebrated in the Empire, and the enactments for offerings upon it, and the other feasts of this temple, were reinstituted by Thutmose III (see II, 167 ff.).

656. The "Second Semneh Stela" is as follows: c

Introduction

1 Live the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, a Sesostris III, d who is given life, stability, satisfaction forever.

Boundary Established

657. 3 Year 16, third month of the second season, e (occurred) his majesty's making the southern boundary as far as Hehe e (Hk). 4 I a This is certainly the name of the fortress on Uronarti; we could render: "the fortress which repulses the T.," for which we have the parallel: "the walls of the prince, made to repulse the Bedwin" (§ 493); but the fact that a feast of Sesostris III, probably celebrating this victory, was also called "Repulse-of-the-Troglodytes" (II, 171), is clear evidence that we have here a name for the fortress. Moreover, another fortress of Sesostris III is mentioned in the same way in the inscription (Lepsius, Denkmäler, 151, c) of an officer of one of the first Sebekhoteps, cut on the neighboring rocks to record the height of the Nile (§§ 751, 752).

b There was another feast celebrating a similar victory in this temple, called "Binding-of-the-Barbarians" (see II, 171, l. 12), at which offerings were made to the queen, "great king's-wife Merseger."

c The variants in the duplicate are chiefly of grammatical importance, but where they clear up the meaning, I have adduced them in the notes.

have made my boundary beyond (that) of my fathers; I have increased that which was bequeathed to me. I am a king who speaks and executes; that which my heart conceives is that which comes to pass by my hand; (one who is) eager to possess, and powerful to attack him who attacks, silent in a matter, or answering a matter according to that which is in it; since, if one is silent after attack, it strengthens the heart of the enemy. Valiance is eagerness, cowardice is to slink back; he is truly a craven who is repelled upon his border; since the Negro hearkens to the mouth; it is answering him which drives him back; when one is eager against him, he turns his back; when one slinks back, he begins to be eager. But they are not a people of might, they are poor and broken in heart. My majesty has seen them; it is not an untruth.

Plundering of Nubia

658. I captured their women, I carried off their subjects, went forth to their wells, smote their bulls; I reaped their grain, and set fire thereto. (I swear) as my father lives for me, I speak in truth, without a lie therein, coming out of my mouth.

Future Maintenance of Boundary

659. Now, as for every son of mine who shall maintain this boundary, which my majesty has made, he is my son, he is born to my majesty, the likeness of a son who is the champion of his father, who maintains the boundary of him that begat him. Now, as for him who shall relax it, and shall not fight for it; he is not my son, he is not born to me.

Royal Statue at Boundary

660. Now, behold, my majesty caused a statue of my majesty to be made upon this boundary, which my majesty made; in order that ye might prosper because of it, and in order that ye might fight for it.

V. INSCRIPTION OF IKHERNOFRET

661. The following commission of Ikhernofret to Abydos, of great interest and importance in many respects, is inserted here especially for its bearing on the Nubian wars of Sesostris III. It is not dated, but we are able to date it from another source with considerable probability. Ikhernofret was accompanied to Abydos by one of his officials, Sisatet; each of the two men erected a stela there on this occasion, and that of Sisatet states that the visit was made "when Sesostris III journeyed to overthrow the wretched Kush, in the year 19." The gold taken from Kush (ll. 3, 4) was therefore probably captured in the campaign of the sixteenth year (§657). We have nowhere else any record of the campaign of the nineteenth year.

662. Ikhernofret narrates how he executed the king's commission, and adds a statement of the functions which he fulfilled at the feasts of Osiris and the celebration of the sacred drama, re-enacting incidents from the myth of the god. Among these duties, there is one of the greatest interest, viz., the conduct of Osiris "to his tomb before Peker." This is, of course, none other than the tomb of the hoary old King Zer, which already at this time was misunderstood as the tomb of Osiris.

b The reference shows the royal residence was down-river, that is, northward from Abydos. An inscription of the king's sixth year, hitherto unnoticed, furnishes further indication of his interest in the Abydos temple. The mortuary stela of a certain Sebekhotep (British Museum, No. 257) after the usual prayer, states: "His majesty commanded to dispatch the servant (the deceased) to the crown possessions of Thinis of the South (tp ršy), to cleanse the temples. My majesty sendeth thee to do this, (since) my majesty has recognized that no one doing it possesses thy good qualities. Quickly go thou, and do thou according to all that my majesty has commanded."

Execution of the Commission

666. I did according to all that his majesty commanded, by adorning all that my lord commanded for his father, Osiris, First of the Westerners, lord of Abydos, great, mighty one residing in Thinis.

Temple Monuments and Utensils

667. I acted as "Son, Whom He Loves," for Osiris, First of the Westerners, I adorned the great — forever and ever. I made for him a portable shrine, the "Bearer-of-Beauty" of the "First-of-the-Westerners," of gold, silver, lazuli, fragrant woods, carob wood, and meru wood. I dressed (ḏb.) the god in his regalia (ḥꜣw) by virtue of my office as master of secret things, and of my duty as priest. I was pure-handed in decking the god, a (sm-) priest of clean fingers.
Osirian Festival Drama

669. I celebrated the (feast of) "Going Forth" of Upwawet, when he proceeded to champion his father. 18 I repelled the foe from the sacred barque (nšm·t), I overthrew the enemies of Osiris. with his mother, Sitameni. The inscription of Sisatet then follows, giving the occasion of his visit to Abydos, during which, of course, he erected this stela to secure for his family the favors of Osiris in the next world. It is as follows:

672. Master of the double cabinet, a Sisatet; he saith: "I came to Abydos, together with the chief treasurer, Ikhernofret, to carve (a statue of) Osiris, lord of Abydos, when the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Khekure (Sesostris III), living forever, journeyed, while overthrowing the wretched Kush, in the year 19."

673. Some nineteen years later, perhaps at Sisatet's death, his own memorial stela b was erected at Abydos. The inscription above begins:

"Year 1, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nematre (N-m³c-t-Rc, Amenemhet III), living forever and ever. Stela which the master of the double cabinet of the office of the chief treasurer, Sisatet, made, in order that his name might endure at the stairway of the great god.

HAMMAMAT INSCRIPTION c

674. The principal interest attaching to this inscription arises from the destination of the stone taken out, which is stated to be Ehnas Heracleopolis. The text is so barbarously cut that much is unintelligible:

STELA OF SEBEK-KHU, CALLED ZAA

676. This stela, as furnishing the only mention of an invasion of Syria by any Pharaoh of the Middle Kingdom, is of great importance. Sebek-khu, who states at the top of the stela that his other or "beautiful name" was Zaa (d³?), gives a brief outline of his career on this mortuary stela which he erected at Abydos. He was born in the twenty-seventh year of Amenemhet II (l. 11), at whose death he was therefore five years old.

677. Of his life during the nineteen years' reign of Sesostiris II he says nothing, but with the accession of Sesostiris III, Sebek-khu, who was now twenty-four years old, was aThis stone (bhn) is the same as the two obelisks in the British Museum (Description, V, 21, 22), which are stated by the inscription to be bhn. An examination, kindly made by Mr. Gardiner, shows that the obelisks are of the black basaltic rock of Hammamat.

made an attendant of the king (l. 13), with six men under him (l. 14). He was presently promoted among the personal troops of the king as "attendant (lit., follower) of the ruler" (l. 14), and commanded sixty men on an expedition of the same king into Nubia. Which one of Sesostris III's Nubian campaigns (§§ 640–73) this was, it is impossible to say, but Sebek-khu's gallantry won him a promotion as a "commander" (sha) of the king's personal troops, with one hundred men under him.

678. His next expedition was against a region called Sekmem (Skmm) in Retenu, or Syria. a We are unfortunately unable to locate this Sekmem with certainty, but it could hardly have been very far northward. b A battle occurred here (l. 2), during which Sebek-khu commanded the reserves (l. 3). When finally his men mingled in the fight (l. 3) he personally captured a prisoner (l. 4), whom he delivers to two of his men, to be disarmed. Continuing the battle (l. 4), he is finally rewarded by the king with a rich gift of arms, as well as the weapons of his prisoner. c There is no evidence that this, the only Syrian campaign known under the Twelfth Dynasty, gained anything more than plunder for Sesostris III, or that any attempt was made to hold the territory of the conquered Sekmem. d

679. Sebek-khu now became "commandant" (w crtw) of the (residence) city," the office which he held when he a This campaign was so important in Sebek-khu's life that he places it at the beginning of his autobiography, though it chronologically belongs toward the end.

b Müller (l. c.) suggests Shechem, and would explain the second m as the plural ending of a nisbe, which is of course exceedingly doubtful.

c Compare the same gifts to brave officers of the Eighteenth Dynasty kings; this is the earliest example of the custom.

d This Syrian expedition is not likely to have been the only one made by this dynasty. The language of Sinuhe, exiled in Syria, just before Sebek-khu's time, shows that the power of the Pharaoh was known and feared there, this implies similar expeditions thither under the first kings of the dynasty.
erected this stela (ll. 7 and 10), some time before the death of Sesostris III. He doubtless, like so many officials visiting Abydos, erected the stela himself, hence it does not contain the end of his career. A number of years later, in the ninth year of Amenemhet III, when Sebek-khu could not have been less than sixty-six years old, he appears superintending the king's observations of the height of the inundation at the second cataract. He then held the rank of "commandant of the ruler," but of the end of his career we know nothing.

Asiatic Campaign

680. His majesty proceeded northward, to overthrow the Asiatics (Mntyw-Stt). His majesty arrived at a district, Sekmem (Skmm) was its name. His majesty led the good way in proceeding to the palace of "Life, Prosperity, and Health," when Sekmem had fallen, together with Retenu (Rtnw) the wretched, while I was acting as rear-guard.

INSCRIPTIONS OF THUTHOTEP

688. Thuthotep and his line were nomarchs of the Hare nome, the chief city of which was Khmunu (Hermopolis, Eshmunen) nearly opposite el-Bersheh, where the tombs of the family are located. Their immediate neighbors on the north were the princes of the Oryx nome, with whom they were probably related. Thuthotep’s family was an ancient

1 From his tomb at el-Bersheh. The scene of the transport of the colossus early drew attention to this tomb (discovered by English travelers in 1817), but beyond this scene very little in the el-Bersheh group was copied. After many years of neglect, during which they suffered lamentable mutilation, the tombs were exhaustively copied and surveyed by the Archeological Survey of the Egypt Exploration Fund in 1891–92, and published in two volumes: Bersheh, I (Newberry and Fraser), Bersheh, II (Griffith, Newberry, and Fraser), London. This work has consulted and collated all the earlier publications. The scene of the transport will also be found: Rosellini, Monumenti civili, II, 48, 1; Wilkinson Birch, Manners, II, 305; Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 134, 135; Chabas, Mélanges égyptologiques, III, Pl. one, and regarded the hoary Sixth Dynasty princes, who were buried in the neighboring tombs of Shekh Saʿṣīd, as their ancestors. Their interest in these remote predecessors of theirs was such that at least two of them repaired their ancestors’ fallen tombs at Shekh Saʿṣīd, and recorded the pious deed in the following words: a

689. He made (it) as his monument for his fathers, who are in the necropolis, the lords of this promontory; restoring what was found in ruin and renewing what was found decayed, the ancestors, who were before, not having done it. By the count, marshal of the two thrones, superior prophet, overseer of the king’s-house, governor of the South, great lord of the Hare nome, great in his office, great in his rank, of advanced position in the king’s-house, Thutnakht, born of Teti.

690. It is, however, very difficult to trace back the earlier family. b The neighboring alabaster quarry of Hatnub contains a number of inscriptions (hieratic graffiti) recording the incessant activity of the family there, in which the princes frequently boast of their wealth and power. These records also show that the princes of the Hare nome were not merely provincial nobles, but that they sometimes held high offices under the king. Only one royal date, however (thirty-first year of Sesostris I), occurs in these quarry inscriptions; otherwise they are dated according to the year of the nomarchy, which is a striking indication of the inde-

a This inscription occurs four times in the tombs of Shekh Saʿṣīd; three times with the name of Thutnakht (Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 112, e, and 113, b, c); and once with the name of Ihe (Yḥ) (Bersheh, II, 10), both of whom were themselves buried at el-Bersheh. See also Davies, Shekh Said, Pl. XXX, and cf. ibid., Pl. XXIX. The same inscription occurred at least once at el-Bersheh also (ibid., 11), showing the restoration of pre-Middle Kingdom tombs there also. At Kasr-es-Sayṣid there are also records of the restoration of Sixth Dynasty tombs by Twelfth Dynasty nobles (Baedeker’s Egypt, 1902, 216).

b The material from the tombs of el-Bersheh and the quarry of Hatnub has been carefully sifted in an interesting reconstruction of the family tree by Griffith Bersheh, II, 4–14. The following data have been taken thence.
pendence of these princes at some time, probably before the Twelfth Dynasty. Probably at least four generations lived during the Eleventh Dynasty. Two of these earlier princes say: "I rescued my city in the day of violence from the terrors of the royal house," which may be a reference to the aggression of the Eleventh Dynasty as it pushed northward.

691. The tomb of Thuthotep is the only one at el-Bersheh, in which royal names have been preserved. It contains the names of Amenemhet II and Sesostris II and III, under whom Thuthotep lived. His appointment as prince of the Hare nome, in which he succeeded his grandfather, is referred to in the tomb as follows:

692. His utterance before his father, that he might establish the name of him from whom he came forth. Are not these praises very great before my father and before my god, in that he appoints me chief of his city and great lord of the Hare nome, as successor of him who begat him? He was the staff of the old age of this his father, and he hath appointed me as chief of his city.

c"This his father" is of course Key's father; the use of "this" implying that he was now deceased. His name was Nehri. Thus Nehri lived to a very advanced age, and Key was so old at his father's (Nehri's) death that he immediately resigned the succession to his own son. This would explain the succession from grandfather to grandson, in which Key seems to have the appointing power. The references to the father and son (Key and Thuthotep) as together deserving the praise of the people (§§ 700-704) are thus explained by the fact that Key survived his son Thuthotep's accession.

god has done for me, in that he hath appointed my son as chief of his city, great lord of the Hare nome, as successor of him that begat me.a

694. The well-known scene of the transport of the colossus has made the tomb famous. The only other inscriptions of historical importance are those connected with this scene. They throw much light upon the power and organization of the government in a Middle Kingdom nomarchy, and, of course, the whole scene is of unusual archaeological interest.

695. The quarries from which the great block for the statue was cut are located ten miles from the river in the desert back of el-Amarna.b The difficult road from the quarries over the desert, down the cliffs, and across the plain to the river at the modern village of Hagg-Kandil, had been in use since the days of Khufu, and Uni had transported stone upon it (§323). Along this road the block was transported to the river,c and then floated down-stream to Hermopolis-Eshmunen, where the statue was sculptured.

a"Him that begat me" is the grandfather Nehri. He may be the same Nehri who was the father of Khnumhotep II.

bThey were first seen by Mr. Newberry, who was taken there by natives in 1891. Excellent map by Petrie (Amarna, XXXIV) and very useful description (ibid., 3, 4); also by Fraser (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archeology, XVI, 73 ff.). They contain numerous graffiti published by Blackden and Fraser (Collection of Hieratic Graffiti from the Alabaster Quarries of Hainub).

cThat the statue would be sculptured in the desert quarry, nearly a day's journey from water and supplies, then to run the risk of the long and dangerous transportation to Eshmunen, as is usually supposed, is a priori exceedingly improbable. The inscription is also clearly against this supposition. The scene depicts the arrival of the statue at its destination, and naturally the inscription begins with that event, which it describes in six lines. Then (1. 6) it reverts to the work of getting the stone from the quarry, and says distinctly that on leaving the quarry the statue was "a squared block." After this the ships for the river transport are referred to, and then Thuthotep mentions his arrival "in the district of this city" (doubtless Eshmunen). Similarly the statue of Amenhotep III, now lying unfinished at the Assuan quarry, was merely roughed out to reduce its weight for transportation (de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, 62 f.).
It was then conveyed to its destination, some building—a in the city where it was permanently deposited. This event is depicted with great detail in the famous scene of the transportation. Behind the statue march the "foremen of the work on this statue" and other officials, who are followed by Thuthotep himself; accompanied by the following inscription:

696. Following a statue of 13 cubits, of stone of Hatnub. Lo, the way, upon which it came, was very difficult, beyond anything. Lo, the dragging of the great things upon it was difficult for the heart of the people, because of the difficult stone of the ground, being hard stone.

697. I caused the youth, the young men of the recruits to come, in order to make for it (the statue) a road, together with shifts of necropolis-miners and of quarrymen, the foremen and the wise. The people of strength said: "We come to bring it;" while my heart was glad; the city was gathered together rejoicing; very good it was to see beyond everything. The old man among them, he leaned upon the child; the strong-armed together with the tremblers, their courage rose. Their arms grew strong; one of them put forth the strength of 1,000 men.

698. Behold, this statue, being a squared block on coming forth from the great mountain, was more valuable than anything. Vessels were equipped, filled with supplies, in advance of my army of recruits, the youth bore in advance of it. Their words were laudation, and my praises from the king. My children adorned were behind me.

a Perhaps the "house of the ha" (h·t-k?), which appears as part of the temple at Siut and at Benihasan. See also the contracts of Hepzefi (§ 535 ff.) for the services and ceremonies due to such statues.

b Over 22 feet, indicating the height. It would weigh toward 60 tons, and is the largest alabaster statue known. The immense alabaster statue of Amon found in 1899 by Legrain at Karnak may have been nearly as large.

c The stony ground through which the road passed; such stone would be alabaster at the quarry, and limestone afterward. Rowd 't ("hard stone") is applied to the stone of Hatnub also in Uni (§ 323, l. 42); it is later "sandstone."

d Another possible rendering is: "... the foremen, and the wise; saying: 'O people of strength, come to me to bring it.'"

e This is a reference to the crude block which was brought from the quarry.
My name shouted praise. I arrived in the district of this city, the people were gathered together, praising; very good it was to see, beyond everything. The counts who were of old; the judge and local governor who were appointed for in this city, and established for the upon the river, their hearts had not thought of this which I had done, in that I made for myself established for eternity, after that this my tomb was complete in its everlasting work.

699. The statue is drawn by men in four double rows, manning four ropes. The middle two rows consist of the priests and the soldiers; the outside two, of the youths from the two banks of the river. Each row is accompanied by an inscription as follows:

First Row

700. The youths of the west of the Hare nome come in peace. Utterance: “The west is in festivity, their hearts are glad, when they see the monuments of their lords, the heir who comes in their midst, his house and the house of his father when he was a child. — — —.”

Second Row

701. The youths of the warriors of the Hare nome arrive in peace. Utterance of the recruits of the youths whom their lord mustered, the heir who prospers in the favor of the king, the lord: “Let us come, let us prosper his children after him! Our hearts are glad at the favor of the king who abides permanently.”

aThe text is poetic and has, lit., “had rested from its everlasting work.” Thut-hotep means that after the work on his tomb was complete, he had the great statue made for it, and that his ancestors had never conceived such a great enterprise.

bA man, standing on the knees of the statue, beats time for the men at the ropes. He has the inscription: “Beating time for the soldiers by the [foreman] of Thut-hotep, beloved of the king.” Before him is a man offering incense, whom the inscription calls the artist of this tomb. Beneath are men of the “estate” “carrying water,” and with them workmen “carrying planks for the dragging.” For further details, see the Archaeological Survey volumes.

cOn the social relations of these men, see Griffith, Kahun Papyri, II, 24, 25.

Third Row

702. The courses of the priests of the Hare nome come in peace. Utterance: "He whom Thoth loves, Thuthotep, beloved of the king, he whom his city loves, whom all its gods praise; the temples are in festivity; their hearts are glad, when they see thy favor with the king."

Fourth Row

703. The youths of the east of the Hare nome come in peace. Utterance: "My lord hath proceeded to Thereti (Trty), the god rejoices over him; his fathers are in festivity, their hearts are glad, rejoicing over his beautiful monuments."

704. Over the men at the ropes are platoons of youths bearing (palm?) branches; inscription:

The Hare nome is in festivity, its heart is glad; its old men are children, its youths are refreshed, its children jubilate; their heart is in festivity, when they see their lord, the son of their lord as a favor of the king, making his monument.

705. In advance of all these, oxen are being slaughtered, and rows of servants approach laden with offerings; inscription:

Bringing forward the chief offerings which the districts that are in the Hare nome have brought, for this statue of the count, Thuthotep.

706. A doorway appears behind these people, which is intended to be the entrance of the building for which the statue is destined. It bears the name and titles of Thuthotep and the name of the building itself: "The love of Thuthotep abides in the Hare nome."

aThis inscription clearly settles whose the statue is, and there is no ground for the supposition that it was a statue of the king.

bIn the doorway at one side appears the figure of Thuthotep standing with staff. This is the usual figure, cut on the thickness of the doorway, which is here swung out, as it were, like a door, that it may be seen.
HAMMAMAT INSCRIPTIONS

707. Already in his second year Amenemhet III carried on work at Hammamat, under an officer named Amenemhet. His inscription is dated: Year 2, third month of the first season, day 1, and is followed by ten lines of self-praise, in which we find the only phrases of historical value: "smiting the Negro, opening the land of the Asiatic" (l. 7). His titles occupy two lines (l. 11, 12): "commander of troops (mnjyt), commander (shd) of followers, Amenemhet, son of Ibeb (Ybb), triumphant; his father was Aabu (c33 bw)." At the end there is only the following meager record of one line: "I came to this highland in safety with my army by the power of Min, lord of the highlands." Exactly a year and two days later four officers recorded the date and their names. The chief expedition was in the nineteenth year, of which we have three records. The material taken out was intended for a place or building called Enekh-Amenemhet, "Life of Amenemhet." We naturally think of his pyramid-temple at Hawara. The first record, is as follows:

708. Year 19, first month of the second season, [day] 15; the Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Lord of Offering, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nematre (Amenemhet III), who is given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever.

709. His majesty sent to bring for him(self) monuments from the valley of Hammamat, of beautiful black (basaltic) stone as far as "Enekh-Amenemhet," living forever and ever; at the house of Sebek, of Crocodilopolis: 10 statues of 5 cubits, upon a throne, 7 quarried in this year by the real "beloved of his lord"...............
the overseer of the f—l (gs) of the miners, Sesostris.

710. Another official b has left a record c of the same expedition, in which he also refers to the "10 statues of 5 (cubits)." d He also adds the numbers of the men in the expedition: "His soldiers of the necropolis, 20; quarrymen, 30; sailors, 30; a numerous army, 2,000." e

711. Still another officer f dates an inscription g in the nineteenth year of Amenemhet III, which doubtless refers to the same expedition. The date occupies one line, the usual phrases in eulogy of self thirteen lines, and the following record is in the last line: "He came to this inaccessible highland of Hammamat, on a commission of Horus, lord of the palace (the king), to bring a monument for his majesty."

712. The latest and only other record h is dated: Year 20, third month of the first season, day 13.

INSCRIPTIONS IN SINAI
I. WADI MAGHARA

713. The earliest inscription of Amenemhet III in the peninsula of Sinai, is that of Khenemsu i in the Wadi Maghara. It is as follows:

a The usual encomium of self, made up of obscure phrases.
b His name is uncertain, but may have been "Meri's son, Hu (Hw)" according to l. 8.
c Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 138, c = Golénischeff, Hammamat, IX, No. 1. It is very obscure and uncertain, but seems to refer to difficulties in getting out the blocks for the ten statues.
d He omits the word "cubits," l. 13.
e Lines 14, 15.
f His name is likewise uncertain (it is at the beginning of l. 14).
g Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 138, d = Golénischeff, Hammamat, IX, No. 2.
h Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 138 f. i Cut on the rocks in the Wadi Maghara; published by Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 689 = Burton, Excerpta hieroglyphica, XII = Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 137, c = Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1492 = Laval, Voyage dans la Péninsule Arabique, Inscriptions of Khenemsu

Year 2 under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nematre (N-m^3c·t-R), Son of Re, Amenemhet (III), living forever and ever. The treasurer of the god, master of the double cabinet, chief of the treasury, Khenkhethihotep-Khenemsu was dispatched, in order to bring malachite and copper. List of his soldiers: 734.

714. Below stands the king before Thoth and Hathor, and three petty officers have appended a mortuary prayer at the bottom.

715. Khenemsu's expedition (§§ 713, 714) also operated in Sarbût el-Khadem in the same year, and his officers have left their names on the rocks, surmounted by the date and a relief showing Amenemhet III before "Hathor, mistress of the malachite country."b

716. Belowc are the figures of four officers accompanied by their names:

1. Treasurer of the god, master of the double cabinet, chief of the treasury, Khenemsu.
2. Deputy of the chief treasurer, Ameniseneb.
3. seneb, son of Stira (Sty-r^3).
4. Master of the double cabinet of the treasury, Sebeko, son of Metenu.

Inscription of Harnakht

717. The following inscriptiond of Harnakht, a subordinate treasury official, evidently connected with the preceding

Pl. 5, No. 2 = Weill, Sinai, 129; see last for British Museum squeeze and manuscript sources. An official of the same expedition named Sesostris-Seneb dates a prayer on the rocks in the year 2 (Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1487); Weill, Sinai, 131, 132. Below is a list of his workmen (l. c.).

a Another inscription at Sarbût el-Khadem, of the year 20, shows only the date (Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 137).

b Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 137, a.

c Back of the king stood the chief treasurer, but his figure is now gone, and only a portion of his titles is still visible.

expedition, is of especial interest as showing that the journey to Wadi Maghara was made by water. Even if the customary point of departure was at the extreme north end of the Gulf of Suez, a wearisome desert journey in Sinai was thus avoided.

718. Year 2 under the majesty of the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nematre (Amenemhet III), living forever. The chosen before his subjects, who treads the path of his benefactor, (says): "I crossed over the sea, bearing luxuries a (ṣpsś), by commission of Horus, lord of the palace (Pharaoh)." Official of the treasury (yr- ṭ-n-pr-hš), chief fowler, b Harnakht (Ḥr-nḥt); his beautiful name, Harnetamehu (Ḥr-n-t³-mḥw).

_Inscription of Sebekdidi_

719. An inscription of the year 41 c records an expedition in the Wadi Maghara, which was conducted by a palace official named Sebekdidi-Ranefseneb. It reads:

Year 41 under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, Nematre (N-ṃ²c·t-Rc, Amenemhet III), given life, like Re, forever.

720. The real king's-confidant, his beloved, his favorite, conductor of the palace, Sebekdidi-Ranefseneb. May Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, and Hathor, d mistress of the malachite country, love him who shall say: "An offering which the king gives for the ka of the treasurer, the assistant of the chief treasurer, Sesostris — (S[n]-Wṣr·t ————).

Below is a short list of subordinate officers.

a The connection would indicate that these were offerings from the Pharaoh to be presented to the local Hathor; although ṣpsś·w are frequently the costly stones of Sinai.

b This not uncommon title (ḥb-c₂, with determinative of a goose), has been strangely misunderstood in the last two editions of the text.

c Lepsius, _Denkmüler_, II, 137 f. = _Ordnance Survey_, III, Pl. 3 = Burton, _Excerpta hieroglyphica_ XII; Weill, _Sinai_, 137, 138. A short inscription of the year 30 is in Weill, _Sinai_, 135; it is without historical content beyond the statement of the official: "I worked (ŷr·ny) the gmy and the malachite therein."

d Misread by Weill.
Inscription of Ameni

721. In the year 42 there was evidently an important expedition in the Wadi Maghara, for which the following meager record is our only source: a Year 42, under the majesty of the king, Lord of the Two Lands, Nematre (Amenemhet III), living forever, [beloved] b of Hathor, mistress of the malachite country.

722. The master of the double cabinet, chief of the White House (wr pr h2), Ameni, triumphant, beloved of Hathor, mistress of the malachite country.

The treasurer, c assistant of the chief treasurer, Sesostris—seneb-Sebekkhi, favorite of Hathor, mistress of the malachite country, of Soped, lord of the east, of Snefru, d lord of the highlands, and of the gods and goddesses who are in this land.

723. There were made for Hathor, all beautiful (mine)-chambers. May he be beloved and arrive in safety who shall say: "An offering which the king gives for the ka of the treasurer, the assistant of the chief treasurer, Sebekhotep, beloved of Hathor, mistress of the malachite country; the storeroom-keeper, Yatu (y3-tw); — — — mmu (— mmu); the chief of the house of Pharaoh, Senebtefi; and 20 e (+x) quarrymen ————.

Another expedition left a short inscription in the year 43. f a Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 690 = Burton, Excerpta hieroglyphica, XII = Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 137, g = Ordnance Survey, III, Pl. 3 = Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1490 (inaccurate) = Weill, Sinai, 140, with full literature. There is another inscription of the same year at this place, but only the date, king's name, and epitheta, with two signs at the top of each of three lost vertical lines, are preserved.

b Omitted by the scribe; see Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 137, h.

c It is clear that this official, who has attached the longest blessing to his name, was the personal leader of the expedition.

d Snefru as a god of Sinai. His name is here in a cartouche (with Horus-hawk as determinative); he appears in the same way with Soped, and Hathor in an inscription of Amenemhet III's sixth year (Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1491, No. 9).

e Not more than thirty; a list of subordinate workmen followed, but it is now broken off.

f Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 137, i = Weill, Sinai, 142.
II. SARBŪT EL-KHADEM

724. Amenemhet III began work here as early as the year 2, and dated inscriptions of the years 20, 30, and 38 indicate its continuance, although they are without historical content, and show only the date and the king’s name.

Inscription of Sebek-hir-hab

725. In the year 44, however, the king opened a new mine, and Sebek-hir-hab, the official in command, has left a record of the event there, which he had engraved in the form of a stela, on the walls of the reservoir furnishing the water-supply of the expedition. The place of the stela indicates some connection between the expedition of Sebek-hir-hab and the completion of the reservoir.

Opening of the mining chamber successfully; “Flourish-its-Army-Which-Delivers-That-Which-is-in-it,” is its name.

Year 44 under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, . . . . . . . . Amenemhet III, beloved of Hathor, mistress of malachite, given life, like Re, forever. O ye who live upon earth, who shall come to this Mine-land! As your king has established you, as your gods favor you, that ye may arrive (at home) in safety, so say ye: “A thousand loaves, jars of beer, cattle, fowl, incense, ointment, and everything on which the gods live, for the ka of the master of the double cabinet of

*e The word used (ḥt·l) is the usual one for a quarrying or mining excavation; but as the inscription is cut on the wall of an excavated reservoir, it might be the reservoir which is here meant. the treasury, Sebek-hir-hab (Ṣbk-hr-hb), living again happily, repeating a happy life (wḥm ʿnh nfr), born of the matron Henut (Ḥnwḥt), triumphant."

726. Master of the double cabinet, Sebek-hir-hab; he says: "I excavated a mine-chamber for my lord, and my youths returned in full quota, all of them. There was none that fell among them."

This official, he says: "O ye king's-grandees, companions of the palace! Give praise to the king, extoll [his] fame, laud the king, and watch that which belongs to him. The mountains bring forth what is in them ——— and the hills bear their wealth. His father Keb, he gives it, because of —.

727. Sebek-hir-hab then closes with an account of his offerings to Hathor:

I brought for her offering-tables of mesnet stone, linen (pk₂•ₗ) ——— I presented to her divine offerings, bulls, fowl ———. She fed me by her gracious going to the — terrace, which I made for her. I swear, I have spoken in truth.

Inscription of Ptahwer

728. The last dated inscription of Amenemhet III at the Sarbût el-Khadem is of the year 45, and it reads as follows:

Year 45 under the majesty of the Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Nematre (Amenemhet III), given life forever, beloved of Hathor. If I was one sent to bring plentiful — from the land of —, ready in his reports to his lord, delivering Asia (Ṣṭḥ) to him who is in the palace (the Pharaoh), bringing Sinai (Mṯnw) at his heels, traversing inaccessible valleys, bringing unknown extremities (of the world), the master of the double cabinet, chief of the treasury, Ptahwer, triumphant, born of Yata (Y²•ₗ).
TWELFTH DYNASTY: SESOSTRIS III

729. An undated inscription\(^a\) of this reign records the opening of a mine called "Vision-of-the-Beauty-of-Hathor," and another\(^b\) contained a memorandum of a month's supplies delivered: "1 measure of grain, 23 large and small cattle, 2 \(\text{\textit{d-jowl}}\), 30 mny \(\text{\textit{t-geese}}\)," followed by a list of six petty officials.

Inscription of Amenemhet\(^c\)

730. The king who dispatched this officer to the Sarbût el-Khadem, where his inscription is engraved, is not mentioned, but as the officer's name is Amenemhet, he certainly belongs under a Twelfth Dynasty Pharaoh. The reference to Snefru is of interest, and, besides this, it is evident that Amenemhet worked somewhere else, evidently Maghara, before going to Sarbût el-Khadem. This conclusion is corroborated by the same thing observable in the expedition of Harurre (§§ 733–38).

Work in Wadi Maghara (?)

731. This god dispatched the treasurer of the god, the master of the double cabinet, leader of recruits, companion of the palace, Amenemhet, to bring splendid, costly stone for his majesty. This treasurer of the god says: "I came to the mine of Ka\(^d\) (\(\text{\textit{K\\^{3}}})\); I exacted the impost (\(\text{\textit{bkw}}\)), I attended to the levying of the impost of malachite, being \(f\)\(\cdots\)^1e for \(f\) every \(5\) \(f\) men every day correctly \(f\)\(\cdots\)\(\cdots\). Never had the like been done since the time of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Snefru, triumphant.

Work in Sarbût el-Khadem

732. Then I arrived at this land, and I completed the work successfully. The might of the king ———. It is a command of his majesty ———.

Inscription of Harurre

733. This interesting stela is unfortunately not dated, but it is unquestionably of the Middle Kingdom, and is here provisionally placed in the reign of Amenemhet III. It is of importance because it shows that expeditions were not customarily sent to Sinai in summer. Harurre, treasurer of the god, in the service of an unknown king, erected our stela to inform future generations, who might come in the same unfavorable time of year, that he had survived the heat, when "the mountains brand the skin," and had brought more than the amount of ore exacted of him. He arrived at Maghara in the seventh month; then later transferring his force to Sarbût el-Khadem, he completed the work in the ninth month. These two months of the civil calendar fell in summer, thus corroborating the place of the calendar furnished by the Kahun Sothis date.

734. The language of the monument is in a number of places very obscure and difficult, chiefly in the speeches, so that the general sense of the whole document is fortunately not in doubt. The remarkable use of the word ynn "skin," which appears four times—three times with a meaning aThat is Sarbût el-Khadem; the malachite mine was therefore in another locality, which he had first visited.

bStela in Sarbût el-Khadem (Niebuhr, Reisen nach Arabien [4to, Kopenhagen, 1778], Tab. XLV; Laval, IX, 2; Ordnance Survey, III, 10 [photograph]; Weill, Sinai, 174, after manuscript copy by Burton, and squeeze in British Museum). I had also a photograph by Borchardt, which gives more in the last line than Weill.

cThe sudden statement that he "arrived in this land" (Sarbût) long after the account of his arrival in Sinai, can be explained in this way only. The same thing is observable in the inscription of Amenemhet (§§ 730–32).
evidently quite unusual—is noteworthy. What its meaning may be is not evident. I have not burdened the translation with conjectures in any of the questionable passages.

Work in Maghara (?)

735. 1The majesty of this god dispatched the treasurer of the god, master of the double cabinet r—l, Harurre (Hr−rwr−Rc?) 2 to this Mine-land (By?); I arrived in this land in the third month of the second season (prt), although it was not the season for going 3 to this Mine-land.

736. This treasurer of the god saith to the officials who shall come to this Mine-land at this season: a 4"Let not your faces flinch on that account; b behold, Hathor will turn it 5 to profit. I looked to myself, and I dealt c with myself; when I came from Egypt, d my face flinched, and it was hard for me d—l. The highlands are hot e in summer, and the mountains brand the skin r—l. When morning dawns, f a man is r—l. I addressed the workmen concerning it: g 9"How favored is he who is in this Mine-land!’ They said: ‘There is malachite h in this eternal mountain; it is r—l to seek (it) at this season.e 11 One like us hears the like of (such) marvels, f coming at this season. It is r—l r—l for it in this evil summer-season.’”

Work in Sarbût el-Khadem

737. Now, when I 13 I was dispatched to this Mine-land; the souls of the king put it in my heart. 14 Then I arrived in this land, and I began the work prosperously. 15 My army arrived in full quota, all of it, there was none that fell among them. My face flinched not 16 before the work.

a Viz., the hot season.
b Viz., because they have come in the wrong season.
c Lit., “did something with myself,” probably meaning: “I struggled with myself.”
d Ynm (with the sign of a skin); but it evidently is here a folk-etymology for something quite different from “skin,” the usual meaning of the word.
e Summer time.
f Or: “Our hearing is like a marvel, etc.”
738. I succeeded in mining the good sort, and I finished in the first month of the third season. I brought genuine costly stone for the luxuries, more than any one who came (hither), and (more than) all the exactions. It was better than the accustomed seasons thereof. Offer ye, offer ye to the mistress of heaven, appease ye Hathor; if ye do it, it will be profitable for you. If ye increase to her, it shall be well among you. I led my army very kindly, and I was not loud-voiced toward the workmen. I acted before all the army and the recruits, and they rejoiced in me, — official.

TURRA INSCRIPTION

739. At the top is the date: "Year 43," beneath which, with accompanying names of Ptah, Anubis, and Hathor, is the name of the king: "Son of Re, Amenemhet;" this must be the third, for no other Amenemhet ruled so long.

740. Quarry-chambers were opened anew to quarry fine limestone of Ayan, for the temples of this prophet, of millions of years. Executed under the hand of the hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal [seal], sole companion.

The same statement is found in two other inscriptions at Sarbût el-Khadem (Weill, Sinai, 179 and 180).

Possibly one more line lost.

Cut in the walls of the quarry at Turra; published by Vyse (Operations, III, opp. p. 94) and Lepsius (Denkmäler, II, 143, f).

Omitted by Lepsius, Denkmäler.

The n after m-w-t is an error for the book-roll; cf. Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 3, a.

This remarkable phrase (quite clear in both texts) designates the king, for in the Turra inscription of Ahmose (II, 26 ff.) we have "his (the king's) temples" as a parallel; but this is so unusual that an error in the text is more probable, possibly for "this god?"

The name of the official is lost. Cf. the similar inscription of Ahmose (II, 26 ff.) at the beginning of the Eighteenth Dynasty. They are so similar that one cannot imagine the usually accepted lapse of one thousand years between them.
EL KAB STELA

741. If the "Wall of Seshmu-towe" is a designation of the stronghold of El Kab, then its famous wall is the work of Sesostris II, whose Horus-name is Seshmu-towe. This stela was found at El Kab. The only place there which could conceivably contain a temple inclosure is the town within the wall. This document, therefore, shows that Sesostris II should be regarded as the builder of the famous wall of El Kab.

Above are the Horus- and throne-names of Amenemhet III, "beloved of Nekhbet, mistress of heaven;" and below is the following inscription:

742. Year 44, under the majesty of this god. He made (it) as his monument; his majesty commanding to build the inclosure wall, which is in "Wall of Seshmu-towe," triumphant ———.

INSCRIPTION OF SEHETEPIBRE

743. Besides a meager record of works, which he executed for Amenemhet III at Abydos, Sehetepibre also placed upon his mortuary stela a very interesting poem containing bIn cartouche; it is a designation of the king, meaning "Leader or administrator of the Two Lands," the Horus-name of Sesostris II. There is nothing unique in the use of the Horus-name in a cartouche. M. Legrain's recent explanation of the name as "Samou" (reading "two lands" as m, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, March, 1905, 106 ff.) is impossible, as the horizontal m does not occur until long after the Twelfth Dynasty.

cMortuary stela discovered by Mariette at Abydos, now in Cairo (No. 20538); published very inaccurately by him, Abydos, II, 25 (=Catalogue général d'Abydos, No. 670). It is accurately published by Piehl, Inscriptions, III, Pls. IV–VII. I was also able to use a collation of the Berlin squeeze by Sethe, and afterward a copy of the original by Schaefer.
instructions to his children regarding the proper plan of life. It consists simply in serving the king faithfully and cultivating his favor. With the exception of this instruction, a large portion of the inscriptions was copied from the stela of Mentuhotep, a a powerful official under Sesostris I.

744. Above\(^b\) is the Horus-name of Amenemhet III, surmounted by the Horus receiving life from Osiris; below is the following inscription, which is a good example of the exaggerated titular epithets conventionally applied to the Middle Kingdom noble of power and favor at court.

Titles and Honors

\(^g\)Lit., “putting the heart” (exactly parallel with the Hebrew בְּלִיָּהּ) I find it used in parallelism with sh\(^2\) = “remember” (e. g., Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 149, 6, l. 10).

Abydos Tomb

746. 1dNow, I made this excellent tomb, 2 and beautified its place. I gave contracts for the remuneration of the prophets 3 of Abydos. I acted as “Son-Whom-He-Loves” in the conduct of the house of gold, in the secrets of the lord of Abydos. 4 I conducted the work on the sacred barque, I fashioned its colors, I acted as Hakro (H k-r) 5 of his Lord (at) every procession of Upwawet, making for him all the festal offerings, which the prophet read. I clothed the god at his processions by virtue of my office as master of secret things, and my duty as 1—7—1. I was one whose two hands were 1—1 in adorning the god, a (sm-) priest with pure fingers.e May I be a follower of the god, 8 in order that I may be glorious and mighty at the stairway of the lord of Abydos.

REIGN OF AMENEMHET IV

KUMMEH INSCRIPTION\textsuperscript{a}

749. All of the few dated records of Amenemhet IV are beyond the borders of Egypt. The earliest is the rock inscription of Kummeh, recording the height of the Nile there.

Height ($r^3$) of the Nile of the year 5, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Makhrure ($M^2c\cdot hru\cdot R^c$, Amenemhet IV), living forever and ever.

SINAI INSCRIPTIONS

750. Amenemhet IV continued the exploitation of the Sinaitic mines at least as late as his sixth year. At Wadi Maghara his officials have left two records, the first\textsuperscript{b} containing only the date and the leader's titles, as follows:

Year 6 under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Makhrure (Amenemhet IV), given life forever, — beloved of Soped, [lord of the East] and Hathor, mistress of malachite.

A further inscription\textsuperscript{d} also bears the same date, but contains only a mortuary prayer.

At Sarbût el-Khadem two inscriptions\textsuperscript{e} contain only the Pharaoh's name.

FROM THE THIRTEENTH DYNASTY TO THE HYKSOS REIGN OF SEKHMEMRE-KHUTOWE

RECORDS OF NILE-LEVELS

751. These four inscriptions are the latest of the well-known records on the rocks at Semneh, above the second cataract, which mark the maximum level of the river. They begin under Amenemhet III, and continue into the reign of Sekhemre-Khutowe, when they abruptly cease with these four, here discussed, which thus possess a certain importance. These Nile records are indeed our only historical inscriptions from the reign of this obscure king, and the first ray of light after the fall of the Twelfth Dynasty. They continue uninterruptedly from the year 1 to the year 4, inclusive, but only that of the year 3 contains more than the words, "Height of the Nile of the year —," it is as follows:

752. Height of the Nile of the year 3, under the majesty of King Sekhemre-Khutowe (Sḥm-Rc-hw-tˁwy), living forever; when the wearer of the royal seal, the commander of the army, Renseneb (Rn Šnb), was commanding in the fortress: "Mighty-is-Khekure" (Sesostris III).
REIGN OF NEFERHOTEP
GREAT ABYDOS STELA

753. As the only considerable document of this king, containing more than his name or those of his family, this inscription is of great importance; but, besides this, its unique content renders it of especial interest. Neferhotep was the son of a priest, "the divine father, Ha-enkhef (h²-cnh)" and "the royal mother, Kemi (Kmy)," through whom he possibly inherited royal blood, although he is more likely to have usurped the throne, thus giving his mother her title. Like the ephemeral Khenzer, he gave special attention to the maintenance of the Abydos temple, and this stela, erected to testify to his zeal, tells how he investigated the ancient records at Heliopolis to ascertain exactly what was due to Osiris, particularly the proper form for the divine statue, as it was at the beginning of the world.

754. In order to carry out what he had found in the records, he proceeded in person to Abydos, sending a mesaA sandstone stela, nearly 6 feet high and over 3 feet wide, set up on the wall of the road leading to the Middle Kingdom Osiris-temple. It was in such bad condition that Mariette left it in situ; but, after years of exposure to weather and vandalism, it has now been brought to the Cairo Museum. It was evidently exceedingly indistinct and difficult to copy, and the two copies of Mariette and Devéria, from which the text is published (Mariette, Abydos, II, 28–30; Catalogue général d’Abydos, 233, 234, No. 766) contained many errors, only a portion of which it is possible to correct. These and the frequent lacunae render a complete translation impossible, but enough has been given to make the essential progress of the narrative clear. A better text is now hardly a possibility.

bFamily list cut on the rocks at Assuan (Petrie, Season in Egypt, XIII, No. 337 = Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 151, e=Text, IV, 126) and on Sehel at the first cataract (Mariette, Monuments divers, 70, 3); also on several scarabs (Petrie, Scarabs, Nos. 293–98.)
senger thither before him, to bring forth the statue of the god to meet him. The divine image was carried in festal procession to the sacred barge, which sailed out on the canal, probably to the Nile, seven miles away, where the king was met and accompanied back to the temple amid a celebration in which the incidents of the Osiris-myth were dramatically enacted by the priests. On his arrival the king personally carried out all that he had discovered in the records of Atum. He then admonished the priests to vigilance and pronounced a curse on those who should disregard his established offerings.

Introduction

755. ¹Year 2, under the majesty of King Neferhotep,² born of the royal mother, Kemi (Kmy), who is given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever. ²His majesty appeared³ upon the throne of Horus in the palace, “⁴Structure⁵-of-Beauty.”⁵ His majesty spake to the nobles, and companions, who were in his suite, the real scribes of the hieroglyphs, the masters of all secrets:

King’s Speech

756. “My heart hath desired to see the ancient writings of Atum;⁶ open ye for me for a great investigation; let the god know concerning his creation, and the gods concerning their fashioning, their offerings and their oblations . . . . . . . . (let) me know the god in his form, that I may fashion him as he was formerly, when they made the statues¹ in their council, in order to establish their monuments upon earth.⁵ They have given to me the inheritance of Re as far as the

Reply of Court

757. These companions said: "That which thy ka hath commanded is that which happens, O sovereign and lord. Let thy majesty proceed to the libraries, and let thy majesty see every hieroglyph."

Examination of Ancient Rolls

758. His majesty proceeded to the library. His majesty opened the rolls together with these companions. Lo, his majesty found the rolls of the House of Osiris, First of the Westerners, lord of Abydos.

King's Purpose

759. His majesty said to these companions: "My majesty hails my father Osiris, First of the Westerners, lord of Abydos. I will fashion him, his limbs — his face, his fingers according to that which my majesty has seen in the rolls his form as King of Upper and Lower Egypt, at his coming forth from the body of Nut.

760. His majesty had the king's-confidant, who was in his majesty's suite, called to him; his majesty said to him: "Betake thyself southward — [together with] troops and marines. Sleep not night nor day until thou arrivest at Abydos; cause the First of the Westerners

761. These companions said: “That which thou commandest is that which happens, O sovereign and lord; thou doest all — in Abydos for thy father, First of the Westerners.”

Messenger Departs

762. This official betook himself southward that which his majesty commanded him. He arrived at Abydos. The majesty of this god came to the sacred barge of the lord of eternity the banks of the river were flooded with his fragrance and with the odors of Punt. [The majesty of this god] arrived in the midst. One came to inform his majesty, saying: “This god has proceeded in peace.”

King Goes to Abydos

763. His majesty proceeded the sacred ship together with this god, causing that sacred offerings be presented to his father, the First of the Westerners: myrrh and sacred things for Osiris, First of the Westerners, in all his names. those hostile to the sacred barge were overthrown. Lo, the majesty of this god appeared in procession, his ennead united [with him]. Upwawet was before him, he opened the ways.

e There is no trace of an expedition to Punt here, as frequently stated; the description is the usual one accompanying the bodily approach of a god; see that of Amon, II § 196.

f Evidently the meeting of the king and the god occurred at this point; there is a reference to the “head of the canal,” probably the canal on which the god voyaged in his barge to meet the king. See Great Abydos Inscription of Ramses II, l. 29.

g A series of incidents in the myth of the god are now dramatically enacted by the priests as the procession of the king and the god moves toward Abydos.

h He leaves the barge, to return in procession to the temple.

i The name of the god Upwawet (\( Wp\wawet \)) means: “Opener of the ways.” One of the priests, wearing a jackal mask, acts the part of Upwawet.
King Executes Temple Works

764. Lo, this majesty caused that this god should proceed to that he should rest [on] his throne in the house of gold; in order to fashion the beauty of his majesty and his ennead, his oblation-tables of every splendid, costly stone of God's-Land. Behold, [the king] himself led the work on them — gold, (for) his majesty was pure with the purity of a god.

King's Concluding Speech

765. Be ye vigilant for the temple, look to the monuments which I have made. I put the eternal plan before me, I sought that which was useful for the future by putting this example in your hearts, which is about to occur in this place, which the god made, because of my desire to establish my monuments in his temple, to perpetuate my contracts in his house. His majesty loves that which I have done for him, he rejoices over that which I have decreed to do, (for) triumph has been given to him. I am his son, his protector, he giveth to me the inheritance of the earth. [I] am the king, great in strength, excellent in commandment. He shall not live who is hostile to me; he shall not breathe the air who revolts against me; his name shall not be among the living; his ka shall be seized before the officials; he shall be cast out for this god, together with him who shall disregard the command of my majesty and those who shall not do according to this command of my majesty, who shall not exalt me to this august god, who shall not honor that which I have done concerning his offerings [who shall not] give to me praise at every feast of this temple, of the entire [lay priesthood] of the sanctuary of this temple, and every office of Abydos. Behold, my majesty has made these monu-

b The further execution of the work is narrated in a few very fragmentary sentences, in which is the interesting statement: "No scribe who was in the suite of his majesty had ever found it" (l. 21), referring doubtless to the king's discovery in the rolls. The continuation merges (l. 22) into a long speech of the king, addressed to the god; at l. 27 begins a prayer of the king, which merges at l. 32 into an address to the court.

REIGN OF NUBKHEPRURE-INTEF

COPTOS DECREE

773. In addition to its significant content, this decree is important as showing beyond doubt that one of the Intefs lived after the Twelfth Dynasty, for it is engraved upon a doorway of Sesostris I, and must, of course, be later than his reign.\(^b\)

774. The document itself decrees the degradation from office of a count of Coptos, with the loss of all income appertaining to the office, both to himself and his posterity; and the appointment of another to the position. The crime thus punished, vaguely called "an evil thing," is, of course, treason, and is doubtless one of the many attempts at rebellion such as produced the downfall of the Middle Kingdom. Teti, the traitor deposed, had he succeeded, would have become one of the ephemeral kings, whose names make up the long list of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Dynasties in the Turin Papyrus. The remarkable reference to mercy or favor being shown him by other rulers can hardly designate future kings, but is doubtless an indication of the divided state of the country under a number of petty kings reigning contemporaneously with Intef of our decree. The history of the whole period from the fall of the Twelfth Dynasty to the rise of the Eighteenth owes its paucity of monuments to the endless wars growing out of such attempts, complicated eventually by the invasion of the Hyksos. The plotting and revolts of local princes continued into the reign of Ahmose who, suppressed at least three such (§§ 11, 15, 16), and the name of the rebel in the third case was Teti-en (§ 16, l. 23), almost the same as that of the traitor in this decree.

775. ¹Year 3, third month of the second season, day 25, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nubkheprure (Nbk-prw-R), Son of Re, Intef, who is given life, like Re, forever.

Title of Decree

776. Royal decree to:
- The wearer of the royal seal, the count of Coptos, ²Minemhet;
- The king's-son, commandant of Coptos, Kinen (Ky-nn);
- The wearer of the royal seal, the priest of Min, scribe of the temple, Neferhotepur;
- The whole army of Coptos,
- And the entire lay priesthood of the temple.

Discovery of Culprit

777. Behold, ³there is brought to you this decree, to let you know: that my majesty, L. P. H., has sent the scribe of the sacred treasury of Amon, Siamon, and the ¹—¹ Amenusere (Ymn-wsr-c), ⁴to make an inspection in the temple of Min; and that the lay priesthood of the temple of my father, Min, applied to my majesty, L. his joints of meat. His name shall not be remembered in this temple, according as it is done toward one like him, who is hostile toward the enemies of his god. His entries shall be cast out from the temple of Min, from the treasury, and on every book likewise.

No King or Dynast to Show Him Mercy

779. As for any king or any ruler, who shall be merciful to him, he shall not receive the white crown, he shall not wear the red crown, he shall not sit upon the Horus-throne of the living, the two patron goddesses shall not be gracious to him as their beloved. As for any commandant or any official who shall apply to the king, L. P. H., to be merciful to him (the traitor), his (the applicant's) people, his goods, his fields shall be given to the sacred property of my father, Min, lord of Coptos.

Culprit's Office Given to Minemhet

780. No one of his connections, or of the family of his father or of his mother shall be inducted into this office, but this office shall be given to the wearer of the royal seal, the overseer of royal property, Minemhet. Its bread, its food and its joints of meat shall be given to him, established for him in writing, in the temple of my father Min, lord of Coptos, from son to son and heir to heir.

REIGN OF KHENZER

INSCRIPTIONS OF AMENISENEB

781. Ameniseneb was commissioned by the vizier in the time of King Khenzer to cleanse the temple of Abydos, a task which he accomplished so well that he was appointed to direct all inspections in the temple during the rest of his life. These honors he therefore recorded in the following interesting inscriptions, one of which refers to the work of Sesostris I on the Abydos temple over two hundred years before Ameniseneb’s time.

782. The first stela begins with the usual mortuary prayer "for the ka of the chief of a priestly phyle of Abydos, Ameniseneb, triumphant, son of Emku (c-m-kâw), born of the matron Nebetjyt (Nbt-ytf)." It then proceeds as follows:

Commission by the Vizier

783. He saith: "The scribe of the vizier, Seneb, the son of the vizier, came to call me, by order of the vizier. Then I went with him, and I found the governor of the residence city, the vizier, Enkhu (c nhw) in his hall. Then this official laid upon me a command, saying: 'Behold, it is commanded, that thou cleanse this temple of Abydos.

Seneb is the scribe’s name, and in apposition with "son."

This vizier is mentioned in other documents of the time: the Account Papyrus (Cairo, No. 18, Pl. XVI, l. 3); a stela in St. Petersburg (Lieblein, Dictionnaire, No. 1542); and a stela in Budapest (noted by Pieper). His statue was found at Karnak by Le grain in the great cache.
Artificers shall be given to thee for the contract thereof, together with the lay priesthood of the districts of the storehouse of offerings."

Commission Executed

784. "Then I cleansed it in the lower house and the upper house, on its walls, behind, and within; the painters filling with color, with and with restoring that which the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Kheperkere (Sesostris I), triumphant, made."

Ameniseneb's Rewards

785. "Then came the protector of the oil tree to assume his place in this temple, while the deputy of the chief treasurer, Sionouris (S yn-hr t) followed him. Then he thanked me greatly, beyond everything, saying: 'How prosperous is he who has done this for his god!' Then gave to me a heap of deben (weight), supplied with dates and half an ox."

"Then came the official of down-stream; then were seen these works; then was rejoicing thereat exceedingly, beyond everything."

786. The other stela furnishes the name of the king for whom Ameniseneb executed the foregoing commission, and dWhether this indicates the whole of the temple or not, it is impossible to say. It cannot be said that this passage makes Sesostris I the founder of a new Abydos temple, as is often affirmed. On the commission to Abydos, intrusted by him to Mentuhotep, see § 534.

eThis (hw-b k) is doubtless a name of the cultus image of the god.

fThe image of the god had been removed during the work in the holy place, and was now carried back to his place.

gLit., "he praised the god for me."

h"Heap" (c c) is a term commonly designating a pile of offerings, and regularly used of a group of articles of food when thus presented. Cf. § 747, l. 14, n. The insignificant weight is not the weight of the objects received, but their value in metal, weighing deben (nearly 22 pounds, troy). What metal is meant is not stated, but the weight clearly shows that copper is meant.

iLouvre, C 11.
THIRTEENTH DYNASTY: KHENZER

records the rewards decreed him by the king. At the top is the titulary, as follows:

The Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Lord of Offering, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nematre-Nekhe[re], a who is given life forever; Bodily Son of Re, Khenzer, b who is given life, stability, satisfaction forever.

The text then proceeds:

787. It was commanded to charge the chief of a priestly phyle of Abydos, Ameniseneb, triumphant, saying: "Behold, these works which thou hast done have been seen; the king praises thee, his ka praises thee. Spend thy good old age in this temple of thy god." Then it was commanded to give to me the hind quarters of an ox, and it was commanded to charge me, saying: "Conduct every inspection which takes place in this temple." I did according to all that was commanded; I had every shrine (mnkh) of every god, who is in this temple, restored, their altars renewed with cedar, and the great oblation-table which was in the presence. I executed my desire, it pleased my god; the king praised me.

a N-m²c·t-Rc N-hc, in which the Rç is perhaps to be twice read.

b Rather than Rç-ngRed (Nezerre).

c Of the god; or possibly "which was formerly there."

ADDENDUM

The reading of the name of Nibkhure-Mentuhotep has been shown to be Nb-hp’t-Rc (instead of Nb-hrw-Rc as used above) by the recent excavations at Der el-Bahri. I owe this note to the kindness of Mr. Alan H. Gardiner.

EXPLANATION OF TYPOGRAPHICAL SIGNS AND SPECIAL CHARACTERS

1. The introductions to the documents are in twelve-point type, like these lines.

2. All of the translations are in ten-point type, like this line.

3. In the footnotes and introductions all quotations from the documents in the original words of the translation are in italics, inclosed in quotation marks. Italic are not employed in the text of the volumes for any other purpose except for titles.

4. The lines of the original document are indicated in the translation by superior numbers.

5. The loss of a word in the original is indicated by —, two words by ——, three words by ———, four words by ————, five words by ————, and more than five by ————. A word in the original is estimated at a “square” as known to Egyptologists, and the estimate can be but a very rough one.

6. When any of the dashes, like those of No. 5, are inclosed in half-brackets, the dashes so inclosed indicate not lost, but uncertain words. Thus [—] represents one uncertain word, [——] two uncertain words, and [———] more than five uncertain words.

7. When a word or group of words are inclosed in half-brackets, the words so inclosed are uncertain in meaning; that is, the translation is not above question.

8. Roman numerals I, II, III, and IV, not preceded by the title of any book or journal, refer to these four volumes of Historical Documents. The Arabic numerals following such Romans refer to the numbered paragraphs of these volumes. All paragraph marks ($$ and $$§§, without a Roman) refer to paragraphs of the same volume.

THE EIGHTEENTH DYNASTY REIGN OF AHMOSE I

BIOGRAPHY OF AHMOSE, SON OF EBANAK

1. This inscription contains the biography of a naval officer, Ahmose, a nobleman of El Kab, who served with distinction under three successive kings: Ahmose I, Amenhotep I, and Thutmose I, his father having served under the predecessor of Ahmose I, Sekenenre. It is especially important, because it is our only contemporary source for the expulsion of the Hyksos, and forms, with the biography of Ahmose-Pen-Nekhbet (§§ 17 ff.), our only source for the wars of the early Eighteenth Dynasty; for the royal records of this critical period have totally perished. The family of nomarchs at El Kab were strong supporters of the rising dynasty, and it is clear that such loyalty was liberally rewarded with the gifts of slaves and land, of which both the El Kab Ahmoses boast. It was by thus cementing a firm friendship with such local nobility that the first kings bThe family is far older than the Empire, and already under the Thirteenth Dynasty enjoyed the favor of the king (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 14, b); but it is impossible to trace the line back of Ahmose, son of Ebana’s grandmother.

cA boundary stone marking one limit of such a gift by Thutmose I was acquired by the Berlin Museum in 1899. It reads: “Southern boundary of the fields given as a favor of the royal presence, to the orderly (snn) of his majesty, Nekri (Nkry); 150 sta.” See a similar tablet in Mariette, Monuments divers, 47A, under Thutmose IV.
of the Eighteenth Dynasty maintained themselves during their long and exhausting wars. The royal children were even intrusted to these El Kab princes, to be reared under their charge, a and they finally ruled from El Kab to Esneh. b

2. The ten campaigns in which Ahmose took part are treated in the respective reigns under which they fall, as follows:

I. Career under Ahmose I, ll. 1–24 (§§ 4 ff.).
II. Career under Amenhotep I, ll. 24–29 (§§ 38 ff.).
III. Career under Thutmose I, ll. 29–39 (§§ 78 ff.).

3. The immediate authorship of the inscription is established by the neighboring relief. Ahmose is represented as standing at the left, and before him is his grandson, Pahri (P³-hry), accompanied by the following words:

By the son of his daughter the conductor of the works in this tomb, perpetuating the name of the father of his mother, the draughtsman c of Amon, Pahri, d triumphant.

The long inscription was therefore executed by Ahmose's grandson, Pahri, who was a draughtsman.

I. CAREER UNDER AHMOSE I

4. After an introduction and a few words about his youth and parentage, Ahmose plunges directly into his first a See Tomb of Pahri, "Eleventh Memoir," Egyptian Exploration Fund, and Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 10, b and 11, b. b Pahri, grandson of Ahmose, son of Ebana, was "prince of Esneh (YNAM), governor of the southern lands ("Y 't), satisfying the excellent heart of his lord from the House of Hathor to El Kab." Tylor, Tomb of Pahri, Pl. III.

c See Goodwin, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1872, 21.
d His tomb is the most interesting one at El Kab; see The Tomb of Pahri at El Kab, by Griffith and Tylor, "Eleventh Memoir," of Egyptian Exploration Fund.
campaign, with an account of a siege of the city of Hatwaret (\(ht-w^c\ r^t\)). This can be no other than the city called Avaris by Manetho (Josephus, Contra Apion, I, 14), where, according to him, the Hyksos make their last stand in Egypt.\(^a\) It is also mentioned as the residence of the Asiatics (\(\textit{\text{\text{-}}}\ mw, $ 303, l. 37\)) by Hatshepsut, and by a papyrus of the late Nineteenth Dynasty,\(^b\) as the residence of an Apophis; so that there is no doubt about the identification with Avaris. The siege, which must have lasted many years, was interrupted by the rebellion of some disaffected noble in Upper Egypt; but the city was finally captured, and the Hyksos, fleeing into Asia, were pursued to the city of Sharuhen (Josh. 19:6). Here they were besieged for six years by Ahmose I, and this stronghold was also captured. It was probably at the conclusion of this siege that Ahmose I pushed northward and invaded Syria, as narrated by Ahmose-Pen-Nekhbet ($ 20), probably still in pursuit of the last remnants of the Hyksos.

5. The king now returned, and carried his army to the other extreme of his domain, invading Nubia. He was recalled from a successful campaign there, to quell two successive rebellions, the last of the internal dissensions which had distracted the country since the fall of the Middle Kingdom. At this point the wars, and probably the reign, of Ahmose I closed, Ahmose, son of Ebana, having gained distinction in all his campaigns.

\(^a\)According to Egypt Exploration Fund Archaeological Report (1900–1901, 13), there is in Cairo a stela containing a reference to this war with the Hyksos, but I have been unable to gain any information concerning it. It is probably $ 30.

\(^b\)Sallier I, 1–3; it contains a folk-tale narrating the cause of the war between a Hyksos king, Apophis in Avaris, and a Sekenenre, who was ruler (\(hk^r\)) in Thebes. Unfortunately, only the beginning is preserved. Most of the current translations and interpretations of this document are largely the products of a vivid imagination.
Introductory Address

6. 'Chief of the sailors, Ahmose (\textit{\textsc{h-mf}}), son of Ebana (\textit{\textsc{b-n}^2}), triumphant; \textit{he says: }"I will tell you, O all ye people; I will cause you to know the honors which came to me. I was presented with gold seven times\textsuperscript{a} in the presence \textsuperscript{3}of the whole land; male and female slaves likewise. I was endowed with very many fields." The fame of one valiant in his achievements shall not perish \textit{in this land forever.}\textsuperscript{b}

His Youth

7. He speaks as follows: "I spent my youth in the city of Nekheb\textsuperscript{c} (\textit{\textsc{nhb}}), my father being an officer of the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Sekenenre (\textit{\textsc{skyn R}^c}), triumphant, Baba (\textit{\textsc{b-n}^2}), son of Royenet, (\textit{\textsc{r}^2-yn\cdot t}), was his name. Then I served as an officer in his stead, in the ship 'The Offering' in the time of the Lord of the Two Lands, Nebpehtire (\textit{\textsc{nb-phty-R}^c}, Ahmose I), triumphant, \textit{while I was (still) young, not having taken a wife},\textsuperscript{d} and while I was still sleeping in the garb\textsuperscript{e}. Then after I set up a household, I was transferred \textit{to the northern fleet, because of my valor. I followed the king on foot} when he rode abroad in his chariot.

Campaign against the Hyksos; Siege of Avaris

8. One besieged the city of Avaris (\textit{\textsc{h-w}^c-r\cdot t}); I showed valor on foot\textsuperscript{f} before his majesty; then I was appointed \textit{to (the ship) 'Shining-in-Memphis.'}\textsuperscript{g}

\textsuperscript{a}Ahmose has recorded elsewhere in his tomb (Lepsius, \textit{Denkm"aler}, III, 12, c) a list of the gifts he received, making a total of 9 men and 10 women; the total of land is lost. This does not agree with his narrative, which does not summarize, but in different gifts mentions in all 9 men and 7 women received from the king, and 8 men and 7 women captured.

\textsuperscript{e}This is, of course, some garment worn by a youth; cf. the girdle of Uni's youth (I, 294, l. 1).

\textsuperscript{f}Lit., "on my two feet;" this is emphasized as land service, Ahmose being a naval officer.

\textsuperscript{g}Reward after the first battle at Avaris.
Second Battle of Avaris

9. One fought on the water in the canal: Pezedku (P₂-ddkw) of Avaris. Then I fought hand to hand, I brought away a hand. It was reported to the royal herald. One gave to me the gold of valor.

Third Battle of Avaris

10. Then there was again fighting in this place; I again fought hand to hand there; I brought away a hand. One gave to me the gold of braverv in the second place.

First Rebellion, Interrupting Siege of Avaris

11. One fought in this Egypt, south of this city; then I brought away a living captive, a man; I descended into the water; behold, he was brought as a seizure upon the road of this city (although) I crossed with him over the water. It was announced to the royal herald. Then one presented me with gold in double measure.

Capture of Avaris

12. One captured Avaris; I took captive there one man and three women, total four heads, his majesty gave them to me for slaves.

a Cut off as a trophy, from a slain enemy.
b Reward after the second battle.
c Reward after the third battle.
d There can be no doubt that the word (km’t) means here, as always elsewhere, "Egypt," "this city" is then El Kab, for the word "south" is an adjective feminine agreeing with "Egypt." The phrase can only be translated into a language like Greek or German, thus: "in diesem südlich von dieser Stadt befindlichen Aegypten." The siege of Avaris is therefore interrupted by a rebellion in upper Egypt, similar to the two later ones (§§ 15, 16), and for this reason the narrative particularly specifies "this Egypt, south, etc." See also § 13, l. 15.
e Contrast with this the two men "captured as a seizure upon the ship of the enemy" (l. 21). There is no ground for the fanciful rendering, indicating that he lost his way! Ahmose means that, although obliged to descend to and cross over the water (of some canal) with his prisoner, he brought him away as safely as one seized upon the road of the city.
f Read hr for myk (confusion from hieratic?), as in l. 28.
g Reward after the fourth battle.
h Reward after the fifth battle; apparently Avaris was captured on the fourth assault; but these brief references to fighting may each one indicate a whole season of the siege, which would then have lasted four years, as that of Sharuhen lasted six. See § 13.
Siege of Sharuhen

13. 15One besieged Sharuhen\(^a\) (\(5^2\cdot r^2\cdot h^2\cdot n^2\)) for 6 years,\(^b\) (and) his majesty took it. Then I took captive there two women and one hand. 16One gave me the gold of bravery, \(^b\)besides\(^1\) giving me the captives for slaves.

Campaign against Nubia

14. Now, after his majesty had slain the Asiatics (\(Mntyw Stt\)), \(^c\)he ascended the river to Khenthennofer (\(Hnt-hn-nfr\)), to destroy the Nubian Proglodytes;\(^d\) his majesty made a great slaughter among them. 18Then I took captive there, two living men, and three hands. One presented me with gold in double measure, \(^b\)besides\(^1\) giving to me two female slaves.\(^d\) 19His majesty sailed down-stream, his heart joyous with the might of victory, (for) he had seized Southerners and Northerners.

Second Rebellion

15. 20There came an enemy of the South; his fate, his destruction approached; the gods of the South seized him, and his majesty found him in Tintto-emu (\(Tynt-t^2\cdot mw\)).\(^e\) His majesty carried him off \(^21\)a living prisoner, and all his people carried captive. I carried away two

\(^b\)Lepsius, Denkmäler, has "5," which has been generally accepted; Champollion's text and Brugsch's translation have "6." I repeatedly examined the squeeze for this point with especial care; it has a clear "6." The correctness of the rendering "for 6 years" rather than "in the year 6" has been clearly demonstrated by Pichl (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XV, 258). Another proof is that \(m\), the preposition here, is used all through the Beknekhonsu inscription (Munich) for "during" or "for" a period of years. This throws a new light on the whole Asiatic campaign, for the stubbornness of the besieged and the persistence of Ahmose are almost certainly an indication that the siege is an extension of the campaign against the Hyksos, who, having retreated to Sharuhen, are here making their last stand. We may suppose, therefore, that the siege of Avaris itself also lasted many years, allowing opportunity for a rebellion in Upper Egypt. See § 11, l. 11.

\(^d\)These slaves being women, are not the two captives just taken, as the translations of Renouf and Petrie indicate.

\(^e\)Lit., "She of the land of the water-supply" (\(c\cdot mw\), "water-supply," occurs at Siut, I, 407, l. 6, and in Rekhmire, § 698, l. 25); possibly the district of the first cataract is meant, as the rebellion was in the South. The name is elsewhere unknown.

\textit{Third Rebellion}

16. Then came that fallen one,\textsuperscript{e} \textsuperscript{33} whose name was Teti-en (\textit{Tly-\textsuperscript{c} n});\textsuperscript{f} he had gathered to himself rebels.\textsuperscript{g} His majesty slew him and his servants,\textsuperscript{h} annihilating\textsuperscript{i} them. There were given \textsuperscript{24} to me three heads, and fields (amounting to) five stat\textsuperscript{j} in my city.

\textbf{BIOGRAPHY OF AHMOSE-PEN-NEKHBET}

17. This El Kab nobleman, like Ahmose, son of Ebana (§§ 1–16), served under the first kings of the Eighteenth Dynasty, but he lived to a greater age. Beginning his career under Ahmose I, he continued under Amenhotep I, Thutmose I, II, and III, and died enjoying the favor of Thutmose III and Hatshepsut. He has separated his

\textsuperscript{b}The determinative indicates an enemy, not a proper name, but the meaning of the word (\textit{\textsuperscript{2}t\textsuperscript{2}}) is unknown. The rendering "fièvreux" from Chabas is based on an impossible etymology. See Piehl, \textit{Sphinx}, III, 11.

I. AHMOSE’S CAMPAIGNS\(^d\)

18. He enumerates his campaigns and his captures under Ahmose I, Amenhotep I, Thutmose I and II.

I. Career under Ahmose I

19. His meager reference to a campaign of Ahmose I in Zahi is our sole source of knowledge for that event. It probably followed the capture of Sharuhen.

\(^d\)The translation of the campaigns is distributed under the different reigns, under which he lived, because they furnish very important historical events, but his rewards and the summary, being more purely personal, are given in this reign.

II. AHMOSE'S REWARDS

21. By the sovereign, who lives forever! I was not separated from the king upon the battlefield, from (the time of) King Nebpehtire (Ahmose I), triumphant, to King Okhepernere (Thutmose II), triumphant; I was in the favor of the king's presence, until King Menkheperre (Thutmose III), living forever.

22. King Zeserkere (Amenhotep I), triumphant, gave to me, of gold: two bracelets, two necklaces, an armlet, a dagger, a headdress, a fan, and a mekhtebet.

23. King Okheperkere (Thutmose I), triumphant, gave to me, of gold: two bracelets, four necklaces, one armlet, six flies, three lions, two golden axes.

24. King Okhepernere (Thutmose II), triumphant, gave to me of gold: three bracelets, six necklaces, three armlets, a mekhtebet; a silver axe.

III. AHMOSE'S SUMMARY

25. He says, "I followed the Kings of Upper and Lower Egypt, the gods; I was with their majesties when they went to the South and North country, in every place where they went; [from] King Nebpehtire (Ahmose I), triumphant, King Zeserkere (Amenhotep I) [triumphant], King Okheperkere (Thutmose I), triumphant, King

QUARRY INSCRIPTION

26. The inscription records the work of Neferperet, an official of Ahmose I, who, in the latter’s twenty-second year, took out stone from the Ma sara quarry, for the temples of Ptah and of Amon. The inscription is important, because it is the last dated document of Ahmose I, because it records the first resumption of building after the expulsion of the Hyksos, and for its reference to the Fenkhu, whose cattle were captured on some Asiatic campaign.

Above, in a position of significant prominence in the queen’s case, are the names and titles of Ahmose I, and his queen, Ahmose-Nefretiri (Y ch-m §, nfr’t-yry).

27. Year 22 under the majesty of the king, Son of Re, Ahmose, who is given life. 2The quarry-chambers were opened anew; good limestone of Ayan (c nw) was taken out for his temples of myriads of years, the temple of Ptah, the temple of Amon in southern Opet (Y p .t, Luxor), and all the monuments which his majesty made for him.

aThis phrase after Thutmose III’s name shows that he was living at the time of this inscription; all the others were at this time “triumphant” (deceased). Hence Ahmose, now an old man, died under Thutmose III.

bLit., “having been in a life,” and “having been in honor.”

cOn the wall of the limestone quarry of Ma sara, just southeast of Cairo. Both are badly broken, but they supplement each other, so that practically nothing is lost.

\textbf{KARNAK STELA}\textsuperscript{d}

29. Among Ahmose’s pious works for the temples was the restoration of the furniture, utensils, and the like, belonging to the ritual of the Karnak temple of Amon. He recorded this work upon a splendid stela, containing thirty-two lines of inscription, of which only the last six are devoted to the record of his benefactions, while the other twenty-six contain only conventional eulogy of himself. In the course of this tedious succession of phrases, there is a vague reference to his wars:

30. The Asiatics approach with fearful step together, standing at his judgment-hall; his sword is in Khenthennofer, his terror is in the Fenkhu-lands, the fear of his majesty is in this land like Min (l. 12).

31. He was thus as much feared in Egypt as in Nubia or Asia. The introduction closes with the names of Ahmose I and the queen Ahhotep, after which follows the record of the work in Karnak (ll. 27–32):

\textsuperscript{a}It is not the Fenkhu themselves who are employed in the quarry (as sometimes stated, e.g., Maspero, \textit{Struggle of the Nations}, 93; also Petrie, \textit{History of Egypt}, II, 36), but only the oxen captured.

\textsuperscript{b}The horizontal lines in Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, III, a, l. 5, indicate an \textit{m = “in,” or “among;” indeed, the entire phrase, “which his majesty captured in his victories in --” is so common that the restorations are probable.

\textsuperscript{d}A white limestone stela over \(\frac{7}{2}\) feet high and nearly \(3\frac{1}{2}\) feet wide; found by Legrain by Pylon VII at Karnak. It was below the pavement of Thutmose III, and had been buried before Ikhnaton’s time. Published in \textit{Annales}, IV, 27–29.
32. Now, his majesty commanded to make monuments for his father Amon-Re, being: great chaplets of gold with rosettes of genuine lapis lazuli; seals\(^a\) of gold; large vases (\(hs\;t\)) of gold; jars (\(nms\;t\)) and vases (\(hs\;t\)) of silver; tables (\(wdh\;w\)) of gold, offering-tables (\(dbh\;t\ ht\)) of gold and silver; necklaces of gold and silver combined with lapis lazuli and malachite; a drinking-vessel for the ka, of gold, its standard of silver; a drinking-vessel for the ka, of silver rimmed with gold, its standard of silver; a flat dish (\(tnyw\)) of gold; jars (\(nms\;t\)) of pink granite, filled with ointment; great pails (\(wslm\)) of silver rimmed with gold, the [handles] thereon of silver; a harp of ebony,\(^c\) of gold and silver; sphinxes of silver; a [—]— of gold; a barge of the "Beginning-of-the-River" called "Userhetamon,"\(^e\) of new cedar of the best of the terraces, in order to make his voyage [therein]. BUILDING INSCRIPTION\(^f\)

33. This document discloses to us the name of the mother of Ahmose I's father and mother. She was a queen Tetisheri, and although she is called a "king's-mother and great king's-wife," she is not designated as king's daughter. She was doubtless the wife of the last Sekenenre, and her daughter Ahmose I's mother, was, of course, the famous Queen Ahhotep. The latter's brother-husband, the father of Ahmose I, was probably Kemose.

\(^b\) These are the ceremonial pails with bucket handles, swelling or bulbous below, with more or less pointed bottom. Schaefer calls my attention to the example on the Ethiopian stela in the Louvre, l. 11 (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1895, Pl. V). There are many examples in bronze in the museums.

\(^f\) Stela about 6\(\frac{1}{2}\) feet high and 3 feet wide, found by Petrie at Abydos; published by him in Abydos, III, Pl. LII.
The inscription is so picturesque, and unconventional in form, as to be unique. In content it records the king's determination to erect further mortuary buildings for his grandmother, Queen Tetisheri.

Introduction

34. "Now, it came to pass that his majesty sat in the audience-hall, (even) the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nebpehtire, Son of Re, Ahmose (I), given life; while the hereditary princess, great in favor, great in amiability, king's-daughter, king's-sister, divine consort, great king's-wife, Ahmose-Nefretiri, who liveth, was with his majesty.

The Conversation

35. One spoke with the other, seeking benefactions for the departed (dead), to present libations of water, to offer upon the altar, to enrich the offering-tablet at the first of every season, at the monthly feast of the first of the month, the feast of the coming forth of the sem, the feast of the night-offerings on the fifth of the month, the feast of the sixth of the month, the feast of Hakro \( (H^\frac{2}{2}k^\frac{2}{2}r^2) \), the feast of Wag \( (W^\frac{2}{2}g) \), the feast of Thoth, and at the first of every season of heaven, and of earth. His sister spake and answered him: "Why has this been remembered? And why has this word been spoken? What has come into thy heart?"

Ahmose's Purpose

36. The king himself spake to her: "I, it is, who have remembered the mother of my mother, and the mother of my father, great king's-wife and king's-mother, Tetisheri \( (Ttysry) \), triumphant. (Although) she already has a tomb \( (ys) \) and a mortuary chapel \( (m^c\ h^c^t) \) on the soil of Thebes and Abydos, I have said this to thee, in that my majesty has desired to have made for her (also) a pyramid and a house \( (h^t) \) in

Meanwhile I was at the head of our army; I fought incredibly; his majesty beheld my bravery. I brought off two hands, and took (them) to his majesty. One pursued his people and his cattle. BIOGRAPHY OF AHMOSE-PEN-NEKHBBETb

II. CAREER UNDER AMENHOTEP I

40. Ahmose-Pen-Nekhbet accompanied the king on two campaigns: one against the Nubians, of which we have a fuller account in the biography of Ahmose, son of Ebana (§ 39); and the other against the Libyans; this biography being our only source for this war of Amenhotep I in Libya. For his valor on these occasions he was rewarded by the king.

Hatshepsut. He evidently died under this joint reign; his biography was composed at this time, and is the most important of all sources for the history of the succession of the Thutmosids. Ineni was:

Hereditary prince, count, chief of all works in Karnak; the double silver-house was under his charge; the double gold-house was on his seal; sealer of all contracts in the House of Amon; excellency, overseer of the double granary of Amon.a

These offices brought him the superintendence of many of the most important works executed in Thebes by the kings whom he served. His career is divided as follows:

II. Career under Thutmose I (§§ 99-108).
III. Career under Thutmose II (§§ 115-18).
IV. Career under Thutmose III and Hatshepsut (§§ 340-43).

2. [Amenhotep I]; ..............a building his house, establishing his temple, erecting the southern gate, made high, even 20 cubits, of fine white limestone ———.

It is important to note that this gate was erected in celebration of the king's first Sed Jubilee. Turning again to Ineni, his inscription begins:

45. ——— 1Hatnub (Ht-nb), its doors were erected of copper made in one sheet; the parts thereof were of electrum. I inspected that which his majesty made ——— 2bronze, Asiatic copper, collars, vessels, necklaces. I was foreman of every work, all offices were under my command. ——— 3at the feasts of the beginning of the seasons; likewise for his father Amon, lord of Thebes; they were under my control. Inspection was made for me, I was the reckoner. ——— 4f.—1.

Death of Amenhotep I

46. His majesty having spent life in happiness and the years in peace, went forth to heaven; he joined the sun, he associated (with him) and went forth ———.

bPossibly also the mortuary temple of Amenhotep I, found by Spiegelberg in 1896 at Drah abu-'n-Neggah on the west side at Thebes (see Spiegelberg, Zwei Beiträge zur Geschichte und Topographie der thebanischen Nekropolis im Neuen Reich (Strassburg, 1898; and Sethe, Götting'sche Gelehrte Anzeigen, 1902, No. 1, 29—31). The temple is referred to as "House of Zeserkere (Amenhotep I) on the west of Thebes" (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 238). See also Sethe, loc. cit., 30.

cMortuary stela of unknown provenience (probably Abydos), now in the Florence Museum, No. 1567; published in Catalogue, 288–90; Piehl, Recueil, II, 122–24. I had also my own photograph of the original.
tant post on the original Nubian frontier either resulted in his promotion to the governorship of Wawat in lower Nubia, or his Nekhen appointment involved jurisdiction in Wawat, in view of the fact that earlier Nubia began in the vicinity of Nekhen. In any case, he had charge of the "tribute" from Wawat, which was later in the hands of the "king's-son of Kush" (§§ 1034 ff.). Although the inscription mentions no king, it clearly belongs to the Eighteenth Dynasty before the first appointment of a "governor of the south countries, and king's-son of Kush," by Thutmose I (§§ 61 ff.). Hence we are not far wrong in placing it under Amenhotep I, though Harmini must of course have served under Ahmose I, also.

48. After the usual mortuary prayer, the inscription continues, in Harmini's own words:

I passed many years as mayor (\(h^3\)ty-\(^c\)) of Nekhen (Hieraconpolis). I brought in its tribute to the Lord of the Two Lands; I was praised, and no occasion was found against me. I attained old age in Wawat, being a favorite of my lord. I went north with its tribute for the king, each year; I came forth thence justified; there was not found a balance against me.

STELA OF KERES

49. Keres, like his contemporary, Yuf (§§ 109 ff.), was in the service of one of the queen-mothers. The question arises here whether the "king's-mother Ahhotep," whom Keres served, was Ahhotep (II), wife of Amenhotep I, in whose tenth year her command was issued, or Ahhotep (I), mother of King Ahmose. As Ahhotep II was never the mother of a king, it must have been Ahhotep I, who had a tomb

REIGN OF THUTMOSE I CORONATION DECREEA

54. This unique document is a royal decree issued on the king's coronation day to the viceroy of Nubia, Thure, informing him of the king's accession, fixing the full titulary, the royal name to be used in offering oblations, and the royal name to be used in the oath. Thure's official residence was doubtless Elephantine, for he is charged to offer oblations to the gods of that city, and it was he who put up the records of Thutmose I's return from his Nubian campaign, at the first cataract (§§ 74 ff.). He then caused the decree to be cut on stelae and set up in Wadi Halfa, Kubbân, and probably also Elephantine.

Superscription

Titulary

56. Make my titulary as follows:
   Horus: “Mighty Bull, Beloved of Mat;”
   Favorite of the Two Goddesses: “Shining in the Serpent-diadem, Great in Strength;”
   Golden Horus: “Goodly in Years, Making Hearts Live;”
   King of Upper and Lower Egypt: “Okheperkere;”

*cThis preposition (m) introduces the title or designation of the ceremony of presenting oblations by the priest on the king's behalf.

61. In this inscription the name of the author is lost. He served under Ahmose, Amenhotep I, Thutmose I, by whom he was appointed viceroy of Kush (l. 6), Thutmose II, and Thutmose III (l. 14, note). He is supposed by Brugsch (Egypt under the Pharaohs, 135), and by Maspero (Struggle of the Nations, 230, n. 2) to be the same as Nehi, the viceroy of Kush, who also served under Thutmose III, and has also placed his inscription on the façade of the Semneh temple (§§ 651 ff.).

Now, Nehi was still in office in Thutmose III’s fifty-second year, and if he began his official career under Ahmose, he would have been over 117 years old at that time! The identity with Nehi, which was at best an assumption, is therefore impossible. Another identification is, however, certain. This unknown was appointed viceroy of Kush by Thutmose I, at whose accession he was in his prime. He is therefore the same as the viceroy, Thure, whom we find at Elephantine in Thutmose I’s first year (§ 55), being the earliest viceroy of Kush whom we know. That he survived into Thutmose III’s reign is shown by a tomb at Silsileh, where he is mentioned under Hatshepsut.

TOMBOS STELA

67. Three important facts are preserved to us in this inscription:

a Both these pronouns refer to Amon; the same thought occurs in Suti and Hor's tablet (British Museum, 826), I1. 16, 17.

b The portion preserved is hopelessly obscure.

c Here are the remains of a royal oval, which certainly contained the name of Thutmose III; in this king's second year, a viceroy of Kush is mentioned in this same temple (§ 170, 1. 2), but the name is unfortunately broken out. He is doubtless the same as our viceroy.

d Engraved on the rocks on the island of Tombos, just above the third cataract of the Nile; published by Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 5, a, and thence Piehl, Petites études égyptologiques. The Berlin squeeze (No. 284) permitted some important corrections, but the publication (Lepsius, Denkmäler) is a brilliant example of correctness in the form of the signs, as drawn by M. Weidenbach.
1. In the second year Thutmose I defeated the Nubians and conquered the country as far as the third cataract\(^a\) (cf. II. 6 and 7, and the location of the inscription);

2. He then built a fortified station for his troops at Tombos, remains of which still survive, and thus established his southern frontier at this point (cf. I. 10).\(^b\)

3. His empire extended from this point on the south to the Euphrates on the north (cf. I. 13); the Asiatic peoples are already subdued (cf. II. 3, 4, and 16), but his Asiatic campaign did not take place until after this Nubian expedition (see § 81, I. 35). Hence we must suppose, either that he had already made an Asiatic campaign of which no account has survived; or that his predecessors had already made the conquest of the country as far as Euphrates, and thus he could refer to it as in his domain. The latter is the more probable supposition.

68. Other interesting data are the fact that the oath, even in the foreign provinces, is made in the name of the king (I. 14), according to the instructions in his coronation announcement (cf. § 58); and the curious reference to the Euphrates as "that inverted water which goes down-stream in going up-stream" (cf. I. 13, note).

Un fortunately, this important inscription offers no sober narrative of the events which it commemorates, but is written in that fulsome style so often found in victorious hymns of the Pharaohs. This is a style so overloaded with far-fetched figures and unfamiliar words that it is often quite unintel-

\(^a\)An unpublished inscription of his, on the Island of Arko (Wilkinson, Thebes, 472, note) shows that he pushed some forty miles south of the third cataract.

\(^b\)This expedition left another inscription at Tangfir, about seventy-five miles above the second cataract, but we possess only a partial copy by a layman, from which it is impossible to make out much. It is dated "Year 2, first month of third season," which shows that it was made on the way out (Sethe, Untersuchungen, I, 41), about five months before the Tombos inscription.
ligible. It is at its worst in ll. 5–9, where some phrases containing only exaggerated epithets applied to the king have necessarily been left untranslated.

found no one who faced him. (He) penetrated valleys which the (royal) ancestors knew not, which the wearers of the double diadem had not seen. His southern boundary is as far as the frontier of this land, (his) northern as far as that inverted water which goes down-stream in going up-stream. The like has not happened to other kings; his name has reached as far as the circuit of heaven, it has penetrated the Two Lands as far as the nether world; the oath is taken by it (viz., his name) in all lands, because of the greatness of the fame of his majesty. They (viz., the lands) were not seen in the archives of the ancestors since the Worshipers of Horus, who gives his breath to the one that follows him, his offerings to the one that treads his way. His majesty is Horus, assuming his (Horus's) kingdom of myriads of years, subject to him are the isles of the Great Circle (§9[w]-wr, Okeanos), the entire earth is under his two feet; bodily son of Re, his beloved, Thutmose (I), living forever and ever. Amon-Re, king of gods is his father, the creator of his beauty, beloved of the gods of Thebes, who is given life, stability, satisfaction, health, joy of his heart upon the throne of Horus, leading all the living like Re, forever.

INSCRIPTIONS AT THE FIRST CATARACT

74. Some eight months after the preceding expedition passed Tangur, about seventy-five miles above the second cataract, on the way out, they had reached Assuan on the return—a fact which was recorded by Thure, the viceroy of Kush, in two inscriptions on the island of Sehel and one at Assuan.

3For the Egyptian on the Nile north was "down-stream," and south was "up-stream." It seemed very curious to him that in another country as here on the Euphrates, one went south in going down-stream; hence the anomaly of the text, which becomes clear, if we substitute "south" for "up-stream." See also IV, 407.

His majesty commanded to dig this canal, after he found it [stopped up] with stones, (so that) no [ship sailed upon it]. III. CAREER UNDER THUTMOSE I

78. Ahmose's career under Thutmose I is still one of active service in campaigning. He first sails the royal transport in the campaign against Nubia (§ 80), resulting in his appointment to the head of the naval forces. They returned in triumph with the Nubian foe hanged head downward at the bow of the royal barge.

79. It was not until after this Nubian campaign that the famous expedition to Naharin set out. Our only sources for this event are the biographies of the two El Kab Ahmoses. Thutmose III states that he set up his boundary tablet beside that of his father (§ 478), and it must have been on this campaign that this first boundary tablet was set up by Thutmose I. For it is always supposed that this campaign was the only Asiatic expedition of Thutmose I; but as the Tombos inscription (§§ 67 ff.) speaks of the conquest of Asia as far as the Euphrates, before the Asiatic campaign narrated by the two Ahmoses, we must suppose either that Thutmose I had already made a still earlier campaign in Syria; or that his predecessors, Ahmose I and Amenhotep I, had achieved greater conquests in Asia than our scanty sources for their reigns would indicate.

Campaign against Nubia

80. I sailed the King Okheperkere (Thutmose I), triumphant, when he ascended the river to Khenthennofer (Hnt-hn-njr), in order to cast... out violence in the highlands, in order to suppress the raiding\(^a\) of the hill region. I showed bravery in his presence in the bad water, in the passage\(^1\) of the ship by the bend. One appointed me chief of the sailors. His majesty was ————.\(^b\)

\(^{32}\)His majesty was furious thereat, like a panther;\(^c\) his majesty cast his first lance, which remained in the body of that fallen one.\(^d\) This was — — — — \(^{33}\)powerless before his flaming uraeus,\(^f\) made \(^{1} so\) in an instant of destruction; their people were brought off as living prisoners. \(^{34}\)His majesty sailed down-river, with all countries in his grasp, that wretched Nubian Troglodyte being hanged head downward at the [prow]\(^8\) of the ba[\(rge\)] of his majesty, and landed \(^{35}\)at Karnak.

\(^b\)The text ends here in the middle of a sentence, and proceeds around the corner of the wall with what seems to be the account of another incident in the same Nubian campaign.

\(^c\)This is precisely what is said of Thutmose II in his Nubian war (Assuan Inscription, l. 9, II, 121) when the announcement of revolt was brought to him, hence a similar incident probably should precede here.

\(^g\)The restoration is from the Amâda tablet of Amenhotep II, II, 797, l. 17, where the same phrase occurs.

\(^h\)This phrase shows clearly that the Nubian campaign took place before the Asiatic campaign. The same order is observed in the biography of Ahmose-Pen-Nekhbet (§§ 84, 85). The usual supposition that the Asiatic preceded the Nubian campaign is based on a false conclusion from the Tombos inscription (§§ 67 ff.).

BIOGRAPHY OF AHMOSE-PEN-NEKHET

III. CAREER UNDER THUTMOSE I

In this reign Ahmose-Pen-Nekhbet took part in the campaign in Nubia; and also accompanied the Asiatic campaign to Naharin, of which Ahmose, son of Ebana, furnishes a fuller account (§81). He was then richly rewarded for his valor by the king.

Campaign in Kush

I followed the King Okheperkere (Thutmose I), triumphant; I captured for him in Kush, two living prisoners, beside three living prisoners, whom I brought off in Kush, without counting them.

Campaign in Naharin

Again I served for King Okheperkere (Thutmose I), triumphant; I captured for him in the country of Naharin (N 2-h-ry-n 2), 1121 hands, one horse, and one chariot.

KARNAK OBELISKS

86. This pair stood before the pylon (IV) of Thutmose I in the great Karnak temple; the northern obelisk, which Pococke saw still standing, has since fallen. Their erection by Thutmose I is narrated by the chief architect in charge, Ineni (see § 105). Both Ineni and the standing obelisk refer to "two great obelisks," so that there can be no doubt that Thutmose I erected both. The work must have been done just before his demission of the crown—an event which left the northern obelisk still uninscribed. It is certainly very significant that it was later inscribed by Thutmose III! If he did not reach the throne until after the reigns of Thutmose II and Hatshepsut, the northern obelisk remained uninscribed for some twenty-three years at least! This is improbable, and the fact that the northern obelisk was not usurped by Thutmose II or Hatshepsut would indicate that they had no opportunity to do so, because Thutmose III, having succeeded Thutmose I for a few years, had already taken possession of it himself (see Sethe, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 36, 39 f.).

Only the middle columns of the standing obelisk are the inscriptions of Thutmose I; the side columns are later additions by Ramses IV and Ramses VI of the Twentieth Dynasty. The middle columns of the north and south sides contain only the elaborate titulary of Thutmose I; those of the east and west, his dedication, as follows:

See Breasted, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XXII, 90. The two additional bases noted in Baedeker (1902, 253) probably belong to some other king, perhaps Amenhotep III, who mentions obelisks (§ 903, l. 57); or to Thutmose III.

cuting certain works for the god; whereupon the priests reply in the words with which the preserved portion begins. The chief treasurer is then instructed to execute the said works, which, he states, he did. On their completion the king delivers an address to the priests like that of Thutmose III (§§ 571 ff.).

Address of the Priests

91. "How pleasant is this in the hearts of the people! How beautiful is this in the sight of the gods! Thou makest a monument for Osiris, thou beautifiest the First of the Westerners, the great god of the beginning, whose place Atum advanced, whom he magnified before his — — his heart, for whom kings have labored since this land was founded. As for thee, thou wast born to him; he made thee in the uprightness of his heart, to do that which he did in the earth, to restore the sanctuaries of the gods, [to] — their temples. Thou art gold, thine is the silver, Kebb has opened for thee that which is in him, Tatenen has given to thee his things. All the countries labor for thee, all the lands are under thy rule. Every costly stone is collected — in thy house; if there is a wish in thee, it must be done; it is that which thy ka desires which happens.

Royal Instructions to the Chief Treasurer

92. His majesty commanded the chief treasurer: "Conduct the work, causing to come every prepared one of his workmen, the best of his lay priests, who knows the directions and is skilful in that which he knows, who does not transgress what was commanded him, [to erect] the monument of his father [Osiris], to equip his everlasting statue. Execute the very secret things, no one seeing, no one beholding, no one knowing his body. Make for him the portable chapel-barque of silver, gold, lapis lazuli, black copper, every splendid costly stone."

Words of the Chief Treasurer

93. I executed for him the offering-tables, — (shm-) sistriums and (syt-) sistriums, necklace-rattles (mny wt), censers, a flat dish (tnyw), a great oblation there. I did not remove them. I did not discontinue them.

The Sacred Barge

94. I built the august [barge] of new cedar of the best of the terraces; its bow and its stern being of electrum, making festive the lake; to make his voyage therein at his feast of the "District of Peker" (Pky).

Statues of the Gods

95. Furthermore, [his majesty] commanded to shape (statues of) the great ennead of gods dwelling in Abydos; (each) one of them is mentioned by his name; Khnum, lord of Hirur, dwelling in Abydos; Khnum, lord of the cataract, dwelling in Abydos; Thoth, leader of the great gods, presider over Hesret; Horus, presider over Letopolis; Harendotes; Upwawet of the South, and Upwawet of the North; mysterious and splendid were their bodies. The standards thereof were of electrum, more excellent than their predecessors; more splendid were they than that which is in heaven; more secret were they than the fashion of the nether world; more — were they than the dwellers in Nun.

Words of the King

96. My majesty did these things for my father Osiris, because I loved him so much more than all gods, in order that my name might abide and my monuments endure in the house of my father, Osiris, First of the Westerners, lord of Abydos, forever and ever.

Address to the Priests

97. [I say to] you, divine fathers of this temple, priests (w b w), ritual priests, dwellers in the place of the hand, all the lay priests of the temple; offer ye to my tomb, present ye to my oblation-tablet; maintain ye the monuments of my majesty; mention ye my name; remember ye my titulary; give ye praises to my likeness; praise ye the statue of my majesty; set my name in the mouth of your servants, my memory among your children. For I am a king excellent because of what he has done; the unique in might through the (mere) mention of his name which I made in this land, till ye know it. There is no lie before you, nor exaggeration therein. I have made monuments for the gods; I have beautified their sanctuaries for the future; I have maintained their temples, I have restored that which was ruinous, I have surpassed that which was done before. I have informed the priests of their duties, I have led the ignorant to that which he did not know. I have increased the work of others, the kings who have been before me; the gods had joy in my time, their temples were in festivity.

Universal Triumph

98. I made the boundaries of Egypt (t-mry) as far as that which the sun encircles. I made strong those who were in fear; I repelled the evil from them. I made Egypt the superior of every land favorite of Amon, Son of Re, of his body, his beloved Thutmose (I), Shining like Re, beloved of Osiris, First of the Westerners; Great God, lord of Abydos, ruler of eternity; given life, stability, satisfaction, and health, while shining as King upon the Horus-throne of the living; and joy of his heart, together with his ka, like Re, forever.

BIOGRAPHY OF INENI

II. CAREER UNDER THUTMOSE I (LL. 4-14)

99. The career of Ineni, which began under Amenhotep I, continues here under Thutmose I. The king’s name and the narrative of his accession unfortunately fall in the lacunae at the ends of the lines (probably l. 4). The biography then narrates the wide dominion of the king, and the rich tribute therefrom (§101); Ineni’s advancement to superintendence of the king’s building projects (§ 102) especially the construction of the Karnak pylons of Thutmose I, and the erection before them of his two obelisks, one of which still stands (§§ 103–5); also the excavation of the king’s cliff-tomb and improvements in the necropolis of Thebes (§ 106); Ineni’s rewards in serfs and treasury dues (§ 107); and the death of the king (§ 108).

100. The Karnak hall, which Ineni constructed, is of great historic interest, as it was the first hall on entering the building, and served as the chief hypostyle, or colonnaded hall, of the temple throughout the reign of Thutmose I. It was in this hall that Thutmose III was proclaimed king by the priests of Amon (§§ 131 ff.), thus putting aside either its builder, Thutmose I, or the weakling Thutmose II, and in this hall Hatshepsut erected her two great obelisks. The description of the erection of the hall itself is unfortunately lost in the lacuna at the end of 1. 7, and 1. 8 begins with a reference to the “great pylons on its either side,” the erection of which follows. But Thutmose III informs us of the interesting fact that he replaced with stone columns the cedar columns erected by Thutmose I in this hall (§ 601). Indeed, Thutmose I himself was obliged to replace the northernmost two of his cedar columns by stone ones before the end of his reign. The fact is recorded by him on one of the new columns (see Piehl, Actes du 6ème congrès des orientalistes à Leide, 1883, IVème partie, section 3, 203–19). This inscription is unfortunately now only a series of disconnected fragments, of which little is intelligible. The dedication on one of the columns is as follows: “Thutmose I, he made (it) as his monument for his father Amon-Re, chief of the Two Lands, chief of the Two Lands, chief of the Two Lands,” a This is a hint as to the length of his reign; he must have reigned long enough for the wooden colonnade to begin to decay.

making for him an august colonnade, which adorns the Two Lands with its beauty.” (Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1311, and Rougé, Inscriptions hiérogllyphiques, 163.) On the further career of this historic hall, only begun here, see §§ 599 ff.; 803 ff.

*a The name is not among the ten gates given by Mariette, Karnak, 38.

*b Explained § 889, note.

*c Hence Petrie, depending on Mariette's plan (Karnak, 2) is under misapprehension in attributing one of these obelisks to Thutmose III (Petrie, History of Egypt, II, 67). The standing obelisk of this pair distinctly refers to the erection of "two great obelisks" (§ 88); hence Thutmose III must have appropriated the now fallen obelisk after it was up, and before the inscriptions were cut.

*g The same phrase: "no one seeing, no one hearing," occurs on the statue of Sennefer, British Museum, 48. See also § 92. This remarkable statement indicates the secrecy with which the vast rock-cut tombs of the Emperors were excavated, in order to avoid the tomb-robberies, which finally forced the removal of the royal mummies to Der el-Bahri. Another officer, Hapuseneb (§ 389, ll. 7, 8), also states that he worked on the king's "cliff-tomb" (hr⁻ᵗ), see Piehl, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 23, 59. See Breasted, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XXII, 90–94. The construction of such a tomb is described in the last twelve lines of Sinuhe; see Goodwin, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1872, 21 ff.

Ineni's Rewards

107. My praise endured in the palace, my love among the court. His majesty endowed me with peasant-serfs, and my income was from the granary of the king's estate on each day.

Death of Thutmose I

108. The king rested from life, going forth to heaven, having completed his years in gladness of heart.

Stela of Yufb

109. This official served under Queen Ahhotep, the mother of King Ahmose I, and administered her property in Edfu. He also repaired for her there a ruined tomb belonging to her ancestor, the queen Sebekemsaf, who was the wife of one of the Thirteenth Dynasty Intefs. He says nothing of any subsequent connection with the royal house under the following reign of Amenhotep I, but he was later in the service of Queen Ahmose, the favorite wife of Thutmose I, and mother of Hatshepsut. His career therefore extended through at least part of four generations of the royal house.

aThe same rare phrase in Ahmose, son of Ebana (§ 6, l. 3).

bSandstone stela, 0.62 m. high, from Edfu, now in Cairo, old No. 238; published by Bouriant, Recueil, IX, 92, 93, No. 72. I had also a carefully revised copy, kindly loaned me by Schaefer.

cSee Newberry, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XXIV, 285–89. Maspero supposed (Momies royales, 625–28) that Sebekemsaf was a deceased daughter of Ahhotep, but Newberry has clearly shown that she was an ancestor of Ahhotep.

Before the first woman are the words: "Divine consort, great king's-wife, Ahhotep, triumphant; before the second: "King's-wife, king's-sister [Sebek]emsaf —."

Before the first man is a mortuary prayer for "thy (fem.) ka," but his name is illegible; before the son: "His son, prophet of the dues (§ w), Harhotep, triumphant." Below is the following inscription:

Favor under Queen Ahhotep

113. Then this priest said: "5O ye who pass by this stela, I will tell you, and I will cause you to hear my favor with the great king's-wife, Ahhotep. BIOGRAPHY OF INENI

III. CAREER UNDER THUTMOSE II

115. According to this biography, Thutmose II succeeded directly at the death of Thutmose I; under the new reign, Ineni enjoyed the greatest favor, until the death of Thutmose II.

Succession of Thutmose II

116. The Hawk in the nest [appeared as] the 15 King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Okhepernere (\(^{38}hpr-n-R\)), Thutmose II, he became king of the Black Land and ruler of the Red Land, having taken possession of the Two Regions in triumph.

*This seems unfavorable to Sethe’s theory that Thutmose III succeeded Thutmose I and reigned for a short time before the accession of Thutmose II. But Sethe offers very cogent arguments in explanation of Ineni’s silence on this point. See Sethe, Untersuchungen, I, 19, §29, and 39, §52; and Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 36.

ASSUAN INSCRIPTIONb

119. This inscription narrates: (1) the arrival of a messenger who announces to his majesty a rebellion in Kush, and mentions a frontier fortress of the king's father, Thutmose I (see § 72) (ll. 5-9); (2) the anger of the king (ll. 9-11); (3) his dispatch of an army thither (ll. 11, 12); (4) the overthrow of Kush, and the capture of one of the chief's children with some other prisoners (ll. 12-15); (4) the complete pacification of the country (ll. 15-17). The inscription is dated on the day of the king's accession, and, according to l. 7, his father, Thutmose I, was living at the time, thus proving the coregency of the two.

Lo, his majesty is in the palace, (but) his fame is mighty; the fear of him is in the land, [his] terror in the lands of the Haunebu; the two divisions of Horus and Set are under his charge; the Nine Bows together are beneath his feet. The Asiatics come to him bearing tribute, and the Nubian Troglodytes bearing baskets. His southern boundary is as far as the Horns of the Earth (his) northern as far as the ends; the marshes of Asia are the dominion of his majesty, the arm of his messenger is not repulsed among the lands of the Fe[n]khu.

Announcement of Rebellion

121. One came to inform his majesty as follows: "The wretched Kush has begun to rebel, those who were under the dominion of the Lord of the Two Lands purpose hostility, beginning to smite him. The inhabitants of Egypt are about to bring away the cattle behind this fortress which thy father built in his campaigns, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Okheperkere (Thutmos I), living forever, in order to repulse the rebellious barbarians, the Nubian Troglodytes of Khenthennofer, for those who are there on the north of the wretched Kush with the two Nubian Troglodytes among the children of the chief of the wretched Kush who before the Lord of the Two Lands. His majesty was furious thereat, like a panther, when he heard it. Said his majesty, "I swear, as Re loves me, as my father, lord of gods, Amon, lord of Thebes, favors me, I will not let live anyone among their males among them."
The Campaign

122. Then his majesty dispatched a numerous army into Nubia \((T^2-pd\cdot t)\) on his first occasion of a campaign, in order to overthrow all those who were rebellious against his majesty or hostile to the Lord of the Two Lands. \(^a\) Then this army of his majesty arrived at wretched Kush. \(^{1,a}\) This army of his majesty overthrew those barbarians; they did [not]\(^b\) let live anyone among their males, according to all the command of his majesty, except one of those children of the chief of wretched Kush, who was taken away alive as a living prisoner with their people to\(^c\) his majesty. They were placed under the feet of the Good God; for his majesty had appeared upon his throne when the living prisoners were brought in, which this army of his majesty had captured. This land was made a subject of his majesty as formerly, the people rejoiced, the chiefs were joyful; they gave praise to the Lord of the Two Lands, they lauded this god, excellent in examples of his divinity. It came to pass on account of the fame of his majesty, because his father Amon loved him so much more than any king who has been since the beginning. IV. Career under Thutmose II

123. The conclusion of the long military career of this officer, at least in so far as he has recorded it, was a campaign of Thutmose II against the Shasu-Bedwin, of which this is our only record. It is probable that this defeat of the Shasu was only an incident in the northward march

CAMPAIGN IN SYRIA

125. The great importance of this fragment has been overlooked in all the histories, and was first noticed by Sethe. It records a campaign of Thutmose II in "Retenu, the Upper" and as far probably as Niy.

aThe reign of Thutmose II was so short that we can hardly suppose that he made more than one campaign into Asia, in addition to his Nubian campaign (§§ 119-22).

bPublished by Maspero (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 78) as "Thutmose I;" corrected as above, Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 239, n. 1.

cFragment from the Der el-Bahri temple, middle colonnade, toward the right end of the Punt reliefs (§ 272). Only the extreme tops of nine lines are preserved. Text: Mariette, Deir-el-Bahari, 7; Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 17; Sethe, Untersuchungen, I, 102 and 40. Naville, Deir-el-Bahari, III, 80. Besides this inscription, there is a short building inscription of Thutmose II in the Der el-Bahri temple, giving the usual dedication of a doorway which he erected there (Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, 69, 1).

dSethe, Untersuchungen, I, 40.

eAs the inscription accompanies a relief representing gifts, the beginning is undoubtedly to be restored according to numerous analogies, as Sethe has done, Untersuchungen, I, 40.

fIn Naville's text the end of the name is lost; hence Naville, not having collated the old publications, is unable to identify the name, but says "it seems to be that of Thothmes I" (Naville, Deir-el-Bahari, III, 17). Both Mariette and Dümichen give Thutmose II.

THE EBONY SHRINE OF DER EL-BAHRI

126. The left side-panel of an ebony shrine, unearthed by Naville in the temple of Der el-Bahri, contains the following dedication written thrice on the outside. It is in the name of Thutmose I and II, but the feminine pronoun occurs thrice, and the feminine verbal ending four times; hence Hatshepsut was certainly the author of the monument. Moreover, one of Hatshepsut’s partisans, Thutiy, states that he made just such an ebony shrine in her time (§ 375, l. 24). It was therefore later usurped by the two Thutmoses, showing that Hatshepsut reigned for a time before them.

127. The Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, lord of offering, lord of diadems, who hath taken the crown of the Two Lands, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Okhepernere, Bodily Son of Re, Thutmose (II); he made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, making for him an august shrine of ebony of the best of the highlands, that she might live and abide like Re, forever.

aNaville, Deir-el-Bahari, II, xxv-xxix.

bThe feminine occurs continually in the other inscriptions on the shrine also, as Sethe has shown (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 8, 9).

cRight-hand column has Thutmose I!

dThe column on the edge has “her!”

eNaville has not noted this feminine, which occurs in two of the three texts; he offers an impossible masculine in his translation.

f“Live” and “abide” are both feminine forms. They are ignored by Naville; Pl. XXVII is very inaccurate in reproducing the alterations evident in the original.

REIGN OF THUTMOSE III AND HATSHEPSUT

INTRODUCTION

128. The close of Thutmose I’s independent reign was followed by years of conflict and strife among the Thutmosids, in which the parties of Thutmose I (not yet deceased), Thutmose II, Thutmose III, and Hatshepsut were all pushing the claims of their respective candidates for the throne at the same time. As they all succeeded for longer or shorter periods, there is the greatest confusion of royal names on the monuments dating from this period. It seems to the author that Sethe’s explanation of the problem is the first correctly to solve the difficulty. It is the first, and thus far the only, scientific study of the problem employing and reckoning with all the materials. Sethe maintains the following propositions:

1. The instigator of the insertion of a royal name over another royal name is the king bearing the inserted name; hence

2. The systematic insertion of the names of Thutmose I and Thutmose II together, over the name of Hatshepsut on buildings erected by her together with Thutmose III, shows that Thutmose I and II reigned for a short time together, after the joint reign of Hatshepsut and Thutmose III had begun.

3. The earliest monuments of Thutmose III show that he at first reigned alone, Hatshepsut being called merely “great king’s-wife,” until she later became king coregent with him.

129. The real succession on the first fall of Thutmose I was therefore probably thus:

1. Thutmose III reigns for a time alone.
2. Hatshepsut’s party forces her upon Thutmose III as coregent.

3. About year 6 of Thutmose III, Thutmose I and II together gain the throne, for a brief coregency, but are not able to suppress Thutmose III, who, on the disappearance (probably death) of Thutmose I, regains the throne, and rules as coregent with Thutmose II, till the latter’s death, which followed shortly, about year 8 of Thutmose III’s reign (numbered from his first accession).

4. Thutmose III, with Hatshepsut now associated with him permanently, holds the throne, and they rule together at least twelve years more, till the death of the queen, when Thutmose III finally holds undivided possession. He numbered his years from his first accession, ruling at least thirty-four years more, till the year 54.

130. It will be seen that in this readjustment of the reigns practically all of the reign of Thutmose I falls before, and the bulk of Thutmose III’s reign after, the period of the family conflict; while the reign of Thutmose II falls in the midst of this period of conflict that lies between. Hence the old numbering of these three kings need not be changed, and for this reason also their inscriptions are taken up in the old order. It should be noted that a number of difficulties aFragments of a statue from the temple of Wazmose at Thebes, as published by Daressy (Annales du service, I, 99) bear the date: year 18 of Thutmose III! In view of Daressy’s numerous errors in publishing the short inscription, this is not to be accepted without examination of the original which, according to Borcharti, is stated by Daressy to be missing at Cairo. The date is probably year 18 of Thutmose I.

bIt is impossible here to discuss the large mass of evidence which favors the above conclusions. Some of it will be found in the following translations. For the rest, the student is referred to Sethe’s first treatise (Untersuchungen, I), his discussion with Naville (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 35, 36, and 37), and Breasted, A New Chapter in the Life of Thutmose III (Leipzig, 1900, or Untersuchungen, II). beset any theory of the Thutmosid struggle. The above reconstruction, in view of recent discoveries, is perhaps not to be regarded as finally demonstrated, but it at least deals with and attempts to solve the otherwise insuperable difficulties of the current traditional theory.

INSCRIPTION OF THE CORONATION; BUILDINGS AND OFFERINGS

131. This inscription contains historical material of the highest importance, which has been overlooked in all the histories. On the occasion of the completion of one of his numerous additions to the Karnak temple, sometime between the years 15 and 22 (l. 17), Thutmose III held an audience and addressed his court, informing them that he owed his crown to Amon, and that he had shown his gratitude by great buildings and sumptuous offerings (ll. 1–22). The court replied, acknowledging his divine call to the throne (ll. 22–24). All this is now recorded as an intro-

*aIn the Karnak temple of Amon, on the exterior of the south wall of the chambers south of the sanctuary; three fragments were first published in 1863 by Brugsch (Recueil de Monuments, I, Pl. XXVI), then entire by Mariette (Karnak, 14–16) in 1875, with lines numbered backward and incorrect arrangement of fragments; then more accurately, but less completely and without the fragments, by de Rouge (Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 165–74) in 1879, with lines numbered correctly; then much better than either, with correct arrangement of fragments, by Brugsch (Thesaurus, 1281–90); finally I published the coronation portion alone, based on the old publications (New Chapter, 6–9). But I have since secured much better materials, especially a careful copy of the original by my friend, Mr. Alan Gardiner, which he kindly placed at my disposal; also, through the kindness of Mr. Newberry, two large photographs made by Dr. Page May; and finally two more, which I owe to the thoughtfulness of Borchardt. These materials add much to the publications, and show that Brugsch made numerous restorations in the lacunæ, without indication that the added signs were not found on the original. The inscription is in forty-nine vertical lines, and as the upper courses of masonry have perished, the upper half of all the lines has been lost, except ll. 36–49, where fragments with the tops of these lines have survived, though with lacunæ below them.
duction to a three-fold list of the king's benefactions to the god: first, his buildings (ll. 25–36); second, his offerings of the field, and the herds, besides gifts of lands (ll. 36–41); third, temple utensils and the like (ll. 42–48). A short peroration concludes the record (ll. 48–49).

132. The introductory speech of the king begins with an account of his youth and of how he was named king. In the course of these reminiscences, the king in one phrase only (l. 3) compares himself to the youthful Horus in the Delta marshes. This very common comparison of the king with Horus in the Delta, together with the following context, was misunderstood by Brugsch as literal. This error was exposed by Maspero in 1880, and since then the inscription was left for twenty years untouched, as if its significance and content had been finally settled. This conclusion, however, is hardly to be justified if we notice that the inscription as used in all the histories now current, is translated backward!

133. Translating the king's speech in the proper direction, it becomes coherent in spite of the loss of the first half of each line, and tells a remarkable story. The king states, with protestations of his truthfulness, that he was a lad in the temple of Amon, before he had received his appointment as priest (hn-ntr, "prophet," l. 2); and that he later bIt was the following context which misled Brugsch, for he remarks that such comparisons were an "oft wiederkehrende Redensart junger Könige" (365).

occupied the priestly office of "Pillar of his Mother" (l. 3). On the occasion of a great feast the young priest was stationed by the god in the northern hypostyle (l. 3). The splendid procession of the god appeared (l. 4), with the then king (who is unfortunately not named) offering incense and conducting the ceremonies (l. 5). The procession passed around the hall where the young priest was, while the god* sought for him (l. 6). As he stopped before the young priest the latter fell down before him in adoration, but was raised up and placed before the god (l. 7).

134. Then followed the oracleb of the god, proclaiming him king; it is unfortunately lost in the lacuna, but immediately following is a reference to the "secrets in the hearts of the gods" now revealed, namely, their intention to make him king (l. 8).c At this juncture in their coronation by the gods, Hatshepsut and Amenhotep III proceed to Heliopolis to be crowned by the sun-god, as was the immemorial custom (cf. §§ 221 ff.). But the young priest, Thutmose, is more highly favored; for him the gates of heaven are opened, he flies thither to be received by the sun-god (l. 9), who then crowned him (ll. 10, 11), and fixed his four royal namesd (in addition to the fifth, Thutmose, which he already bore), in accordance with divinely conferred qualities (ll. 12-14). Thus he is installed in the kingship, and his authority established at home and abroad (ll. 15, 16), in b This oracle is referred to by the court in their reply (l. 23), and by Thutmose III himself in his inscription of year 23 at Halfa: "He (the god) hath assigned to him his inheritance as a body which he begat; he uttered an oracle concerning him (nd'f r > hr:) that his coronation might be established for him (as) king upon the Horus-throne of the living" (ll. 3, 4, from a photograph by Steindorff).

order that he may offer the wealth of the earth to Amon (ll. 16, 17), erect him buildings, and present him offerings like the present ones (ll. 17–22).

135. This remarkable narrative, under a cloak of alleged divine interposition, like that in the life of Harmhab (III, 22 ff.), records the elevation of Thutmose III from a position of humble rank in the priesthood of the Karnak temple of Amon to the throne of Egypt. This is unquestionable fact. The only difference between this elevation of Thutmose III and that of Harmhab is that Harmhab reached it after a long official career, culminating in great political power, while Thutmose III rose to it directly from his priestly rank in the temple. Any attempt to explain this is to pass distinctly from fact to theory. Suppose that Thutmose III was the oldest son of Thutmose I, born before the latter’s accession; his mother being, as we know, a lady not of royal blood, named Isis. This would explain why we find him as a priest in the Amon temple. When his father, Thutmose I, after marrying the royal princess Ahmose, gained the throne, and Hatshepsut, his daughter by her, grew up, she (Hatshepsut) was given in marriage to the king’s eldest son, still a priest in the temple. Thus was the young priest immediately invested with a future claim upon the throne—a claim which a young man of the ability which we know he possessed, would surely make effective. Queen Ahmose dies, and with her perishes Thutmose I’s right to the throne. The young priest immediately claims his right to reign, through his wife, precisely as his father, Thutmose I, had done. And now we pass from theory to fact again.

136. On the occasion of a great feast, when the god appears in procession, the future Thutmose III has all arranged so that the god shall stop before him as he stands in his place among the ranks of priests in the colonnaded hall, and shall indicate him as the future king. The plan is carried out successfully, and a superb stroke of imagination adds also the visit to the celestial realm there to be crowned and named by Re, the sun-god himself. Thus Thutmose III succeeded his father; and of his wife, the royal heiress, Hatshepsut, in whose right he ruled, we hear not a word in the whole transaction. The later buildings and gifts are also all in his own name.

137. The inscription refers to offerings of the fifteenth year; it is important to note that already at this time, between this date and the beginning of his great campaigns (year 22), Thutmose III possessed forest domains in Syria (l. 34), from which he drew cedar for his temple doors. He was also receiving captives and the children of native princes from Syria at this time. These facts indicate that he was still holding his father's conquests, at least as far north as Lebanon; and it was to suppress a widespread and persistent revolt that he began his campaigns in Syria at the close of the year 22.

\(^b\) The "Station of the King" is the place in the holy of holies where the king stood in the performance of the prescribed state ritual. One is known in Amâda, in Elephantine, in Thebes (temple of Memnon colossi), and, as above, at Karnak. (See Spiegelberg, Recueil, XX, 50, and my New Chapter, 16, 17.) I have since found another at Memphis (III, 532). The placing of Prince Thutmose at this official "Station of the King" is a public recognition of him as king.

\(^c\) The usual meaning of this phrase applied to a king is that he died, but this is clearly not its meaning here, where the king on the throne uses the phrase himself in addressing his courtiers.

\(^d\) So Brugsch, but Gardiner and photographs have only a lacuna for "beholding."

My majesty further made for him these three portals.

aMariette found six gates bearing the name of Thutmose III in Karnak; but of the three above named he could only find the last (see Mariette, Karnak, Textes, 58, and Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1311, 1312, 1315. The first was found by Legrain in 1901 (Annales du service, II, 227); the second has never been found.

bInserted by Brugsch, but no longer visible on original.

cGoddess of truth.

dThis pylon of the interior is, of course, the pylon (VI) of Thutmose III, behind the two pylons (IV and V) of his father, Thutmose I, and just in front of the holy of holies. The back of this pylon is occupied by the conclusion of the Annals and the record of feasts and offerings (§§ 541 ff.), and the front by Nubian lists.

eApparently a further reference to the three portals mentioned before (§ 154).

fSo Brugsch, but it is probably one of his tacit restorations, as there is no trace of it on the wall.

gThese statues were those of his ancestors mentioned in the list in one of the rear chambers of the Karnak temple and now in Paris (see §§ 604 f.).
A Restoration

157. ------ [for] my father Amon-Re in Karnak, by making for him a monument anew, — upon — the ancestors, by beautifying for him his temple which built for him 33 [my majesty] ------. Behold, my majesty found this (made) of brick, very ruinous, of the work of the ancestors. My majesty himself wrought with his two hands, at the feast of "Stretching-the-Cord," upon this monument 34 ------. Its beautiful name which my majesty made was: "Menkheperre-(Thutmose-III)-Adored-of-the-People-is-Great-in-the-Strength-of-Amon." Its great door was of cedar of the royal domain, wrought with [copper; the great name upon it] was of electrum. 35 ------.

Conclusion of Buildings

158. He [did] more than any king who has been since the beginning. There was none beyond his majesty in knowledge of everything in every handicraft, exacting — — — 136 — when there was an "Appearance" at — — of very great monuments, excellent in work according to the desire of his majesty concerning them, because he so much loved his father Amon [Lord of Thebes].

aIt is impossible to identify this structure, but it must have been a considerable building, as a special ceremony of laying out the plan was held. It may have been the chambers attributed to Hatshepsut, on the south wall of which the inscription stands. As this is the last building in the list, its conclusion or dedication is doubtless the occasion of the audience of the court and the introductory speech of the king.

bEgyptian order preserved, to indicate division of lines.

cIn contrast with his restoration of it in stone (which here falls into the following lacuna); cf. Thutmose III's Ptah-temple at Karnak, which bears the inscription: "His majesty found this temple of brick — he made this temple of sandstone" (Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1188).

dThis domain must have been in Syria, for cedar did not grow in Egypt. This indicates that Thutmose III maintained his authority there before the beginning of his great campaigns (see my New Chapter, 28, 29).

eSo Brugsch; evidently another tacit restoration.

fAt this point begins a part of the lost upper portions of the lines, preserved on two blocks at the top of the wall. They have been set on wrong by Mariette, and should be shifted two lines to the right. From here to the end, the average loss is from one-quarter to one-half line.

gOf the god, in procession.
New Offerings

159. The king himself commanded to make divine offerings, anew for his father Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, ——— 30 jars of —, 100 bundles of vegetables, 3 (hbn·t-) jars of wine, (ht-c) fowl, fruit, white loaves, 1 (h-) herb and 1 (n·d) of dates.

Live Offerings

160. My majesty furthermore commanded to present an offering, consisting of oxen, calves, of bulls, of gazelles.

Vegetable Garden and Lands

161. My majesty made for him a garden anew, in order to present to him vegetables and all beautiful flowers. My majesty furthermore gave lands, 800 to be fields of divine offerings; many lands in South and North.

Foreign Slaves

162. ——— supplied with people. I filled it with [captives] from the south and north countries, being children of the chiefs of Retenu and children [of the chiefs] of Khenthennofer, according as my father [Amon] commanded milk therein, each day for these vessels (m[hr]w) of silver, gold, and bronze, which my majesty made for him anew.

Another New Offering

163. Year 15, first (month) of the third season, day 27; my majesty commanded to found a great divine offering anew ——— [in the year] for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of my majesty, in order that the altars of my father Amon may be supplied for all eternity.

I made it for him out of the conceptions of my heart, d by the guidance of the god himself, 44being the work of the hands of “Him-Who-is-South-of-His-Wall.” e Never was made the like in this land since the time of the ancestors ——— beyond everything f. My majesty furthermore presented to him 2 great (ḥbn·t) jars, as the first of this great oblation, 45which my majesty founded anew, for my father Amon, lord of Thebes, ——— at all his feasts forever. My majesty furthermore [made] many chambers f wrought with electrum and black copper, g erecting an enclosure, a seat 46——.

A Harp, Etc.

165. [My majesty made] h a splendid harp wrought with silver, gold, lapis lazuli, malachite, and every splendid costly stone, 47for the praise of the beauty of his majesty i at his appearances in the names ——— gold, bronze, and every costly stone, a hall as in the beginning; (mnḥ·t) linen, made anew, supplied with all that belongs thereto; 48two chambers (yšwy) containing splendid ointment for [my father Amon] ——— [which] I [exact]ed for it.

Conclusion

166. My majesty did this for my father Amon, lord [of Thebes], as recompense for the permanence of 49the statues of my majesty which are in [this] temple ——— the limbs, as an everlasting work, to make his voyage therein, at his great feasts of the New Year.

SEMNEH TEMPLE INSCRIPTIONS

167. The temple of Semneh was rebuilt of stone from the ground up, by Thutmose III, with the pious intention of restoring the brick sanctuary of his great ancestor (at least officially so), Sesostris III, in whose fortress of Semneh the temple stands. Of Sesostris III's original temple nothing has ever been found, unless the "Second Semneh Tablet" (I, 653–60) was a part of it. This tablet Thutmose III piously set up in the wall of his new temple; and also had recorded on the new walls the old list of feasts and offerings which he found among the inscriptions of Sesostris III. More than this the old temple was sacred to Khnum and Dedun; but Thutmose III adds to them Sesostris III, now apotheosized as the hero who conquered Nubia (see I, 640 ff.). There is here a noble regard for the greatest king of the Middle Kingdom, which contrasts very strikingly with the shameful desecration of which the Nineteenth Dynasty was guilty.

Thutmose III completed his new temple early in his second year, and the original sculptures show not a trace of Queen Hatshepsut's reignancy.

Thou hast renewed his birth b a second time in a monument in memoriam. c Thou hast presented to him many offering-tables of silver and gold, bronze, and Asiatic copper. The reward thereof for thee is satisfying life, like Re, forever.

176. The dedication inscription in full is as follows: d

The Good God, Menkheperre (Thutmose III). He made (it) as his monument for his father Dedun, presider over Nubia (T\(^{2}\)-pd\(^{-}\)), and for the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Khekure (Sesostris III); making for them a temple e of fine white stone of Nubia (T\(^{2}\)-pd\(^{-}\)) although my majesty found (it) of ruinous brick; as a son does, f according to g the desire which his father desired, h who assigned to him the Two Regions, who brought him up to be Horus, lord of this land. I have set it in my divine heart that I should make his monument; that I should make him mighty according as he gave i --; that I should perpetuate his house forever, according as he has become greater than any god. He hath given to me all life, stability and satisfaction like Re, forever.

BIOGRAPHY OF NEBWAWI

177. This official enjoyed a long career, beginning early in the reign of Thutmose III and continuing under Amenhotep II. The narrative of his career was evidently distributed upon a number of monuments, e some of which are lost, so that we now possess only the story of his earliest and latest years, the former on a statue, the latter on a stela, both of which were gifts from the king.

"He (Thutmose I) recognized the auspiciousness of a coronation on New Year's Day as the beginning of the peaceful years and of the spending of myriads (of years) of very many jubilees."\(^b\)

Thutmose I therefore ostensibly selected New Year's Day as the most auspicious day for his daughter's coronation. But if we examine her obelisk inscription (§ 318, l. 8), we find that, as she actually reckoned, the beginning of her regnal year fell somewhere between the first of the sixth and the thirtieth of the twelfth month, and not on New Year's Day. Finally, this account of the coronation in the Der el-Bahri temple, is taken verbatim from the account of the coronation of Amenemhet III in the Middle Kingdom temple at Arsinoe,\(^c\) and deserves no more credence than the geographical lists of Ramses III at Medinet Habu, which have been copied from the lists of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Dynasties. It is clear that this entire coronation of Hatshepsut, like the supernatural birth, is an artificial creation, a fiction of later origin, prompted by political necessity. As such it is closely paralleled by the similar representations of Ramses II in his great Abydos inscription (III, 251–81), with the sole difference that his father is stated to have remained as coregent on the throne.

Thutmose I Summons His Daughter to be Crowned

235. 1 There saw her the majesty of her father, this Horus; how divine is her great fashioner! Her heart is glad, (for) great is her crown; she advocates her cause in truth, exalter of her royal dignity, and of that which her ka does. The living were set before her in his palace of I — I. Said his majesty to her: “Come, glorious one; I have placed (thee) before me; that thou mayest see thy administration in the palace, and the excellent deeds of thy ka's that thou mayest assume thy royal dignity, glorious in thy magic, mighty in thy strength. Thou shalt be powerful in the Two Lands; thou shalt seize the rebellious; thou shalt appear in the palace, thy forehead shall be adorned with the double diadem, resting upon the head of the heiress of Horus, whom I begat, daughter of the white crown, beloved of Buto. The diadems are given to thee by him who presides over the thrones of the gods.

Said his majesty before them: "This my daughter, Khnemet-Amon, Hatshepsut, who liveth, I have appointed; she is my successor upon my throne, she it assuredly is who shall sit upon my wonderful seat. She shall command the people in every place of the palace; she it is who shall lead you; ye shall proclaim her word, ye shall be united at her command. They proclaimed, they proclaimed the name of her majesty (fem.) as king; while her majesty (fem.) was a youth, while the great god was turning their hearts to his daughter, Makere (Hatshepsut), living forever, when they recognized that it was the father of the divine daughter, and thus they were excellent in her great soul beyond everything. As for any man who shall love her in his heart, and shall do her homage every day, he shall shine, and he shall flourish exceedingly; [but] as for any man who shall speak against the name of her majesty, the god shall determine his death immediately, even by the gods who exercise protection behind her every day. IX. CONCLUDING CEREMONIES

242. The queen is now led away by Horus, and several ceremonies follow, which are too nearly destroyed to be clear, but one of them was the "making of the circuit north of the wall," in accordance with the title of the queen used above. The coronation is now regarded as complete, for Horus says: "Thou hast established thy dignity as king, and appeared upon the Horus-throne."

SOUTHERN PYLON INSCRIPTION AT KARNAK

243. There is a distinct tendency on the part of Hatshepsut to show especial respect to her father, Thutmose I. The evident purpose of the following inscription is to make clear that her father recognizes her right to rule as king. It represents him shortly after her accession, as praying for the blessing and favor of the gods upon her reign, and the entire document is of course, the work of the queen herself.

244. The accompanying scene shows Thutmose I standing on the right before Amon, Mut, and Khonsu, the Theban triad on the left; the inscription of twenty lines occupies the space between. Over half of it is occupied with the names, titles, and fulsome epithets of Thutmose I, and the translation omits these, beginning in the middle of 1. 11, with the king’s address to the three divinities.

245. I come to thee, lord of gods; I do obeisance before thee, in return for this that thou hast put the Black and the Red Land under (the dominion of) my daughter, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Makere (Hatshepsut), who lives forever, just as thou didst put (it) under (the dominion of) my majesty . . . . . . . . 13 . . . . . THE PUNT RELIEFS

246. These are undoubtedly the most interesting series of reliefs in Egypt, and form almost our only early source of information for the land of Punt. They are as beautiful in execution as they are important in content. They record an important expedition of the queen thither, which was successfully concluded just before her ninth year ($§$ 292, l. 1).

247. The only earlier evidences of intercourse with Punt are as follows: In the Fourth Dynasty a Puntite negro appears as the slave of one of the sons of King Khufu; in the Fifth, King Sahure sent an expedition thither (I, 161, 8), aIn the Der el-Bahri temple, occupying the south half of the middle terrace (corresponding to the Birth and Youth on the north half, §§ 187 ff.). See accompanying plan (p. 105). First copied by Dümichen and published by Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 8–20, and Fleet, 1–3, and 18, a; then by Mariette, Deir - el - Bahari, 5–10. The excavations of the Egypt Exploration Fund since 1894 have for the first time uncovered all the Punt reliefs, and they have all now appeared in the superb publication of the Egypt Exploration Fund (Naville, The Temple of Deir-el-Bahari, Introductory Memoir, Pls. 7–10, and Vol. III, Pls. 69–86). Unfortunately, the old publications have not been collated and the portions since lost, added. It is therefore still necessary to collate Mariette and Dümichen; I have placed all copies in parallel columns as a basis for the present translation. The inscriptions and reliefs have suffered, not merely from the hand of time and modern vandalism, but the inscriptions and figures of Hatshepsut were hacked out by her political enemies after her fall, and the figure and neighboring inscriptions of Amon, wherever occurring, were later erased by Amenhotep IV. The faint traces remaining on the wall are difficult to read; hence the numerous errors in the old publications. The most useful treatments are Erman (Life in Ancient Egypt, 505 ff.), Maspero (Struggle of the Nations, 247–53, with very full citation of the older bibliography); and for Punt especially see Müller (Mitteilungen der Vorderasiatischen Gesellschaft, III, 42; also Orientalistische Literaturzeitung, II, 416) and Krall (Beiträge zur Geschichte der Blemyer und Nubier, "Denkschriften der Wiener Akademie," Philologisch-historische Classe, Vol. XLVI, 4te Abhandlung) to which is added an excursion on Punt).

bLepsius, Denkmäler, II, 23; see Erman, Aegypten, 670.
and King Isesi sent another, which brought back a dancing dwarf (I, 351); in the Sixth, an officer of Pepi II, named Enenkhet, was killed by the Sand-dwellers on the coast, while building a ship for the Punt voyage (I, 360), and another expedition thither under the same king was led by the assistant treasurer, Thethy (I, 361); in the Eleventh Dynasty, Henu, chief treasurer of King Senekkhere-Mentuhotep III, dispatched an expedition to Punt, which he accompanied only to the coast of the Red Sea (I, 430); in the Twelfth Dynasty, an officer of Amenemhet II, named Khentkhetwer, records his safe return from Punt (I, 604–6); and finally there was also an expedition under Sesostris II (I, 618). None of these sources contains more than the meagerest reference to the fact of the expedition.

248. The reliefs illustrating her expedition, which Hatshepsut had carved in her beautiful Der el-Bahri temple, are therefore, as stated, the first and only full source for a study of ancient Punt and the voyage thither. The expedition, like those of Henu and of Khentkhetwer, may have left the Nile at Koptos, and proceeded by caravan to Wadi Gasûs on the Red Sea, where the ships may have been built. But as no shift of cargo is mentioned, and the same ships depicted as sailing the Red Sea are afterward shown on the Nile, it is possible that the canal through the Wadi Tumilât connecting the Nile and the Red Sea had existed from the Twelfth Dynasty, having been made by one of the Sesostrises. The question of the location of Punt is too large for discussion here, but it was certainly in Africa, and probably was the Somali coast.

249. The successive scenes and the accompanying inscriptions tell the story of the expedition so clearly that no introductory outline is necessary.

250. Historically, it is important to note that Thutmose III appears only once in the Punt reliefs, and that in a subordinate position, so that, as far as this source is concerned, the queen is the author of the expedition, which she undertakes in accordance with an oracle of Amon (§ 284).

251. The arrangement of the reliefs on the wall is interesting; Punt is at the extreme south (left) on the end wall of the colonnade (see plan), and the fleet bound thither is placed by the artist with prows literally toward the south, while the returning fleet is correspondingly represented with stern toward Punt in the south and bows to the north. The successive scenes then proceed northward (to the right) and conclude on the north end-wall.

I. DEPARTURE OF THE FLEET*

Scene

252. Five vessels, two of which are still moored, the rest already under sail. The last vessel bearing over its stern the pilot’s command, “Steer to port.” A small boat lashed to a tree has above it the words: “(An offering) for the life, prosperity, and health of her majesty (fem.), to Hathor, mistress of Punt that she may bring wind,”

They begin at the left with Scene I, and the vessels face southward, as they should for the voyage out. On the return voyage, however (Scene V), they have bows to the north, that is, toward Egypt. II. RECEPTION IN PUN\textsuperscript{e}

254. The voyage has been safely made, and the expedition has landed.

\textit{Scene}\textsuperscript{f}

On the right the \textit{“king’s-messenger”} advances at the head of his soldiers. A pile of necklaces, hatchets, daggers, etc., before him, ostensibly an offering to Hathor, are for trade with the Puntites, whose chief, \textit{“Perehu,”} advances from the left to meet the Egyptians. Behind him follow his abnormally fleshy wife,\textsuperscript{g} \textit{“Eti,”} their children—two sons\textsuperscript{h} \textsuperscript{a}Cf. Erman, \textit{Aegypten}, 675. Henu in the Eleventh Dynasty made a similar offering as he dispatched his Punt expedition (I, 432; see also III, 423).

\textsuperscript{d}The queen’s name has been cut out; later Ramses II inserted his name over the old erasure; the following clause, to the word \textit{“earth,”} is also due to him; hence \textit{“his father”} and the entire loss of connection with 1. 10.

\textsuperscript{e}On the south wall, lowest two rows; Mariette, \textit{Deir-el-Bahari}, 5; Dümichen, \textit{Historische Inschriften}, II, 8 and 10; Naville, \textit{Deir-el-Bahari}, III, 69. As Naville has unfortunately not added the now lacking portions contained in the old publications, it is necessary here to employ them also.

and a daughter—a—and three Puntites driving the "ass which bears his wife." Behind these is a landscape in Punt, showing among the trees the houses of the Puntites set on poles (Pfahlbauten). Below the whole is a line of water, showing that the scene is near the sea or the haven in which the Egyptians have landed. The inscriptions are these:

Over the Egyptians

255. [The arrival] of the king's-messenger in God's-Land, together with the army which is behind him, before the chiefs of Punt; dispatched with every good thing from the court, L. P. H., for Hathor, mistress of Punt; for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of her majesty.

Before the Puntites

256. The coming of the chiefs of Punt, doing obeisance, with bowed head, to receive this army of the king; they give praise to the lord of gods, Amon-Re ————.

Over the Puntites

257. They say, as they pray for peace: "Why have ye come thither unto this land, which the people know not? Did ye come down upon the ways of heaven, or did ye sail upon the waters, upon the sea of God's-Land? Have ye trodden (the way of) Re? Lo, as for the King of Egypt, is there no way to his majesty, that we may live by the breath which he gives?

Before the Leader of the Puntites

aOnly in the old publications.   bEgyptian "by."

cHere evidently the name of the queen originally stood; it was then erased by Thutmose III, and in the time of Ramses II the blank was mistaken for an erasure of Amon's name by Amenhotep IV, which name was then inserted. Traces of the old inscription are visible at the end.

dLit., "Why have ye reached this?"

eThe people of Egypt (rmt). See the oracle, § 285, l. 10.

fThe text has "Re" as the direct object of "trodde," something must be supplied.

Over the Ass

The ass which bears his wife.

III. THE TRAFFIC\textsuperscript{b}

\textit{Scene}\textsuperscript{c}

\textit{In the Tent}

260. Pitching the tent of the king’s-messenger and his army, in the myrrh-terraces of Punt on the side\textsuperscript{d} of the sea, in order to receive the chiefs of this country. There are offered to them bread, beer, wine, meat, fruit, everything found in Egypt, according to that which was commanded in the court, L. P. H.

\textit{Before the Egyptian}

261. Reception of the tribute of the chief of Punt, by the king’s-messenger.

\textit{Before the Puntites}

262. The coming of\textsuperscript{e} the chief of Punt bearing tribute at the side of \textsuperscript{f}the sea before the king’s-[messenger]\textsuperscript{f} ————.

\textsuperscript{d}The Egyptian has a dual, "\textit{on the two sides of,}" from which Dümichen (\textit{Geschichte}, 120) would locate Punt on both sides of the Red Sea, but this dual is a common idiom, meaning no more than a singular. See § 262, where it is absurd to suppose that the chief of Punt is bringing his gifts "\textit{at both sides of the sea!}" Dümichen’s translation "\textit{von beiden Seiten}" is, moreover, impossible, for the text has "\textit{upon}," not "\textit{von}.

\textsuperscript{f}These words extend over the Puntites; it is uncertain how much has been lost at the end.
IV. LOADING THE VESSELS

Scene

263. Two vessels heavily laden with myrrh trees, sacks of myrrh, ivory, woods, apes; on shore and ascending the gang-planks, men carrying sacks and trees.

Over the Vessels

265. The loading of the ships very heavily with marvels of the country of Punt; all goodly fragrant woods of God's-Land, heaps of myrrh-resin, with fresh myrrh trees, with ebony and pure ivory, with green gold of Emu, (c mw), with cinnamon wood, khesyt wood, with ihmut-incense, sonter-incense, eye-cosmetic, with apes, monkeys, dogs, and with skins of the southern panther, with natives and their children. V. THE RETURN VOYAGE

Scene

266. Three vessels under full sail, with the cargo enumerated in § 265.

Inscriptions over the Vessel

Sailing, arriving in peace, journeying to Thebes\textsuperscript{d} with joy of heart, by the army of the Lord of the Two Lands, with the chiefs of this country\textsuperscript{e} behind them. VI. PRESENTATION OF THE TRIBUTE TO THE QUEEN BY THE CHIEFS OF PUNT, IREM, AND NEMYEW

Scene

267. At the right the cartouches of the queen, badly defaced; approaching from the left, two lines of men with gifts, led by four lines of kneeling chiefs, being the chiefs of Punt (two lower lines), \textit{“the chiefs of Irem”}\textsuperscript{i} (upper middle line) and \textit{“the chiefs of Nemyew”}\textsuperscript{i} (Nm\textsuperscript{y}w, upper line, negroes). VII. THE QUEEN OFFERS THE GIFTS TO AMON

Scene

270. The queen stands at the left; before her the products of Punt and Irem (lower row), brought back by the expedition, mingled with those of Nubia (upper row).

Before the Queen

By the Trees c

272. Thirty-one fresh myrrh trees, brought as marvels of Punt for the majesty of this god, Amon, lord of Thebes; never was seen the like since the beginning.

VIII. WEIGHING AND MEASURING THE OFFERINGS h

g Over a gap among these offerings is the inscription recording the Asiatic campaign of Thutmose II (§ 125).

h On the right of the preceding scene in two rows; Mariette, Deir-el-Bahari, 8; Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 18, 19; Naville, Deir-el-Bahari, III, 79, 81, 82.

i At the extreme right in five columns, behind the figure of Thutmose III offering incense (Naville, Deir-el-Bahari, III, 82).
274. The king himself, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Makere (Hatshepsut). Taking the measure (hk’t) of the electrum, laying the hand on the r—1 of the heaps, first instance of doing the good things. Measuring of the fresh myrrh unto Amon, lord of Thebes, lord of heaven, the first of the harvest 2— — — of the marvels of the countries of Punt. The lord of Khmunu (Thoth) records them in writing; Sefkhet counts the numbers. Her majesty (fem.) herself, is acting with her two hands, the best of myrrh is upon all her limbs, her fragrance is divine dew, her odor is mingled with Punt, her skin is gilded with electrum, shining as do the stars in the midst of the festival-hall, before the whole land. There is rejoicing by all the people; they give praise to the lord of gods, they laud Makere (Hatshepsut) in her divine qualities, because of the greatness of the marvels which have happened for her. Never did the like happen under any gods who were before, since the beginning. May she be given life, like Re, forever.

Measuring Scene

275. Two huge heaps of myrrh are being scooped into measures by four men; a fifth, whose figure has been care­fully erased, is Hatshepsut’s favorite, “the scribe and steward, Thutiy” (§§ 369 ff.), who is keeping record of the measure for the queen; while the god Thoth at the extreme right performs a similar office for Amon.

Over the Myrrh Heaps

276. Heaps of myrrh in great quantities.

Over the Men Measuring

277. Measuring the fresh myrrh, in great quantities, for Amon, lord of Thebes; marvels of the countries of Punt, treasures of God’s-Land, for the sake of the life, prosperity and health ———.g

"He (Thutmose I) recognized the auspiciousness of a coronation on a New Year's Day as the beginning of the peaceful years and of the spending of myriads (of years) of very many jubilees."b

Thutmose I therefore ostensibly selected New Year's Day as the most auspicious day for his daughter's coronation. But if we examine her obelisk inscription (§ 318, l. 8), we find that, as she actually reckoned, the beginning of her regnal year fell somewhere between the first of the sixth and the thirtieth of the twelfth month, and not on New Year's Day. Finally, this account of the coronation in the Der el-Bahri temple, is taken verbatim from the account of the coronation of Amenemhet III in the Middle Kingdom temple at Arsinoe, c and deserves no more credence than the geographical lists of Ramses III at Medinet Habu, which have been copied from the lists of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Dynasties. It is clear that this entire coronation of Hatshepsut, like the supernatural birth, is an artificial creation, a fiction of later origin, prompted by political necessity. As such it is closely paralleled by the similar representations of Ramses II in his great Abydos inscription (III, 251–81), with the sole difference that his father is stated to have remained as coregent on the throne.

Inscriptions

They furnish the only surviving account of such a coronation, in the presence of the superseded monarch and the court.

Thutmose I Summons His Daughter to be Crowned

235. "There saw her the majesty of her father, this Horus; how divine is her great fashioner! Her heart is glad, (for) great is her crown; she advocates her cause in truth, exalter of her royal dignity, and of that which her ka does. The living were set before her in his palace of ... Said his majesty to her: "Come, glorious one; I have placed (thee) before me; that thou mayest see thy administration in the palace, and the excellent deeds of thy ka's that thou mayest assume thy royal dignity, glorious in thy magic, mighty in thy strength. Thou shalt be powerful in the Two Lands; thou shalt seize the rebellious; thou shalt appear in the palace, thy forehead shall be adorned with the double diadem, resting upon the head of the heiress of Horus, whom I begat, daughter of the white crown, beloved of Buto. The diadems are given to thee by him who presides over the thrones of the gods.

Thutmose I Summons the Court

236. My majesty caused that there be brought to him the dignitaries of the king, the nobles, the companions, the officers of the court, and the chief of the people, that they may do homage, to set the majesty of the daughter of this Horus before him in his palace of I. There was a sitting of the king himself, in the audience-hall of the right of the court, while these people prostrated themselves in the court.

Thutmose I's Address to the Court

237. Said his majesty before them: "This my daughter, Khnemet-Amon, Hatshepsut, who liveth, I have appointed; she is my successor upon my throne, she it assuredly is who shall sit upon my wonderful seat. She shall command the people in every place of the palace; she it is who shall lead you; ye shall proclaim her word, ye shall be united at her command. He who shall do her homage shall live, he who shall speak evil in blasphemy of her majesty shall die. Whosoever proclaims with unanimity the name of her majesty (fem.), shall enter immediately into the royal chamber, just as it was done by the name of this Horus (viz., by my name). his daughter, the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Makere (Hatshepsut) living forever. They kissed the earth at his feet, when the royal word fell among them; they praised all the gods for the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Okheperkere (Thutmose I), living forever. They went forth, their mouths rejoiced, they published his proclamation [to] them. All the people of all the dwellings of the court heard; they came, their mouths rejoicing, they proclaimed (it) beyond everything, dwelling on dwelling therein was announcing (it) in his name; soldiers on soldiers they leaped and they danced for the double joy of their hearts. They proclaimed, they proclaimed the name of her majesty (fern.) as king; while her majesty (fern.) was a youth, while the great god was turning their hearts to his daughter, Makere (Hatshepsut), living forever, when they recognized that it was the father of the divine daughter, and thus they were excellent in her great soul beyond everything. As for any man who shall love her in his heart, and shall do her homage every day, he shall shine, and he shall flourish exceedingly; [but] as for any man who shall speak against the name of her majesty, the god shall determine his death immediately, even by the gods who exercise protection behind her every day. The majesty of this her father hath published this, all the people have united upon the name of this his daughter for king. While her majesty was a youth, the heart of his majesty inclined to [her] exceedingly.

Proclamation of the Queen's Names

239. His majesty commanded that the ritual priests be brought to proclaim her great names that belonged to the assumption of the dignities of her royal crown and for insertion in (every) work and every seal of the Favorite of the Two Goddesses, who makes the circuit north of the wall, who clothes all the gods of the Favorite of the Two Goddesses. He has recognized the auspiciousness of the coronation on New Year's Day as the beginning of the peaceful years and of the spending of myriads (of years) of very many jubilees. They proclaimed her royal names, for the god caused that it should be in their hearts to make her names according to the form with which he had made them before:

Her great name, Horus: [Wosretkew ($wrs\cdot t\cdot k\cdot w$)], forever;
Her great name, Favorite of the Two Goddesses: "Fresh in Years," good goddess, mistress of offering;
Her great name, Golden Horus: "Divine of diadems;"
Her great name of King of Upper and Lower Egypt: "Makere, who liveth forever."
It is her real name which the god made beforehand.

VIII. SECOND PURIFICATION

240. After the public coronation, further ceremonies of the gods follow.

First Scene

The queen is led away by the god Kheseti.

Inscriptions

The first (day) of the first season, New Year's Day, the first of the peaceful years of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Favorite of the Two Goddesses, who makes the circuit north of the wall, the Feast of Shed . . . . . .

The leading away to enter the "Great House" (rby1) the "Pillar of his Mother," of the "Great House."
Second Scene

241. The god Kheseti, standing at the right, holds over the queen, who stands at the left, a vessel in the form of the sign of life.

Inscription

Over the queen, merely her name with epitheta; over the god, the following:

I have purified thee with these waters of all satisfying life, all stability, all health, all joy of heart, to celebrate very many jubilees, like Re, forever.

IX. CONCLUDING CEREMONIES

242. The queen is now led away by Horus, and several ceremonies follow, which are too nearly destroyed to be clear, but one of them was the "making of the circuit north of the wall," in accordance with the title of the queen used above. The coronation is now regarded as complete, for Horus says: "Thou hast established thy dignity as king, and appeared upon the Horus-throne."

SOUTHERN PYLON INSCRIPTION AT KARNAK

243. There is a distinct tendency on the part of Hatshepsut to show especial respect to her father, Thutmose I. The evident purpose of the following inscription is to make clear that her father recognizes her right to rule as king. It represents him shortly after her accession, as praying for the blessing and favor of the gods upon her reign, and the entire document is of course, the work of the queen herself.

The inscription is very mutilated, and some omissions have been necessary.

244. The accompanying scene shows Thutmose I standing on the right before Amon, Mut, and Khonsu, the Theban triad on the left; the inscription of twenty lines occupies the space between. Over half of it is occupied with the names, titles, and fulsome epithets of Thutmose I, and the translation omits these, beginning in the middle of line 11, with the king's address to the three divinities.

245. 11. . . . . . . . I come to thee, lord of gods; I do obeisance before thee, in return for this that thou hast put under (the dominion of) my daughter, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Makere (Hatshepsut), who lives forever, just as thou didst put (it) under (the dominion of) my majesty . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 13. . . . . THE PUNT RELIEFS⁴

246. These are undoubtedly the most interesting series of reliefs in Egypt, and form almost our only early source of information for the land of Punt. They are as beautiful in execution as they are important in content. They record an important expedition of the queen thither, which was successfully concluded just before her ninth year (§ 292, l. 1).

247. The only earlier evidences of intercourse with Punt are as follows: In the Fourth Dynasty a Puntite negro appears as the slave of one of the sons of King Khufu;⁵ in the Fifth, King Sahure sent an expedition thither (I, 161, 8), ⁴In the Der el-Bahri temple, occupying the south half of the middle terrace (corresponding to the Birth and Youth on the north half, §§ 187 ff.). See accompanying plan (p. 105). First copied by Dümichen and published by Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 8-20, and Fleet, 1-3, and 18, a; then by Mariette, Deir- el- Bahari, 5-10. The excavations of the Egypt Exploration Fund since 1894 have for the first time uncovered all the Punt reliefs, and they have all now appeared in the superb publication of the Egypt Exploration Fund (Naville, The Temple of Deir-el-Baharit Introductory Memoir, Pis. 7-10, and Vol. III, Pis. 69-86). Unfortunately, the old publications have not been collated and the portions since lost, added. It is therefore still necessary to collate Mariette and Dümichen; I have placed all copies in parallel columns as a basis for the present translation. The inscriptions and reliefs have suffered, not merely from the hand of time and modern vandalism, but the inscriptions and figures of Hatshepsut were hacked out by her political enemies after her fall, and the figure and neighboring inscriptions of Amon, wherever occurring, were later erased by Amenhotep IV. The faint traces remaining on the wall are difficult to read; hence the numerous errors in the old publications. The most useful treatments are Erman (Life in Ancient Egypt, 505 ff.), Maspero (Struggle of the Nations, 247-53, with very full citation of the older bibliography); and for Punt especially see Müller (Mittheilungen der Vorderasiatischen Gesellschaft, III, 42; also Orientalistische Litteraturzeitung, II, 416) and Krall (Beiträge zur Geschichte der Blemyer und Nubier, "Denkschriften der Wiener Akademie," Philologisch-historische Classe, Vol. XLVI, 4te Abhandlung) to which is added an excursus on Punt).

⁵Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 23; see Erman, Aegypten, 670.
and King Isesi sent another, which brought back a dancing dwarf (I, 351); in the Sixth, an officer of Pepi II, named Enenkhet, was killed by the Sand-dwellers on the coast, while building a ship for the Punt voyage (I, 360), and another expedition thither under the same king was led by the assistant treasurer, Thethy (I, 361); in the Eleventh Dynasty, Henu, chief treasurer of King Senekhkere-Mentuhotep III, dispatched an expedition to Punt, which he accompanied only to the coast of the Red Sea (I, 430); in the Twelfth Dynasty, an officer of Amenemhet II, named Khentkhetwer, records his safe return from Punt (I, 604-6); and finally there was also an expedition under Sesostris II (I, 618). None of these sources contains more than the meagerest reference to the fact of the expedition.

248. The reliefs illustrating her expedition, which Hatshepsut had carved in her beautiful Der el-Bahri temple, are therefore, as stated, the first and only full source for a study of ancient Punt and the voyage thither. The expedition, like those of Henu and of Khentkhetwer, may have left the Nile at Koptos, and proceeded by caravan to Wadi Gasûs on the Red Sea, where the ships may have been built. But as no shift of cargo is mentioned, and the same ships depicted as sailing the Red Sea are afterward shown on the Nile, it is possible that the canal through the Wadi Tumilât connecting the Nile and the Red Sea had existed from the Twelfth Dynasty, having been made by one of the Sesostrises. The question of the location of Punt is too large for discision here, but it was certainly in Africa, and probably was the Somali coast.

249. The successive scenes and the accompanying inscriptions tell the story of the expedition so clearly that no introductory outline is necessary.

250. Historically, it is important to note that Thutmose III appears only once in the Punt reliefs, and that in a subordinate position, so that, as far as this source is concerned, the queen is the author of the expedition, which she undertakes in accordance with an oracle of Amon (§ 284).

251. The arrangement of the reliefs on the wall is interesting; Punt is at the extreme south (left) on the end wall of the colonnade (see plan), and the fleet bound thither is placed by the artist with prows literally toward the south, while the returning fleet is correspondingly represented with stern toward Punt in the south and bows to the north. The successive scenes then proceed northward (to the right) and conclude on the north end-wall.

I. DEPARTURE OF THE FLEET*

Scene

252. Five vessels, two of which are still moored, the rest already under sail. The last vessel bearing over its stern the pilot’s command, “Steer to port.” A small boat lashed to a tree has above it the words: “(An offering) for the life, prosperity, and health of her majesty (fem.), to Hathor, mistress of Punt [———] that she may bring wind,”

They begin at the left with Scene I, and the vessels face southward, as they should for the voyage out. On the return voyage, however (Scene V), they have bows to the north, that is, toward Egypt. Inscriptions

253. Sailing in the sea, b beginning the goodly way toward God's-Land, journeying in peace to the land of Punt, by the army of the Lord of the Two Lands, according to the command of the Lord of Gods, Amon, lord of Thebes, presider over Karnak, in order to bring for him the marvels of every country, because he so much loves the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, [Makere (Hatshepsut)], for his father Amon-Re, lord of heaven, lord of earth, more than the other kings who have been in this land forever.

II. RECEPTION IN PUNTE

254. The voyage has been safely made, and the expedition has landed.

Scene f

On the right the "king's-messenger" advances at the head of his soldiers. A pile of necklaces, hatchets, daggers, etc., before him, ostensibly an offering to Hathor, are for trade with the Puntites, whose chief, "Perehu," advances from the left to meet the Egyptians. Behind him follow his abnormally fleshy wife, "Eti," their children — two sons g aCf. Erman, Aegypten, 675. Henu in the Eleventh Dynasty made a similar offering as he dispatched his Punt expedition (I, 432; see also III, 423).

bLit., "taking the head of the way."

cSee Oracle, § 285.

dThe queen's name has been cut out; later Ramses II inserted his name over the old erasure; the following clause, to the word "earth," is also due to him; hence "his father" and the entire loss of connection with 1. 10.

eOn the south wall, lowest two rows; Mariette, Deir-el-Bahari, 5; Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 8 and 10; Naville, Deir-el-Bahari, III, 69. As Naville has unfortunately not added the now lacking portions contained in the old publications, it is necessary here to employ them also.

and a daughter—a—and three Puntites driving the "ass which bears his wife." Behind these is a landscape in Punt, showing among the trees the houses of the Puntites set on poles (Pfahlbauten). Below the whole is a line of water, showing that the scene is near the sea or the haven in which the Egyptians have landed. The inscriptions are these:

255. [The arrival] of the king's-messenger in God's-Land, together with the army which is behind him, before the chiefs of Punt; dispatched with every good thing from the court, L. P. H., for Hathor, mistress of Punt; for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of her majesty.

Before the Puntites

256. The coming of the chiefs of Punt, doing obeisance, with bowed head, to receive this army of the king; they give praise to the lord of gods, Amon-Re.

Over the Puntites

257. They say, as they pray for peace: "Why have ye come thither unto this land, which the people know not? Did ye come down upon the ways of heaven, or did ye sail upon the waters, upon the sea of God's-Land? Have ye trodden (the way of) Re? Lo, as for the King of Egypt, is there no way to his majesty, that we may live by the breath which he gives?"

258. The chief of Punt, Perehu (P 3-r3-hw).

*aOnly in the old publications.
bEgyptian "by."

cHere evidently the name of the queen originally stood; it was then erased by Thutmose III, and in the time of Ramses II the blank was mistaken for an erasure of Amon's name by Amenhotep IV, which name was then inserted. Traces of the old inscription are visible at the end.

dLit., "Why have ye reached this?"

eThe people of Egypt (rmt). See the oracle, § 285, l. 10.

fThe text has "Re" as the direct object of "trodden," something must be supplied.
Before His Wife

The ass which bears his wife.

III. THE TRAFFIC\(^b\)

Scene\(^c\)

In the Tent

260. Pitching the tent of the king's-messenger and his army, in the myrrh-terraces of Punt on the side\(^d\) of the sea, in order to receive the chiefs of this country. There are offered to them bread, beer, wine, meat, fruit, everything found in Egypt, according to that which was commanded in the court, L. P. H.

Before the Egyptian

261. Reception of the tribute of the chief of Punt, by the king's-messenger.

Before the Puntites

262. The coming of\(^e\) the chief of Punt bearing tribute at the side of \(^f\) the sea before the king’s-[messenger]\(^f\)

\(^d\)The Egyptian has a dual, "on the two sides of," from which Dümichen (Geschichte, 120) would locate Punt on both sides of the Red Sea, but this dual is a common idiom, meaning no more than a singular. See § 262, where it is absurd to suppose that the chief of Punt is bringing his gifts "at both sides of the sea!" Dümichen's translation "von beiden Seiten" is, moreover, impossible, for the text has "upon," not "von."

\(^f\)These words extend over the Puntites; it is uncertain how much has been lost at the end.
IV. LOADING THE VESSELS

Scene

263. Two vessels heavily laden with myrrh trees, sacks of myrrh, ivory, woods, apes; on shore and ascending the gang-planks, men carrying sacks and trees.

Over Men with Trees on Shore

264. (Look to) your feet, ye people! Behold! the load is very heavy!

Prosperity be with us, for the sake of the myrrh tree in the midst of God's-Land, for the house of Amon; there is the place where it shall be made to grow for Makere, in his temple, according to command.

Over the Vessels

265. The loading of the ships very heavily with marvels of the country of Punt; all goodly fragrant woods of God's-Land, heaps of myrrh-resin, with fresh myrrh trees, with ebony and pure ivory, with green gold of Emu, (c mw), with cinnamon wood, khesyt wood, with ihmut-incense, sonter-incense, eye-cosmetic, with apes, monkeys, dogs, and with skins of the southern panther, with natives and their children. Taking the measure (hk.t) of the electrum, laying the hand on the 1 of the heaps, first instance of doing the good things. Measuring of the fresh myrrh unto Amon, lord of Thebes, lord of heaven, the first of the harvest of the marvels of the countries of Punt. The lord of Khmunu (Thoth) records them in writing; Sefkhet counts the numbers. Her majesty (fem.) herself, is acting with her two hands, the best of myrrh is upon all her limbs, her fragrance is divine dew, her odor is mingled with Punt, her skin is gilded with electrum, 4shining as do the stars in the midst of the festival-hall, before the whole land. There is rejoicing by all the people; they give praise to the lord of gods, 5they laud Makere (Hatshepsut) in her divine qualities, because of the greatness of the marvels which have happened for her. Never did the like happen under any gods who were before, since the beginning. May she be given life, like Re, forever.

Measuring Scene

275. Two huge heaps of myrrh are being scooped into measures by four men; a fifth, whose figure has been carefully erased, is Hatshepsut's favorite, "the scribe and steward, Thutiy" (§§ 369 ff.), who is keeping record of the measure for the queen; while the god Thoth at the extreme right performs a similar office for Amon.

276. Heaps of myrrh in great quantities.

Over the Men Measuring

277. Measuring the fresh myrrh, in great quantities, for Amon, lord of Thebes; marvels of the countries of Punt, treasures of God's-Land, for the sake of the life, prosperity and health.

IX. FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE SUCCESS OF THE EXPEDITION BEFORE AMON

Scene

283. The queen stands at the extreme left, staff in hand, before Amon, enthroned at the extreme right. Behind the queen is the sacred barque of Amon borne by priests, before which Thutmose III offers "of the best of fresh myrrh."

Inscription

284. This long text in vertical lines between the queen and Amon falls into two parts. The first contains the titulary and encomium of the queen (ll. 1-4), followed by the oracle of Amon (ll. 4-6), in accordance with which the expedition was made. It is here repeated, in order to enforce the statement that all that was commanded has been done (l. 6). To this favorable statement Amon replies with praise (ll. 7-9), and reverts to a description of former times when the "myrrh-terraces" were not visited by Egyptians, but their products were obtained only through intermediaries (ll. 10-12). The success of future expeditions is promised, and his guidance of the expedition just successfully carried out is mentioned. The inscription closes with further praise of the queen, which gradually becomes too mutilated for translation.

aAt the extreme right; Mariette, Deir-el-Bahari, 10; Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 20; through some confusion in Dümichen's papers his l. 10 and l. 11 have exchanged places, and Mariette has the same mistake! It is clear, therefore, that Mariette's text is drawn from Dümichen, an astonishing number of errors having crept in during the process. From these sources Sethe constructed a skilfully emended text (Sethe, Untersuchungen, I, 103, 104), which is sustained in almost all cases by the last and best text (Naville, Deir-el-Bahari, III, 84), which is undoubtedly very nearly correct. The entire inscription has been carefully hacked away; hence the numerous errors in the old publications, a collation of which demonstrates the superiority of Naville's texts.

Tiles and Encomium of Hatshepsut

285. aHorus: Mighty in Ka's; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Fresh in Years; Golden Horus: Divine in Diadems; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Makere (Hatshepsut), — of Amon, whom he loves, who is upon his throne, for whom he has made to flourish the inheritance of the Two Lands, the kingdom of the South and North, bto whom he hath given that which the sun encompasses, that which Keb and Nut inclose. She hath no enemies among the Southerns, she hath no foes among the Northerns; the heavens and every country which the god hath created, they all labor for her. They come to her with fearful heart, their chiefs with bowed head, their gifts upon their back. They present to her their children that there may be cgiven to them the breath of life, because of the greatness of the fame of her father, Amon, who hath set all lands beneath her sandals.

The Oracle

The king himself, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Makere (Hatshepsut). The majesty of the court made supplication at the steps of the lord of [gods]; a command was heard from the great throne, an oracle of the god himself, that the ways to Punt should be searched out, that the highways to the Myrrh-terraces should be penetrated: d"I will lead the army on water and on land, to bring marvels from God's-Land for this god, for the fashioner of her beauty." It was done, according to all that the majesty of this revered god commanded, according to the desire of her majesty (fem.), in order that she might be given life, stability, and satisfaction, like Re, forever.

X. FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE SUCCESS OF THE EXPEDITION TO THE COURT

Scene

289. The queen is enthroned at the left in a splendid kiosk, and before her are the figures of three noblemen (see § 348). All the figures have been hacked out.

a Feminine! The t of the second feminine singular suffix is visible under the scourge; the t of “majesty” (hn't) should be over the scourge, as in l. 18.

b The verb is s'rud'k with nominal subject (sdm'k form, Sethe, Verbum, II, § 434).

c Read: rm't pw. That this is the proper emendation is shown by the Semneh inscription of Thutmose III (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 52, b, line before goddess).

d The remainder, consisting of four short and two long lines, is very fragmentary and contains only the conventional promises of the gods.

e On the south side of the causeway which ascends through the center of the middle terrace. The date and a few random words were published by Dümichen (Fleet of an Egyptian Queen, 18, a); but the first complete text by Naville (Recueil, 18, Pl. III, corrections, ibid., 19, 212, 213; much better, Naville, Deir-el-Bahari, III, 85, 86.)
Inscriptions

290. The texts with the noblemen are as follows:

With the First Man

Behold, it was commanded, as follows: "They shall give the court,® L. P. H., to the hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, chief treasurer, Nehsi, b to dispatch the army [to] Punt."

With the Two Other Men

Over both are the words: "The king's-dignitaries, the companions of the court, L. P. H.," and over the man in the middle: "Steward of Amon, Senmut," the well-known favorite of the queen (see §§ 345 ff.). The third man bears no individual inscription. c All three figures have been hacked out by political enemies after the triumph of Thutmose III.

The Long Inscription d

291. This is perhaps the most interesting inscription in the Punt series. It furnishes the date ("year 9") when the expedition had already safely returned. The queen, having publicly exhibited the results of the expedition (VIII), and having announced its success to Amon himself (IX), now holds ceremonious court, to announce in a speech from the a The meaning of the phrase is not clear, but it seems as if "court" were here used for "decree of the court."

b This man has therefore been identified as "the king's-messenger" (§§ 260, 261) who commanded the Punt expedition. But this conclusion does not follow; the word "dispatch" (sby) does not mean to conduct, as we may see in the exactly parallel case of Henu (I, 427 ff.; especially §432, ll. 13, 14), who conducted the expedition only to the sea and then dispatched (sby) it to Punt, returning then, not from Punt, but merely "from the sea." Hence we have no evidence that Nehsi did more than accompany the expedition to the sea, and the "king's-messenger" is probably a different man.

c He is supposed by Spiegelberg (Recueil, 22, 115-25) to be Thutiy (§§ 369 ff.).

d In 22 columns before the queen; it has all been more or less hacked out, the last six lines (excluding one phrase) and the upper fourth of lines 6-16 completely so.
throne to her nobles the unprecedented success of the expedition. She glorifies herself as having made a Punt for Amon in Egypt\(^a\) (ll. 14 and 16), and exhorts them to maintain in the future the increased offerings which she has established (ll. 8 and 15). This last was apparently the practical purpose of the session.

INSCRIPTION OF THE SPEOS ARTEMIDOS

296. In this remarkable document the energetic queen has left a record of her systematic restorations in the temples which had been desolated by the barbarities of the Hyksos, and had remained so down to her reign. There is a reference to the Punt expedition (l. 13), so that the inscription dates from some time after the ninth year. Its references to the Hyksos coincide remarkably with the account of their treatment of the temples as recorded by Manetho. The Hyksos are called "Asiatics" (Ἄριωτα), and their city is "Avaris (אַבָּרִיס) of the Northland." The building of the cliff-temple of Pakht, on whose front the inscription is cut, is mentioned only incidentally with the queen's other pious works. The language is often unusual, and the whole is so badly preserved that there are necessarily many omissions in the translation.

Lit., "under it," referring to the trees.

bLl. 17-21 are so completely hacked out that not a sign can be read.

cCut high up on the front of the cliff-temple of Pakht, excavated at Benihasan by Hatshepsut and Thutmose III, called Speos Artemidos by the Greeks, Stabl Antar by the modern natives. The inscription was discovered and published by Golénischeff (Recueil, VI, 20; see also ibid., III, 1-7). It is in a bad state of preservation, and the copy is evidently a hurried one.
The Queen's Power

297. He hath established her great name like the heavens. She hath made excellent the records of her might over the Red Land of the Goddess of the Mountain as far as the rising set his flame behind the two hill-countries.

Restoration of the Temples

Restoration of the Temple of Cusae

300. The temple of the Mistress of Cusae which had begun to fall to ruin, the ground had swallowed up its august sanctuary, so that the children played upon its house; the serpent, it caused no fear; the poor counted the breaches in the wall; no processions marched. I equipped it; I made it festive, I gave houses to the lord whom Amon has made to appear as king himself upon the throne of Horus.

Restoration of the Desolation of the Hyksos

Hear ye, all persons! ye people as many as ye are! I have done this according to the design of my heart. a Lit., "the lofty of two feathers," a title of Min, a figure of whom was therefore on the door. The "shadow," which was often put on the door, has the determinative of Min's figure; hence there is no doubt that it is such a "shadow," which is meant here.

b This rare phrase (m $k^y$ $y^b$ $y$) occurs also on the statue of Senmut (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 25, i, correct nb to k), and in a clear passage over vases "of costly stone, which his majesty made according to the design (k $t$) of his own heart" (Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1187) among offerings of Thutmose III. See Breasted, Proceedings of the Biblical Society of Archaeology, May, 1901, 237.

c Stp-h ty-c, lit., "begun;" cf. use of stp in beginning a journey.

d The same term is applied by Thutmose III to his foes in Lebanon (II, 548). W. M. Müller (Mittheilungen der Vorderasiatischen Gesellschaft, 1898, Heft 3, p. 7), would recognize in this term (3m $m^w$ or $m^w$) a class or nationality different from the Hyksos; but if the word means simply strangers (Coptic "shemmo"), as Müller thinks, it indicates no distinction at all, for the Hyksos were also "strangers." The construction of the whole context shows that it is one of those poetic passages common in such inscriptions, the parallelism is evident:

"I have restored that which was ruins,
I have raised up that which was unfinished,
Since the Asiatics were in the midst of Avaris of the Northland,
And the barbarians were in the midst of them."

"Them" is therefore parallel with the "Northland," and does not refer to the "Asiatics." That a land or a part of it should be resumed by a plural pronoun is very common in the inscriptions of Egypt.

\textbf{THE KARNAK OBELEISKS}\textsuperscript{f}

304. Of the queen’s four obelisks at Karnak, one pair has entirely disappeared from the temple; their position is unknown, and only the summit of one is now preserved in Cairo (§ 320 and Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 30, Pl. II); of the surviving pair one still stands behind the great Nineteenth Dynasty hypostyle hall, and the summit of its fallen companion lies near by.

The standing survivor is now the largest obelisk in Egypt, being 97\textsuperscript{\frac{1}{2}} feet high.\textsuperscript{s} The history of these two important monuments can be followed for a long period. Work upon them was begun on the first of Mechir (sixth month) in the queen's fifteenth year² by Senmut, the queen's favorite (§§ 345 ff.). The quarry work of clearing the enormous shafts from the granite at Assuan was completed on the last of Mesore (twelfth month) of the queen's sixteenth year, seven months after beginning. Transported to Thebes on a huge barge, drawn by a large fleet of galleys (see §§ 322 ff.), they were destined for erection, not before a temple, as is customary, but in the historic hall built between his two Karnak pylons,² by the queen's father, Thutmose I, the hall where, fifteen years before, her father had been supplanted by Thutmose III. Whether this fact influenced her in the following procedure is, of course, purely conjectural, but in order to introduce her obelisks into this hall, she broke away the southern wall, removed all the cedar columns of Thutmose I on the southern side and four on the northern, of course unroofing all but the northern quarter of the hall,³ and thus totally dismantling the place, which could no longer be employed for religious ceremonial.

305. A relief⁴ on a few fragmentary blocks at Karnak shows the queen presenting two obelisks to Amon of Karnak; these may be the pair with which we are now dealing. Before the queen is the following inscription:

The king himself;⁵ erection of two great obelisks for her (sic!) father, Amon-Re, in front of the august colonnade, wrought with exceedingly plentiful electrum. Their height pierces to heaven, illuminating the Two Lands like the sun-disk. Never was done the like since the beginning; that she might be given life.

³Thutmose III restored the northern half (§§ 600-2), and Amenhotep II, the southern (§§ 803 ff.).
⁴Found by Legrain, and reported by Naville at the Congress at Rome (see Revue égyptologique, IX, 108-10); partially published by Naville (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 53) and fully by Naville and Legrain (Annales du Musée Guimet, XXX, Pl. XII, A).
⁵The relation of this phrase to the following is difficult.
306. On erection, the obelisks were supplied with the usual single, central column of inscription on each face. Later, side columns were added. Some time before the completion of the side-column inscriptions, the obelisks were surrounded by masonry up to the fifth scene from the top, and the inscriptions never were finished (see Sethe, Untersuchungen, I, 54, 55). During the extermination of the Amon cult by Amenhotep IV, he had the name of Amon erased from them, and two or three generations afterward the name of the dishonored god was recut by Seti I.

307. The inscriptions on the shaft will be clear from the translation below; those of the base are of unusual interest. They furnish the date of the obelisks, viz., the end of the fifteenth and the beginning of the sixteenth year of the queen’s reign. Their erection celebrates “the first occurrence” of the queen’s jubilee, a feast marking the thirtieth anniversary of the sovereign’s appointment as crown prince. This would place the queen’s appointment fifteen years before her accession to the throne.

They have united her with life, satisfaction, and joy of heart before the living; Son of Re, Khnemet-Amon, Hatshepsut, beloved of Amon-Re, king of gods, who is given life, like Re, forever.

II. SHAFT INSCRIPTIONS; SIDE COLUMNS

312. These represent thirty-two oblation scenes, eight on each side of the shaft; of each eight (beginning at the top), the second and seventh represent Thutmose III, the fourth Thutmose I, and the rest the queen, all offering to Amon, with the exception that on the west and south sides Seti I has cut out the queen's name in the fifth scene and inserted the inscription: "Son of Re, Seti-Merneptah, who restored the monument of his father Amon-Re, lord of heaven."b

Queen's Dedication

315. She made (them) as her monument for her father, Amon, lord of Thebes, presider over Karnak, making for him two great obelisks of enduring granite of the South, (their) summit[s] being of electrum of the best of every country, which are seen on both sides of the river. Their rays flood the Two Lands when the sun rises between them, as he dawns in the horizon of heaven.

Speech of the Queen

316. I have done this from a loving heart for my father Amon; I have entered upon his project of the first occurrence, I was wise by his excellent spirit, I did not forget anything of that which he exacted. My majesty (fem.) knoweth that he is divine. I did (it) under his command, he it was who led me; I conceived not any works without his doing, he it was who gave the directions. I slept not because of his temple, I erred not from that which he commanded, my heart was... wise before my father, I entered upon the affairs of his heart, I did not turn my back upon the city of the All-Lord, but turned to it the face. I know that Karnak is the horizon on earth, the August Ascent of the beginning, the sacred eye of the All-Lord, the place of his heart, which wears his beauty, and encompasses those who follow him."

Origin of the Obelisks

317. The king himself, he saith, "I set (it) before the people, who shall be two æons, those whose heart shall consider this monument, and that which I have made for my father, and who shall speak and who shall look to the future. I sat in the palace, I remembered him who fashioned me, my heart led me to make for him two obelisks of electrum, whose points mingled with heaven, in the august colonnade between the two great pylons of the king, the mighty bull, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Okheperkere (Thutmose I), the deceased Horus. Now, my heart took — — — — — — words."

Oath to Posterity

318. "O ye people, who shall see my monument after years, those who shall speak of that which I have made, beware (lest) ye say, 'I know not, I know not why this was made, (and) a mountain fashioned entirely from gold like anything which happens.' I swear as Re

Conclusion

"Let not him who shall hear this say it is a lie which I have said, but say, 'How like her it is! who is truthful in the sight of her father!' The god knew it in me, Amon, lord of Thebes; he caused that I should reign over the Black and the Red Land as a requital therefor. I have no enemy in any land, all countries are my subjects, he has made my boundary to the extremities of heaven, the circuit of the sun has labored for me, which he has given to the one who is with him (for) he knew that I would offer it to him. I am his daughter of a truth, who glorifies him, — that which he exacted; my is with my father; life, stability, and satisfaction, upon the Horus-throne of all the living, like Re, forever.

320. The shaft of the fallen obelisk, of which only the uppermost section has survived, bears only fragments of the queen's titulary, which has been altered into that of Thutmose III. The base, however, carried an interesting inscription, of which the following fragments are still visible:

321. f excellent —, beloved of his majesty. He hath made my kingdom, the Black Land, and the Red Lands are united under my feet. My southern boundary is as far as the lands of Punt, and ——; my eastern boundary is as far as the marshes of Asia, and the Asiatics are in my grasp; my western boundary is as far as the mountain of Manu, and I rule ——; [my northern boundary is as far as —], and my fame is among the Sand-dwellers altogether.

fThe amount of loss at the beginning of each line varies from one-fifth to one-eighth of the total length of the line, increasing gradually from beginning to end.

hIt looks as if the scribe had here confused the northern and eastern boundaries.
The queen had reliefs representing the transportation and dedication of two obelisks carved on the wall of the lower colonnade; and, as in the Punt reliefs, the vessels of the transport are actually represented with bows to the north, as they should be in sailing from Assuan; while farther northward is the dedication in Thebes. The identity of these obelisks is uncertain; Wilkinson says that he saw the bases of two obelisks at the termination of the long avenue of sphinxes leading to the temple door, and one would think that the representation in Der el-Bahri would concern the obelisks of that temple. But Naville's excavations on the spot failed to turn up the bases seen by Wilkinson; and the transport inscriptions speak of landing on the east side (§329). This last datum would indicate Karnak as the destination of the transports, and in this case it is impossible to say which of the queen's two pairs in Karnak is meant (§§ 304 ff.).

I. TRANSPORT

Scene

323. A large tow-boat with the obelisks lying trussed upon it, is being towed by three rows of oared barges, nine in a row; each row headed by a pilot-boat. The tow-boat is accompanied by an escort of three boats, in which religious ceremonies are being performed.

Inscriptions

324. The following is the long text in the upper row; it contains:

a) Titulary and encomium of the queen (ll. 1–?).

b) The command to gather material and build the vessel needed in the transport (three lines).

c) The command to muster men and troops for the transport (four lines).

d) The transport (ten lines).

*a It is difficult to understand how Naville can maintain that the queen erected only two obelisks at Karnak (Zeitschrifi für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 52), when three obelisk-summits of hers are still in existence.

*b The whole scene is very fragmentary, and as it was put together from squeezes, there is no doubt that some blocks are put together in questionable places.

*c Only one can be seen, but the inscription refers to two.

*d Of these three rows of barges the lowest is still in situ (cf. Mariette, Deir-el-Bahari, 11, Dümichen, Fleet of an Egyptian Queen, IV); below this in one long row are the marines (on the right) and the offering scene (on the left), with priests and officials approaching (§§ 333–35).

*e The texts are badly mutilated.

bHalf a line is lost.

cAn uncertain number of lines is now lacking, and numbering is impossible from this point. Lines are separated by |, the second half of each line being gone.

dThe wanting end of the line is not long enough for the dimensions of the boat; but we find Ineni (§ 105) giving the size of the boat on which he moved the Karnak obelisks of Thutmose I. His boat was 206.6 feet long and 68.86 feet wide for an obelisk about 75 feet (Murray) high; hence the boat of the queen (if these are the large Karnak pair) on the same proportion would have been about 268½ feet long and 89½ feet wide. The proportion between width and length is 1 to 3. See Egypt Exploration Fund Archaeological Report, 1895-96, 9, 10.

eConfer the muster of men for the el-Bersheh colossus (I, 697 ff.).

fReferring to the embarkation of the obelisks at the granite quarries of Assuan. They were dragged on board the barges on sledges. The sledge is still under the obelisk on the barge—a fact which has been overlooked in the explanation of the reliefs (ibid.).

II. RECEPTION IN THEBES

_Scene\(^f\)_

330. On shore appear the marines and the recruits (on the right), mustered to unload the obelisks. At the opposite end (the left) is an offering scene in celebration of the arrival of the obelisks, with priests and officials approaching.

\(^a\)This may also be “the bow-rope,” but the determinative is broken off.

\(^b\)Possibly: “[Her name is established], in this monument, and fixed; which she has given to thee.” Cf. east side, middle line (§311).

\(^c\)The lowermost boat; the other two bore similar inscriptions, but they have now perished.

\(^e\)Over the three escort-boats in the lower right-hand corner is a fragment of text, mentioning the bow and stern cables (as in Ineni, l. 17, §341) and “sailing from Elephantine to ———.” Other fragments of interest are: over the three men in the bow of the obelisk-barge, three names: “Steward of the King’s-Wife, the scribe, Tetem-Re (Tty-m-R\(^c\)); overseer of the granary, Minmose (Mn-ms); count of Thinis (Tny), Sitepeh (S\(^2\)-tp-yh).” The last person, Sitepeh, is known on a tablet of Abydos, where he appears with the same titles; cf. Mariette, _Catalogue général d’Abydos_, 393. These names are not original, but are cut over others now illegible. The original names are very likely to have been those of Senmut, the queen’s favorite, in charge of the obelisks (§§345 ff.), and the other two partisans of the queen, Thutiy and Nehsi, who already appear in Der el-Bahri (§§275, 289), and have been erased in the Punt reliefs.

\(^f\)In one long row immediately below the transport scene; published by Mariette, _Deir-el-Bahari_, 11; Dümichen, _Historische Inschriften_, II, 21, and _Fleet of an Egyptian Queen_, 4, 7, 8; see also Sethe, _Untersuchungen_, I, 104, 105, where both the texts are combined.
Inscriptions

331. They record the rejoicing of the troops mustered from the North, South, and Upper Nubia, to assist in the work of the obelisks. It is important to note that their acclamations also mention Thutmose III, but after the queen.

Rejoicing of Marines and Recruits

332. The rejoicing by the royal marines of the ship of the king —. They say, "Hark the acclamation! Heaven is in joy, the earth hath rejoicing. [Amon] increased the years of his daughter who maketh his monuments, upon the Horus-throne of the living, like Re, forever.

The acclamation by the recruits of the South and North, the young men of Thebes, the youths of Khenthennofer (Hnt-hn-nfr), for the sake of the life, prosperity and health of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt ————, (and) for the sake of the life, prosperity and health of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre (Thutmose III), who giveth life; that their heart may be glad, like Re, forever."

With the Offering

333. An offering for thy ka, O lord of gods, that thou mayest make healthy ———— at this (feast) of "Myriad-of-Years" of her who liveth forever.

See the mustering at Elephantine, to load the obelisks (§ 327).

Cartouche cut out; undoubtedly that of the queen.

Over the troops marching toward the left.

The same phrase occurs on the Berlin block (No. 1636, Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 17, a; Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 21; and Fleet of an Egyptian Queen, IV, top row). Its inscriptions are as follows: (over the forward ship) "Landing at ‘The West’ with joy of heart, the whole land is in rejoicing at this beautiful feast of this god; they acclaim, they give praise, they celebrate the king, the Lord of the Two Lands." The titles have been inserted in place of the queen’s name. Then follows: "Rejoicing by the marines of the ship of the king, Okhepernere (Thutmose II), ‘Star-of-the-Two-Lands;’ they say: ‘This beautiful feast of — (queen’s cartouche cut out) whereon Amon appears, increasing the years of his son, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre (Thutmose III), upon the Horus-throne of the living, like Re, forever.’" It is possible that all this belongs to the same feast, at the landing of the obelisks. The block was found on the upper terrace.

Over the soldiers marching toward the right.

Cartouche of the queen cut out.

A name is cut out, undoubtedly that of Hatshepsut.

Name of royal jubilee or feast.

Words of two other priests in the same place are too mutilated for translation.
Rejoicing of the Priests

334. That which the priests of Karnak say: “O king, beautiful of monuments —. As she is, so they are for eternity.”

Rejoicing of the Court

335. The companions, the dignitaries, the officials, the soldiers of the whole land, say: “Happy is thy heart — thy heart; this thy desire, it has come to pass.”

III. DEDICATION OF THE OBELISKS

336. “On the corresponding wall of the northeast side two obelisks are dedicated to Amunre, by the monarch who founded this building and who erected the great obelisks of Karnak; but from the following translation of the little that remains of their hieroglyphics, it is evident they differ widely from those of the great temple of Diospolis and will probably have stood on the pedestals of the dromos above alluded to. The inscription after the name of Pharaoh Amunneitgori continues: “— She has made (this) her work for her father Amunre, lord of the regions, (and) erected to him two fine obelisks of granite ....... she did this (who is) the giver of life, like the sun.”

a Should be feminine to suit the context.

b Not yet published, and probably partially lost since seen by Wilkinson. Hence I can only offer Wilkinson’s remarks (Thebes and General View, 92).

c The right-hand end of the colonnade on the northeast (practically north) side of the ascent to the next terrace.

d The Karnak temple. So good an observer as Wilkinson is to be trusted in a remark like this; there must have been some striking difference in the inscription, distinguishing it from those of Hatshepsut’s standing obelisk at Karnak; it is therefore improbable that these obelisk reliefs refer to the said Karnak pair.

e The obelisk-pedestals which he saw before the temple portal.

f This is Khnemet-Amon, Hatshepsut; Wilkinson adds the following note: “I am uncertain as to the precise reading of this name, but cannot adopt the Amen of M. Champollion. I suppose her to have been a queen.” This was written seventy-five years ago.

g This old translation is without a flaw, except in the last sentence, which should be “that she may be given life, etc.,” and even this change, with the exception of the “final” construction, was suspected by Wilkinson (p. 94, n. 1).
ROCK INSCRIPTION IN WADI MAGHARA

337. Above is a bas-relief in which Thutmose III worships Hathor, and Hatshepsut worships Soped; over this is the inscription: "Year 16 under the majesty of," which is to be connected with the names in the relief. Below is a much-mutilated inscription of three short lines:

[Came]b the king's[-messenger] at the head of his army, to traverse the [inaccessiblec] valley[s,] [to please] Horus who is in the palace, by bringing that which exists to his majesty ————,e living again, revered.

BUILDING INSCRIPTION OF WESTERN THEBES

338. Above is a relief showing Hatshepsut worshiping before Amon-Re, with Thutmose III standing behind her. An inscription of five lines below records repairs in the fortress of the necropolis by Hatshepsut. Hence the goddess of western Thebes, Khaftet-hir-nebes, stands behind Thutmose.

339. ¹Live the Horus: Wosretkew; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Fresh in Years; Golden Horus: Divine of Diadems, Ruler of South and North; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Makere; ²Son of Re, of his body, his beloved Khnemet-Amon, Hatshepsut. 1—It was 'built' of beautiful stone of Ayan (c nw). It was according to the ancient plan; never was done the like since the beginning. Her majesty (fem.) did this, because she loved her father Amon so much more than all gods, in order that she might be given life, like Re, forever.

IV. CAREER UNDER THUTMOSE III AND HATSHEPSUT

340. After outliving three kings, Ineni himself dies under the joint reign of Thutmose III and Hatshepsut. His account of their accession upon the death of Thutmose II unfortunately does not refer to Thutmose III by name, although there can be no doubt that he is meant by "his son" (l. 16). The position of Hatshepsut is described in such a way as to give the impression that she is really the ruling power, and "his son" merely a figurehead.

Accession of Thutmose III and Hatshepsut

341. His son stood in his place as king of the Two Lands, having become ruler upon the throne of the one who begat him. 17His sister the Divine Consort, Hatshepsut, settled the affairs of the Two Lands by reason of her plans. Egypt was made to labor with bowed head for

This rare phrase occurs in the Annals on the eve before the battle of Megiddo: "the affairs (mhr-w) of the chiefs were settled (yr-tw)." (§ 429, l. 2). The "mhr-w of the Two Lands" is also found in Rekhmire's tomb (Newberry, Pl. VII, l. 13) applied to Thutmose III. Ramses II also "made the mhr of the land" (Blessing of Ptah, III, 411, l. 31).}\]

INSCRIPTIONS OF SENMUT

345. Senmut was the most powerful noble among the group of influential state officials who supported Hatshepsut. He was her architect in Karnak, Luxor, Der el-Bahri, and Hermonthis; and in Karnak and Der el-Bahri statues of him have been found. In the latter temple, also, he appears in an adoration scene on the wall of the Southern Speos, with the inscription: "Giving praise to Hathor, for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of Makere (Hatshepsut), by the steward of Amon, Senmut." This is a remarkable evidence of his power. Among his works in Karnak he erected the queen's great obelisks (§§ 304 ff.), the largest now in Egypt, and went personally to the granite quarries at Assuan to secure the two vast blocks, leaving on the rocks a record of his visit there (§§ 359 ff.).

346. He was prominent in the Punt expedition; being overseer of the storehouse of Amon, he would naturally have much to do with the products of that expedition, which were

b The base of a black granite statue, as yet unpublished (Naville, Deir-el-Bahari, "Preliminary Report," 19).

c Benson and Gourlay, The Temple of Mut in Asher, 310. The building inscriptions or dedications of this temple have not survived. The fragmentary end of such an inscription was seen by Brugsch (Recueil de monuments, 69, 6), which is as follows: "-------- of fine white (lime)stone of Ayan; its splendid seat of the first time, which (former) kings knew not --------." Still another, where the name of Thutmose II has been inserted over that of the queen, is preserved toward the end: "-------- making for him a great temple of myriads of years (named) 'House-of-Amon-Most-Splendid;' of fine white limestone of Ayan, in his seat, etc.,” Sethe, Untersuchungen, I, 93.

§ 348. Judging from the titles on the Karnak statue (§§ 349 ff.), he controlled many of the functions of the vizier himself, and all but held that office. There is no doubt that the queen's remarkable career as king in opposition to Thutmose III was in some measure due to him, and in great measure to the coterie of legitimists, of which he was the most powerful member. It is only on this supposition that we can explain the fact that both he and they were exposed to the same persecution suffered by their queen. On Senmut's Berlin statue, on his Karnak statue, in his tomb,\(^a\) on his tombstone,\(^b\) and in the Punt reliefs, his name is everywhere chiseled out. In the Punt relief his entire figure, and those of his two companions, Nehsi and Thutiy (\(?\) see § 289), likewise ardent supporters of the queen, are chiseled out. The same persistent persecution is evident in the tomb of Thutiy (§§ 369 ff.), who was hardly second in power to Senmut; in that of Senmen,\(^c\) Senmut's brother; in that of an unknown man,\(^c\) next to the tomb of Senmut; and in that of a "chief steward"\(^d\) of the queen at Silsileh. name of the owner is chiseled out, and this common persecution is quite sufficient to show that these men formed the queen’s party of legitimists opposed to Thutmose III, who has therefore treated their monuments and their memory as he did hers.a

1. INSCRIPTIONS ON THE KARNAK STATUEb

349. This statue was presented to Senmut by Hatshepsut and Thutmose III (§350) as a token of honor, for the special purpose of being set up in the temple of Mut at Karnak. The inscriptions contain chiefly his many titles, and epithets of honor, showing clearly that he was little, if any, below the vizier himself in power.

bDiscovered by Misses Benson and Gourlay in 1896 in the Temple of Mut at Karnak (M. 852). The inscriptions are published by Benson and Gourlay in The Temple of Mut in Asher (London, 1899), 299–309. I had also an excellent copy made for the Berlin Lexicon by Borchardt, the corrections and additions from this copy are inserted without remark in the translation below.

His Duties as Architect

“I was 14— of truth, not showing partiality; with whose injunctions the Lord of the Two Lands was satisfied; attached to Nekhen, prophet of Mat, Senmut.”

“I was one who entered in [love], 15 and came forth in favor, making glad the heart of the king every day, the companion, and master of the palace, Senmut.”

III. INSCRIPTIONS ON THE BERLIN STATUE

363. This statue, like the Karnak statue, was a royal gift (§ 350, l. 2). It represents Senmut in a squatting posture, holding between his knees the daughter and heir of the queen, the infant princess Nefrure, whom he reared. The inscriptions contain a most important reference to the death of Thutmose II (§ 368, ll. 7, 8).

INSCRIPTION OF THUTIY

369. Thutiy was a loyal supporter of Queen Hatshepsut (see § 348), and hence throughout his tomb his name and that of the queen have been entirely erased. He was the successor of Ineni (§§ 340 ff.) as "overseer of the double gold- and silver-houses," and this brought him many monumental enterprises, for which he furnished the metals, at the same time having the construction of a large number of such monuments under his charge. He was probably the builder of the queen's ebony shrine (l. 24 and § 126 ff.); he furnished the metal-work on two great obelisks (l. 28), superintended many other monuments, and was charged with the measuring of the splendid returns in precious metal from the queen's southern expeditions, particularly the famous one to Punt (ll. 33–38). That Thutiy is strictly veracious in this statement is most strikingly shown by the scene of weighing and measuring in the Punt reliefs (§ 275), where the traces of his figure, busily engaged in taking his notes, is identifiable by means of his name and title, "Scribe and

Now, I was the one who counted them, because I was so excellent in his heart; my praise was — with him; — — — — me more than his suite \textsuperscript{35}— my \textsuperscript{1}integrity of heart for him. He recognized me, as one doing that which is spoken, concealing my speech concerning the affairs of his palace. He appointed me to be leader of the palace, knowing that I was instructed in work. \textsuperscript{36} —— the double silver-house; every splendid costly stone in the temple of Amon in Karnak, filled with his tribute to their roof. The like has not happened since the time of the ancestors. His majesty commanded to make \textsuperscript{37—d} of electrum of the best of the highlands, in the midst of the festival-hall; measured\textsuperscript{e} by the heket for Amon in the presence of the whole land.

Bahari}, III, 80).

\textsuperscript{b}The line has been cut wrong, was filled with stucco, and cut again; the stucco has fallen out, revealing the old mistakes and producing confusion.

\textsuperscript{c}This is the offering scene in the Punt reliefs (Naville, \textit{Deir-el-Bahari}, III, 77), in which the inscription (§ 289) agrees strikingly with this. The official offering is \textit{"for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of the king,"} and is usually conducted by someone else (see § 57); hence the impersonal passive here.

\textsuperscript{d}It is possible that the word \textit{"balance"} should be supplied here, for the inscription over the balance in the scene of the weighing in the Punt reliefs (§ 280, although it does not mention electrum particularly) would indicate that the balance had been made especially for the purpose. In Papyrus Harris (IV, 256) the balance is also of electrum. Spiegelberg conjectures \textit{"eine grosse Haufe,"} but it is only the myrrh which appears in \textit{"heaps"} in the Punt reliefs.

\textsuperscript{e}One of the frequent pseudo-participles in building and similar inscriptions, referring back to nouns mentioned long before; it refers here to the tribute in l. 33.
Statement thereof: of electrum $88\frac{1}{4}$ heket,\textsuperscript{a} making: $38- (x+) 57\frac{1}{4}$ deben; for the life, prosperity, and health of the king [Makere (Hatshepsut), who is given] life forever.

Conclusion

378. I received (snw-) loaves from that which comes forth before Amon, lord of Karnak. vised the construction of other royal monuments. His works are recorded on his Louvre statue, but the inscriptions are in a sadly fragmentary state, and the name of Thutmose II has been inserted over that of Hatshepsut, as the feminine endings show.\footnote{I found the cartouches also sunken, showing the effect of cutting out the first name.}

Hapuseneb was the most powerful man in Hatshepsut’s party, being not merely vizier, but also "High Priest of Amon, and chief of the prophets of South and North,"\footnote{Louvre statue.} besides a number of positions which he held in the treasury. He thus united in his person all the power of the administrative government with that of the strong sacerdotal party.

The formation of the priesthood of the whole land into a coherent organization, with a single individual at its head, appears here for the first time. This new and great organization was thus through Hapuseneb enlisted on the side of Hatshepsut.

391. This document, containing no less than 223 lines, is the longest and most important historical inscription in Egypt, and forms the most complete account of the military achievements of any Egyptian king. It demonstrates the injustice of the criticism that the Egyptians were incapable of giving a clear and succinct account of a military campaign, for it shows plainly that at least in this reign careful, systematic records were made and preserved in the royal archives, giving a detailed account of each invasion in language indicating the strategic operations of the army in each of its many campaigns.

392. The existence of such records is indicated in the account of the first campaign (l. II, 12, § 433):

Now, all that his majesty did to this city, to that wretched foe and his wretched army, was recorded each day by its (the day's) name under the title of: —— recorded upon a roll of leather in the temple of Amon to this day.

Elsewhere the king also speaks of "recording for the future" (§ 568, l. 22). We even know the official, named Thaneni, who kept these records. His tomb, on the west shore at Thebes, first noticed by Champollion, contains, among others, biographical inscriptions in which he states:

14 autres lignes que M. Lepsius a publiées imparfaitement (Lepsius, Denkmäler III, 31, a; ...).

Mariette then appends the following table summarizing the above:

Mariette gives 233 as the total, but refers to 223 (loc. cit., 32).

They are in a very bad state of preservation, the upper courses having mostly disappeared, and with them the upper parts of the vertical lines of the inscription. The translation begins at the extreme northeast corner on the north wall and proceeds to the left.

The complete text of the Annals has never been edited together; being scattered through several publications (see conspectus below) none of which is accurate except Bissing. These texts must be supplemented and corrected by fragments in Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 154–58; Young, Hieroglyphics, 41–44; Description de l'Egypte, Pl. 38 (No. 26, 27, 29); Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, Pl. 56, Nos. 5–7; de Rouge, Revue archéologique, N. S., II, Pl. 16; Griffith, Corrections from an early copy (about 1825) by James Burton, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, XXXIII, 125.

"I followed the Good God, Sovereign of Truth, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre (Thutmose III); I beheld the victories of the king which he won in every country. He brought the chiefs of Zahi as living prisoners to Egypt; he captured all their cities; he cut down their groves; no country remained — — —. I recorded the victories which he won in every land, putting (them) into writing according to the facts.

There is no doubt that we have here the author of some of the ephemerides referred to in the Annals.a

393. The character of these ephemerides space will not permit us to discuss here, further than to note that in the account of the first, or Megiddo, campaign (§§ 408 ff.) we have a somewhat full excerpt from them, in which the strategic details, like the line of march, the dispositions in battle, etc., are given with such clearness that it is possible to draw a plan of the field of battle. Unfortunately, this fulness in excerpting is confined to the Megiddo campaign, and even toward its end the abbreviation and omissionb already begin. That the excerpts are much abbreviated is distinctly stated in the account of the seventh expedition (l. 13, § 472), with reference to the supplies furnished to the "harbors:"

aA comparison of the phrases and words used by Thaneni, above, with those of the accounts in the Annals makes this certain. This is evident even in the English. It is a question whether Thaneni could have been the author of the earliest campaign records, for he is still in active service under Thutmose IV (see Recueil, IV, 130), so that, supposing he began with the Megiddo campaign at twenty-five years of age, he would have been over eighty years old at the accession of Thutmose IV, under whom he completed a census of the people and live-stock in all Egypt (see Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 487), which is recorded as follows: "Muster ing of the whole land before his majesty, making an inspection of everybody, knowing the soldiers, priests, 'royal serfs', and all the craftsmen of the whole land, all the cattle, fowl, and small cattle, by the military scribe, beloved of his lord, Thaneni." On his wide powers, see also the inscription in Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, 66, 2, a. On his tomb, see Bouriant, Recueil, XI, 156-59; Champollion, ibid., I, 484-87, 831, 832; further inscriptions also by Piehl, Inscriptions, I, CVII, D-CVIII, E.

bThe omission in the later campaigns, evident anyway, may be clearly seen by a comparison with the narrative of Amenemhab (§§ 574 ff.).
"They (the supplies) remain in the daily register of the palace, the statement of them not being given in this inscription, in order not to multiply words."

394. The excerpting scribe, being a priest, is more interested in the booty than the strategic operations which led to its capture, because this booty was largely given to his temples; hence he pares down his extracts to the meagerest statement of the king's whereabouts, adding a tolerably full summary of the booty and tribute. Indeed, it may be said that, although the king did command that this permanent record of his campaigns should be made on the temple wall, yet the entire record which we call the Annals serves as little more than an introduction to the list of feasts and offerings (§§ 541 ff.) by which the Annals are continued. They merely explain whence came the magnificent offerings to Amon. It is therefore frequently impossible to distinguish between a serious campaign like that of Megiddo and mere expeditions for inspection.

395. The conquests recorded in the Annals involved the most serious military projects undertaken by any Egyptian king—projects so successfully carried out by Thutmose III that he is to be regarded as unquestionably the greatest military leader of ancient Egypt. Thutmose I had been able to march to the Euphrates without meeting any serious aThis register of daily supplies is, of course, not the ephemerides of Thaneni; but the fact of excerption is equally clear, nevertheless. This interesting statement finds a parallel in the tomb of Hui, where it is said concerning his praises: "One mentions them (one) time (each) by its name, (for) they are too numerous to put them in writing" (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 117 = Denkmäler, Text, III, 302).

bThere is on this same wall a relief showing Thutmose III presenting to Amon a magnificent array of costly gifts in gold and silver. Many of the objects mentioned in the Annals may be seen here (Champollion, Monuments, IV, 316, 317; and Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1185 ff.). The whole scene is of the greatest interest (§§ 543 ff.); it also contains the two obelisks of § 624.

coalition of his foes, so far as we know. The results of his conquest had not been permanent; that is, they could not endure indefinitely without further campaigning, especially in the extreme north. This Hatshepsut had not done, although the Lebanon or a part of it was still held in the year 15. Then the kingdom and city of Kadesh, on the upper Orontes, quietly organized a formidable revolt, which united all Egypt’s Asiatic enemies from Sharuhen on the south to the Euphrates on the north. It is clear also that the powerful kingdom of Mitanni assisted this general revolt with men and means. For the Mitannian king naturally feared to see the armies of the Pharaoh in Naharin at his very threshold. Early in the year 23, Thutmose III met and overthrew the allied Syrians at Megiddo, which he besieged and captured, and although he marched northward to the southern end of Lebanon, he was far from able to reach and punish Kadesh. But he established a fortress in the southern Lebanon, to prevent another southward advance by the king of Kadesh, and then returned home.

396. Of the next eighteen years the summers of sixteen were spent campaigning in Syria, making a total of seventeen campaigns. The next three campaigns (2, 3, and 4) are meagerly recorded, but in the year 29, on the fifth campaign, we find the king plainly making preparations for the conquest of Kadesh, by first securing the coast and getting possession of the harbors of Phoenicia. He then returned to Egypt for the first time by water, and hereafter the army is regularly transported to Syria by the fleet.

397. The next year, therefore, the king disembarked his

^The decree of Harmhab incidentally shows that Thutmose III was back in Egypt each year by the time of the feast of Opet (I, 58, ll. 29–31), early in October. See Breasted, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 39, 60, 61.

^The record of the fourth is lost.
army in some Phœnician harbor, and marched upon Kadesh, which he captured and chastised, returning then to the coast at Simyra, and going north to punish Arvad again. The foothold in north Syria necessary for an advance into the Euphrates country had now been gained, and Kadesh, the dangerous enemy who would have threatened his rear on such a march, had been subdued. The next year (31) was therefore spent in equipping the Phœnician harbors with supplies and quelling any smouldering embers of rebellion there.

398. It was not until the second year (33) after these preparations that the great king landed in Phœnicia for his march into the heart of Naharin. Already in the year 24, as a result of the great Megiddo victory, the king of Assur had sent presents, but now the Egyptians were again to plunder the Euphrates countries—a feat which had not been repeated since Thutmose I. The long and arduous march—a was successfully made, the king of Mitanni, who had, with Kadesh, been the heart and soul of the Syrian resistance, was totally defeated, Carchemishb was reached and taken, the Euphrates was crossed, and at last Thutmose III sets up his boundary tablet, marking the northern limits of his empire, beside that of his father, Thutmose I. Before he has left the region the envoys from the king of Babylon and the king of the Hittites, having doubtless started at the news of his invasion, appear with their gifts. On his return to the coast the king arranges that the princes of Lebanon shall keep the harbors supplied with all provisions.

399. The conquest of all Syria has consumed exactly ten years, but revolt has still to be reckoned with. Only a voyage of inspection along the Phoenician coast was required in the next year (34), but the revolt of the king of Mitanni called Thutmose into Naharin in the following year, and after a decisive defeat the people of Naharin were again brought under the Egyptian yoke. The records of the next two years (36 and 37) are lost, but in the year 38 we find the king punishing the princes of the southern Lebanon region, in order to protect the road north between the Lebanons. On this occasion, for the first time, he receives gifts from the prince of Cyprus, and also Arrapachitis, the later Assyrian province.

400. The punishment of the raiding Bedwin of southern Palestine forms a preliminary to the usual journey of inspection in the next year (39), and the record of the next two years (39 and 40) is too fragmentary to show more than that the tribute was paid as usual.

401. Finally, the long series of revolts in Syria culminates in a last desperate rebellion, in which Thutmose's arch-enemy, the source of most of his trouble in Syria, Kadesh, is the leader. Naharin sends allies, and Tunip likewise, so that the whole of north Syria, at least inland, is again combined against Thutmose. In the year 42 he proceeded first against Tunip, and after its subjugation besieged Kadesh, which was finally captured. Thus the nearly twenty years of Syrian campaigning was concluded, as it had begun, by the humiliation of Kadesh, which during all that time had been Egypt's thorn in the flesh. This last downfall was final; Kadesh no longer stirred revolt in Syria, and Thutmose III could relax his ceaseless efforts continued during seventeen campaigns.

When the campaigns of the Nineteenth Dynasty begin in northern Syria, it is Tunip, the old ally of Kadesh, that plays the leading rôle.
402. The extent of these campaigns is further indicated by two lists of conquered Asiatic cities left by Thutmose III in the great Karnak temple. Those belonging to the first campaign, preserved in triplicate, are 119 in number, and embrace, in general, the region from the northern limits of Palestine southward an uncertain distance into Judea (southern Judea being at that time already under Egyptian control; cf. Müller, Asien und Europa, 144, 154, 155), as well as Damascus and its district. Many Old Testament names have been recognized in it. It is introduced by the superscription:

List of the countries of Upper Retenu which his majesty shut up in the city of Megiddo (My-k-ty) the wretched, whose children his majesty brought as living prisoners to the city of Suhen-em-Opet, on his first victorious campaign, according to the command of his father Amon, who led him to excellent ways.

The third copy of the list (Mariette, Karnak, 19) has the same superscription, with the variant:

to the city of Thebes, in order to fill the storehouse of his father Amon, [presider over] Karnak, on his first, etc.

The second copy of the list has a different superscription:

bSuwn m Yp't means "Castle (or Prison) in Thebes." a place of confinement or dwelling for the foreign princes residing in Thebes as hostages. In the sixth campaign (§ 407) the purpose of thus keeping them is given.

cIt is not infrequently distinctly stated that such disposal was made of these children; cf. Building Stela of Amenhotep III, front, ll. 6, 7 (§ 884), and Papyrus of Capture of Joppa, III, ll. 11, 12, where, after the fall of the city, Thutiy says to Thutmose III: "Let people come, to take them as captives; fill thou the house of thy father Amon-Re, . . . . . with male and female slaves."
All inaccessible lands of the marshes of Asia, which his majesty brought as living captives — they had never been trodden by the other kings, beside his majesty —, a title which would indicate that some of the places belong farther north than the limits above indicated.

403. The second list embraced 248 names (of which many are lost) of cities in northern Syria and also perhaps as far east as the Chaboras River, but our geographical knowledge of this region is too meager as yet to identify any number of the places included.

404. In addition to these materials the great list of "Feasts and Offerings from the Conquests" (§§ 547 ff.), the Building Inscription of the Karnak Ptah-Temple (§§ 609 ff.), the king’s obelisks (§§ 629 ff.), and his "Hymn of Victory" (§§ 655 ff.), furnish important references to the campaigns. The great portal of Pylon VII at Karnak also bore a long recital of his wars, of which only scanty fragments have survived (§§ 593 ff.).

405. The tombs of the contemporary officials in the Theban cemetery also contain very valuable supplementary material. The career of Amenemhab, the most important of these, is translated below (§§ 574 ff.). Next to these are the representations in the tomb of Rekhmire (§§ 760 ff.), which show many of the objects mentioned in the tribute lists of the Annals, besides a reference to Thutmose III’s campaigns (§ 755). The tomb of Menkheperreseneb shows the tribute of Asia (§§ 772 ff.). The tomb of Puemere contains a relief showing the reception of tribute from "the ends of Asia" (§ 385), and that of Imnezech (Y^° m-ngḥ) a similar scene of tribute from "Retenu the wretched." Finally, among the most interesting of these contemporaries is the court herald, Intef, who tells how he preceded Thutmose III on the march and prepared the Syrian palaces for his reception ( §§ 771, ll. 24–27).

occasion of the campaign was a general revolt among his father's Syrian conquests from Sharuhen to the Euphrates. Fighting had already developed in Sharuhen, which was, of course, too near the Egyptian frontier to venture to make common cause with the revolters; and hence conflict resulted there. We are taken with the king and clearly shown his operations day by day till he overthrows a coalition of practically all Syria at Megiddo, headed by the king of Kadesh. He then besieges and captures Megiddo, but from the surrender of Megiddo on, the record degenerates, as in all the other campaigns, to little more than a list of spoils. Fortunately, this latter part of the campaign is supplemented and really continued by the introduction to the list of feasts and offerings\(^a\) established on the king's return to Thebes from this campaign. The close of the campaign is there narrated, mentioning a fortress established in the Lebanon, whither the king had marched after the fall of Megiddo, capturing there the three cities at the seaward bend of the Litâny River, which we may call the Lebanon Tripolis:\(^b\) Yenoam, Nuges, and Herenkeru, commanding the thoroughfare northward between the Lebanons. All this serves merely as an introduction to the splendid feasts of victory celebrated by the king, as is distinctly stated "on his return from the first victorious campaign." The date of these celebrations is preserved, and enables us for the first and only time to determine the length of an Egyptian campaign in Syria.

409. The entire calendar of the campaign, as far as can be determined, is as follows:

\(^b\)Only the spoil of these cities is enumerated in the Annals, the march thither being entirely ignored. The record of feasts and offerings only mentions them later to say that they were given to Amon.
In less than 148 days, roughly five months, Thutmose III fought the Battle of Megiddo, completely invested with a wall the powerful fortress of Megiddo itself, and captured it; marched northward seventy-five miles to the Lebanon region, captured three cities, and built a fortress there; completed the return to the Delta coast and the voyage up-river to Thebes; and celebrated his first feast of victory there. The entire campaign from the departure from Tharu to the arrival in Thebes lasted a maximum of 175 days; that is, in five months and twenty-five days from the day on which he left Tharu he was celebrating his great Feast of Amon at Thebes. Fortunately, we are able to locate this period approximately in the astronomical calendar and tell in what month he went and returned.\(^a\) (See § 409,

\(^a\)For this purpose we have first the Elephantine calendar fragment, which gives the heliacal rising of Sothis in the reign of Thutmose III as the 28th of Epiphi (Young, Hieroglyphics, 59 = Brugsch, Thesaurus, II, 363 = Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 43, \(e\) = de Morgan, Catalogue des Monuments, I, 121). Doubt has been cast upon this date, but I have examined the Berlin squeezes, and there is not a shadow of doubt that it belongs to the series of blocks from the reign of Thutmose III. In

411. Beside the celebration in Thebes, the victory was celebrated and recorded in a poetic inscription by the viceroy of Kush, Nehi (§§ 412, 413), at Wadi Halfa.

It refers to the first campaign, as follows:

412. ——— who (a god) stationed his majesty at the Horns of the Earth, in order to overthrow the Asiatics (Mnšt w-Stt). I am the Mighty Bull, Shining in Thebes, Son of Atum, beloved of Montu, fighting for his army himself, that the Two Lands may see it; it is no lie. I came forth from the house of my father, the king of gods, Amon, who decrees me victory.

The king himself, he led the way of his army, mighty at its head, like a flame of fire, the king who wrought with his sword. He went forth, none like him, slaying the barbarians, smiting Retenu (Rtnw’t, sic!), bringing their princes as living captives, their chariots wrought with gold, bound to their horses. The countries of Tehenu do obeisance because of the fame of his majesty, with their tribute upon width of column and height of corresponding signs it is identical with a block bearing the name of Thutmose III. Erman, with whom I examined it, was of the same opinion. Unfortunately, the regnal year is not given; but since my attempt to determine the season of the campaign (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 127 f.) on the basis of the Sothis date, the new moon dates have been finally established by Meyer, which modify my series of dates by two days, but corroborate entirely the season as I established it (Meyer, Abhandlungen der Berliner Akademie, 1904, Ägyptische Chronologie, 49 f.).

a Also shown by the fact that the army reaped the grain harvest about Megiddo, after having foraged upon it. From the king's Karnak building inscription (§ 608) we see that he was at home in February after the campaign of the year 24; and the Harmhab decree (III, 58) shows that Thutmose III was accustomed to be at home each year at the feast of Opet early in October after the summer's campaigning. The campaign of the year 31 also began in April (§ 469, 1. 9); the Syrian campaign of Amenhotep II (§§ 780 ff.) and the Kadesh campaign of Ramses II (III, 298 ff.) also fell in the dry season (see Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 129).

b On a pillar of the Empire temple. It is dated “year 23.” I am indebted for it to a photograph, kindly loaned me by Professor Steindorff, as it is still unpublished. There is in Cairo a fragment of a stela (unpublished, no number) recording the erection of this temple by Thutmose III (“building for him a temple of white sandstone”), and its endowment with offerings; but only the extreme ends of eight lines are preserved. I am indebted to Schaefer for a copy of it.
their backs, — as do the dogs, that there might be given to them the breath of life.

414. There is here further reference to the king's personal leading of his army through the mountains and in the Megiddo battle. Furthermore, we see that Libyans came with tribute on the king's return from the campaign. The Annals narrate the campaign as follows:

At the Frontier in Tharu

415. Year 22, fourth month of the second season (eighth month), on the twenty-fifth day [his majesty was in] Tharu (T²-rw) on the first victorious expedition to [extend] the boundaries of Egypt with might

Revolt in Asia

416. Now, (at) that period [the Asiatics had fallen into] disagreement, each man [fighting] against [his neighbor] ———. Now, it happened [that the tribes] — the people, who were there in the city of Sharuhen (S²-r²-h³-n); behold, from Yeraza (Y-r²-d²) to the marshes of the earth, (they) had begun to revolt against his majesty.

Arrival in Gaza, Feast of Coronation

417. Year 23, first (month) of the third season (ninth month), on the fourth day, the day of the feast of the king's coronation, (he arrived) at the city, the possession of the ruler, Gaza (G²-d²-tw).

Pylon VII (§ 594) gives the same date.

Departure from Gaza

418. [Year 23] 15 first month of the third season (ninth month), on the fifth day; departure from this place in might, — — 16 in power, and in triumph, to overthrow that wretched foe, 8 to extend the boundaries of Egypt, according as his father, Amon-Re, 1 had commanded — — 1 that he seize.

Arrival at Yehem

419. Year 23, first month of the third season (ninth month), on the sixteenth day, (he arrived) at the city of Yehem (Y-hm).

Council of War

420. [His majesty] ordered a consultation with his valiant troops, saying as follows: "That [wretched] enemy, [the chief] of Kadesh (Kd-šw), has come and entered into Megiddo (My-k-ty); he [is there] 21at this moment. He has gathered to himself the chiefs of [all] the countries [which are] on the water of Egypt, and as far as Naharin (N-h-ry-n), consisting of [the countries] of the Kharu (Kdw), their horses, their troops, ——— 24thus he speaks, 'I have arisen to [fight against his majesty]' in Megiddo (My-k-ty).' Tell ye me ———.

Advice of the Officers

421. They spoke in the presence of his majesty, "How is it, that we should go upon this road, which threatens to be narrow? While they ['come'] and say that the enemy is there waiting, [I]hold[ing] the way against a multitude. Will not horse come behind [horse and man behind] man likewise? Let him who will among you, go upon those roads ye have mentioned, and let him who will among you, come in the following of my majesty. Shall they think among those enemies whom Re detests: 'Does his majesty proceed upon another road? He begins to be fearful of us,' so will they think."

Submission of the Officers

423. They spoke before his majesty: "May thy father Amon, lord of Thebes, presider over Karnak, grant thee life. ⁴⁸ Behold, we are the following of thy majesty in every place, whither [thy majesty] proceedeth; as the servant is behind [his] master."

Departure from Yehem

424. [Then his majesty] commanded the entire army [to march] upon that road c which threatened to be narrow. His majesty swore, saying: "None shall go forth [in the way] before my majesty, in ———." He went forth at the head of his army himself, showing [the way] by his (own) footsteps; horse behind [horse], [his majesty] being at the head of his army.

ᵃ The same word (Ḏ³) is applied to the road upon which the great block for the el-Bersheh colossus (I, 696, l. 1) was brought. It means "inaccessible" or "difficult;" it is also used by Thutmose III of the celestial road of the sun (§ 141).

Arrival at Aruna

425. Year 23, first month of the third season (ninth month), on the nineteenth day; the watch in [safety]a 57 in the royal tent was at the city of Aruna (C³ -rw-n³).b 58 “My majesty proceeded northward under (the protection of my) father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, [who went] 59 before me, while Harakhte [strengthened my arms]c 60 (my) father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, victorious of the sword 61 over my majesty.”

Battle in the Mountains

426. [The enemy] went forth —— 62 in numerous battle array 63. The southern wing was in Taanach (T³ -c³ [-n²-k²]), 64 the northern wing was on the ground south of 65. His majesty cried out to them before 66 they fell; behold, that wretched foe 67 —— 68 of [the city of]f 69 Aruna (C³ -rw-n³).

a Perhaps we should supply: “life, prosperity, and health,” as in Ramses II’s march to Kadesh (l. 1); but above, the said phrase is used after “tent,” to express the adjective “royal,” and would hardly appear twice in the same phrase.

b Three days after the arrival at Yehem, Aruna, lying in the midst of the mountains, is reached. Here they spent the night of the nineteenth and marched on the twentieth (l. 58).

c Restored from § 430, l. 3.

d Maspero (Recueil, II, 56) following Brugsch, supplies Megiddo here. This is quite possible, but only on a different supposition from that of Maspero and Brugsch, viz., that the position described here is that of the Asiatic forces, not of the Egyptians, for the latter do not arrive “south of Megiddo” until long after this (§ 428). Furthermore, it is quite impossible for the Egyptians to have had their southern wing at Taanach, while defiling through the Megiddo road. This seems to have been the view in the translation in Petrie’s History (II, 106), but no mention is made of an encounter with the enemy in the mountains in the summary, p. 101. The passage is important, for it decisively determines (even without supplying Megiddo above) the location of Megiddo against Conder’s identification with Mujedda.c An Asiatic army which, we know, fought before Megiddo, has its southern wing at Taanach, which is known to be Tannuk of today; it must follow that Megiddo is northward from Tannuk. See Breasted, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, 22, 96.

e There was some encounter with the enemy here in the mountains, and this moves the officers to urge calling in the straggling rear as soon as possible. This encounter has escaped all the historians except Meyer (Geschichte, 239); cf. Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 257: Wiedemann, Aegyptische Geschichte, 347; Petrie, History of Egypt, II, 101; etc.

f There is a loss of five lines here, before l. 69, but it is not indicated in the publications.
Danger of the Rear

427. Now, the rear of the victorious army of his majesty was at the city of Ṭanūra (.Consumer-Aramaean), the front was going forth to the valley of—; and they filled the opening of this valley. Then [they] said in the presence of his majesty, L. P. H.: Behold, his majesty goeth forth with his victorious army, and it has filled the hollow of the valley; let our victorious lord hearken to us this time and let our lord protect for us the rear of his army and his people. Let the rear of this army come forth to us behind; then shall they (also) fight against these barbarians; then we shall not (need to) take thought for the rear of our army." His majesty halted outside and waited there, protecting the rear of his victorious army.

Exit from the Mountains

428. Behold, when the front had reached the exit upon this road, the shadow had turned, and when his majesty arrived at the south of Megiddo (My-k-ty) on the bank of the brook of Kina (Ky-n), the seventh hour was turning, (measured) by the sun.

Camp in Plain of Megiddo

429. Then was set up the camp of his majesty, and command was given to the whole army, saying: "Equip yourselves! Prepare your weapons! for we shall advance to fight with that wretched foe in the morning." Therefore the king rested in the royal tent, the affairs of the chiefs were arranged, and the provisions of the attendants. The watch of the army went about, saying, "Steady of heart! Steady of heart! Watchful! Watchful! Watch for life at the tent of the king." One came to say to his majesty, "The land is well, and the infantry of the South and North likewise."

Battle of Megiddo

430. Year 23, first (month) of the third season (ninth month), on the twenty-first day, the day of the feast of the new moon, corresponding to the royal coronation, early in the morning, behold, command was given to the entire army to move — . His majesty went forth in a chariot of electrum, arrayed in his weapons of war, like Horus, the Smite, lord of power; like Montu of Thebes, while his father, Amon, strengthened his arms. The southern wing of this army of his majesty was on a hill south of the [brook of] Kina (Ky-n?), the northern wing was at the northwest of Megiddo (My-k-ty), while his majesty was in their center, with Amon as the protection of his members, the valor of his limbs. Then his majesty prevailed against them at the head of his army, and when they saw his majesty prevailing against them they fled headlong to Megiddo (My-k-ty) in fear, abandoning their horses and their chariots of gold and silver. The people hauled them (up), pulling (them) by their clothing, into this city; the people of this city having closed (it) against them [and lowered] clothing to pull them up into this city. Now, if only the army of his majesty had not given their heart to plundering the things of the enemy, they would have [captured] Megiddo (My-k-ty) at this moment, when the wretched foe of (Kd-š) Kadesh and the wretched foe of this city were hauled up in haste to bring them into this city. The fear of his majesty had entered their hearts, their arms were powerless, his serpent diadem was victorious among them.

silver were made spoil; their champions lay stretched out like fishes bThis shows that Thutmose has gone around Megiddo toward the west and, having his army partially on the north of the city, has intercepted the enemy's northern line of retreat; at the same time probably securing his own line of retreat along the Zefii road (see § 421, l. 35). This position corroborates the position of the Asiatics with their southern wing at Taanach on the day before the battle (see § 426, especially note). This move must have been made by Thutmose in the afternoon or during the night before the battle.

dThe king of Kadesh.

*The first word without the following connection seems doubtful; it means "to sail, travel" and possibly refers to the fact that the king sailed each year to Syria in the later campaigns; hence the title may have been: "Voyages, etc." The whole reminds one of the statement concluding the reign of each king in the Book of Kings (e. g., 1 Kings 15:23).

\(^l\) These three cities lay close together at the southern end of Lebanon. That Thutmose III marched to Lebanon after the fall of Megiddo is shown by the fact that he built a fortress there (§ 548, l. 1) just before returning to Thebes. The three cities formed a political whole under a single ruler ("that foe"), and were given as a whole to Amon by Thutmose III (§ 557). The location of these cities in the plain of Megiddo (Petrie, Syria and Egypt, 14) is plainly due to overlooking the other evidence (see Müller, Asien und Europa, 200–3); though Petrie is undoubtedly right in denying the identity of Nuges and Nukhasse, already opposed by Müller (ibid., 394). If "that foe" refers to the king of Kadesh here, as it does elsewhere throughout this inscription, we have an important indication of the extent southward of the territory of that king.

Fragment on the Siege of Megiddo\textsuperscript{c}

438. The inscription to which this fragment belonged contained an account of the first campaign and apparently no more, so that it was doubtless recorded at the close of this campaign before the others took place. It is probably therefore, the oldest of Thutmose III's war records, and introduces an offering-list.

\textsuperscript{e}This is the insurrection referred to in § 416. The battle of Megiddo is then rapidly passed over, and l. 5 begins the siege of Megiddo.

III. SECOND CAMPAIGN (YEAR 24) *

444. This campaign seems to have been only a circuitous march through Palestine and southern Syria (l. 25), to receive the submission and tribute of the dynasts. Far-off Assyria also, which had now heard of the great victory of the preceding year, sent gifts, which the scribe calls “tribute” (ynw) like that of Syria.

bThe line is broken just above this word; hence, although it spells Tyre (D 3-r), it may be the end of a longer word terminating in 3-r, like Sn-d 3-r (Amenemhab, l. 11, § 584). But see Müller, Asien und Europa, 185.

IV. THIRD CAMPAIGN (YEAR 25)k

450. The Annals contain no account of the third campaign, which was evidently a peaceful tour of inspection. The record of its results required more room than the wall of the Annals afforded, hence it was transferred to a chamber in the rear of the temple, and recorded in a long series of reliefs representing the flora and fauna of Syria, brought back from this campaign. They are accompanied by the following inscriptions:

451. Year 25, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre (Thutmose III), living, forever. Plants which his majesty found in the land of Retenu.

*All plants that grow, all flowers that are in God’s-Land [which were found by] his majesty when his majesty proceeded to Upper Retenu, to subdue [fall] the country[es], according to the command of his father, Amon, who put them beneath his sandals, from [the year 1] to myriads of years.

452. His majesty said: “I swear, as Re [loves me] as my father, Amon, favors me, all these things happened in truth —. I have not written fiction as that which really happened to my majesty; I have engraved the excellent deeds. My majesty hath done this from desire to put them before my father Amon, in this great temple of Amon, (as) a memorial forever and ever.”

V. FOURTH CAMPAIGN

453. The account of this campaign, if any existed, is lost; it was not recorded on the wall of the Annals, and may have been put elsewhere, like the third.
VI. FIFTH CAMPAIGN (YEAR 29)

454. The first campaign extended no farther northward than the Tripolis of the southern Lebanon, and this was inland. The second and third campaigns were not aggressive, and apparently did not push far north; the record of the fourth campaign is lost, and it is not until the fifth, in the year 29, that we have certain information of an advance beyond the northern limits of the first campaign, and along the coast. This fifth campaign begins with a new caption, as if a new period of the wars had begun here, and it is clear that the revolt suppressed in the south in the year 23 was after six years not yet subdued in the cities of Zahi, which the king had not yet visited. The wars in the Annals are thus divided into two great groups, the first group being in the south, and the second group, beginning in the year 29, being the wars in the north.

After the capture of a city the name of which is lost (W — ), which was supported by troops from Tunip, contained a sanctuary of Amon, and yielded rich plunder, the king proceeded southward and captured Arvad. The rich gardens and fields, now in the season of fruitage, were plundered, and the army spent the days in rioting and feasting. The king seized some Phoenician ships, and the expedition returned by water. This had perhaps been done by earlier expeditions, but the fifth is the first in which it is certain.

The text here returns to the main sanctuary, where the annals are resumed, beginning at the jog in the north wall (see Mariette, Karnak, Pl. 13). Only the lower ends of the lines are still in situ, the rest having been barbarously quarried out by Salt; this section is now in the Louvre. Text of Louvre section and part of lines in situ, Lepsius, Auswahl der wichtigsten Urkunden, XII, ll. 1–7; lower ends of same lines, Mariette, Karnak, 13, ll. 1–6; both, Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1168–70, ll. 1–7 = Bissing, Statistische Tafel, xxvii 1, ll. 1–7.
Introduction

455. aHis majesty commanded to cause that the victories which his father [Amon] had given him should be recorded upon the stone wall in the temple which his majesty made anew [for his father Amon, setting forth each expedition]\(^b\) by its name,\(^c\) together with the plunder which his majesty brought therefrom. It was done according to [all the command which his father, Re, gave to him\(^d\)] ———.

Sacrifices to Amon

458. After this his majesty proceeded to the storehouse of offering[s], to give a sacrifice to Amon and to Harakhte\(^g\) consisting of oxen, calves, fowl, [for the life, prosperity, and health of\(^h\)] Menkheperre (Thutmose III), who giveth life forever.

loaves, clean grain in kernel and ground — —. All good fruit of this country. Behold, the army of his majesty was drunk and anointed with oil every day as at a feast in Egypt.

VII. SIXTH CAMPAIGN (YEAR 30)

463. This year the expedition went by water and landed at Simyra, the most convenient port for reaching Kadesh. This city had been the leader in the great coalition of revolters, defeated at Megiddo in the first campaign seven years before. It was doubtless also constantly supporting revolt in the Phoenician coast cities, as Tunip had done in the preceding year (29), causing the king to direct his forces thither in that year. Finally in the year 30 the king succeeded in reaching the source of the disturbance, capturing and severely punishing Kadesh, a feat in which Amenemhab assisted. He returned to his fleet at Simyra, proceeded to Arvad and punished it as in the preceding year. On his return to Egypt he took with him the children of the native princes to be educated in friendship toward Egypt, that they might be sent back gradually to replace the old hostile generation of Syrian princes.

464. YEAR 30. Behold, his majesty was in the land of Retenu on the sixth victorious expedition of his majesty.

b This is not stated in the Annals, but as he returned to the coast at Simyra, and as Simyra was the port nearest Kadesh, the objective of his campaign, there can be little doubt about the place of landing.

VIII. SEVENTH CAMPAIGN (YEAR 31)\(^f\)

468. The king again directs his attention to the coast cities of Phœnicia, and it is clear that he proceeds thither by water, first capturing Ullaza, a coast city in the vicinity of Simyra, when he receives the tribute and homage of the submissive Syrian kinglets. He then sailed along the coast from harbor to harbor, forcing submission, and laying up

*Not more than five words lacking, and about the same in l. 12.
The Harbors

472. Now, every harbor at which his majesty arrived was supplied with (njr-) loaves and with assorted loaves, with oil, incense, wine, honey, [fruit] — — — — abundant were they beyond everything, beyond the knowledge of his majesty's army; (it) is no fiction, 13 they remain in the daily register of the palace, L. P. H., the list of them not being given in this inscription, in order not to multiply words, and in order to furnish their circumstances in this place

Harvest of Retenu

473. The harvest of the land of Retenu was reported, consisting of much clean grain, 14 grain in the kernel, barley, incense, green oil, wine, fruit, every pleasing thing of the country; they shall apportion it to the treasury, according as the impost of the — is counted ——— 33 various —, together with green stone, every costly stone of this country, and many stones 15 of sparkle [all the] good [things] of this country.

aThat these are the harbors on the Phoenician coast, there is no doubt. The word is a feminine noun (mny'wt) from mny, "to land," and sometimes has a ship as determinative (Papyrus Anast., IV, 15, 4). Some of the supplies with which these mny'wt were equipped were ships and spars (§492). These cannot apply to inland stations! When we notice that it is always Lebanon chiefs who furnish the supplies, the conclusion is clear. A new meaning is thus given the words of Abdkhiba of Jerusalem: "As long as ships were upon the sea, the strong arm of the king occupied Nahrima (Nahrain) and Kas" (Babylonia) (Amarna Letters, ed. Winckler, 182, 32 f.). This observation throws a flood of light on Thutmose III's campaigns, and shows that his military operations were later regularly conducted from some harbor as a base. He therefore employed his navy in these campaigns to a far greater extent than we had supposed, regularly transporting his army to Syria by water, and even probably conducting the above campaign by water, sailing from harbor to harbor. See note, §483, l. 24.

bHrw'yt. The word is rare, but occurs also in the Decree of Harmhab (III, 63, l. 4), indicating a writing containing laws.

cMeaning, perhaps, that there is room on the wall only for offering the circumstances under which the spoil was taken, without enumerating the same.

dOver one-third of the line is broken out, and this is the case with each line as far as l. 35.

eNot ground.

fThe tense shows that we have here the very words of the government scribe's books.

The word has the fire determinative; same word in forty-second year, l. 14, §533; and Papyrus Harris three times (not four, as given in Piehl's Dictionnaire, 21, 22), each time referring to costly stones. Hence Bissing's conjecture that it means a founder's mould of stone is impossible (Bissing, Statistische Tafel, 28).
Tribute of the Genebteyew

474. When his majesty arrived in Egypt, the messengers of the Genebteyew (Gnb'tyw) came bearing their tribute, consisting of myrrh, gum, 6 , 10 male negroes for attendants; 113 oxen (and) calves; 230 bulls; total, 343; besides vessels laden with ivory, ebony, skins of the panther, products .

Impost of Wawat

475. [List of the impost of Wawat (W w t): 5 of Wawat; 31 oxen and calves; 61 bulls; total, 92; besides vessels laden with all things of this country; the harvest of Wawat, likewise.

IX. EIGHTH CAMPAIGN (YEAR 33)

476. In this year the king carries out the greatest campaign of his Asiatic wars, viz., the conquest of the Euphrates country. He has been long preparing for it, in the preceding campaigns, overthrowing Kadesh in the Orontes valley, subduing the coast cities, and filling them with provisions for his garrisons and his future operations. The story is unfortunately briefly told, and not always chronological. The voyage to Simyra, b and the long march thence down the Orontes and to the Euphrates, are entirely omitted. The crowning act of the campaign, the erection of his boundary tablet east of the Euphrates, and another in the vicinity beside that of his father, Thutmose I, is immediately narrated. The operations which led to this culmination are then recorded in the meagerest words. While marching northward, plundering as he went, probably not far from the Euphrates, he meets the king of Mitanni, defeats and

b He must have landed at Simyra, for, according to the fragment of Pylon VII (§ 598) he conquered Ketne on this campaign. Ketne was in the Orontes valley behind Simyra (Meyer, Aegyptiaca, 68; Petrie's location of it by Damascus seems to me impossible. See Syria and Egypt, v. v.).
drives him in flight, capturing a great booty on the battlefield. Amenemhab mentions three battles on this campaign, of which the last, that at Carchemish, is probably, the one here mentioned in the Annals. Probably Carchemish marks the northern limit of the advance in this campaign, and the two other battles mentioned by Amenemhab occurred on the march thither (§§ 581, 582). The king then crossed the Euphrates, set up his boundary tablets, and, as he marched southward to Niy on his return, he was met by the subordinate princes, who immediately submitted and brought their tribute. Even far-off Babylon sends gifts, which, of course, the king calls tribute, and also the Hittites, who here make their first appearance in history. It is now arranged that the Lebanon princes shall keep the king's harbors supplied with provisions.

On the king's return, an expedition of his to Punt arrives with magnificent returns from "God's-Land." The impost of Wawat is paid as usual.

477. Year 33. Behold, his majesty was in the land of Retenu; [he] arrived ———.

Boundary Tablet on the Euphrates
478. [He set up a tablet] east of this water; he set up another beside the tablet of his father, the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Okheperkere (Thutmose I).

Battle in Naharin
479. Behold, his majesty went north capturing the towns and laying waste the settlements of that foe of wretched Naharin (N-h-ry-n³)
§ 482] THE ANNALS: EIGHTH CAMPAIGN

——— he [pursued] after them an iter (ytr)\(^a\) of sailing; not one looked \(^b\) behind him, but they fled, forsooth, like a \(^b\) herd of mountain goats; yea, the horses fled ———.

The Booty

480. [List of the booty taken] among the whole army, consisting of: princes, 3; \(^2\) their wives, 30; men taken, 80; 606 slaves, male and female, with their children; those who surrendered (and) their wives, ——— (he) harvested their grain.

Arrival at Niy

481. His majesty arrived at the city \(^2\) of Niy (Nyy), going southward, when his majesty returned, having set up his tablet in Naharin (N-h-ry-n\(^c\)), extending the boundaries of Egypt.\(^d\) ———.

Tribute of Naharin

482. [List] of the tribute brought to his majesty by the chiefs of this country: \(^2\) 513 slaves, male and female; 260 horses; gold, 45 deben, \(\frac{1}{2}\) kidet;\(^e\) silver vessels of the workmanship of Zahi (D\(^2\)-hy) ——— [chariots] with all their weapons of war; 28 oxen, \(\frac{23}{2}\) calves, and bullocks; 564 bulls; 5,323 small cattle; incense, 828 (\(mn\)-) jars; sweet oil and [green oil] ——— every pleasing [thing] of this country; all fruits in quantity.

\(^a\) In view of the parallel passage in the Semneh stela of Amenhotep III, where the words, "ytr of sailing," are followed by a numeral, the word must be the linear measure, ytr, and not the word ytr, "river." Hence the rendering of Müller (Asien und Europa, 254): "er (überschritt) den Fluss des Rundfahrens (?)" must be given up. There is no statement of a crossing of the Euphrates here, but that Thutmose III really crossed this river is stated on his Constantinople obelisk (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 60, \(W\)): "Thutmose (III) who crossed the Great Bend of Naharin (N-h-r-n) with might and with victory at the head of his army" (§ 631). That this crossing of the river was on this campaign is not to be doubted, and the second tablet of 1. 17 was therefore set up on the "east" of the Euphrates. A further striking corroboration of the crossing is in the "Hymn of Victory" (§ 656, ll. 7, 8).

\(^d\) The remainder of the campaign must have been very brief, as it occupied only the lacuna (about one-third of the line).

The Harbors

483. Behold, these harbors were supplied with everything according to their dues, according to their contract of each year, together with the impost of Lebanon (R²-mn-n) according to their contract of each year with the chiefs of Lebanon (R²-mn-n) —— 2 unknown birds; 4 wild fowl of this country, which every day.

Tribute of Babylon

484. The tribute of the chief of Shinar (S²-n-g-r); b real lapis lazuli, 4(+) deben; artificial lapis lazuli, 24 deben; lapis lazuli of Babylon (B-b-r) —— of real lapis lazuli; a ram’s head of real lapis lazuli; 26.15 kidet; and vessels ——.

Tribute of the Hittites

485. The tribute of Kheta (H-t°) the Great, in this year: 8 silver rings, making 401 deben; d of white precious stone, a great block; (l²-gw-) wood —— [returning] to Egypt, at his coming from Naharin (N-h-ry-n), extending the boundaries of Egypt.

Products of Punt

486. Marvels brought to his majesty in the land of Punt in this year: dried myrrh, 1,685 heket; g gold —— gold, 155 deben, 2 kidet; 134 slaves, male and female; 114 oxen, and calves; 305 bulls; total, 419 cattle; beside vessels laden with ivory, ebony, (skins) of the panther; every good thing of [this] country ——.

aThe harbors lying at the foot of the Lebanon along the Phoenician coast would naturally be supplied by the Lebanon princes. It is to be noted that these supplies were collected as “impost” (not “tribute”), and probably by an Egyptian officer, as was the “impost” of Nubia.

bIdentified long ago by Brugsch (Gr. Oase, 91) with the biblical Shinar (Sn<r), an identification which was overlooked in favor of Meyer’s identification with Singara. Meyer (Aegyptiaca, 63) now sees in S²-n-g-r the Sanhar of the Amarna letters (Amarna Letters, ed. Winckler, 25, 49), which also leads him to recognize Shinar in both, although Brugsch’s identification of S²-n-g-r with Shinar seems not to have been noticed.

cText really has “face,” but the wall paintings show complete heads in such cases.

eOr possibly “from” (hr); it is noticeable that in the year 38 (§ 513) the preposition is m, “from.” Hence perhaps an expedition here; but see § 616, l. 9.

X. NINTH CAMPAIGN (YEAR 34) b

488. The king confines himself this year to little more than a voyage of inspection to Zahi, receiving the surrender of submissive towns, and the tribute of Retenu, and Cyprus. The harbors are stocked with supplies as usual, including a fleet of foreign vessels laden with timber.

The annual impost of Kush and Wawat is recorded as usual.

489. Year 34. Behold, his majesty was in the land of Zahi (D 3-hy).

Surrender of Zahi Towns

Tribute of Retenu

491. Tribute of the chiefs of Retenu in this year: — a horses; 31 (+x) [chariots,] wrought with silver and gold, and painted; 70[f+3] slaves, male and female; gold, 55 deben, 8 kidet; various silver vessels of the workmanship of the country, — deben, 6 kidet; gold and silver; (mnw-) stone; vessels of every costly stone; native copper, 80 blocks; lead, 11 blocks; colors, 100 deben; dry myrrh, feldspar; green stone — 13 oxen and calves; 530 bulls; 84 asses; bronze —; a quantity of wood; numerous vessels of copper; incense, 693 (mn-) jars; sweet oil and green oil, 2,080 (mn-) jars; wine, 608 (mn-) jars; 3b chariots of (tw-) wood, carob wood, 18 logs of every wood of this country.

The Harbors Supplied

492. Behold, all the harbors of his majesty were supplied with every good thing of that [which] majesty received [in] Zahi (D-energy), consisting of Keftyew ships, Byblos ships, and Sektu (Sk-tw) ships of cedar laden with poles, and masts, together with great trees for the —1d of his majesty.

Tribute of Cyprus

493. Tribute of the chief of Isy (Ysy) in [this year]: 108 blocks of pure copper (or) 2,040 deben; 5 (+x) blocks of lead; 1,200 pigs of lead; lapis lazuli, 110 deben; ivory, 1 tusk; 2 staves of wood.

XI. TENTH CAMPAIGN (YEAR 35)*

496. It was now the second year since the invasion of Naharin, and the kings of that region had revolted. Thutmose marched thither from the Phoenician coast, defeated the rebels who had united under some prince who is called the "foe of Naharin." This may have been the king of Aleppo. The allies were defeated in a battle at Araina, possibly in the land of Tikhsi, as mentioned by Amenemhab (§ 587, l. 19), and Thutmose took great spoil. The tribute of the Syrian princes is not mentioned; it was doubtless paid as usual; the impost of Kush and Wawat are noted.

497. Year 35. Behold, his majesty was in the land of Zahi (D ²-hy) on the tenth victorious expedition.

Revolt in Naharin

The visitor on the spot will notice that only the lower third (or less) of these twenty vertical lines on the pylon (north of door) is preserved; hence the first date is lost, and unfortunately also all the others on this wall section. The text in Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 30, a = Brugsch, \textit{Thesaurus}, V, 1182–85. The fragment certainly contains data from three different expeditions; it must remain somewhat uncertain whether the first of the three is the conclusion of the fourteenth expedition in year 39 or part of a fifteenth in year 40. It seems probable that the long lacuna (nearly the whole l. i, west wall) contains the conclusion of the fourteenth expedition, which must otherwise have occupied more space than either of the campaigns before or after it. Line 1 of the west wall, therefore, begins the fifteenth expedition. Müller (\textit{Asien und Europa}, 54) sees difficulties in this arrangement, which are not apparent to me. See further notes on text.}

Tribute of the chief of Kheta (Ḫ-ḫḫ) the Great, in this year: gold — 8.\(^a\)

\(^a\) Contained the tribute of some unknown country followed by the impost of Kush, for “tribute of” at end of l. 1 cannot refer to Kush, for which bk ḫw, “impost,” is always used. Kush is certain from the negroes in the list.

\(^c\) At least this is the usual continuation. Possibly, the tribute of some other country intervenes in the following lacuna.

\(^d\) As the impost of Kush and Wawat usually concludes the year’s list, it is evident that we should begin another year at this point, as usual, with Retenu; probably year 41.

\(^e\) So Lepsius; Brugsch has “second time.”

\(^f\) Brugsch’s restoration, “this land,” is not according to the parallels.

\(^g\) So Lepsius; Brugsch, 26.

\(^h\) Probably the tribute of another country, also, is lost in the lacuna.

XVIII. SEVENTEENTH CAMPAIGN\textsuperscript{g}

528. The last campaign, which happened not later than the year 42, shows the old king, now probably over seventy years of age, suppressing a revolt of Tunip and Kadesh, who are supported by auxiliaries from Naharin. He marched from the northern coast of Syria, after capturing the coast city of Erkatu,\textsuperscript{h} directly against Tunip. Having subdued it, he then marched up the Orontes against his old enemy, Kadesh, whose prince led the allied forces, which Thutmose III had routed at Megiddo on the first campaign, nearly twenty years before. There was a stubborn defense, but, according to the narrative of Amenemhab, the walls of the city were breached, and it was taken by storm (§ 590). From it and surrounding towns great plunder was secured, among which were the Naharin auxiliaries and their horses.

\textsuperscript{h}Erkatu (\textit{c-r-k ^-tw}) must have been on the coast somewhere between the mouth of the Orontes and the Nahr el-Kebir. As it is the same as Irkata of the \textit{Amarna Letters} (see § 529, note), it was not far from Simyra. Thutmose may have landed at Simyra, as he had evidently often done before, and hence he marched upon the "coast road" against Erkatu.

b Read yst instead of "Amon," incorrectly restored by Harmhab.

c This important name is given by Lepsius as c r-k 2-n-tw, inserting an n before tw; in this he is followed by Brugsch, who evidently published (Thesaurus, V, 1183) an old copy of his made from Lepsius; for the original (in the photograph) shows no trace of n and no room for it. The signs are perfectly preserved, and the feet of the eagle in k 2 practically touch the head of the w-bird in tw, leaving absolutely no room for n in the vertical column between k 3 and tw. Neither is there any trace on the back of the eagle of n (horizontal). This makes the identity of our word, with Irkata of the Amarna Letters a certainty. See also Eduard Meyer, Festschrift für Georg Ebers, 69, n. 2; and compare above § 528, note.

§ Of course, 22 or 23 is to be read, the reading is based on: (1) our knowledge of the date when the campaigns began; (2) the fact that 22 is clear and there is only room in the possible lacuna for one unit more; (3) the fact that the list of offerings from the Asiatic wars (§§ 541 ff.) also begins in the year 23. This date, as well as the terminal date “year 42” (for which both Lepsius and Brugsch give 32), has been the subject of much discussion. The following remarks of Mariette in a letter to de Rougé which have been mostly overlooked, should settle the question (Revue archéologique, 1860, N. S., I, 32):

“La première de ces deux dates, à la vérité, est un peu détruite; mais la planche de M. Lepsius rapporte fidèlement l’arrangement des chiffres, et vous voyez qu’il n’y a place là que pour l’an 22, ou l’an 23; ..... Quant à la date donnée pour la dernière de ces campagnes, elle est celle de la quarante-deuxième année du règne de Thoutmès. Comme cela arrive fréquemment pour les textes gravés en relief très-mince sur le grès, l’un des chiffres dix a presque disparu par une sorte de dissolution spontanée de la pierre et il est évident que si M. Lepsius a fait sa publication sur un estampage, il a dû lire 32. Mais le chiffre qui tend à s’effacer est encore parfaitement clair, et c’est sans contredit l’an 42 qu’il faut voir. . . . . . .” These statements are confirmed by the photograph, although the space for the fourth ten (in 42) is absolutely smooth.

FEASTS AND OFFERINGS FROM THE CONQUESTS

541. In this inscription Thutmose III records the new feasts and additional offerings which he established during the period of his splendid conquests in Asia. The record, therefore, begins with his return from the first campaign in the year 23, and continues till the year 42, when his campaigning ceased. In order to connect the record with the occurrence of the first campaign, it goes back to the march to Lebanon after the fall of Megiddo, refers to a fortress which he built there, and proceeds then to his return and landing at Thebes. All this leads up to the establishment of three great “Feasts of Victory,” for which it furnishes the motive. After fixing the calendar of these three feasts, with the lists of oblations to be offered at their celebration, the king proceeds to the gifts which he made to Amon at the feast of his voyage to southern Opet, which are exceedingly rich and numerous, including the three cities just captured in the Lebanon, fields and gardens, slaves, precious metals and stones, and the doubling of some of the old offerings (ll. 5–14). It would seem as if this feast was the first celebrated by the king after his return from the first campaign, for it is among its gifts that the acquisitions of that campaign appear.

a Wall inscription in the Karnak temple on the back of the south half of Pylon VI (Baedeker, plan opp. p. 239). It therefore by its position (as well as by its content) shows that it is really a continuation of the Annals, which are concluded at the door on the back of the north half of the same pylon. It is in vertical lines, and as a considerable amount of the pylon is lost at the top clear across, the tops of all the lines are lacking. Published by Lepsius, (Denkmäler, III, 30, b) and Brugsch (Recueil des monuments, I, 43, 44; last five lines omitted). Lepsius offers a more accurate text, but not so full in indistinct places. I collated the Berlin squeeze for the important historical portion (ll. 1–6) and a photograph by Borchardt for the whole.

b The date of the beginning is clearly shown in several places; that of the end by the list of Asiatic and Nubian slaves, which continues “till the recording of this tablet,” which is stated at the end of the Annals (§ 540) to be “year 42.”
542. The other offerings due to Amon, now richly increased, are then successively enumerated (ll. 14–25), and the long inscription closes with the king's exhortation to the priests, like that to the priests of Abydos (§§97 ff.) to be true to their duties and to offer the mortuary oblations due him, a list of which follows.

543. A splendid array of these gifts is depicted in a wall relief⁴ in the corridor of the Annals. Chief among them are the two Karnak obelisks, one of which is now at Constantinople (§§629 ff.),⁵ and two pairs of flagstaves for the temple façade, of course of cedar, tipped with electrum. But the relief shows the widest range of temple furniture: chests, a varied array of exquisite vessels; altars, and temple doors; besides ornaments for the divine statue, chiefly elaborate necklaces; the whole series being of gold, silver, bronze, and costly stones, especially lapis lazuli. The vessels bear the general inscription:

Very numerous; from the yearly dues (htr).

544. The purpose of the gifts is indicated by such accompanying inscriptions as the following:

Over a jar:

(Of) alabaster; filled with pure ointment of the divine things.

By rich necklaces:

Ornaments of the "Appearance Festival;"⁶ amulets upon the divine limbs.

⁴On the south wall of the passage south of the sanctuary; published by Champollion, Monuments, IV, 316, 317; partially by Rosellini, Monumenti, Text, III, 7, plate opp. p. 125; and Rosellini, Monumenti Civili, 57; partially by Burton, Excerpta hieroglyphica, 29; and Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1185 ff.; and see Birch, Archceologia, XXXV, 155.

⁵In the relief, this obelisk bears the complete dedication, of which only the first half is preserved on the original in Constantinople. See Breasted, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 39, 55 ff., and infra, § 630, where the entire dedication will be found.

⁶When the god appears in procession.
545. The source of the gifts also appears thus:
Over armlet, necklace, etc.:
(Of) gold, and much costly stone; ornaments of his majesty.
Over a vase:
(Of) costly stone, which his majesty made according to the design of his own heart.a

546. Before these gifts, on the right, Amon sits enthroned, receiving them from Thutmose III on the left, before whom are the words:
Presentation of monuments by the king — — — , that he may be given life like Re, forever.b

547. It is clear from this and the following document that the beginning of Thutmose III’s conquests in Asia marks a sudden and profound change in the cultus of Amon, occasioned by the enormous and entirely disproportionate wealth which from now on is poured into his treasury. We see here the beginning of that power and wealth to which the most remarkable witness is the Papyrus Harris (IV, 182–412).

Fortress in Lebanon

548. —— in the land of Retenu (Ṛtu) as a fortress which his majesty built in his victories among the chiefs of Lebanon (Ṛ-mn-n), the name of which is: “Menkheperre (Thutmose III)-is-the-Binder-of-the-Barbarians.”

aThe making of these vessels is depicted in the tomb of Menkheperreseneb, accompanied by the same remark (§ 775), showing that they were really designed by Thutmose III himself, and that the fact was thought worthy of remark there as well as here. He says the same thing in § 164, l. 43.

bThere are other such short inscriptions of a single word or more, but they are as yet inadequately published. One is of especial interest. Over an offering-table made of four ḫp-signs, precisely like the great alabaster altar recently found at Abusir, are the words: “(Of) shining alabaster of Hatnub.”

cThe text has “my.”

dThese victories in the Lebanon must have been won on first the expedition after the Megiddo victory, for they are here referred to as preceding the king’s return to Egypt from that expedition (l. 2). The three cities which he captured in the Lebanon are enumerated in the First Campaign, l. 16 (§ 436). Of the historians only Brugsch (Geschichte, 318) and Meyer (240) have noted this march to Lebanon.
Arrival in Thebes

549. Behold, he landed at Thebes, his father, Amon, being . My majesty established for him a "Feast of Victory" for the first time, when my majesty arrived from the first victorious expedition, overthrowing wretched Retenu (Rtnw) and widening the borders of Egypt in the year 23, by the victories which he decreed to me, leading — .

First Feast of Victory

550. [The first "Feast of Victory" was celebrated at (the feast)] the first feast of Amon, in order to make it of five days' duration.

Second Feast of Victory

551. The second "Feast of Victory" was celebrated at (the feast): "Day-of-Bringing-in-the-God," the second feast of Amon, in order to make it of five days' duration.

Third Feast of Victory

552. The third "Feast of Victory" was celebrated at the fifth feast of Amon in (the temple): "Gift-of-Life," the day of [in order to make it of five days' duration].

aSqueeze and photograph.

bAs the next line shows, there were three "Feasts of Victory," but the first is here referred to as celebrated on his arrival. On these feasts, see Breasted, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 123 ff.

c§§ 408 ff. Brugsch has "22," which is, of course, an error.

eAmon.

fThe restoration is certain from the other feasts; only the name of the Feast of Amon, with which the first feast of victory coincided, being unknown.

gLit., "in order to cause that it take place during (m) 5 days."

hThis is the feast mentioned by Piankhi (IV, 836, l. 26), who gives the date as the second of Hathor, which thus determines the date of the second Feast of Victory.

iThis is the name (hnkt⁻² nh) of the mortuary temple (Memnonium) of Thutmose III on the west shore at Thebes (cf. Recueil, XIX, 86-89). It stood at the northeast end of the line of temples (see Baedeker, "Necropolis of Thebes," opp. p. 254); as the earliest known reference to this building, it is particularly interesting, because it shows that already in his twenty-third year, Thutmose III's mortuary temple was complete and in use (see also Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 139).

jThe name of the Amon Feast here followed, the order being different from that in the first two feasts.
Offerings for the Feasts of Victory

553. [My majesty established] a great oblation for the "Feast of Victory," which my majesty made for the first time, consisting of bread, beer, bull-calves, bulls, fowl, antelopes, gazelles, ibexes, incense, wine, fruit, white bread, offerings of everything good.

Amon's Voyage to Luxor

554. [Year 23, second month] of the first season, (day) 14, when the majesty of this august god proceeded, to make his voyage in his southern Opet (Luxor); my majesty established for him a great oblation for this day at the entrance into Luxor, consisting of bread, bull-calves, bulls, fowl, incense, wine, from the first of the victories which he (Amon) gave me, in order to fill his storehouse, peasant-serfs, in order to make for him royal linen linen, linen, linen; — peasants performed the work of the fields, in order to make the harvest, to fill the storehouse of my father [Amon] to the goodly way.

Gifts of Slaves

555. Statement of the Asiatics, male and female, the negroes and negresses, which my majesty gave to my father Amon, from the year 23 until the recording of this tablet upon this sanctuary: 1,578 Syrians.

aHaving enumerated the three feasts, with their dates, he now proceeds to the celebration and the oblations to be offered.

bThe numeral is partially broken out; but it can be clearly proven to be two. See Breasted, Zeit­schrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 125 ff. This date is very important, as it shows at what time Thutmose III was already in Thebes on his return from the first campaign, the length of which is thus determined. See the calendar of the campaign in § 409.

cThis is the beautiful ceremony of the god's voyage in his sacred barge, called at Thebes "Userhetamon" (for a description of the barge made for this purpose by Ramses III, see IV, 209). It was probably on the above occasion that the officer Amenemhab officiated (see his inscription, § 809, ll. 33, 34). It was on the day of the return to Karnak from this voyage, called the "Day-of-Bringing-in-the-God," that the Second "Feast of Victory" began. It therefore continued for five days after the return, during which the Second Amon Feast also continued (see Zeit­schrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 126).

dThe "[spoil] from the first, etc.," was probably mentioned as part of the oblation.

eThe concluding words of the annals are: "from the year XXI[II] until the year [X]XXXII, when this tablet was recorded upon this sanctuary;" hence the year 42 was probably also the year when the feast inscription was recorded.
Gifts of Cattle

556. ——— of the south and north: 3 loan-cows of the cattle of Zahi; 1 loan-cow of the cattle of Kush; total, 4 loan-cows; in order to draw the milk thereof into jars of electrum each day, and to cause (it) to be offered [to] my father Ṭ[Amon].

Gift of Three Cities

557. My majesty gave to him three cities in Retenu the Upper: Nuges (}=nyw-g-s) was the name of one, Yenoam (Y-nw-c₃-mw) was the name of another, Herenkeru (Hw-r-n₃-rw) was the name of another. The dues consisting of the b'impost of the fiscal year,b the divine offerings, [of] my father Amon —.

Ancient Offerings Increased

560. Truth of the Record

570. I have not uttered exaggeration, in order to boast of that which I did, saying: "I have done something," although my majesty had not done it. I have not done (anything) to people, against which contradiction might be uttered. I have done this for my father saying something which was not done; because he knoweth heaven, and knoweth earth, he seeth the whole earth hourly. I swear as Re loves me, as my father praises me, as my nostrils are filled with satisfying life, I have done this.

Instructions to Priests

\footnotesize{\textsuperscript{g}Engraved upon the walls of his tomb in the necropolis of Thebes, which was noted by Champollion (\textit{Notices descriptives}, I, 505, Tomb 12; hence not "discovered" by Ebers, as he stated (\textit{Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft}, 30, p. 391). Ebers, however, did discover and publish the text: first in \textit{Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache}, 1873, 3-9 (corrections by Ebers and} campaigns of Thutmose III (ll. 3–32), and his subsequent favor and service under Amenhotep II (§§ 807 ff., ll. 32–46). It forms a very important supplement to the Annals of Thutmose III, but unfortunately does not insert the dates of the campaigns nor follow a chronological order.

The old soldier seems to have narrated to some scribe, who recorded them, the more important incidents and adventures of his career as they occurred to him, without attempt at order, beyond the involuntary association of events that belong to the same campaign. This narrative he had engraved beside his own figure on the wall of his tomb, as he is represented standing in the presence of Amenhotep II, to whom this recital of his life is evidently directed.

575. Beginning with a battle in the Negeb (year 39), he proceeds to three battles in Naharin, and the capture of Senzar (year 33), followed by the capture of Kadesh (year 30). The name of the next country (———h?) is mutilated, and this is followed by a battle in Tikhsi (probably year 35), and the elephant hunt at Niy (year 33); while the whole series concludes, as it should, with the siege of Kadesh on the last campaign of Thutmose III in the year 42. Arranged in chronological order, Amenemhab records the following campaigns:

Sixth Campaign, Year 30—

Capture of Kadesh ($585$).

Eighth Campaign, Year 33—
Capture of Senzar; three battles in Naharin (§§ 581–84, and 588), and elephant hunt at Niy ($ 588).

Tenth Campaign, Year 35—Battle in Tikhisi ($ 587).

Fourteenth Campaign, Year 39—Battle in the Negeb ($ 580).

Seventeenth Campaign, Year 42—
Siege of Kadesh ($ 589).

Following the campaigning is a feast at Thebes, possibly that of the fourteenth of Pakhons, on Thutmose III's return from his first campaign ($ 550). The death of the old king is then narrated with the date, from which we may compute the exact length of his reign—fifty-three years, ten months, and twenty-six days.

576. This biography affords us fleeting glimpses of the arduous tasks which beset the remarkable campaigns of Thutmose III, of which the Annals offer us little or nothing. The first campaign in Naharin (year 33) brought three successive battles in which Amenemhab distinguished himself; of these the Annals mention only one, without referring to the place where it occurred.

577. These adventures of Amenemhab are, of course, typical of a host of others, which fell to the lot of the Egyptian soldier in Syria. Some of them found place in folktales, and one has survived in the story of the capture of Joppa by Thutiy, one of Thutmose III's generals, a whose reality is vouched for by his tomb and other contemporaneous monuments of his.\textsuperscript{a} The manuscript of the story is about 200 years later.

\textbf{578.} Besides his biography, Amenemhab's tomb contained a series of scenes showing him in the exercise of certain of his functions as a deputy of the army, especially introducing the officers of the commissariat to the king to report (?) on the maintenance of the army.\textsuperscript{b} His tomb also contains other references to his career, like those inserted among his titles:

Attendant of his lord on his expeditions in the countries of the south and north, not separated from the Lord of the Two Lands on the battlefield in the hour of repelling millions of men.\textsuperscript{c}

He was evidently a favorite of Thutmose III, and may have owed his favor to his wife, who was the royal nurse, possibly of Thutmose III himself.

\textit{Introduction}

\textbf{579.} The officer, Amenemhab; he says:

"I was the very faithful one of the sovereign, L. P. H., the wise-hearted of the King of Upper Egypt, the excellent-hearted of the King of Lower Egypt. I followed my lord on his expeditions in the northern and the southern country. He desired that I should be the companion of his feet, while he was upon the battlefield of his victories, while his valor fortified the heart."

aThis is clearly the Hebrew Negeb= "south country;" the fourteenth campaign of the Annals was against the Bedwin (Shasu) of this region.

bThe following three battles all took place on a campaign in Naharin, probably that of year 33 (§§ 476–87), as he later mentions another in Naharin, which would correspond with that of year 35.

cIdentified by Müller (Asien und Europa, 259 f.), with the heights (Mons Casius) on the south shore of the seaward stretch of the Orontes by Antioch. But ts’t ("height") does not mean "Ufer," and Mons Casius could have been much more easily identified by the scribe by mentioning the Orontes, rather than the distant Aleppo. Evidently some height not far from Aleppo is meant, for which Gebel Sim c an (2,700 feet high) answers admirably. It is but slightly north of west of Aleppo, but the Egyptian did not carry a compass, and any traveler of today would speak of it as west of Aleppo, and refer to his table of bearings for the exact direction. But there is a ruin by Dânân directly west of Aleppo, on a height of nearly 1,100 feet, which will do equally well.

dThe rendering of Brugsch (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1873, 144): "13 Wurfspeesse von Eisen und mit Gold ausgelegt," is entirely unjustifiable. The material (hsmn) precedes as usual; then follows the object made of it, viz., ynb, which is some article of which each of the thirteen captured men carried one. Bronze helmets are mentioned in Annals (year 35, l. 41), and perhaps it is not an accident that "13 inlaid corselets and 13 bronze suits of armor" are also mentioned in the Naharin campaign of year 35, l. 41 (§ 501).

eThis was on the northern march described in the Annals (§ 479, l. 18).

I fought hand to hand before the king, I brought off a hand there. He gave to me the gold of honor; list thereof: — 13— two silver rings."

Capture of Kadesh

585. "Again I beheld his bravery, while I was among his followers. [He] captured [the city of] 14Kadesh (Ķd-šw);d I was not absent from the place where he was; I brought off two men,e lords (m-r^2-y-n^2), as [living prisoners; I set them] 15before the king, the Lord of the Two Lands, Thutmose (III), living forever. He gave to me gold because of bravery, before the whole people — — —; 16list thereof: of the finest gold: a lion; 2 necklaces, 2 flies,f 4 arm rings."

Campaign in Unknown Country

586. "I saw my lord in — — — 17— — — in all his forms in the country of the endsg of [the earth] — — — 18Ha — (Ḫ^2 —). Then I was raised to be the — — f — — of the army, like — — ."

fSee Breasted, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archxology, March, 1900, 7 f. Ebers' corrected text (in Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, 30, Taf. II, l. 16) has 〈d〉, an error for 〈f〉, as in l. 21.

gSee Annals, year 35, l. 38 (§ 498), and "Hymn of Victory" (§ 661, l. 20). This was probably on the march from the coast to Naharin, on the second campaign against that country.
Battle in Tikhsi

587. "Again I beheld his victory in the country of Tikhsi (Ty-h-sy) the wretched, in the city of Mero— (Mryw —). I fought hand to hand therein before the king. I brought off Asiatists, 3 men, as living prisoners. Then my lord gave to me the gold of honor; list thereof: 2 golden necklaces, 4 arm rings, 2 flies, a lion, a female slave, and a male slave."

Elephant Hunt in Niy

588. "Again I beheld another excellent deed which the Lord of the Two Lands did in Niy (Ny y). He hunted 120 elephants, for the sake of their tusks and —. I engaged the largest which was among them, which fought against his majesty; I cut off his hand while he was alive before his majesty, while I stood in the water between two rocks. Then my lord rewarded me with gold; [he] gave — — — and 3 changes of clothing."

Siege of Kadesh

589. "The prince of Kadesh sent forth a mare before [the army]; in order to —, she entered among the army. I pursued after her on foot, with my sword, and I ripped open her belly; I cut off her tail, I set it before the king; while there was thanksgiving to god for it! He gave (me) joy, it filled my body, rejoicing, he endued my limbs."

Assault on Kadesh

590. "His majesty sent forth every valiant man of his army, in order to pierce the wall for the first time, which Kadesh had made.

*eThe preposition is incomplete.
*fThe phrase occurs not infrequently, denoting the thanks of a king for the faithfulness of a servant; e.g., Amenemhet (I, 520, l. 14) The impersonal form merely indicates that it was the king who gave thanks.
I 30 was the one who pierced it, being the first of all the valiant; no other before me did (it). I went forth, I brought off 312 men, a (m-ṛ² - y-n²) lords, as living prisoners. Again my lord rewarded me because of it, with 32 every good thing for satisfying the heart, of the king's presence."

Feast at Thebes

591. "I made this capture while [I] was an officer of the navy ——— 33 I was the commander of [—] [His vessel] — I was the chief of his associates 34 on the voyage — — at his beautiful Feast b of Opet, when all the land was in acclamation."

Death of Thutmose III

592. 35 "Lo, the king completed his lifetime of many years, splendid in valor, in [migh]t, 36 and in triumph; from year 1 to year 54, third month of the second season, the last day c (of the month) under [the majesty of] 37 King Menkheperre (Thutmose III), triumphant. a Apposition.

b This is perhaps the celebration of the Feast of Southern Opet on the fourteenth of Paophi, after the return from the first campaign (§ 550), which Amenemhab here relates after the campaigns exactly as the inscription of Feasts and Offerings continues the Annals.

c That is the thirtieth of the seventh month (Phamenoth); as he was crowned on the fourth of the ninth month (Pakhons), he lacked one month and four days of concluding his fifty-fourth year, dying on the seventeenth of March, while his fifty-fourth year would have been completed on the nineteenth of the following April (his coronation day coming over thirteen days earlier than when he was crowned fifty-four years earlier). If born before his father's accession, as seems probable, he was at least eighty-four years old at his death.

d This phrase is rendered by Brugsch (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1873, 134): "es ging unter die Sonnenscheibe," for which he gives excellent reasons; but in Ineni (§ 46, l. 4), the pronoun "he" is expressed, rendering B's translation impossible. See also IV, 988 E and 988 G.

e Fragments of a great granite doorway some forty feet high through the center of Pylon VII (Baedeker's plan), the northernmost of the southern pylons, were but even from the fragments the great historical value of the monument is evident. It contained a record of Thutmose III's military career as an explanation of the sources of the costly materials used on this pylon and other good works in the Karnak temple. It begins with his coronation, passes to the reign of Thutmose II, and furnishes our most important proof of Thutmose III's coregency with Thutmose II, whom, as his predecessor, he officially calls his "father," as was customary on the monuments in referring to deceased Pharaohs. The record then proceeds to the first campaign, the battle of Megiddo, the siege of Megiddo, its capture, the prisoners, and the disposal of the prisoners and plunder in Karnak. Whether the succeeding campaigns were now taken up is uncertain. In any case, the record now included some account of the important eighth campaign, of the year 33, when Thutmose III first conquered the Euphrates country.

With some omissions of mutilated portions, necessitated by the exceedingly fragmentary character of some of the material, the fragments are as follows:

First Fragment

594. Year 1, first month of the third season (ninth month), the fourth day, occurred the coronation of the king's-son.

Second Fragment

The inscription is in vertical lines, of which there were at least fourteen, computed by Legrain to have had a combined length (if set end to end) of 200 meters. Of all this the surviving fragments contain but a small fraction.

\textbf{GREAT KARNAK BUILDING INSCRIPTION}\textsuperscript{d}

599. This inscription contained the record of Thutmose III's buildings, erected after the beginning of his wars.\textsuperscript{e} In particular, it recounts the erection of one of his extensive additions to the east end of the great Karnak temple. The inscription is unfortunately badly mutilated, only the introductory lines being preserved, but we see that it recorded the erection of Thutmose III's splendid colonnaded halls and sanctuary, which form the eastern extension of the Karnak temple;\textsuperscript{f} for it was a building so extensive that an old shrine of Nun had to be removed farther eastward.

600. There was a reason, hitherto overlooked, for the erection of these eastern halls by Thutmose III, which

\textsuperscript{b}Legrain's G, 279.
\textsuperscript{d}A large granite stela, found by Mariette in the great Karnak temple, now in Cairo; fragments of only seventeen lines are preserved; text: Mariette, \textit{Karnak}, 12.
\textsuperscript{f}According to an altar found at Karnak, this building was called: "\textit{Men-kheperre-is-Glorious-in-Monuments}" (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1879, 137). An altar with the same inscription was reported at Salonichi (\textit{ibid.}, 1868, 78 ff.), and is possibly identical with the first. See also § 560 for the only other occurrence of the name in Thutmose III's time. This name of Thutmose III's sanctuary was still in use in the reign of Takelot II, 650 years later (IV, 753).
must be noted here. The colonnaded hall built by Thut­ mose I between his two pylons (IV and V) formed the entrance-hall to the Karnak temple, and at this time was the largest hall in the building, the only one sufficiently large for a procession of the god, such as that which took place there when Thutmose III was installed as king by the priests. Now, this hall had been rendered unfit for use by Hatshepsut's strange insertion of her obelisks there (§ 304);
it now stood roofless, with a small group of six columns at its northern end. Of these, four were the original cedar columns of Thutmose I, which Thutmose III now renewes, recording the renewal on one of them, as follows:*

601. "He (Thutmose III) made (it) as his monument for his father, like — — — of sandstone, painted with figures of my father Amon, together with figures of my majesty, and figures of my father, the Good God (viz., Thutmose I). Behold, as for that which was found going to ruin among them, my majesty established it with sandstone, in order that this temple might be established — 3 — like the heavens, abiding upon their four pillars, as a monument, great, excellent and useful for the lord of eternity; of granite, ivory, of sandstone, — — — silver, of the Beautiful-faced (Ptah). I swear as [Re] loves me, [as my father, Amon, favors me, b I made it] anew in the north side, being an increase of that which my father had made.

602. Thus the north end of the hall, the end where Thutmose III had been stationed when he was proclaimed king, was repaired by him, but the south end was still without columns and roofless, and the obelisk-bases had usurped the room of eight columns, over a third of the entire colonnade. The hall could not be made fit for great ceremonials, with the obelisks preventing the replacement of over a third of the roof. Thutmose III therefore built a masonry sheathing around each of the obelisks, covering the inscriptions of Hatshepsut, and desisted c from any further attempt to restore the hall where he had been raised to the throne. But as such a great ceremonial hypostyle was of course indispensible, he built the splendid colonnaded halls still standing at the other or east end of the temple. On his return from the second d campaign, in the year 24, the building was begun, and on the thirtieth of Mekhir, that is, in the latter part of February, some two months before his departure for Syria on the third campaign, the brilliant

603. The architraves of the building bear the following dedications:

He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, erecting for him an august central hypostyle anew, of fine white sandstone (variant, fine limestone of Ayan).

Another form of this dedication is an epitheton attached to Thutmose III's name:

Establishing the house of his father, Amon-Re, of fine white limestone of Ayan.

His majesty commanded to record the names of his fathers, to increase their offerings, and to fashion statues to establish for them divine offerings anew, as increase of [what was formerly].

Pharaohs, his ancestors who were worshiped in this temple, and whose statues were set up in it. It is to this list that the dedication inscription refers.

This ancestral character of the temple is also referred to in another inscription of Thutmose III, which designates the temple as "a monument for his father, the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, Thutmose I, and a monument of his fathers, the kings of Upper and Lower Egypt."

The architect in charge of these great additions was the first prophet of Amon, Menkheperreseneb, who briefly recounts his connection with them in his tomb inscriptions (§§ 772 ff.).

The great building inscription on our granite stela is as follows:

The Oracle

606. The king himself commanded to put in writing, according to the statement of the oracle, to execute monuments before those who are on earth. My majesty desired to make a monument to my father, Amon-Re, in Karnak, erecting a dwelling, beautifying the horizon, adorning for him Kaftet-hir-nebes, the favorite place of my father from the beginning, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes. I made it for him upon this block of enduring stone, exalting and magnifying greatly, since — water to the shrine of Nun, on arriving at his seasons.

BUILDING INSCRIPTION OF THE KARNAK PTAH-TEMPLE

This inscription records how Thutmose III found the Ptah-temple, just north of the great hypostyle in Karnak, built of brick, with wooden columns and doorposts, falling to ruin. The occasion of rebuilding, or at least of new offerings, was the return from the first campaign, and the inscription contains interesting references (§616) to the investment and capture of Megiddo on that campaign. From the plunder thus obtained the temple was also newly and richly furnished. As this temple was one of the stopping-places of Amon, when his processions moved out from the Karnak temple, on all feast days, offerings are provided for Amon on such occasions (§§615, 617). At such times also the lay priesthood was to receive an offering, as well as the royal statue which was carried in procession (§618); and the usual daily offering was made to Ptah (§619), increased by certain new offerings now established for the first time.

It was published and translated by Maspero, Comptes rendus de l'académie des inscriptions et belles-lettres, 1900, Tome I, 113-23, with facsimile plate; and again by Legrain, Annales, III, 107-11. I had also a copy of the original, kindly loaned me by Schaefer.*
These were further increased on the king's return from a subsequent campaign late in September (§ 621). With offerings for Mut-Hathor (§ 622), the inscription closes.

These offerings are all "for the sake of life, prosperity, and health" of the Pharaoh; that is, they are the official sacrifices in his behalf, which were begun as soon as a king was crowned (cf. § 57).

610. The stela was badly defaced, when the persecution of Ikhnaton caused the chiseling out of the entire relief and every occurrence of the names of other gods. This defacement is important as showing that the persecution of Ikhnaton was not confined to Amon. The restorers of Seti I at Thebes were so accustomed to inserting the name of Amon that they have here inserted it where the titles clearly show that Ptah was original.

611. The dedication inscription on the wall of the Ptah-temple also attributes the building to Thutmose III, of whom it says:.

[He made (it) as his monument] for his father, Ptah, the beautiful of face, lord of "Life of the Two Lands," presiding over the great seat; erecting for him the house of Ptah anew [of] fine white sandstone, doors of new cedar of the best of the terraces. It is more beautiful than it was before. Lo, my majesty found this house of brick — — — of the ancestors. His majesty commanded to make for him this temple of sandstone, established as an eternal work, made to flourish, an abiding monument — —, which the Son of Re, Thutmose (III), makes for him.

612. Our stela inscription is surmounted by a relief, down the middle of which is the following record of Seti I's restoration:

\[\text{Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1188 = Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 7 = Legrain, Annales, III, 98, 99.}\]

On the right, Thutmoses III offers wine to Ptah. Behind the king is the divine wife (hm·t ntr) Sityoh (S^t y c h), offering ointment. On the left, before the same god, Thutmoses III, offering a libation of water, is followed by the same princess, b again offering ointment.

The inscription below the relief is as follows:

Introduction

Building the New Temple

614. My majesty commands that there be built the temple of Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, in Thebes, which is a station (w^t hy·t) of my father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, wherein he [—]d on the day of “Bringing-in-the-God,” and all his feasts d during the year, when he proceeds to the treasury of the south (tp rsy). Lo, my majesty found this temple built of brick and wooden columns, e and its doorway of wood, beginning to go to ruin. 4 My majesty commands to stretch the cord upon this temple anew, erected of fine white sandstone, and the walls around it f of brick, as a work enduring for eternity. 5 My majesty erected for it doors of new cedar of the best of the terraces, mounted with Asiatic copper, f corresponding to 1 (hjt) the house of Ptah anew, in the name of my majesty. 6 Never was done for him the like, before my majesty.

New Equipment of the Temple

615. My majesty made him rich, and I made him greater than before. I overlaid for him his great seat with electrum of the best of the countries. All vessels were of gold and silver, and every splendid, costly stone, clothing of fine linen, white linen, ointments of divine ingredients, to perform his pleasing ceremonies at the feasts of the beginnings of the seasons, which occur in this temple, when my majesty caused him to proceed, to assume his throne.

Offerings on Return from First Campaign

616. I filled his temple with every good thing, with oxen, geese, incense, wine, offerings of all sorts of fruit, at the return of my majesty from (hr) the country of Retenu (Rtnw), on the first victorious campaign, which my father, Amon, gave to me, when he gave to me all the allied countries of Zahi (D 3 -hy), shut up in one city. The fear of my majesty entered their hearts, (they) fell, (they) slunk back; when I reached them, there was not one left who stirred (wtwt) among them. I snared them in one city, I built around them with a rampart of thick wall, to — their nostrils of the breath of life, by the fame of my father, Amon, who guides me into a prosperous way by all his good designs, which he has wrought for my majesty. He has made great the victories of my majesty above (those of) any king who has been before.

New Offerings for Amon

617. My majesty commanded that his altar should be supplied with every good thing. My majesty commanded that offerings be added anew for my father, Amon, in Karnak, when he rested there: heaps of offerings supplied with everything," for the day of "Bringing-in-the-God" and every feast of Amon, being an increase of what was before, for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of my majesty — a This relative clause (rdyn ny yt' y) is common. Maspero's rendering, "Je fis en effet ces dons à mon père, etc.," is possible only by overlooking one of the n's.

b This shows the wide extent of Zahi, evidently far beyond the limits of Phoenicia.
c The text has been restored here, and may be corrupt; "fell" (hr) may be the particle "then, so."
d Some verb like "deprive."
e This is a cultus term for a kind of oblation. See § 566.
f Emend after l. 19.
g Amon is here wrongly restored in an erasure extending over from the next line. The ancient restoration "my majesty" (hn-y) is quite right, as is shown by l. 19; Maspero (Comptes rendus, 1900, I, 115) corrects the restoration, and appeals to l. 19 as supporting his correction; but his quotation of l. 19 overlooks hn.
§ 620] INSCRIPTION OF KARNAK PTAH-TEMPLE 247

Offerings for the Priesthood and Royal Statue

618. Now, when the majesty of this august god is satisfied with his offering (yḥ ‹ t), let one cause a "heap of offerings, supplied with everything" to be issued to the lay priests of the temple of my father, Amon, in Karnak; and 6 "heaps of offerings, supplied with everything" and with bread of the "Coming Forth" (to be issued) before the statue of millions of years of my majesty, which follows to this temple, which is in the domain of the majesty of this august god, for the sake of this offering, the name of which is: "Menkheperre-is-Great-in-Offerings."

Offerings for Ptah

619. Now, when this statue is satisfied with this offering, there shall be issued for the temple of Ptah, lord of truth, South-of-His-Wall, in Thebes, according to the measure of the customary offering, which is in this temple.

New Offerings for Ptah

620. My majesty has moreover commanded to found divine offerings anew for my father, Ptah-South-of-His-Wall in Thebes, consisting of 60 various loaves, 2 jars (ds) of beer, vegetables, bread of the daily offering of every day, as an increase of that which was before, for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of my majesty.

Now, when the god is satisfied with his offerings, let this offering be placed before [this] statue of my majesty, when the lay priesthood of the temple of Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, in Thebes, go forth. My majesty has commanded to have executed every contract of the court, for his father, Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, in Thebes ——— Amon in Karnak.

aThis is interpreting the loaf as determinative of the whole group; it is possible to separate it, as Maspero does, and read "six loaves from the bread of, etc."

bOr: "for the Coming Forth," in which case the parenthesis must be inserted after "bread," thus: ".... bread (to be issued) for the Coming Forth, etc."

cThis relative clause, as the gender shows, does not belong to "offering," but to "temple!" The order of words above is as in the original, which is very confused. Such royal statues are depicted in reliefs "following" in procession to the temple.

dFor another example of this use of this word (mḥt), see § 798; and the Treaty, III, § 377, 1. 14.

eThe restorer has absurdly inserted Amon here before Ptah!

fThe restoration has probably omitted this word.
Further Addition to Ptah's Offerings

621. First (month) of the first season (first month), twenty-sixth day. My majesty hath founded for him: "a bull, — jars (mnw) of wine, 2 geese, 4 great r—, 5 measures (dny t) of fruit, grain for 6 white loaves, 2 [bundles of vegetables],c 20 (l b) jars and 10 (ds) jars of beer, 5 table fowl, 200 various loaves of the divine offerings from the house (pr) of Amon, 4 measures of incense, — cakes, 20 white loaves, d for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of Pharaoh, fixed as annual dues, burned in the presence of this god every day.

Offerings for Mut-Hathor

622. My [majesty commands] to have executed every contract of the court for Mut-Hathor, mistress of Thebes, on the day of the "Altar-of-the-Feast," which takes place on the last day of the third month of the third season (eleventh month). [My majesty] has [founded] divine offerings of — jars of wine, 1 goose, 2 great r—, 4 measures (dny t) of fruit, grain for four white loaves, 2 bundles of vegetables, 2 (l b) jars of beer. 5 table-fowl, 25 [various loaves of the divine offerings, r—] of the garden, and every plant, burned in the presence of this goddess, every day.

[It is] my [majesty] who does all the things to be done in this house in this good hour, in which is the burning. It is my majesty who makes anew ————.

a This is about the twenty-third of September and was, of course, the time of the king's return with the plunder from some campaign of the preceding summer (see §§ 409 ff.).

b The numeral has been corrupted in the restoration.

c To be restored from l. 25.

d Maspero restores: nw = "of;" but the context demands the usual connection, viz., "for the sake of (hr d), etc.," which Schaefer read; and this is shown by the photograph to be correct.

e Maspero has "fête de faire être;" but the phrase "cause to be" is usual for the taking place of a feast. See Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 124 f., where it occurs three times, and the Elephantine appendix to the Amâda stela, § 798.

A participle referring to the entire preceding series of offerings; the same above in l. 23.
623. In celebration of the usual jubilee on the thirtieth anniversary of his being proclaimed crown prince, and on recurrences* of the same feast, Thutmose III erected a series of at least seven\textsuperscript{b} obelisks, of which five were in Thebes and two in Heliopolis. The first of these feasts must have taken place in his thirtieth year as king, because his proclamation as crown prince was coincident with his coronation. He had no prospect of succeeding until he was crowned. These obelisks are chronologically important, and bear inscriptions, some of which possess great historical value.

I. KARNAK OBELISKS

624. If we exclude those of Hatshepsut, there are now no obelisks erected by Thutmose III remaining in Karnak; for that of Thutmose I which he appropriated was not erected by Thutmose III (see §§ 105, 86 ff.), but only inscribed by him. In the year 42, however, he had already erected in Karnak four obelisks, for which he decreed offerings (§§ 563, 572). Whether he later erected more, we cannot tell, but it can hardly be an accident that other sources also refer to four at Karnak, two being recorded by the king \textsuperscript{a}A record of the celebration of a jubilee on the second of Pauni in year 33 is found in a tablet at el-Bersheh (Sharpe, \textit{Egyptian Inscriptions}, II, 47; again less accurately, II, 33). The monument is now destroyed.

The Lateran obelisk was, of course, not completed by Thutmose III. There is a small obelisk of his at Sion house; see Birch, \textit{History}, 102. A new obelisk of "Thotmes" (not stated which one) is mentioned in \textit{Egypt Exploration Fund Archaeological Report}, 98, 99, 22. See Breasted, "The Obelisks of Thutmose III and His Building Season in Egypt" (\textit{Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache}, 39, 55-61). himself and two mentioned in the tomb of Puemre (§§ 382 ff.) The former two are represented in a relief where Thutmose III is presenting to Amon a magnificent array of costly gifts in gold and silver and the like. Among these appear two obelisks each inscribed with titles, etc., of Thutmose III, followed on the one by the words:

He made (it) as his monument [for his father, Amon, lord of Thebes], erecting for him two great and mighty obelisks of granite; the pyramidions (being) of electrum; at the double façade of the temple.

As the inscription is different from that upon the obelisks in the tomb of Puemre, they must be a different pair. The inscriptions in the tomb of Menkheperreseneb also refer to "many obelisks and flagstaves" erected by him for Thutmose III at Thebes.

625. A scarab, issued in celebration of the erection of obelisks in Karnak, bears the words:

Thutmose III, whose obelisks abide in the house of Amon.

In addition to these four, for which we have chiefly inscriptional evidence, Thutmose III had at least one more

\(^b\)Brugsch and Rosellini represent this as erased, but Champollion has it in full, having doubtless inserted it from similar dedications.

\(^c\)See Ineni (§ 103, l. 8); Lepsius says of the obelisk in tomb of Puemre: "das pyramidion ist gelb gemalt," of course representing electrum (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 244). On the other obelisk the same inscription with the variant "obelisks" (for the dual).

\(^d\)None of these can be the Lateran obelisk, for it was not one of a pair; but the Constantinople obelisk is one of the first pair above mentioned, for the position, of the representations and the wording of the inscriptions tally exactly (the only difference is the omission of dsr-h3w in the Golden Horus name in the Karnak relief). See Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 39, Tafel III, 1 and 2 (opp. p. 56), and p. 57.

obelisk in Karnak, which has itself survived, though far from its original site, viz., the Lateran Obelisk.

II. LATERAN OBELISK

626. This obelisk has had an interesting history. It was intended by Thutmose III probably for the forecourt before his southern pylon (VIII) in Karnak. But he apparently died after it had reached its site, but before it was erected or inscribed. There it lay for thirty-five years in "the hands of the craftsmen" until it was piously erected and properly inscribed with Thutmose III's dedication, etc., by his grandson, Thutmose IV, who adds also his own inscription with an account of the monument's history thus far. It is herein distinctly stated that this is the first time that a single obelisk was erected. The next date of its history is that of its erection by Constantius in the Circus Maximus at Rome in 357 A.D. In 1587 it was discovered there broken into three pieces, and was set up on its present site in the next year by Pope Sixtus V.

The inscriptions of Thutmose III occupy the middle

I; Birch, Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, 2d ser., II, 228; de Horrack, Revue Archeologique, N. S., 1864, IX, 45 (incomplete); Marucchi, Gli obelischi egiziani di Roma, Tav. I and II.

b Thutmose III says it was set "in the forecourt of the temple over against Karnak:" Thutmose IV refers three times to its location: (1) when found it was lying "on the south side of Karnak;" (2) it was erected "in Karnak;" (3) it was erected "at the upper portal of Karnak." Taken altogether, these data show that in No. 3 the southern entrance through Pylon VIII is meant, and there the obelisk stood. There is a reference to the same portal in the inscription of Beknekhonsu (III, 567, l. 5), where it is also called the "upper portal." In both cases the same word (hr) is used for "upper." It is unusual in this sense, viz., referring to the river, but occurs twice in the same way in the inscription of Zoser (Sehel, ll. 16 and 30).

c Hence it was not paired with the Constantinople obelisk, as Wiedemann states (Aegyptische Geschichte, 365).

somewhere in Karnak, and is shown with its fellow in a relief there, in which the king offers the pair to Amon. The exact location of these obelisks, or of the pair erected by Puemre, is doubtless indicated by an inscription on a fragment of a sphinx found near Thutmose III’s southern pylon (VII) at Karnak, which reads: “He presented two obelisks of stone, one on each side of it” (Annales, IV, 9), evidently meaning the door of the pylon. The inscriptions on the Constantinople obelisk are as follows:

Dedication (South Side)

630. ........ c(Thutmose III); he made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes; erecting [for him very great obelisks of red granite, the pyramidions of electrum; that he may be given life, like Re, forever].

North Side

........ (Thutmose III), whom Atum reared as a child, in the arms of Neit, Divine Mother, to be king; who has taken all lands, the extent of time; lord of jubilees (hb-sd) ————.

East Side

631. ........ (Thutmose III), lord of victory, binder of every land, who makes his boundary as far as the Horns of the Earth, the marshes as far as Naharin (N-h-r-n) ————.

West Side

........ (Thutmose III), who crossed the “Great Bend” of Naharin (N-h-r-n) e with might and with victory at the head of his army, making a great slaughter [among them] ————.

aSee § 624 and note.

bPetrie (History of Egypt, II, 131 ff.) has shown that this obelisk must have been very high. He would for this reason identify it with the great obelisks of Thutiy’s inscription (§ 376), but those obelisks belonged to Hatshepsut, and, as we have seen, the Constantinople obelisk is certainly one of those shown in the Karnak relief (§ 624 and note).

cFull titulary except last fifth name.

dThe Karnak relief (§ 543) furnishes the lost conclusion of this dedication.

eThis is the campaign of the thirty-third year. See §§ 477 ff.
IV. LONDON OBELISK*

632. This obelisk, with its fellow, now in New York, stood in the temple of Heliopolis. Removed to Alexandria, they were erected before the temple of the Caesars there, in 13–12 B. C., by the Roman (?) architect Pontius, while Barbarus was prefect. The London obelisk, which had fallen early in the fourteenth century, was removed thither in 1877 and landed in England in January, 1878. It is 68½ feet high (Petrie, History of Egypt, II, 127).

633. Its inscriptions are not of great historical importance; the dedication is as follows:

............ Thutmose (III); he made (it) as his monument for his father, Harakhte, erecting for him two great obelisks; with pyramidion of electrum, at the fourth occurrence of the jubilee (ḥb-šd), because he so much loved his father. May the Son of Re, Thutmose (III), be [given life] through him (nf).

*Stands on the Thames embankment in London; published in Description, Antiquités, V, 32, 33 (partially and badly); Champollion, Monuments, IV, 445, 446; Burton, Excerpta hieroglyphica, 51; phototype, Gorringe, Egyptian Obelisks; Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 11, 30 (dedication only); King, Cleopatra's Needle (London, 1886).

bThe current date, 22 B. C., is an error, to be corrected from the revised text of Merriam (The Greek and Latin Inscriptions on the Obelisk-Crab, by A. C. Merriam, New York, 1883) on the bronze crabs which were inserted under the obelisks at their re-erection. Those under the fallen London obelisk had, of course, disappeared; on a claw found under the other (New York) obelisk, and now in the Metropolitan Museum (New York), both the Greek and Latin versions are preserved. Merriam's copy reads:

BARBAPOΣ ANEΘHKE
APXITEKTONOUYTOΣ
PONTIOY

Α[Ν]ΝΟ ΧVIII CAESARIS
BARBARUS PRAEF AEGYPTI POSUIT
ARCHITCTANTE PONTIO

(Ligatures and missing portions of broken letters I have not indicated).

cIf he be the same as the "Pontios" of the fountain in the garden of Mæcenas (Merriam, Obelisk-Crab, 47), he was an Athenian.

dSee Gorringe.

eaThe middle lines are by Thutmose III; the side lines by Ramses II.

fOn the Thames embankment, in 1901, I could see only three strokes of the numeral; nor (with an opera-glass) could I discern room for a fourth; but Brugsch read it when it was prostrate (Thesaurus, V, 1130) as four.
V. NEW YORK OBELISK

634. It was removed to New York with admirable skill and success by Lieutenant-Commander Gorringe, landing in July, 1880. Unfortunately, the dedication inscription is illegible, and the others contain only the conventional praise of the king. They are as follows:

East Side

635. Horus: Mighty Bull, Shining in Thebes; Favorite of the Two Goddesses; Enduring in Kingship like Re in Heaven; Born of Atum, Lord of Heliopolis, Son of his body, whom Thoth fashioned; whom they fashioned in the Great House in the beauty of their limbs, knowing that he would exercise a kingship enduring forever, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre (Thutmose III), beloved of Atum, the great god, and the divine ennead; given life, stability, and satisfaction, like Re, forever.

North Side

636. Horus: Taking the white crown; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre; Golden Horus: satisfied in smiting the rulers of the countries approaching him, according as his father, Re, has decreed for him victory against every land, and might of the sword by his arms, in order to widen the boundaries of Egypt; Son of Re, Thutmose (III) — —.

bFor its earlier history, see § 632.

dThe inscriptions of Thutmose III occupy the middle lines; the side lines are by Ramses II, as in London.

eThis is all in one cartouche, and the words ms and Thoth, appearing together below, are perhaps intended to be joined as "Thutmose," although they belong to the two separate lines, "Born . . . . . fashioned," above.

fSee Lateran Obelisk, north side, right line (§ 831).
MEDITNET HABU BUILDING INSCRIPTIONS

637. The small Eighteenth Dynasty temple of Medinet Habu, on the west shore at Thebes, is so shut in by the larger buildings later erected around it that it is little noticed by the modern visitor. It was begun by Thutmose I. Although Hatshepsut certainly had a share in it, the dedication inscriptions attribute its erection to Thutmose III, but refer to an earlier temple on the spot, meaning the work of Thutmose I. They are as follows:

638. ... He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods, making for him a great temple upon the district of the West of Thutmose III (called): "Splendid-is-the-Seat-of-Amon;" of fine white sandstone; that he might therefore be given life, forever.

639. ... He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon, lord of Thebes, presider over "Splendor-of-the-West," erecting for him a splendid adytum of fine white sandstone, (in) his accustomed place of the first beginning. My majesty established it anew, that he might therefore be given life forever.

640. ... erecting for him his splendid seat of the first beginning, establishing it as an eternal work, his majesty having found it beginning to fall to ruin; that he might be given life like Re, forever.

641. ... making for him "Splendor-of-the-West," to shelter its lord and these lords of the district of Thamut (Td mw t).

aSee Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1304–6.
bThe following three texts are from Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 38, c, and d. I have omitted in all the full fivefold titulary of Thutmose III.
cChiseled out and restored.
dOr: "Amon-is-Splendid-in-Throne" (as to his throne), Ymn ðsr-ys't. It is abbreviated as ðsr-ys't, and probably also as Ymn ðsr on a set of foundation deposit tools (Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1298, 1299). Another name of the temple or district is "Splendor-of-the-West."
eTitulary and introduction are omitted. On this form see Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 156, as Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 38, d, is wrongly reconstructed.
fRougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 130, and Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, xxxvi; titulary and introduction omitted as above. The other two are also from the same sources.
He made "Chamber-of-the-Cemetery" for his fathers, the lords of the splendid region.

He made "Possessed-of-Eternity" for his father Ptah-Tatenen of "Lord-of-Life".

HELIOPOLIS BUILDING INSCRIPTIONS

642. A round-topped stela bears in the upper two-thirds a relief showing Thutmose III, offering an oblation to Harakhte. Below the relief is the following inscription:

Year 47, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Menkheperre; Son of Re: Thutmose (III), [living] forever.

His majesty commanded to encircle this temple with a thick wall of stone-work, for his father Re-Harakhte forever, when he cleansed Heliopolis, the house of Re --- --- --- ---.

643. A doorpost in Cairo bears a dedication of Thutmose III, as follows:

He made (it) as his monument for his father Atum, lord of Heliopolis, making for him a doorway of benut (b.nw't) stone, (called): "Pure-are-the-Offerings-of-Menkheperre-Beloved-of-the-Gods-of-Heliopolis."

NUBIAN WARS

644. The records of Thutmose III's conquests in Nubia are very meager; although he had evidently been early active there, as is shown by his building of the Semneh temple (§§ 167 ff.), yet the first mention of a Nubian campaign is in his fiftieth year, when in passing through the canal at the first cataract he was obliged to clear it of stones, as recorded in his inscription, cut there at the time (§§ 649 ff.).

---

a Two others add: "for the father of his fathers, all the gods of the splendid region;" and "for his father, Amon-Re."

b Stela found by Lepsius at Heliopolis; limestone, 96 cm. high, now in Berlin, No. 1634. Published by Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 29, b; I had also my own photograph of the original, and the copy for the Berlin dictionary.

c One line, and perhaps more, lacking.

d Sharpe, Egyptian Inscriptions, II, 34.
645. Besides this, the king commemorated his victories in Nubia by having engraved upon the front of each tower of one of his pylons\(^a\) at Karnak a list\(^b\) of seventeen names of towns and districts captured there. Over one list is a relief,\(^c\) now in a very fragmentary state, representing the king sacrificing his Nubian foes before Amon. The scene is accompanied by the words:

__________ bringing\(^d\) the living prisoners to Egypt, all their herds being led to Egypt. He has filled the storehouse of his father, the lord of gods with — — — of the chiefs \(^e\) whom\(^f\) he has \(^g\) conquered\(^h\). The kings have not done it (before) in this land. His name shall abide forever and ever.

Over the other list was a similar inscription, now too fragmentary for translation.

646. A further and much fuller list was placed by the king in duplicate, one on each of the two towers of the sixth Karnak pylon, a list which contains no less than 115\(^d\) names of the towns and districts of the Nubian regions conquered.\(^e\) One of these lists was surmounted by a relief showing the Nubian god Dedun leading and presenting to Thutmose III the towns, etc., enumerated in the list. Over both the lists is the following inscription:

List of these south\(^f\) countries, the Nubian Troglodytes of Khenthen-nofer, whom his majesty overthrew, making a great\(^g\) slaughter among them, (whose) number is unknown, and carrying away all their subjects as living captives to Thebes, in order to fill the storehouse of his father,

\(^a\)Bouriant does not indicate clearly which pylon is meant, but says it is in front of the sanctuary.

\(^b\)Daressy, Recueil, XI, 154, 155.

\(^f\)The duplicate has "south and north!" but as the two lists are duplicates, and the Nubian god Dedun presents them to the king, "north" is certainly an error.

\(^g\)"Great" is from the duplicate.
Amon-Re, lord of Thebes. Lo, all lands are the subjects of his majesty, according as his father, Amon, has commanded.

647. Finally, on his southern pylon (VII) at Karnak, the king recorded a table of nearly, and possibly more than, 400 names of towns, districts, countries, etc., conquered in Nubia. It was accompanied by the same inscription as that over the lists on Pylon VI. The geography of Nubia is too little known to determine the limits of the territory included in these lists, and it is uncertain how far up the Nile Thutmose III’s conquests extended. As his son Amenhotep II reached the extreme southern limit at Napata, it is probable that Thutmose III’s wars at least prepared the way thither, if they did not include Napata.

648. A short inscription in the tomb of Ineni refers to captives and spoil from Nubia:

Among the negroes, given from chiefs and living captives, for divine offerings of Amon, when Kush, the wretched, was overthrown; together with the tribute of all countries, which his majesty gave to the temple of Amon as yearly dues, for the sake of the life, prosperity, and health of King Thutmose III.

The above document is corroborated by a record of such offerings placed by the king in the Karnak temple (§§ 541 ff.).

I. CANAL INSCRIPTION

649. On this expedition into Nubia, the king found the old Middle Kingdom canal of Sesostris III (I, 642 ff.)

\[b\]Piehl, Inscriptions, I, 129, Q-130, and p. 105.

\[c\]Piehl’s copy has $Hpr-k^2-R^c$, which would be Sesostris I; but \(mn\) of $Mn-Hpr-k^2-R\), $\ast-R\), has certainly fallen out, as offerings “for the sake of the life, etc.” were made only for living kings.

stopped up, although it had been cleared by his father, Thutmose I (§§ 74 ff.). He ordered it cleared, and was able to sail through without trouble on his return. He put up a record of the clearance, beside that of his father and in the identical language; a he also made the fishermen of Elephantine responsible for the yearly clearance of the passage in the future.

650. Year 50, first (month) of the third season (ninth month), day 22, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Men-kheperre (Thutmose III), given life.

His majesty commanded to dig this canal, after he had found it b stopped up with stones, (so that) no ship sailed upon it. He sailed down-stream upon it, his heart glad, having slain his enemies.

The name of this canal is: "Opening-of-This-Way-in-the-Beauty c of-Menkheperre-Living-Forever." The fishermen of Elephantine shall clear this canal each year.

II. INSCRIPTIONS OF NEHI, VICEROY OF KUSH

651. Nehi held the office of "King's-son," or viceroy of Kush, in the second half of the reign of Thutmose III (see § 61), beginning not later than the year 23, when he erected Thutmose III's record of victory at Wadi Halfa (§§ 411 ff.). He was evidently in charge of the alterations in the Semneh temple, later undertaken by Thutmose III. A mutilated inscription d of his in this temple speaks of "bringing stone . . . . . . . . . . in restoring the monument — of eternity — a This probably indicates that we are not to understand literally the identical statements made by his father as to his actually sailing on the canal. Thutmose III was now an old man of eighty years at least, and it is impossible that he should have accompanied the expedition himself.

b Lit., "after his finding (infinitive) it."

c It is, of course, the same as the Middle Kingdom canal, but is given a new name by each king.

d Outside, south wall, Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 47, a, below, at the right of the door; the "governor of the south countries," whose name is lost on the left of the door, belongs to the Ramsessid period, as he is adoring Ramses III.
— — [Governor of the] south [countries], Nehi (Nhy)."

Another record\(^a\) of his on the latest portion of the building, the northern addition,\(^b\) is too fragmentary for translation.

652. The grotto at Ellesiyeh\(^c\) dates from the fifty-second year\(^d\) of Thutmose III, and contains the following inscription\(^e\) of Nehi:

Bringing\(^f\) the tribute of the south countries, consisting of gold, ivory, and ebony, [by] the hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, satisfying the heart of the king at the Horns of the Earth,\(^g\) having access to the king, pleasant to the divine limbs; companion, approaching the mighty sovereign, vigilant for the lord of the palace, king's-son, governor of the south countries, Nehi.

He saith: "I am a servant useful to his lord, filling his house with gold, giving tribute to —, consisting of the impost of the south countries; whose\(^h\) praise comes forth in the presence of his lord;\(^h\) the king's-son, governor of the south countries, Nehi."

Another inscription\(^i\) of Nehi, containing only his name and titles, is on the island of Sai, one hundred miles above Semneh.

\(^i\) This inscription has been understood by Wiedemann as belonging to the tomb of Nehi; for he refers (Ägyptische Geschichte, 362) to this inscription to prove the statement that the Tomb of Nehi was at Silsileh (confusion with Ellesiyeh ?). The tomb of Nehi is unknown, as far as I have been able to find.

ings, including cattle, fowl, flowers, bread, all sorts of fruit, together with metal libation-vessels, necklaces, amulets, and pendants. The whole is accompanied by the following inscription:

654. Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre; he made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, [making] for him divine possessions, presenting to him all divine offerings, and very great feasts, which his majesty made for the first time as an increase of that which was before: giving an oblation of vessels of very plentiful fulness; necklaces, amulets, and pendants of real* electrum, brought to his majesty from the south countries as their yearly impost; that he may live forever.

HYMN OF VICTORYb

655. At the top, occupying over one-fourth of the stela, are two scenes of worship, in each of which Thutmose III, accompanied by the goddess of the Theban necropolis, Khaftet-hir-nebes (ḫt.t-hr-nbš), offers to Amon, with the usual superscriptions.c

The hymn itself in twenty-five lines occupying the remainder of the stela, is the best specimen of its class, and was later partly copied by scribes of Seti I for the wall of the great Karnak templed in which this tablet was set up. The hymn is of sufficient historical importance to be included here; although due allowance must be made for its rhetorical style, it is a very helpful supplement to the Annals.

Thou comest to me, thou exultest, seeing my beauty,
O my son, my avenger, Menkheperre, living forever.
I shine for love of thee,
My heart is glad at thy beautiful comings into my temple;
(My) two hands furnish thy limbs with protection and life.
How pleasing is thy pleasantness toward my body.a
I have established thee in my dwelling,
I have worked a marvel for thee;
I have given to thee might and victory against all countries,
I have set thy fame (even) the fear of thee in all lands.
Thy terror as far as the four pillars of heaven;
I have magnified the dread of thee in all bodies,
I have put the roaring of thy majesty among the Nine Bows.

Thou tramplest all countries, thy heart glad;
None presents himself before thy majesty,
While I am thy leader, so that thou mayest reach them.
Thou hast crossed the water of the Great Bendd of Naharin (N-h-r-n) with victory, with might.

Exactly the same phrase is found in Seti I's Syrian campaign (Recueil, XI, 59), III, 86; it is explained by the Tombos tablet, II, 11, 12, § 73.

dEuphrates. On the obelisk of Thutmose III in Constantinople the same phrase is applied to him: "who crossed the Great Bend of Naharin (N-h-r-n) with might and with victory" (§ 631). This statement is therefore not merely poetic hyperbole, and coincides with the Annals, §§ 477 ff.

92, 93. The first attempt to publish the entire tomb was made by M. Ph. Virey.
It was published by him in 1889 (Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, V, “Le Tombeau de Rekhmara”), but his work is so incomplete and incorrect, both in the drawings and the texts, that it is unusable; indeed, Virey himself translated from it the great inscription on the duties of the vizier backward! Thus this priceless monument steadily deteriorated during the last century, without a serious effort being made to preserve it in its entirety, until it was finally rescued by Mr.
during the latter half of the reign of Thutmose III, the period of Egypt's greatest power. He came of eminent family, having succeeded his uncle Woser in the vizierate, and as his career brought him the highest post in the state during the most stirring years of Thutmose III's great conquests, he has put much of it in his tomb. We find in it the fullest known source for the study of the constitution of the state and the administration of the Pharaoh's government under the Empire, beside the best known representations in color of the peoples and products of Punt, Keftyew, Retenu, and Nubia.

664. Incidentally, Rekhmire also throws light upon the character of Thutmose III. After modestly remarking of himself that "there was nothing of which he was ignorant in heaven, in earth, (or) in any quarter of the nether world;" and again: "I was a noble, second to the king;" he says of the king: "Lo, his majesty knew that which occurred; there was nothing which he did not know —, he was Thoth in everything, there was no affair which he did not complete."

I. APPOINTMENT OF REKHMIRE AS VIZIER

665. The following inscription narrates Rekhmire's appointment to the highest office in the kingdom. The Newberry, who published the first instalment of his complete copies in 1900 (The Life of Rekhmara, by Percy E. Newberry, London, 1900). From this careful work, for which we are much indebted, the following translations have been made; the plate numbers referred to are always those of Newberry's work.

a For a full account of his life, see Newberry, 13-20.

He is, of course, referring to the affairs of his office, and to political matters. These extracts are all taken from a long inscription, too fragmentary for full translation (Pls. VII and VIII).

b These extracts are all taken from a long inscription, too fragmentary for full translation (Pls. IX and X). I had also the fragmentary copies of the same text in the tombs of Woser and Amenhotep (Newberry, 34), for which I am indebted to the kindness of Mr. Alan H. Gardiner. They fill up some lacunae and furnish some corrections, cited as "Dupl.," but I have not added this remark merely to indicate the filling up of a lacuna. [Later: Mr. Gardiner has now published the text and duplicates, with an excellent rendering and commentary (Recueil, XXVI), from which I have incorporated a number of valuable points in the above.]
relief shows Thutmose III enthroned, before whom, in accordance with the statement of the inscription, Rekhmire appears for appointment. The king then gives him instructions regarding the administration of his office. Unfortunately, these instructions, which occupy twenty long lines, are very fragmentary, and at the same time extremely obscure. The following version omits a number of passages which may not be safely rendered, and even so translates much more than can be understood, without a longer commentary than it is possible to offer here. It will be seen that the vizier is exhorted: to legal (l. 8), just (l. 8), and impartial (l. 15) decisions; not to be excessively forbidding, but still to keep himself aloof from the people (ll. 18, 19); finally, that his office is really to be administered according to the instructions given (l. 22). The instructions are remarkably humane in temper and show a surprisingly high appreciation of justice. As they present the fundamentals of Egyptian government, it is greatly to be regretted that they are so fragmentary and difficult. These were apparently the conventional instructions customarily delivered at the appointment of every vizier, for they were delivered to Woser, the uncle of Rekhmire, at his appointment, and also to Hapu, vizier under Thutmose IV.

666. Regulation laid upon the vizier, Rekhmire. The officials were brought to the audience-hall, [This majesty] commanded that the vizier, Rekhmire, be presented [for] appointment for the first time. His majesty spake before him: ["Take heed"] to thyself for the hall of the vizier; be watchful over all that is done therein. Behold, it is a support of the whole land; behold, as for the vizier, behold, he is not sweet, behold, bitter is he, when he addresses — — of copper is he, a wall of gold for the house of his —. Behold, he is not one setting his face toward the officials and councilors, neither one making [brethren] of all the people. Behold, — — — 7 a man is in the dwelling of his lord, he [does] good for him; behold [he] does not — — for another.

667. Behold, the petitioner of the South, [the North] and the whole land, shall come, supplied — — — —. 8 Mayest thou see to it for thyself, a to do everything after that which is in accordance with law; to do everything according to the right thereof. Do not — — — that he may be just. Behold, as for an official, when he has reported 9 water and wind of all his doings, behold, his deeds shall not be unknown — — — — — —; he is not brought in because of the speech of the responsible officer, [but] it is known 10 by the speech of his messenger b as the one stating it; b he is by the side of the responsible officer as the speaker; he is not one lifting up the voice, a messenger petitioning — — — — 11 or an official. Then one shall not be ignorant of his deeds; lo, it is the safety c of an official to do things according to the regulation, by doing that which is spoken by the petitioner. . . . . . . . d

668. 15 It is an abomination of the god to show partiality. This is the teaching: thou shalt do the like, shalt regard him who is known to thee like him who is unknown to thee, and him who is near to — like him who is far e ——— — 16 an official who does like this, then shall he flourish greatly in the place. Do not f avoid 1 a petitioner, nor nods thy head when he speaks. As for him who draws near, who will approach to thee, do not — — — 17 the things which he saith in speaking. Thou shalt punish him when thou hast let him hear that on account of which thou punishest him. Lo, they will say, the petitioner loves him who nods the head — — — — — —.

669. 18 Be not enraged toward a man unjustly, but be thou enraged concerning that about which one should be enraged; show forth the fear of thee; let one be afraid of thee, (for) a prince is a prince of whom one is afraid. Lo, the true dread of a prince is to do 19 justice. Behold, if a man show forth the fear of him a myriad of times, there is some-

II. DUTIES OF THE VIZIERd

671. This, the most important inscription known on the organization of the state under the Eighteenth Dynasty, is unfortunately incomplete. Two duplicatese found by Newberry fill out many of the lacunæ, but the last fifth of the text is very fragmentary. This is especially unfortunate, as the latter part of the inscription is by far the most intelligible and deals with functions easily understood.

672. The inscription is an outline of the duties of the vizier, of the greatest interest. After prescribing the external arrangements for the vizier's daily sitting in his "hall," as his office is termed, the document proceeds to the daily conference of the vizier with the king, and, immediately subsequent to this, the daily reports of the chief treasurer and the vizier to each other, and of the chief officials to the vizier. These daily duties are now followed by a long list of exceedingly varied functions to be discharged by the vizier, making in all at least thirty. There seems to be no logical order in the enumeration, and the varied character of the list will be evident from a reading of the marginal heads, which may serve in lieu of a table of content here. It will be seen that the vizier is grand steward of all Egypt, and that all the activities of the state are under his control. He has general oversight of the treasury, and the chief treasurer reports to him; he is chief justice, or head of the judiciary; he is chief of police, both for the residence city and the kingdom; he is minister of war, both for army and navy; he is secretary of the interior and of agriculture, while all general executive functions of state, with many that may not be classified, are incumbent upon him. There is, indeed, no prime function of the state which does not operate through his office. He is a veritable Joseph, and it must be this office which the Hebrew writer has in mind in the story of Joseph. The only person other than the king to whom he owes any respect is the chief treasurer, to whom he seems to offer a daily statement that all is well with the royal possessions. Such power is, of course, possible only in a highly centralized state, and Egypt is shown by this inscription to be in the Empire simply a vast estate of the Pharaoh, of which the vizier is chief steward. The vizier's functions are distributed promiscuously throughout the document, as follows:

I. Judiciary (§§ 675, 681, 685-6, 688-91, 700, 704, 705).
II. Treasury (§§ 676, 680, 706, 708).
III. War (Army §§ 693-95, 702).
Navy (§§ 710, 687).
IV. Interior (§§ 677, 687, 697, 707).
V. Agriculture (§§ 698, 699).
VI. General Executive (§§ 692, 701, 703).
VII. Advisory and Unclassified (§§ 678, 679, 682, 684, 696, 709, 711).

673. It is impossible to discuss this inscription without raising the question of its origin and exact character. The fact that it is known to exist in two other tombs also, would suggest that it was not an informal enumeration of the vizier’s duties drawn up by himself especially for his tomb, but a close examination of the document itself shows that it could not possibly have been a state document to the decrees of which the vizier was amenable. It was evidently no more than we have suggested, viz., a list of the vizier’s duties, compiled by himself, for recording in his tomb. It must, of course, have been based upon the existent laws, from which it may, in places, contain extracts. In any case, it contains the purport of certain of the laws in force at the time, some of which, like those regulating the criminal docket, are very interesting and important. The only other surviving example of the laws of Egypt are in the Decree of Harmhab (III, 45 ff.), for of the “40 skins,” undoubtedly rolls containing “this law which is in his hand” mentioned by our inscription, nothing has ever been found. Such law was, of course, the codified fiat of the Pharaoh, as is evident in the Decree of Harmhab.

674. The language of the document is very difficult, and demonstrates how helpless our incomplete knowledge of the Egyptian dictionary leaves us as soon as we pass from the conventional language of the few classes of monuments familiar to us, to some untrodden path. Especially the legal enactments of the first half of the inscription abound in technical terms, most of which are totally unknown to us. These render a final translation impossible, in many places.

External Arrangement of the Sitting

675. Arrangement of the sitting of the governor of the (residence) city, and vizier of the Southern City, (and) of the court, in the hall of the vizier. As for every act of this official, the vizier while hearing in the hall of the vizier, he shall sit upon a chair, with a rug upon the floor, and a dais upon it, a cushion under his back, a cushion under his feet, a — upon it, and a baton at his hand; the 40 skins shall be open before him. Then the magnates of the South (shall stand) in the two aisles before him, while the master of the privy chamber is on his right, the receiver of income on his left, the scribes of the vizier at his (either) hand; one corresponding to another, with each man at his proper place. One shall be heard after another, without allowing one who is behind to be heard before one who is in front. If one in front says: "There is none being heard at my hand," then he shall be taken by the messenger of the vizier.

Intercourse of Palace with Outside World

676. There shall be reported to him the sealing of the sealed chambers up to (that) hour and the opening of them up to (that) hour. There shall be reported to him the affairs of the fortresses of the South and Erman; original has ḫḏ, "a skin," evidently meaning a leathern cushion so common on Egyptian furniture. "Back" is, of course, a euphemism.

This word (ḥsm) is new; it has the determinative of leather. The 40 ḥsm are depicted in the accompanying scene lying on the floor before the vizier (§ 712). Erman suggests they may have been the leather cases in which the rolls of the papyrus were preserved; but such state documents were written on leather, e. g., the records of Thutmose III (§ 433).

Only the magnates of the South, as the vizier with whom we are dealing is the southern vizier.

"One" refers to the entire company before him; each shall occupy his proper place with reference to the other.

Meaning that as soon as a petitioner in front sees no one before him ("at his hand"), he may say so, and be taken to the vizier by his messenger.
The going out of all that goes out of the king's-house shall be reported to him; and the coming in of all that comes into the king's-house shall be reported to him.\textsuperscript{a} Now, as for everything going in (and) everything going out on the floor of the court, they shall go out (and) they shall go in through his messenger, who shall cause (them) to go in (and) go out.

Reports of Overseers

Daily Report to Pharaoh

678. Furthermore, he shall go in to take counsel on the affairs of the king, L. P. H., and there shall be reported to him the affairs of the Two Lands in his house every day. He shall go in to Pharaoh, before the chief treasurer; he\textsuperscript{c} shall wait at the northern flagstaff. Then the vizier shall come, proceeding from the gate of the great double façade.

Report of Treasurer and Vizier to Each Other

679. Then the chief treasurer, he shall come to meet him (the vizier) and shall report to him, saying: "All thy affairs are sound and prosperous; every responsible incumbent has reported to me, saying: 'All thy affairs are sound and prosperous, the king's-house is sound and prosperous.'" Then the vizier, he shall report to the chief treasurer, saying: "All thy affairs are sound and prosperous; every seat of the court is sound and prosperous.\textsuperscript{d} There have been reported to me the sealing of the sealed chambers to this hour (and) the opening of them to (this) hour, by every responsible incumbent."

Daily Opening of the King's-House

680. Now, after each has reported to the other, of the two officials, then the vizier shall send to open every gate of the king's-house, to cause to go in all that goes in, (and) to go out likewise, by his messenger, who shall cause it to be put in writing.

Irregularities among the Princes

681. Let not any official be empowered to judge against a superior in his hall. If there be any assailant against any of these officials in his hall, then he shall cause that he be brought to the judgment-hall. It is the vizier who shall punish him, in order to expiate his fault. Let not any official have power to punish in his hall. There shall be reported to him every judgment which is against the hall, when he repairs thereto.

Duties and Treatment of the Vizier's Messengers

682. As for every messenger whom the vizier sends with a message for an official, from the first official to the last, let him not be served, and let him not be conducted; the official shall repeat his vizierial message while he stands before the official, repeating his message and going forth to wait for him. His messenger shall seize the mayors and village sheiks for the judgment-hall; his messenger shall give the regulation his messenger gives answer, saying: "I have been sent with a message for the official so and so; he caused that I be conducted, and "It will be seen that the vizier reports on the "court," while the treasurer reports on the "king's-house."

Now, the vizier possesses the reports concerning the "king's-house" (mentioned in ll. 3 and 4), by which he is enabled to control the report of the treasurer on the "king's-house."

Similarly, if we possessed a list of the treasurer's duties, we should doubtless find that he received daily reports on the matters of the "court," by means of which he was enabled to control the vizier's report on the "court," which the vizier conducted directly by means of his messenger.

The publication shows no lacuna, but the sense demands the inserted phrase.

Criminals

683. Now, as for every act of the vizier, while hearing in his hall; and as for every one who shall — — — — [He shall record7] everything concerning which he hears him. He who has not disproved the charge at his hearing, which takes place ——, then it shall be entered in the criminal docket. He who is in the great prison, not able to disprove the charge of his messenger, likewise; when their case comes on another time, then one shall report and determine whether it is in the criminal docket, and there shall be executed the things concerning which entry was made, in order to expiate their offense.

Loan of Vizier's Records

684. As for any writing sent [by the vizier1 to] any hall, being those which are not confidential, it shall be taken to him together with the documents of the keepers thereof under seal of the (sdm·w-) officers, and the scribes thereof after them; then he shall open it; then after he has seen it, it shall return to its place, sealed with the seal of the vizier. (But) if he furthermore ask for a confidential writing, then let it not be taken by the keepers thereof.

Summons of Petitioner

685. Now, as for every messenger whom the vizier sends on account of any petitioner, he shall cause that he go to him.

Real Estate Cases

686. Now, as for every petitioner to the vizier concerning lands, he shall dispatch him (the messenger) to him, in addition to a hearing of the land-overseer and the local council of the district. He shall decree a stay for him of two months for his lands in the South or North. As for his lands, however, which are near to the Southern City and to the court, he shall decree a stay for him of three days, being that which is according to law; (for) he shall hear every petitioner according to this law which is in his hand.

Reports of District Officials

687. It is he who brings in the officials of the district; it is he who sends them out; they report to him the affairs of their districts.

Wills, Etc.

688. Every property-list is brought to him; it is he who seals it.

Settlement of Registered Boundaries

689. It is he who administers the gift-lands in all regions. As for every petitioner who shall say: “Our boundary is unsettled;” one shall examine whether it is under the seal of the official thereof; then he shall seize the seizures of the local council who unsettled it.

Treatment of Unregistered Boundaries

690. Now, as for every remarkable case and everything pertaining thereto; do not look at anything therein.

bThis function of the vizier is depicted with great detail in a splendid series of wall scenes in this tomb (§§ 760 ff.).
cSee Florence Stela, No. 1774.
dSimilar duties are referred to in the tomb of Min (Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, V, 368), but the context is unfortunately broken. The following is visible: "concerning the affairs of the king's-house, conducting the work of the high Nile." § 714

TOMB OF REKHMIRE

———. Report is made to him by all the officials of the head of the navy, from the highest to the lowest. It is he who seals the edicts of the keeper of who is dispatched with a message of the king's-house.

Method of Reporting to Vizier

711. Every report shall be reported to him by the doorkeeper of the judgment-hall, who reports on his part all that he (the vizier) does while hearing in the hall of the vizier.

III. THE SITTING OF THE VIZIER

Scene

712. The vizier sits enthroned at one end of the hall; before him are the "Magnates of the South" and the "scribes of the vizier," in two rows on each side of the central aisle; in this aisle, directly in front of the vizier, are the forty rolls of the law (see §675, l. 2). Two deputies are leading petitioners down the aisle, and outside are other deputies or door-keepers receiving the petitioners as they arrive.

Inscription

713. Sitting, in order to hear the petitioners, in the hall of the vizier; by the hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, priest, chief of the six courts of justice, a mouth giving satisfaction in the whole land; priest, master of every wardrobe, judging justly, not showing partiality, sending two men forth satisfied, judging the weak and the powerful, not bringing sorrow to the one who petitioned him; satisfying the heart of the king before the Two Lands, prince before the people, companion approaching the sovereign, favorite of him who is in the palace.

IV. RECEPTION OF PETITIONS

714. The following scene has unfortunately almost entirely disappeared; it portrayed the reception of petitions, from the people, regulated in the "Duties of the Vizier" (§§685 and 691).

aText has nj; I emend to ntj.

bPl. IV. See the description of the sitting in the first three lines of the preceding inscription (§675).

cPl. XV.
Scene

Rekhmire stands leaning upon his staff, while scribes pass out among the people, where they receive and register complaints and petitions. Over Rekhmire is the following:

Inscription

715. Going forth over the land every morning to do the daily favors, to hear the matters of the people, the petitions of the South and the North; not preferring the great above the humble, rewarding the oppressed, bringing the evil to him who committed it; by [Rekhmire].

V. INSPECTION OF TAXES OF UPPER EGYPT

716. These important scenes, representing the only tax-lists we possess, show the local officials of Upper Egypt paying their dues (yp·w) to the vizier. Just what part of the total revenues of Upper Egypt these dues formed, it is impossible to state; but that they were only a part is certain. For the inscription clearly indicates that they are only the dues exacted from the local officials (as a tax upon their offices), and not the taxes paid by the people, for which we find a different designation (bk·w), from that employed here. This tax (yp·w) upon the officials is the one remitted by Harmhab (III, 63). It was collected by the vizier, while the tax (bk·w) upon the people was, of course, collected by the chief treasurer. It is noticeable that the vizier has charge of these revenues (yp·w) only in Upper Egypt, showing clearly the extent of his fiscal jurisdiction. There was, of course, another vizier for Lower Egypt from below Assiut to the sea.

Owing to the loss of a large portion of the lower rows, it is impossible to summarize and determine the total income aPls. V and VI. They are published for the first time by Newberry, having been passed over by all previous students of the tomb. We are therefore much indebted to him for their rescue.

bA relief at Berlin, for example, shows the two viziers (No. 13411); see additional references, Newberry, 17, n. 3, and a full statement, Gardiner, Inscription of Mes, 33. It is probable that the office was not divided before the Empire, and probably not before Thutmose III.
of the crown from this source in Upper Egypt. Gold, silver, cattle, and linen form the most valuable items; of the others many are uncertain, and have therefore only been transliterated. The list begins with the fortresses of Bigeh and Elephanlne at the first cataract, and extends as far north as Assiut. Some of the place-names are unknown, and have been merely transliterated below. The list is divided into two parts: the first from the cataract to Thebes, and the second from Thebes to Assiut; that is, the first above, the second below Thebes.

A. ABOVE THEBES

Scene

717. Rekhmire, at the right, receives the local officials, who advance in four lines, bringing their dues.\(^a\) Over their heads are inscribed their titles, the names of the towns or localities to which they belong, and the amounts of their dues.

Over Rekhmire

Inspection of the taxes (\(\text{yp' w}\)) counted to\(^b\) (the credit of) the hall of the vizier of the Southern City, and counted against the mayors, the town-rulers, the district officials, the recorders of the districts, their scribes, and their field-scribes, who are in the South (\(T'p-r\text{ṣy}\)); beginning with Elephantine and the fortress of Bigeh; made according to the writings of ancient time, by the hereditary prince. . . . . . .\(^c\) [Rekhmire].

\(^a\)There are thirty-one officials still preserved; of five of these the inscriptions with names and dues are lost. Besides this, at least three more, with their inscriptions, have been lost in the lower row; that is, nearly one-fourth of the officials with their dues are lost. How many names of localities are lost is uncertain.

\(^b\)The two prepositions "to" or "for" (\(n\)) and "against" (\(r\)) are correlative, and antithetic, the first being the preposition of advantage, the second of disadvantage. This is precisely as in Arabic, where \(n\) and \(\text{ḍāy(y)}\) have the same relation; thus: \(n \text{ḍāynān} = "A debt is (owing) to me"\) (lit., "to me is a debt") is opposed to: \(\text{ḍāyyā ḍāynān} = "I owe a debt"\) (lit., "against me is a debt"). See Uni, I. 36 (I, 320) for the same use of \(\text{yp} n\), "count to."

VI. Reception of Dues to the Amon-Temple

746. In this scene is represented the reception of the products of the field, including honey, due to the temple of Amon. The products of a Punt expedition and the annual tribute of North and South, so often recorded in the Annals, are mentioned.

Scene

747. Rekhmire, with his suite behind him, is enthroned at the right. Before him, in three registers, are officials and servants, presenting, storing, recording, and preparing for use the products of Egypt and her tributary countries. Throughout this scene are distributed the following inscriptions:

*There are two scribes, the name occurring with each.

Over Rekhmire

748. Reception of grain (y c h) and honey in the White House of the temple; sealing of all treasures in the [temple of Amon], by virtue of his office of master of secret things; by the hereditary prince, . . . . . . . . . . . . the vizier, Rekhmire.

Over Grain Scene

749. Reception of grain (y c h) in the [temple of Amon].

Over Trituration of Grain

Pounding grain (y c h) in the White House of the [temple of Amon], in order to make an oblation [at] every feast, which his majesty established anew.

Over Flour-Sifting

Servants of the date-storeroom. "Haste thee every matter . . . . . thou shalt cause that we be praised."

Over Bakers

Making loaves1 for the oblation of the divine offerings. Doing safely and well the baking of the cake.

Over Men Doing Reverence

750. Speech of the fleet-captains: "According to the desire of thy heart, O prince! 'Thy1 every matter is very good; the treasuries are overflowing with the tribute of all countries: oil, incense, wine, . . . . . . everything, all the products of Punt; bags and sacks bearing every good thing — — — in a myriad of hundred thousands, for King Menkhepererre (Thutmose III), given life. May thy favor with his ka be every day.

Over Men Carrying Tribute

751. Introduction of wine into the storehouses (w d ?) by the vizier, Rekhmire. Reception of the tribute of the South country, together with the tribute of the Northland before . . . . . . Rekhmire.

On the Storehouses

Gold-houses of the temple. Storehouse (w d) of the temple. Double gold-house.
VII. INSPECTION OF DAILY OFFERINGS AND OF MONUMENTS

Scene

752. Rekhmire, (figure erased) stands inspecting two lines of men with food-offerings, and two rows of statues of the king, behind which are weapons, temple furniture, and utensils.

Inscription over Rekhmire

Inspection of food of the divine offerings of every day; inspection of his —, and the beautiful monuments, which he executed for the Sovereign, the Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Menkheperre (Thutmose III), given life forever, for the temple of Amon, and the temples which are in his —; by ................ [Rekhmire].

VIII. INSPECTION OF CRAFTSMEN

753. We here see Rekhmire inspecting the artificers, who are making for the temple of Amon various vessels, doors, furniture, etc., from the precious metals and other costly materials captured in Thutmose III’s wars in Asia.

Scene

Rekhmire stands leaning on his staff; behind him are his suite, and before him are long lines of craftsmen in leather, wood, stone, and various metals, busily engaged at their work. Over them are the following inscriptions:

Over Rekhmire

754. Inspection of every craft ————, in order to cause every man to know his duty according to the stipulation of every affair, by the hereditary prince, count, who gives the regulation to the prophets, who directs the priests to their duty, governor of the (residence) city, chief of the six courts of justice, Rekhmire.

Over Gold Weighing

Reckoning of the gold ———, in order to fulfil all business of the daily stipulation. Their number is myriads of hundred-thousands; before the vizier Rekhmire.

Over Goldsmiths and Silversmiths

Making all vessels for the divine limbs; multiplying vases of gold and silver in every (style of) workmanship that endures forever.

Over Coppersmiths

Bringing the Asiatic copper which his majesty captured in the victories in Retenu, in order to cast the [two doors] of the temple of Amon in Karnak. Its pavement was overlaid with gold like the horizon of heaven; by the governor of the (residence) city, and vizier.

They say: "The king, beautiful in monuments, Menkheperre (Thutmos III), given life forever; (as) he is (so) they are forever. . . . . . .

He repeats monuments in the house of his father.”

Over Cabinet-makers

Making chests of ivory, ebony, carob wood, meru wood, and of cedar of the best of the terraces; by this official who gives the regulation, guiding the hands of his craftsmen.

IX. Inspection of Sculptors and Builders

The heavier works of the Amon-temple are here under inspection by Rekhmire. Of particular interest are the Semitic foreigners, who appear among the brickmakers, of the “captivity which his majesty brought for the works of the temple of Amon.” This is, of course, precisely what was afterward exacted of the Hebrews.

*These words are in Virey’s copy (Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, V, PI. XV), but had been lost before Newberry’s was made.

bLit., “in likeness to” (m sn’r), a circumlocution not uncommonly used for the simple “like” (my).

Scene

Rekhmire stands leaning on his staff, his suite behind him; and before him, at work, are stoncutters, sculptors, brickmakers, and builders. The inscriptions are as follows:

Over Rekhmire

By Bricklayers

758. The layer of brick who brings the field, b the very numerous [—], building with ready fingers, skilled c in his duty, causing vigilance among the conquered, d who hear the sayings of this official, skilful e in building] of works, giving regulation to their chiefs. X. RECEPTION OF FOREIGN TRIBUTE

760. This is one of the most important scenes preserved in ancient Egypt. Similar scenes will be found in other Theban tombs, but none contains so elaborate, detailed, and extensive representations of the wealth of the Asiatic peoples, which was now flowing as tribute into the treasury of the Pharaohs. The pride of the Egyptian vizier, which led him to depict these official incidents in his career, has thus been the means of preserving to us much of the early civilization of Asia, which on its native soil has perished utterly.

Scene

761. At the right stands Rekhmire, while the foreigners, carrying their tribute, approach in five long lines from the left. At the head of each line is a scribe, who records their tribute as it is deposited in splendid profusion before him.

XI. ACCESSION OF AMENHOTEP II

762. This scene is not yet published, but Newberry describes it (op. cit., 20) as showing Rekhmire after having sailed down-river to Hatsekhem to meet his new sovereign, presenting to him "the royal insignia."

STELA OF INTEF THE HERALDe

763. This splendid stela was erected by the "royal herald" of Thutmose III, whose important offices were the following:

Hereditary prince and count, companion, great in love, count of Thinis of the Thinite nome, lord of the entire oasis region, great herald of the king.

a Titles, etc., of Rekhmire.

b An inscription over each of the five rows begins in each case: "Arrival in peace, of the chiefs of X" (Punt, Retenu, etc., as the case may be). To Keftyew is added "and of the isles in the midst of the sea," and to Retenu: "all the northern countries of the ends of the earth." This introductory formula is followed by the conventional acclamations of the foreigners; but these inscriptions are not readable in Wilkinson's plates. Champollion gives only the introductory formula of each row, and Newberry's second volume containing these scenes has not yet appeared.

c Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 39, d.

d About 8,943 pounds (troy).

e Now in the Louvre (C. 26), being doubtless the finest stela in that great collection. It is nearly 6 feet high by nearly 4 feet in width, and of the finest workmanship (see de Rougé, Notices des monuments, 84–86). It was published by Gayet, Stèles de la XIIe dynastie, Pl. XIX, and the long inscription (partially) by Brugsch (Thesaurus, VI, 1479–85). Owing simply to the name of its owner, "Intef," it has always been attributed to the early Middle Kingdom. It has long been evident, both from its language and content, however, that it belongs to the Eighteenth Dynasty. The discovery of Intef's tomb at Thebes by Newberry shows that this conclusion is correct, and that Intef lived in the reign of Thutmose III. The important conclusions regarding the oases in the Middle Kingdom, often drawn from this inscription (e.g., Maspero, Dawn, 432, n. 3, and ibid., 459, n. 3), are therefore to be given up.
Or again:

Hereditary prince and count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, favorite of the Good God, excellent scribe of computation, first herald of the king.

Again:

First herald of the judgment-hall (rry.t).\(^a\)

It would thus appear that the Oases, at least those of the Theban region, were dependents of the Thinite princes,\(^b\) who have survived into the Eighteenth Dynasty and taken office at the court of the Pharaoh.

\(^{764}\). The stela contains, in a less formal list than the "Duties of the Vizier" (§§675 ff.), a similar statement of the duties of the "royal herald" (whm-tny = lit., "royal reporter or repeater"). This statement, far from being an extract from the government archives, is but a random rehearsal, in a boastful style, of the powers of the court herald. It is evident that his office is only partially expressed by our word herald, for the duties of the Egyptian herald show him to have been of ministerial power and importance; they were the following:

1. The management of the formalities and ceremonies of court and palace (ll. 4–7, only part of l. 5).
2. Communication of the messages of the people and affairs of the land to the king\(^d\) (l. 5).

\(^a\)All the above titles are from the head of the stela; others will be found in the following translation.

\(^b\)For another Thinite prince, who was also lord of the oasis, see Recueil, X, 141.

\(^c\)So in Ahmose-pen-Nekhbet (ll. 10 and 13), but in Intef's inscription "whm-n-tny".

\(^d\)Here he seems to cover the same ground as the vizier (Duties, 4, l. 5); but the vizier evidently reported larger affairs of state, while the herald communicated personal matters, of which we have an example in the brave deeds of Ahmose, which are regularly reported to the king by the "royal herald" (§§9 ff.).
3. Messenger of the judgment-hall (∩ʿ ryʿt), or general administrative office of the Pharaoh (l. 6).

4. The communication to the people of all commissions laid on them by the Pharaoh (l. 7).

5. The communication, both to Egyptians and foreign countries, of the amount of their taxes, and verification of same (l. 8, and l. 27 end). This is but a specialization of 4.

6. To be in general the mouthpiece of the palace (l. 9).

7. To exercise a kind of police control, wherever the Pharaoh proceeded (ll. 10–12).

765. This unsystematic list of powers is followed by an enumeration of Intef's good qualities (ll. 13–20), to which is added, after an asseveration of its truth (ll. 20–22), a remarkable statement of the source of his success (ll. 22–24).

Finally, a rapid statement of the herald's duties abroad while accompanying the Pharaoh on his Syrian campaigns, completes the inscription (ll. 24–27). As the Pharaoh, in this instance, was Thutmose III, these brief references are of the greatest interest, showing the herald, as they do, preceding the great commander from town to town, and preparing his residence in the palaces of the Syrian princes.

Intef's Address to Passers-by

766. He says: "O ye that live upon earth, all people (rḥyʿt), every priest, every scribe, every ritual priest, who shall enter into this tomb of the necropolis; if ye love life, and think not on death, if your native gods shall favor you, if ye would not taste the fear of another land, if ye would be buried in your tombs, if ye would bequeath your offices to your children; whether (ye be) one that readeth these words upon this stela, being a scribe; or one that heareth them, so shall ye say: 'An offering which the king gives, etc...'

Intef's Asseveration

769. He says: "Those were my qualities, of which I have testified; there is no deceit therein; these were my excellencies in very truth, there is no exception therein. Nor was there any likening of words to boast for myself with lies, but that was my color, which I showed; that was my office in the king's L. H. P. estate, that was my service at the court L. P. Intef's Explanation of His Success

770. \(^b\)It was my heart which caused that I should do it, by its leading of my affairs; it is — an excellent witness, I did not violate its speech, I feared to transgress its leading; I prospered on account of it exceedingly. I was excellent by reason of that which it caused that I should do, I was valuable by reason of its leading. 'Lo, — — —,' said the people, 'it is an oracle of the gods, which is in every body. He is a counsellor, whom it has led to the goodly way of achievement.' Lo, thus I was.

Intef's Duties Abroad

I numbered the tribute of the rulers dwelling in every country, consisting of silver, gold, oil, incense, wine.'

TOMB OF MENKHEPERRESENEBA

772. This tomb is one of the most interesting and important at Thebes. Menkheperreseneb, besides being High Priest of Amon under Thutmose III, was also "overseer of the gold-house and overseer of the silver-house," as well as chief architect in the temple of Amon, and "chief of the overseers of craftsmen." As treasurer, he is depicted in his tomb receiving the tribute of Asia, and the treasure from the mines of Africa; while as architect and chief of the master-craftsmen, we find him in charge of Thutmose

Scene of Asiatic Tribute

773. Two lines of Asiatics bring forward splendid and richly chased vessels of gold, silver, etc. The Asiatics are designated as “the chief of Keftyew, the chief of Kheta, the chief of Tunip (Tnpw), the chief of Kadesh.” Before them is an inscription:

Giving praise to the Lord of the Two Lands, obeisance to the Good God, by the chiefs of every land. They acclaim the victories of his majesty; their tribute is upon their backs, being every [product] of God’s-Land: silver, gold, lapis lazuli, malachite, every splendid, costly stone . . . .

A line of superscription contains the acclamations of the Asiatics; the bulk of it is lost:

— the sea; thy fear is in all lands. Thou hast overthrown the lands of Mitanni (My-tn — ); thou hast hacked up their cities, their chiefs are in caves — —.

Reception of Gold

774. Another scene shows the deceased receiving shipments of gold, from the “captain of the gendarmes of Coptos” and the “governor of the gold-country of Coptos:”

Reception of gold of the highland of Coptos, besides gold of Kush the wretched, being the yearly dues — —; by Menkheperreseneb.

Inspection of Workmen

775. Again we see the deceased inspecting the work of the craftsmen, accompanied by the words:

Viewing the workshop of the temple of [Amon], the work of the craftsmen, in real lapis lazuli, and in real malachite, which his majesty made after the design of his heart, a to be monuments for his father, aThese very works are shown in the great relief depicting the presentation of monuments to Amon by Thutmose III at Karnak (§ 545), accompanied by the same words, showing that Thutmose III himself furnished the design to the craftsmen.

Amon, in ['the house of Amon'], abiding, flourishing as eternal works; by the hereditary prince, count, pleasing the king as the establisher of his monuments, chief of the overseers of craftsmen, chief of works in the [House of] Amon, first prophet of [Amon], Menkheperreseneb. He says:

Thutmose III's wives, and chief captain of the king's fleet. His tomb stela is chiefly devoted to the usual mortuary prayers, in the midst of which he refers to his favor under the first three Thutmosids. The name of Thutmose I is evidently lost in one of the numerous lacunæ; but Nibamon seems to have received gifts of land and cattle from this king. He then says:

Favor under Thutmose II

778. My lord, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Okhepernere (Thutmose II), triumphant, repeated favors to me; he appointed me overseer of the hall (*ḥ") of the king.

Favor under Thutmose III

779. My lord, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre (Thutmose III), given life, repeated favors to me; he magnified me until I was at the front; he appointed me as steward of the king's-wife, Nebetu (Nb.t-w), triumphant. My lord, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menkheperre, given life, repeated favors to me; he appointed me to be captain of all the ships of the king. There happened no oversight of mine, nor was there found any neglect of mine. I was not associated with evil, but I attained a revered old age, being in the favor of the king's presence.

Then follows a final prayer, addressed to the living.
REIGN OF AMENHOTEP II

ASIATIC CAMPAIGN

780. Syria, of course, revolted on the death of Thutmose III, and already in his second year we find his energetic son, Amenhotep II, on the march into northern Syria to quell the rebellion. Doubtless the harbor cities had also rebelled, and hence the young king is forced to proceed by land. Leaving Egypt in April, as his father had done on the first campaign thirty-three years before, he had already in early May won a battle at Shemesh-Edom in northern Palestine. On the twelfth of May he crossed the Orontes, and gained a skirmish near the river. He celebrated a feast of thanksgiving to Amon there, and fourteen days later (May 26) he arrived at Niy, which opened its gates to him and received him with acclamation. June 5 he reached and punished the rebellious city of Ikathi, which was plotting against its Egyptian garrison. Somewhere in Naharin he set up his tablet of victory, as his father and grandfather had done before him. Here the sources fail, and the further course of the campaign is unknown until the king’s return to Egypt; but it is clear that the coalition against Egypt was crushed in Tikhsi, probably at the battle on the Orontes, for on his return in the autumn the king brought back with him to Thebes “the seven princes who were in the district of Tikhsi,” and sacrificed them himself before Amon. Early in the following July we find the king in Nubia, arranging the completion of his father’s temples at Elephantine and Amâda. In both he set up a

*Turra inscription of Minhotep (§ 800).
tablet bearing the same inscription, recording the building and mentioning the seven princes, six of whom he says he hanged on the walls of Thebes, and the seventh on the walls of Napata. At Napata or above it he set up a tablet marking his southern boundary (§800). It is perhaps on his return from this last errand that he stops at Amâda for the foundation ceremonies of the temple.

The said Amâda and Elephantine steleæ, another at Karnak, and a Karnak chapel are the only sources for this campaign.a bA pink granite stela, found by Champollion against the second of the southern pylons at Karnak, in a deplorably fragmentary condition. Text: Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 185, 186 (only ll. 1–10; l. 9 is not omitted as indicated); Maspero, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, XVII, 56, 57 (only ll. 3–10, copying Champollion); Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 175, 176; Bouriant, Recueil, XIII, 160, 161; Wiedemann, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XI, 422, 423; a new fragment by Legrain, Annales, IV. The text is corrupt, being full of errors, like the omission of the determinative (important emendations by Erman, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1889, 39–41). The reason for these errors is the careless restoration of the text after its erasure by the emissaries of Ikhnaton. See Legrain, Annales, IV.

cThe tablet of Amâda below (§§ 791 ff.), dated in year 3, speaks of an Asiatic campaign already completed; it can hardly refer to any other than this campaign to Niy. Hence the latter would have taken place in the year 1 or 2, more probably the latter. The lacuna at the beginning of each line is four or five words long.

Battle of Shemesh-Edom

Battle on the Orontes

784. First month of the third season (ninth month), day 26; his majesty crossed over the ford of the Orontes£ on this day, caused to cross his name. His majesty raised his arm, in order to see the end of the earth;* his majesty descried a few Asiatics (Sttyw) coming on horses 6r—1 coming at a gallop (rkrk). Behold, his majesty was equipped with his weapons of battle, his majesty conquered with b the might of Set* in his hour. They retreated when his majesty looked at one of c them. Booty 785. List of that which his majesty captured on this day: 8 his horses, 2; chariots, 1; a coat of mail; 2 bows; a quiver, full of arrows; a corselet; and f—1.

Arrival at Niy

Kishon (Petrie, History of Egypt, II, 155) is impossible, for the king is already in the Lebanon, and has left the Kishon far behind. The route by which Amenhotep advanced northward from Shemesh-Edom is not certain, but the crossing of the Orontes is doubtless the last one as he turned toward the Euphrates. This would be most naturally at Senzar. He would then march by way of Aleppo to Niy, which was about 175 miles from Senzar. That he reached Senzar is shown by his list in § 798A. This suits his marching speed also, as he would have made about 12½ miles a day from Senzar to Niy.

*There may be a reference here to the common designation of this remote region as the “end of the earth,” but it more probably refers merely to the king’s shading his eyes that he might scan the horizon.

*Lit., “behind.”

cLegrain’s lacuna of 24 cm. is of course impossible; it is improbable also at the head of the next two lines.

1Restore m, “to,” according to Amâda tablet, ll. 16, 17 (§ 797).

8There is no line omitted here, as Champollion indicates.

bThe same word (shntw) applied to the corselet (g > nr) is found in Thutmose III’s first campaign, l. 23 (shnw-ly 7).

1The texts of de Rouge, Bouriant, Wiedemann, and Brugsch’s translations show “month II,” not III, as usually read from Champollion. That Shemu (not ‘akhet) is to be read here is clear from the determinative and the other dates (ll. 4 and 13; note, l. 13). Maspero now accepts this (Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 291), although he formerly read ‘akhet. Petrie’s date (Petrie, History of Egypt, II, 155) is therefore about five months too late; for had this date been in another year, the year must have been added. The arrival at Niy is therefore fourteen days after the crossing of the Orontes.
the city of Niy. Behold, these Asiatics of this city, men as well as women, were upon their walls praising his majesty, to the Good God.

Revolt of Ikathi

787. Behold, his majesty heard saying, that some of those Asiatics (S' tyw) who were in the city of Ikathi (Y-k 2 -ty) had plotted (ngmgm) to make a plan for casting out the infantry of his majesty who were in the city, in order to overturn who were loyal to his majesty. Then [his] majesty put them in this city he immediately, and he pacified [this] city against the entire country. Second month of the third season (tenth month), day 20 (+x). made the city of Ikathi [Y-k 2 -t] 13 15 16.

788. The remainder as far as l. 29 shows but a few scattered traces, of which the following are significant: "of his children. Statement of that which [his majesty] captured" (l. 21); "his chariot" (l. 26); "list of captives" (l. 27); "[weapon]s of war without number" (l. 28); "his majesty was adorned with [his] regalia" (l. 29). The record then becomes more connected:

Overthrow of Khatithana

789. His majesty the tribe of Khatithana (H 2 -ty-t' n 2 ) united. Behold, the chief the city, for fear of his majesty. His chiefs, his wives, his children were carried captive, and all his people likewise. Statement of that which his majesty himself captured his horses.

Anuket and once before Khnum, receiving "life and stability." Both tablets were intended to mark the "station of the king," both record similar buildings in the year 3 (material at Elephantine is better), and the same facts regarding the Asiatic princes. The differences in wording are almost nil. The Elephantine stela has an interesting addition from the year 4.

dThis is the basis for the well-known legend of Herodotus (III, 21), which represents Cambyses as unable to draw the bow of the king of Ethiopia (Schaefer, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 38, 66 f.). It is a not uncommon statement. Curiously enough, the bow of Amenhotep II was found in his tomb; it bears an inscription designating him as "smiter of the Trogodytes, overthrower of Kush, hacking up [their] cities ........ the great wall of Egypt, protector of his soldiers" (Cairo, Catalogue 24120).

eThis is not a generality, but doubtless specifically refers to a battle with the Asians in the campaign of the previous year.

in the year of terror. There is not one that saves himself from him; he makes a slaughter among his enemies, the Nine Bows likewise. All lands and all rebellious countries pay him impost, for he is a king. There is not one who makes a boundary with him; (but) they live by his breath. King of kings, ruler of rulers, who captures the boundaries of the only mighty one, whose fame is exalted until Re in heaven knows it, (and) the one who faces him in the day of smiting. There is no boundary made for him toward all countries united, (or) toward all lands together; (but) they fall instantly because of his flaming crest, like . There is none among them that escapes from the overthrow, like the foes of Bastet on the road of Ir-Amon. It is a happy chance for all those who know that he is his real son, who came forth from (his) limbs, one with him, in order to rule that which the sun encircles, all the lands, and countries which he knew, that he might seize them immediately with victory and power.

Buildings and Offerings

793. He is a king with heart favorable to the buildings of all gods, being one who builds their temples (and) fashions their statues. The divine offerings are established for the first time, loaves and beer in plenty and (fowl) in multitude as a daily offering every day, forever; large cattle and small cattle at their seasons, without limit. He gave the house to its lord, supplied with everything, with oxen, calves, young cattle, fowl [without] limit, this temple being supplied throughout with loaves and wine. He established revenues for his fathers, the gods, to be seen of the people, to be known of all.

\(^k\)If he arrived at about the time of Thutmose III's return from the first campaign (§ 409), the Amâda stela is then dated about nine and a half months later than his arrival; for it is impossible to suppose that this Shemu of the Asiatic campaign is the same as the Shemu of the Amâda stela, which would then be only twenty-five days later than the last date readable in the Asiatic campaign.
797. When his majesty returned with joy of heart to his father, Amon, he slew with his own weapon the seven princes, who had been in the district of Tikhsi (T'y-h-sy), and had been placed head downward at the prow of his majesty's barge, the name of which was: “Okheprure (Amenhotep II)-is-the-Establisher-of-the-Two-Lands.” One hanged the six men of those fallen ones, before the wall of Thebes; those hands likewise. Then the other fallen one was taken up-river to Nubia and hanged on the wall of Napata (Npt), in order to cause to be manifest the victories of his majesty, forever and ever in all lands and countries of the land of the Negro; since he had taken the Southerners and bound the Northerners, the back-lands of the whole earth, upon which Re shines; that he might make his boundary as far as he desired, none opposing his hands, according to the command of his father Re, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes; in order that the Son of Re, of his body, his beloved, Amenhotep (II), divine ruler of Heliopolis, might be given life, stability, satisfaction, joy of heart, through him, like Re, forever and ever.

798. The Elephantine stela here adds enactments for the sacred feasts there, as follows:

Year 4. His majesty commanded to have the sails made for the voyages of these gods dwelling in Elephantine; large sails, each one of 10 cubits, while they were (formerly) small sails of 3 cubits.

His majesty commanded to add one day for his mother, Anuket, to her feast of Nubia (Pd't), at her voyage of the “Beginning-of-the-River.” The supplies are: bread, beer, oxen, geese, wine, incense, fruit, every good and pure thing, as dues each year, as an increase upon c An obelisk of Amenhotep II was also found at Elephantine; it is now in the collection at Alnwick Castle, England. It bears the inscription: “Amenhotep II; he made (it) as his monument for his father Khnum, making for him two obelisks of the altar of Re; that he might be given life forever.” The pyramidion shows the king worshiping before “Khnum, residing in Elephantine” (Birch, Catalogue Alnwick, 345; Bonomi, Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, New Ser., 1843, I, 170).

III. KARNAK CHAPEL

798A. This monument, of which only a few fragments have survived, bears a relief showing Amenhotep II leading seventy Asiatic prisoners to Amon. They are accompanied by the words:

List of those countries which his majesty smote in their valleys, overthrown in [their] blood ——— that he might be given life forever.

Twenty-four prisoners in two rows bear the names of the countries they represent. The following are still legible:

TURRA INSCRIPTION

799. Above is a relief showing the king before two rows of divinities, thirteen in number, for whose buildings the quarry-chambers have been opened. A dedication at the left side is as follows:

He made (it) as his monument for the gods and goddesses, for whose temples of a [million of years] the quarry-chamber was opened, in order to quarry fine limestone of Ayan.

TOMB OF AMENKENd

aRestored from the inscription of Amenhotep III (§ 875).

bThis was on the Asiatic campaign (§§ 780 ff.); and makes at least four such tablets in Naharin, one of Thutmose I, two of Thutmose III, and one of Amenhotep II.

Except in the case of the statues, it is not the number of times that an object is represented that is significant, but the accompanying numeral. Before the accompanying inscriptions the name of Amenhotep II appears.

Live the Horus: Mighty Bull, Great in Strength; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Mighty in Opulence; Made to Shine in Thebes; Golden Horus: Seizing by his Might in all Lands, Good God, Likeness of Re, Splendid Emanation of Atum, — b Son, whom he begat, whom he made to shine in Karnak. He appointed him to be king of the living, to do that which his ka did; his avenger, seeking excellent things; great in marvels, creative in knowledge, wise in execution, skilful-hearted like Ptah; king of kings, ruler of rulers, valiant, without his equal, lord of terror among the southern lands, great in fear at the end of the north. Every land comes to him bowing down; their chiefs bearing their offerings; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Okheprure (Amenhotep II), given life; victorious lord, who takes every land, whom Horus 1 has magnified because of his strength. The chiefs of Mitanni (My-tn) come to him, their tribute upon their backs, to beseech his majesty that there may [be given to them] c his sweet breath of life. A mighty occurrence, it has never been heard since the times of the gods. This country which knew not Egypt beseeches the Good God. d It is my father Re who commands that I do it; he is the fashioner of my beauty. He appointed me to be protector of this land, (for) he knew that I would offer it to him. He assigned to me that which is with him, which the eye of his uraeus illuminates, all lands, all countries, every circuit, the Great Circle (Okeanos); they come to me in submission like every subject of my majesty; Son of Re, Amenhotep (II), Divine Ruler of Thebes, living forever, only vigilant one, begotten of the gods.”

a Of his other buildings the king has left us no narrative. His small temple between the two southernmost pylons at Karnak is without building inscription. His mortuary temple on the west shore at Thebes was just north of the Ramesseum and alongside that of his father, Thutmose III (see Baedeker, Map, 260), but it has utterly perished. See Spiegelberg, Recueil, XVI, 30, and XIX, 88, 89; also Petrie, Six Temples.

He appointed me to be a lord of the people ($n^t$), while I was a youth in the nest; he gave to me the two halves; he caused that my majesty should assume the throne, as one does a useful thing for his father. I rested upon his throne; he gave to me the land $l$—$l$. I have no enemies in all lands.

Temple Equipment

806. I made for him an adytum (shm) of gold; its floor was of silver. I made for him many vessels; they were more beautiful than the bodies of the stars. His silver-house, it inclosed treasures of the tribute of every country. His granaries were bursting with clean grain, rising upon the walls. I founded for him divine offerings. I restored the things of him that begat me, that the Son of Re [Amenhotep II], Divine Ruler of Heliopolis, might be given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever.

BIOGRAPHY OF AMENEMHAB

807. A scene in the tomb shows Amenhotep II standing before the deceased Thutmose III enthroned as Osiris. This is in accord with the copy of the "Book of the Dead" found with Thutmose III's body, which also testifies to Amenhotep's piety; for it bears the title: "Amenhotep II, he made (it) as his monument for his father, Thutmose III, making for him a book of glorifying the soul." Accession of Amenhotep II

"When the morning brightened, the sun arose, and the heavens shone, King Okheprure, Son of Re, Amenhotep (II), given life, was established upon the throne of his father, he assumed the royal titulary. He mingled with in the Red Land; he cut off the heads of their chiefs. Diademed as Horus, son of Isis, [he] took the Kenemetyew (Knw.tyw), every land, bowed down because of his fame; with their tribute upon their backs, [that he might grant] to them the breath of life."

I bowed down immediately before his majesty; he said to me, 'I know thy character; I was abiding in the nest, while thou wert in the following of my father. I commission thee with office that thou shalt be deputy of the army as I have said, watch thou the elite troops of the king.' The deputy, Mahu, executed (all) that his lord said."
REIGN OF THUTMOSE IV

SPHINX STELA

810. This remarkable document purports to be a votive stela of Thutmose IV, recording how he had been raised to the throne by Harmakhis, the Sphinx, in recognition of his clearance of the great image from the encumbering sands, in response to the god’s appeal to him as a young prince, to whom he appeared in a vision as the youth, weary with the chase, slept at noonday in his shadow. The form and content of the document are strikingly unlike the official or royal records of the Pharaohs. It is besides filled with errors and striking irregularities in orthography, and exhibits a number of suspicious peculiarities not to be expected in a monument of this class. It is therefore to be regarded as a late restoration, and it is a great question to what extent it reproduces the content of the monument of which

A huge red granite tablet, standing between the paws of the Great Sphinx, made from one of the architraves of the neighboring (so-called) Temple of the Sphinx. It is 11 feet 10 inches high, and 7 feet 2 inches wide. The lower third of the face has flaked off, so that over half the inscription is lost. It was uncovered by Caviglia in 1818, copied by Salt in 1820; his manuscript text is in the British Museum, Memoirs on the Pyramids and the Great Sphinx, fol. 1820; it was published from this manuscript in Young’s Hieroglyphics (London, 1823), Pl. 80; again from the same manuscript inaccurately in Vyse Appendix to Operations Carried on at the Pyramids of Gizeh (London, 1842), III, 115; more accurately than any of these, but with further lacunae, in Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 68; repeated partially by Brugsch, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1876, 80–92. Finally a collation of all texts by Erman, Sitzungsberichte Königlichen Akademie, Berlin, VI, 428–37. I had collated all old publications and Berlin squeeze, and my readings have now been confirmed by Erman’s text.

Erman has now put together the reasons for the same conclusion, which he also has reached. He would date the document between the Twenty-first and Twenty-second Dynasty and Saitic times. Spiegelberg’s objections to this conclusion (Orientalistische Litteraturzeitung, 1904) would explain the mistakes and peculiarities in the orthography as due to the erasure of the inscription under Ikhnaton it is a restoration. Some such current incident during the youth of Thutmose IV may possibly have prompted it; but the form of the narrative as now on the monument is that of a folk-tale.

Moreover, a similar incident was narrated of a prince named Amenmose, son of Thutmose I. It was on a monument by the Sphinx, of which the following fragments are preserved:

Year 4, under the majesty of Thutmose I, beloved of Harmakhis\[given life\] like Re, forever.

There went forth the eldest king’s-son, commander in chief of the army of his father, Amenmose, living forever, to take a pleasure walk.

Evidently the priests were striving by such tales as these to enhance the reputation of the Sphinx.

The upper third of the Sphinx stela is occupied by an adoration scene in which Thutmose IV offers to Harmakhis in form of a sphinx. Below is the inscription, as follows:

Introduction

Year 1, third month of the first season, day 19, under the majesty of Horus: Mighty-Bull-Begetting-Radiance; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Enduring-in-Kingship-like-Atum; Golden Horus: Mighty-of-Sword, Repelling-the-Nine-Bows; King of Upper and Lower Egypt; Menkheprure (Mn-ḥpr[w]-Rˁ), Son of Re: [Thutmose IV, Shining] in Diadems; beloved of —, given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever. ²Live the Good God, son of Atum, Proand the subsequent careless restoration, as in the Theban stelae (e. g., §§ 878 ff.). That this objection cannot hold is evident; for the Sphinx is a sun-god, and the monuments of the sun-gods, especially of the Horuses, were respected by Ikhnaton, and not erased. It is impossible to conceive that Ikhnaton would erase the inscription to a god called "Harmakhis-Khepri-Re-Atum" (l. 9) in said inscription.

EIGHTEENTH DYNASTY: THUTMOSE IV

Thutmos IV, living image of the All-Lord; sovereign, begotten of Re; excellent heir of Khepri; beautiful of face like his father; who came forth equipped with the form of Horus upon him; a king who — the gods; who — favor with the ennead of gods; who purifies Heliopolis, who satisfies Re; who beautifies Memphis; who presents truth to Atum, who offers it to Him-Who-is-South-of-His-Wall (Ptah); who makes a monument by daily offering to Horus; who does all things, seeking benefits for the gods of South and North; who builds their houses of limestone; who endows all their offerings; son of Atum, of his body, Thutmose (IV), Shining in Diadems, like Re; heir of Horus upon his throne, Menkheprure, given life.

Youth of Thutmose

When his majesty was a stripling like Horus, the youth in Khemmis, his beauty was like the protector of his father, he seemed like the god himself. The army rejoiced because of love for him, the king's-children and all the nobles. Then his strength overflowed him, and he repeated the circuit of his might like the son of Nut.

Hunting Expedition

Behold, he did a thing that gave him pleasure upon the high-lands of the Memphite nome, upon its southern and northern road, shooting at a target with copper bolts, hunting lions and wild goats, coursing in his chariot, his horses being swifter than the wind; together with two of his followers, while not a soul knew it.

Midday Rest

Now, when his hour came on for giving rest to his followers, (it was always) at the shoulder of Harmakhis, beside Sokar in Rosta,

The quarters of Memphis and all the cities which are by him come to him, (raising) their hands for him in praise to his face, bearing great oblations for his ka.

The Vision

815. One of those days it came to pass that the king's-son, Thutmose, came, coursing at the time of midday, and he rested in the shadow of this great god. A vision of sleep seized him at the hour (when) the sun was in the zenith, and he found the majesty of this revered god speaking with his own mouth, as a father speaks with his son, saying: "Behold thou me! See thou me! my son Thutmose. I am thy father, Harmakhis-Khepri-Re-Atum, who will give to thee my kingdom on earth at the head of the living. Thou shalt wear the white crown and the red crown upon the throne of Keb, the hereditary prince. The land shall be thine in its length and breadth, that which the eye of the All-Lord shines upon. The food of the Two Lands shall be thine, the great tribute of all countries, the duration of a long period of years. My face is thine, my desire is toward thee. Thou shalt be to me a protector (for) my manner is as I were ailing in all my limbs. The sand of this desert upon which I am, has reached me; turn to me, to have that done which I have desired, knowing that thou art my son, my protector; [come hither], behold, I am with thee, I am thy leader." When he had finished this speech, this king's-son awoke hearing this and understood the words of this god, and he kept silent in his heart. He said: "Come, let us hasten to our house in the city; they shall protect the oblations for this god which we bring for him: oxen and all young vegetables; and we shall give praise [to] Wen-nofer, Khaf[re], the statue made for Atum-Harmakhis.

ASIATIC CAMPAIGN

§816. The records of Thutmose IV's Asiatic war or wars are scanty and scattered. It is clear, however, that he still maintained the empire at its former northern limits. Naharin paid tribute, although a campaign thither had been necessary.

§817. The king left a record referring to the first war in Asia in a list of offerings from his victories, which he had made in Karnak, in which nothing more concerning the campaign can be seen than that there were among these offerings, things "which his majesty captured in Naharin (the wretched, on his first victorious campaign.)"

d All from Young.
e This mention of King Khafre has been understood to indicate that the Sphinx was the work of this king—a conclusion which does not follow; Young has no trace of a cartouche.
f Young shows two fragments, each bearing a few words (from the middle of ll. 16 and 17 and ll. 18 and 19) which probably refer to further offerings.
g Fragmentary lower ends of ten vertical lines east side of the wall surrounding Hatshepsut's obelisk; published Mariette, Karnak, 33 = Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 164; photograph by Borchardt.

818. This is corroborated by the inscription of Amenhotep, a bodyguardsman of Thutmose IV, whose tomb stela a calls him:

Attendant of the king on his expeditions in the south and north countries; going from Naharin (N-h-ry-n) to Karoy (K₃-r-y) behind his majesty, while he was upon the battlefield; companion of the feet of the Lord of the Two Lands, chief of the stable of his majesty, high priest of Onouris, Amenhotep, triumphant.

819. In harmony with these data, we find depicted on the two following monuments the tribute of Naharin and Retenu; the first is in the tomb of Khamhet, b who was a powerful noble, and served as chief treasurer under Thutmose IV and Amenhotep III. c His tomb contains three scenes of historical importance, of which one d belongs to the reign of Thutmose IV. It shows the king seated in a “naos” at the left; before him are magnificent vessels of Asiatic workmanship in gold and silver, and quantities of these metals in large rings. Behind these are Asiatic princes bowing to the earth, over whom is the inscription: e

Bringing in the tribute of Naharin (N-h-ry-n b) by the princes of this country, in order to crave that the breath of life be granted to them. Obeisance to the great Lord of the Two Lands, when they come, bearing their tribute to the Lord of the Two Lands, (saying:) “Grant us breath, which thou givest, O mighty king.”

820. A similar scene in the tomb of Thaneni is accompanied by the following inscription:

Bringing in the tribute of Retenu, presentation of the northern countries; silver, gold, malachite, every costly stone of God's-Land; by the princes of all countries. They come, to [make gifts] to the Good God, to ask for breath for their nostrils; by the real king's-scribe, his beloved, commander of troops, scribe of recruits, Thaneni.

821. A tablet of the king, erected in his mortuary temple at Thebes, records the settlement of Syrians in the temple inclosure:

Settlement of the "Fortress of Menkheprure," with Syrians (H²⁻rw), which his majesty captured in the city of K²⁻f² — ('Gezer').

822. Finally, on the Lateran Obelisk (§838), the king refers to the cedar which he cut in the land of Retenu; and on the stela of Semen (Snm) in the Louvre (C 202), he is twice called the "conqueror of Syria" (sksk ḫ²⁻rw), a title which must have been won in successful Syrian wars.

KONOSSO INSCRIPTION

823. This inscription contained perhaps the most interesting record of all the many Nubian wars, and its content has never been historically employed; but it is so incorrectly published that it is difficult to follow. While engaged in the ceremonies of the Theban temple, on the second of Phamenoth, in the year 8, Thutmose IV receives a message

It was first very incorrectly published by Bouriant (Recueil, XV, 178, 179); again, still worse, in de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, 66, 67. reporting a revolt in Wawat. The next morning the king solemnly proceeds to the temple to consult the god, and is granted an oracle promising success. The expedition now embarks and moves southward, stopping on the way at all the great temples, where the divinities come forth to meet the king, and gird him for battle.\(^a\) The result of the battle,\(^b\) fought doubtless somewhere in Wawat, is of course a foregone conclusion, and the enumeration of the spoil begins, as the published portion comes to an end.

performed the pleasing ceremonies of his father Amon, because he had given to [him] eternity as king, everlastingness while abiding upon the Horus-throne. One came to say to his majesty: "The Negro descends from above Wawat; he hath planned revolt against Egypt. He gathers to himself all the barbarians and the revolters of other countries."

_Oracle of Amon_

827. The king proceeded in peace to the temple at the time of morning, to cause that a great oblation be offered to his father, the fashioner of his beauty. "Behold," his majesty, he himself petitioned in the presence of the ruler of the gods (Amon), that he might counsel him concerning the affair of his going — and inform concerning that which should happen to him; leading for him upon a goodly road to do that which his ka desired, as a father speaks to his son. He went forth from him, his heart rejoicing (for) he sent him with might and victory.

_Voyage Southward_

828. After these things his majesty proceeded to overthrow the Negro in Nubia (\(T^3-\text{pd}\; t\)); mighty in his barge of Re when he shows himself in the celestial barque. His army of his victories, was with (him) on both banks, while the recruits were upon its (one) shore, and the ship was equipped with his attendants, as the king proceeded up-stream like Orion. He illuminated the South with his beauty; men shouted because of his kindness, women

829. His army came to him, numerous — with his mighty sword. The fear of him entered into every body; Re put the fear of him among the lands, like Sekhmet in the year of the dew. He cours ed through the eastern highland, he traversed the ways like a jackal. He found all his foes scattered in inaccessible valleys.

The remainder is published too badly for translation; one can make out a reference to "their cattle [their tribute] upon their backs."

STELA OF PE’AOKEc

839. The mortuary stela of the standard-bearer (t2-sr’t) of the royal barge, Pe’aoke (P2-c2-c k), after the usual prayers, records the arrival of a royal messenger at Abydos, to attend to the conveyance to Osiris of certain property of the people. The nature of these payments is not at all clear, and the purpose of their record is only incidental, being doubtless to explain the occasion on which Pe’aoke visited Abydos and executed his stela there. His reference to Ahmose shows that Thutmose IV increased his ancestor’s mortuary endowment. A stela in the British Museumd mentions a "palace (h.t) of Thutmose IV, given life, in Abydos," which would indicate that he occasionally resided

REIGN OF AMENHOTEP III

BIRTH AND CORONATION

841. The scenes and inscriptions representing Amenhotep III's supernatural birth and his coronation by the gods, which he had placed upon the walls in one of the chambers of his Amon-temple at Luxor, are taken from the same sources as those of Hatshepsut, and have already been treated under her reign (§§187–212, 215–42). For Ahmose, the mother of Hatshepsut there, one must here substitute Mutemuya, the mother of Amenhotep III; and for Hatshepsut, Amenhotep III.

NUBIAN WAR

842. In his fifth and sixth years, Amenhotep III found it necessary to invade Nubia as far as Karoy, the district conquered by his grandfather, Amenhotep II (§§797), and his great-grandfather, Thutmose III, and probably much farther. He has left us a list of the Nubian regions

Partially published by Champollion, Monuments, IV, 339, No. 2–341; Rosellini (Monumenti Storici, 38–41), and Lepsius (Denkmäler, III, 74, c–75). First completely by Gayet, Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, XV, Pl. 62–68 and 75. Besides errors innumerable in the texts, every plate bears two numbers, and on these plates every figure bears two numbers; in each case only one is correct! The errors in the texts, evident everywhere, can be demonstrated easily by a comparison with the texts of the queen's interview with Amon, which have also been published by Bouriant (Recueil, IX, 84, 85).

bKaroy is not mentioned in the records of the campaign, but is referred to, as reached on the first campaign, in the building inscription (§ 889, l. 23).
subjugated, presumably on this campaign, on a colossal granite statue, now in the Louvre.a

I. STELA AT FIRST CATARACTb

843. The upper third of the stela is occupied with a scene showing the king trampling down an Asiatic and smiting two Negroes; before him are Amon and Khnum; behind him, Ptah. The inscription of twelve lines is very fragmentary (having been mutilated by Amenhotep IV in erasing the name of Amon, which has afterward been restored), but shows clearly that, owing to a revolt in Nubia, Amenhotep III was obliged to invade the country, and crush the rebels in his fifth year.c

844. ¹Year 5, third month of the first season (third month), day 2, the coronation (day)d under the majesty of Horus: Mighty Bull, Shining in Truth;
Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Establisher of Laws, ²Quieter of the Two Lands;
Golden Horus: Great in Strength, Smiter of the Asiatics, Good God, Ruler of Thebes, Lord of Strength, Mighty of Valor; ³King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nibmare (Nbn-m³-c·t-Rc).

aThis statue (A18) was usurped by Amenhotep III; it belonged perhaps to a king of the Twelfth Dynasty. See Maspero, Dawn, 491, n. 6. I have verified this usurpation on the original. The list is published by Sharpe (Inscriptions, II, 26).

bCut in the rock on the road from Assuan to Philæ. Text: Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 81, g; de Rouge, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 254; de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, I, 4.

A second stela in the same locality, also relating to this war, is too fragmentary for translation (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 81, h; de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, I, 5).

dBased on an ostraca in London (No. 5637, Birch, Inscriptions in the Hieratic and Demotic Character, Pl. 15). His coronation is usually dated on the thirteenth of the eleventh month, see Brugsch, Egypt under the Pharaohs, 213. Sethe, however, has shown (Untersuchungen, I, 12, n. 1) that this ostraca does not specify which Amenhotep is meant, and rightly refers it to some one of the three other Amenhoteps.
Son of Re: Amenhotep (III), Ruler of Thebes; beloved of Amon-Re, King of Gods, and Khnum, Lord of the Cataract (Kbh), who giveth life.

4One came to tell his majesty: "The foe of Kush the wretched, has planned rebellion in his heart."

II. STELA OF KONOSSO

845. A scene above shows Amon presenting four southern regions to Amenhotep III. The inscription commemorates the same Nubian campaign as the preceding stela.

1. . . . 8 Year 5; his majesty returned, having triumphed on his first victorious campaign in the land of Kush the wretched; having made his boundary as far as he desired, as far as the four pillars which bear the heaven. He set up a tablet of victory as far as "Pool of Horus" (Kbhw-Hr); there was no king of Egypt who did the like beside his majesty, the mighty, satisfied with victory, Nibmare (Nb-nx-R, Amenhotep III) is he. . . . .

Compare a similar announcement of a revolt in Nubia, to Thutmose II on the Assuan stela (§ 121, ll. 9-11), and to Thutmose IV on the Konosso stela (§ 826).

A rock inscription near Assuan shows an official doing homage to the names of Amenhotep III, and dates the event as occurring "on his first victorious campaign in Kush" (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, IV, 119; de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, I, 28, No. 8).

These two lines are very obscure and fragmentary, but refer to the king's valor and the overthrow of Kush.

Titles and usual epitheta of the king.

Cut on the rocks of the little island of Konosso at the north end of Philæ; text: Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 82, a; Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 164, 165; Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1218, 1219; de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, I, 67, 68.

These are: Kush (Kf), Irem (Yr-m), Wrm (?), and r rk.

Full titulary of Amenhotep II.

Contains only the usual conventional epithets; ll. 10–11 have: "He (Amon) hath given to him the south as well as north, west, and east."
846. The fragment preserved to us belonged to an historical inscription of unusual interest, containing the account of an advance into Nubia, with descriptions of the battles and the stages of the advance in the same style as that of the Annals of Thutmose III. Indeed, it is not unlikely that the walls of the Bubastis temple contained annals of the wars of the Empire in Nubia, like those of the conquest of Syria on the walls of Karnak.

The fragment unfortunately contains no royal name, and has been conjecturally assigned to Sesostris III. This is impossible, for the orthography shows beyond doubt that the inscription dates from the Empire. Moreover, its content indicates a time when the Egyptian conquest extended far into the upper regions of Nubia, that is, from Amenhotep II on. A hitherto unnoticed reference to the coronation anniversary is here of great service. It is mentioned (l. 6) as occurring just after the first battle and before the advance to “the height of Hua” began. They reached this point in the third month of the first season (l. 11); the coronation anniversary therefore occurred not long before. Now, the coronation of Amenhotep III occurred in the third month of the first season on the second day; and the above inscriptions (§§ 844 ff.) show that he also celebrated a coronation festival on his Nubian campaign. It is

The block is from the middle of an inscription in vertical lines; not merely the beginning and end of the inscription are lost, but also the upper and lower portions of the lines, of which this block bears the middle portions.

It contains the horizontal m which never occurs before the Eighteenth Dynasty; see Calice, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 35, 170.

Thutmose II also mentions a coronation festival in an inscription narrating his Nubian campaign, but this merely dates the arrival of the news of the revolt, extremely probable, therefore, that this Bubastis fragment belongs to Amenhotep III, and describes the advance into Karoy, or the distant country beyond.

847. The expedition is very difficult to follow in the scanty fragment preserved to us, but its course was probably as follows:

Early in October, when the river is high, the army is already far up in Nubia. Before a battle the king makes a speech to his troops, after which the battle occurs, the king personally taking part in it (ll. 1-5). The expedition then started southward for the "height of Hua" on the coronation anniversary; reference is made to the first camp (l. 6). The king commanded that people (Nubians?) furnish certain things for the expedition\(^a\) (l. 7), and reference is made to former troops; his majesty held a council (l. 8). A branch expedition of 124 men was sent out from the river to a certain well (l. 9); whether to destroy the well or attack the villages which would naturally be found near a well\(^b\) is uncertain, but it was evidently the customary procedure to go out to these outlying wells, for in his expedition of the sixteenth year, Sesostris III "went forth to their wells"\(^b\) (I, 658, l. 15); here also the purpose is not stated. The expedition then proceeded southward for "the height of Hua" (l. 10), taking captives and spoil on the way (l. 11). They were favored by a high north wind, and not more than a month after the coronation feast the desired "height whereas Amenhotep III apparently actually celebrated the feast in Nubia (§ 844, l. 5). The question arises whether the cataract stela (§§ 843 ff.) represents the party as having actually arrived at the first cataract on the return from the campaign, on coronation day. If so, we then have two different expeditions of Amenhotep III. In attributing both inscriptions to the same expedition, I am assuming that the cataract inscription gives the date of the battle, which is coronation day in both.

of Hua . . . came forth," that is, rose from the horizon (l. 12). They passed to the southward of "the height of Hua," and, having reached the land of Uneshhek (\( Wn\)nšk), they rested in a camp there (l. 13).

848. It would be of great importance to identify the countries mentioned and determine the southern limit of this expedition. Both Hua (\( hw\)) and the land of Khesekhet (\( h^3sh\cdot t\)) occur close together in the lists of the regions of Khenthennofor, placed on the Karnak walls by Thutmose III (see §§ 645 ff); the occurrence of Punt along with these names, and the narrative of the expedition, would indicate that they denote localities in the extreme south beyond Karoy on the Nile (above the Atbara?).

849. 1—Negroes 2—this army, while their hearts were eager to fight quickly, beyond anything — came 3—Ye [see] nothing has been done to you. Now, behold, as for your affair [which my majesty mentions] 4—of the Negroes who fell, in order that my [majesty] might know, because ye do this 5—it was not commanded for them. His majesty smote them himself with the baton which was in [his] hand 6—the height of Hua (\( Hw\)) on the coronation day of the king, behind western Khesekhet. 7—Behold, the army was made to camp all — very numerous beyond anything. His majesty issued a command to these people, to make them. They

\( Wn\)nš (l. 13) I have not found in any of the lists. \( Hw\) occurs in the Karnak list as \( Hw\cdot t\) (Mariette, Karnak, Pl. 22, No. 89); \( h^3sh\cdot t\) (ibid., No. 95). \( Hw\cdot t\) also occurs with Punt in the list of Ramses III (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 209).

That which Naville has read as \( t\) with a lacuna over it is possibly the sign for \( hn\), "majesty," but the book-roll?

The preceding last context perhaps contained some statement like: "[The army departed for] the height of Hua," etc. It cannot be the arrival, for that does not occur until l. 12. The unknown land of Khesekhet (\( h\cdot sfr't\)) occurs in the southern lists of Thutmose III (Mariette, Karnak, Pl. 22, No. 95, and Pl. 25, No. 95), and is usually rendered simply "barbarians." It is however a proper name, having nothing to do with \( h\cdot sfr't\), "barbarian."

Lit., "a command of making them." Such a use of the genitive is common, especially in Papyrus Ebers receipts.
gave praise [to his majesty] ——— infantry of the army which was of old, [when] they were brought up from the court. His majesty took counsel, ——— [the place] in which they were, doing everything.

850. His majesty commanded, that 124² men of the army be dispatched, going forth to the well which is in southward to see the height of Hua, to make known the ways of sailing living captives which they found among them: negroes, 113⁴ cattle, male and female; 11 asses, male and female. Third month of the first season the north wind, was very high for the coming forth of the height of Hua; the coming forth of this height was in safety, sailing Uneshek (Wmšk) was its name, south of the height of Hua, resting in the camp made there.

IV. SEMNEH INSCRIPTION¹

851. The date of this inscription is lost, but it doubtless refers to the campaign in Nubia. A revolt having occurred in Ibhet, the viceroy, Mermose, levies an army in lower Nubia, marches into Ibhet, and quells the rebellion. The beginning of the inscription is lacking, but it apparently contained the announcement of the revolt.

¹Stela in British Museum, published by Birch, Archaeologia, XXXIV, facing p. 388; see also Archaeological Journal, VIII, 399. I collated Birch's text with the Berlin squeeze (No. 1097), and afterward with the original in the British Museum, and found a number of important corrections were necessary.
Muster of the Army

852. 1—2 occurred the reaping of the harvests of the foe of Ibhet (Vbh·t). Every man reported and one mustered an army of Pharaoh, L. P. H., which was under command of this king's-son. He made troops, commanded by commanders, each man with his village; from the fortress of Beki (Bky) to the fortress of Taroy (T²-r²-y), making 52 iters (ytr·w) of sailing.

Defeat of Ibhet

853. The might of Nibmare took them in one day, in one hour, making a great slaughter their cattle; not one of them escaped; each one of them was brought fear. The might of Amenhotep took them; the barbarians among them, male as well as female, were not separated; by the plan of Horus, Lord of the Two Lands, King Nibmare, mighty bull, strong in might. Ibhet had been haughty, great things were in their hearts, (Hut1) the fierce-eyed lion, this ruler, he slew them by command of Amon-Atum, his august father; it was he who led him in might and victory.

Words of the Viceroy

855. The king's-son, vigilant for his lord, favorite of the Good God, governor of the entire land of Kush, king's-scribe, Mermose. He saith: "Praise to thee! O Good God! Great is thy might against him that fronts thee; thou causeth them that are rebellious against thee to say: 'The fire that we have made rages against us.' Thou hast slain all thy enemies, overthrown beneath thy feet."

TABLET OF VICTORY

856. This tablet was set up by Amenhotep III in his mortuary temple at Thebes, to commemorate his victories in the north and south. Above is a relief twice showing Amenhotep III before Amon. Both figures of Amon were cut out by Ikhnaton and restored by Seti I, with the usual legend:

Restoration of the monument, which the Son of Re, Seti-Merneptah, made for his father, Amon.

857. Below is a second relief, in which Amenhotep III appears twice in his chariot. On the right he drives over the fallen of Kush, with the chiefs bound upon his horses, over which is the legend:

The Good God ——— lord of the sword, mighty in dragging them (at his chariot), annihilating the heir of the wretched Kush, bringing their princes as living prisoners.

858. In the same way he drives over the Syrians on the left; above the princes bound on the horses, are the words:

The Good God, Golden [Horus], Shining in the chariot, like the rising of the sun; great in strength, strong in might, mighty-hearted like him who dwells in Thebes (Montu); smiting Naharin (N-h-r-ny, sic!) with his mighty sword.

A line of inscription runs across the bottom, as follows:

________ [every] country, all people (rḥy.t), all populations (hmml.t), Naharin (N-h-r-ny, sic!), the wretched Kush, Retenu the Upper and Retenu the Lower are at the feet of this Good God, like Re, forever.

859. A scarab published by Frazer (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology, XXI, Pl. III, facing p. 155), gives to Amenhotep III the epithet: "Captor of Shinar" (S^3-n-g-r). The Amarna Letters show that no significance is to be attached to this epithet. The decorations on the columns at Soleb show captive figures representing Shinar, Naharin, Hittites, Kadesh, Tunip, Ugarit, Keftyew, Carchemish, Asur, and Arrapachitis. But such decorations are far from showing that Amenhotep III had conquered or maintained his conquest in these far-off regions.

THE COMMEMORATIVE SCARABS

860. On five different occasions, in commemoration of events in his personal history, Amenhotep IV issued a series of scarabs inscribed on the under side, recording the following matters:

I. Marriage with Tiy;
II. Wild Cattle Hunt;
III. Ten Years' Lion-Hunting;
IV. Marriage with Kirgipa;
V. Construction of Pleasure Lake.

*aLepsius, Denkmäler, III, 88. The above are all that can safely be identified. See also fragment of a list at Karnak (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 9), containing also Naharin (?) and Shinar.
As far as we know, he was the only king who did this, although small scarabs referring in two or three words to great events were issued by other kings; e.g., Thutmosé III thus refers to the erection of obelisks (§625) and the capture of Kadesh.

I. MARRIAGE WITH TIY

861. This marriage took place before the year 2 when Tiy is already queen (see next scarab). The origin of the powerful Tiy is obscure; Maspero thinks her a native Egyptian, and this is the most probable conclusion, but the persistent publication of the names of her untitled parents on these and other scarabs is in that case remarkable, although paralleled by scarabs of the Thirteenth Dynasty. This difficulty is, however, not relieved by supposing her of foreign birth. It is incredible that anyone could identify her with Kirgipa, on whose marriage scarab she already appears in the titulary as queen. She is the first queen who is thus recognized by the regular insertion of her name in the titulary. The innovation was continued by Amenhotep IV, who inserted his queen's name in the same way. His ephemeral successors show the same inclination, and the whole period from the time of Amenhotep III to the close of the Eighteenth Dynasty is characterized by the

She is the wife of a mighty king whose southern boundary is as far as Karoy (K^3-r^3-y) (and) northern as far as Naharin (N-h-ry-n^3).

II. WILD CATTLE HUNT b

863. This scarab records the first hunting achievements of the chase-loving Amenhotep III. Unfortunately, the region e where the hunt took place cannot be identified with certainty, but as it was reached in a night's voyage on the king's Nile barge, it was not some remote district like the scene of Thutmose III's elephant hunt in Naharin. As the voyage was northward, it is likely to have been some district in the Delta which could be reached in a night from Memphis. The method of hunting consisted in surrounding and driving the wild cattle into a huge encircling inclosure. d They thus inclosed 170 animals, of which the king killed not less than 75 on two different days.

b Only one specimen of this scarab is published; it is in the collection of Mr. G. W. Frazer, and was published by him (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XXI, Pl. III, opp. p. 155), with a good translation by Mr. Griffith (ibid., 156); and again, A Catalogue of the Scarabs Belonging to George Frazer (London, 1900), frontispiece, Pl. XVI, and p. 56. Another specimen is said to be in the collection of Rev. W. MacGregor of Tamworth.

Marvel which happened to his majesty. One came to say to his majesty: "There are wild cattle upon the highlands, as far as the region of Sheta."

His majesty sailed down-stream in the royal barge, Khammat at the time of evening, beginning the goodly way, and arriving in safety at the region of Sheta at the time of morning.

His majesty appeared upon a horse, his whole army being behind him. The commanders and the citizens of all the army in its entirety and the children with them were commanded to keep watch over the wild cattle. Behold, his majesty commanded to cause that these wild cattle be surrounded by a wall with an inclosure. His majesty commanded to count all these wild cattle. Statement thereof: 170 wild cattle. Statement of that which his majesty captured in the hunt on this day: 56 wild cattle.

His majesty tarried 4 days to give fire to his horses. His majesty appeared upon a horse a second time. Statement of these wild cattle, which he captured in the hunt: 20 (+x) wild cattle. [Total] 75 (+x) wild cattle.

III. TEN YEARS' LION-HUNTING

865. In his tenth year, the king issued a large number of these scarabs, to commemorate his success in lion-hunting.

V. CONSTRUCTION OF A PLEASURE LAKE c

868. This scarab records the construction of a pleasure lake by Amenhotep III, for his queen Tiy, in a town or a city quarter (dmy), called Zerukha (d² r-w³h?), otherwise unknown. It is not unlikely that this is the lake of which the remains, called Birket Habu, are clearly visible south of Medinet Habu, beside the palace of Amenhotep III, d an exceedingly probable situation. But this lake varies considerably in dimensions from those given on the scarab.

The opening of the lake was doubtless in connection with the coronation anniversary, which fell on the next day e after orders for constructing the lake were given.

a The usual full titulary.

b This heads the list; we should expect the usual word "statement," as, e. g., in the lion-hunt scarabs.

c Four copies of this scarab are known: (1) in the Vatican (Rosellini, Monumenti Storici, 44, No. 2 = Stern, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1877, 87, n. 2 = Marucchi, Bessarione, 1899, 122); (2) private collection of W. Golénischeff (privately distributed photographs); (3) collection in Alnwick Castle (Birch, Catalogue, No. 1030, 137); (4) fragment in University College, London (not published). The first three of the above were collated and published by Steindorff (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1901, 63).

d Cf. Steindorff, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1901, 64.

e § 844, l. 1; Lieblein (Sphinx, VI, 113 ff.) has calculated the date of this opening in terms of our calendar as September 26, Julian, or November 5, Gregorian.
869. Year 11, third month of the first season, day 1, under the majesty of ........... a. Amenhotep III, given life; and the Great King's-Wife, Tiy, who liveth.

His majesty commanded to make a lake for the Great King's-Wife, Tiy, in her city of Zerukha (D c r-wḥ ?). b Its length is 3,700 cubits; its width, 700 cubits. His majesty celebrated the feast of the opening of the lake, in the third month of the first season, day 16, d when his majesty sailed thereon in the royal barge: "Aton-Gleams." e

JUBILEE CELEBRATIONS

870. Amenhotep III celebrated at least three royal jubilees: the first in the year 30; the second, although not recorded, probably like that of Ramses II, in the year 34; and the third in the year 36. The celebration of the first jubilee is recorded in the tomb of Khamhet, f in two remarkable reliefs.

871. The first shows the king enthroned in state at the right; before him is the inscription: ε

a Full fivefold titulary.

b This name was long misread "Zaru," with which it has nothing to do (cf. Steindorff, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1901, 64; and Breasted, ibid., 65, 66). The statements regarding the presentation of "Zaru" to Tiy, current in the histories, are all to be rejected.

c Vatican copy has 600, the others 700. Steindorff reads here "upper arms" (rmn) instead of "cubits" (mḥy). This distinction, although evident on the surviving cubit rods, is not carried through on the monuments. At Benihasan, the rmn-sign occurs in door dimensions, where it is clear that the cubit is meant; see my remarks (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology, March, 1900, 88–90).

d Thus the lake must have been completed in fifteen days!

e Cf. further examples by Spiegelberg (Rechnungen, Text, 81–86), who has compiled a very useful list of these barges, also Breasted, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1901, 66.

f Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 76, 77, and Brugsch, Thesaurus, 1121–23; for full bibliography, see § 819, where also the inscriptions under the reign of Thutmos IV are given. For a scarab referring to the jubilees, see Brugsch (Thesaurus, VI, 1456).

ε Among his titles both inscriptions add that of: "Lord of the Jubilee."
Appearance of the king upon the great throne, to receive the report of the harvest of the South and North.

Before the king stands Khamhet reading to him a document; over Khamhet's head the following inscription in five vertical lines:

Communication of the report of the harvest of the year 30\(\text{a}\) in the presence of the king, consisting of the harvest of the great inundation of the jubilee \([\text{which}]^\text{b}\) his majesty \([\text{celebrated}]\); by\(\text{b}\) the stewards of the estates\(\text{c}\) of Pharaoh, L. P. H., together with the chiefs of the South and North, from this land of Kush the wretched, as far as the boundary of Naharin \(\text{(N-h-ry-n)}\).

Under the document are the words: "Total: 33,333,300."\(\text{d}\)

As a consequence of this favorable report, the treasury officials are now rewarded, as shown in the following scene.\(\text{e}\)

The king is seated in state in a splendid pavilion at the left; before him, the inscription:

Appearance of the king upon the great throne, to reward the chiefs of the South and North.

Before the king stands Khamhet with the inscription:

Hereditary prince, count, who satisfies the heart of the king in the whole land, the two eyes of the king in the cities of the South, his two ears in the nomes of the Northland, king's-scribe \(\text{———— ——— ———} (\text{named}),\) Khamhet.\(\text{f}\)

\(\text{a}\)So Brugsch, but Lepsius has a lacuna.

\(\text{b}\)To be connected with "communication."

\(\text{c}\)Or possibly better "income;" see Spiegelberg, \textit{Studien}, 55 and note 227, who, however, does not refer to our passage.

\(\text{e}\)Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, III, 76.

\(\text{f}\)His titles are written more fully in Champollion, \textit{Notices descriptives}, I, 840; "Hereditary prince, count, who fills the heart of his lord, favorite of the Good God, to whom are told all the affairs of the palace — — — companion of the feet of the Lord of the Two Lands in every place which he treads, chief of the archers of the Good God — — —."
Behind Khamhet are three lines of officials praising the king; the upper line is receiving rich gifts; inscription:

Reward of the stewards of the f. estates1 of Pharaoh, L. P. H., together with the chiefs of the South and the North after the statementa of the overseer of the granary concerning them: “They have increased the harvest of year 30.”

873. The records of the second Jubilee have perished, but the third is mentioned in the tomb of Kheruf,b in the following heading:

“Year 36. Conducting the companions for presentation in the (royal) presence at the third (hb-sd) jubilee of his majesty.”

874. The ceremony of erecting the symbol of Osiris, the curious column, which is also the symbol of stability, was performed on the morning of the traditional royal jubilee feast day (first of Tybi). Amenhotep III is shown personally erecting this column on the morning of one of his jubilee days, in the reliefs in a Theban tomb.d

eThe quarries at el-Bersheh were also opened in the “year 1,” as recorded there in a mutilated inscription (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, IX, 193); much better, Spiegelberg, Recueil, 26, 151, 152). It records the erection of a monument of uncertain character in the Thoth temple at Hermopolis.

in the second year. The latter is surmounted by an offering scene, and is as follows:

'Year 2, under the majesty of ... . . . a Amenhotep (III) . . . . . ;

his majesty commanded to open the quarry-chambers anew, in order to quarry fine limestone of Ayan (c) in order to build his temples of a million of years, after his majesty found the quarry-chambers which are in Troja (R 3 wy), beginning to be very ruinous since the times which were before. It was my majesty who made (them) anew, in order that he might be given life, stability, satisfaction, health, like Re, forever.

876. The granite quarry at Assuan was visited by an official of this king, for the purpose of cutting out a colossal statue of his lord. This officer has had carved in relief on the rock his own figure standing in homage before the names of Amenhotep III. Below are the words:

[Homage] to the Good God, when was made the great statue of his majesty (called): “Sun-of-Rulers.”

Near by is an overturned, unfinished, colossal statue, to which the inscription doubtless refers.

877. A stela of the year 36 in Sarbût-el-Khadem in Sinai, records an expedition thither in that year, in which the commanding official refers to the “sea (the Great Green)” in a connection which would indicate that he crossed to Sinai by the sea route, but the inscription is too fragmentary for translation.

dThe connection is broken by an interfering fragment of rock which the photographer of the Ordnance Survey failed to remove. Another stela of the year 36 shows Amenhotep III offering to Amon and Hathor (Lepsius, Denkmäler, II, 71, d; not in Ordnance Survey).
BUILDING INSCRIPTION

878. This monument has had an interesting career. Erected by Amenhotep III in his temple behind the Memnon colossi, to record his buildings in honor of Amon, its inscription was almost totally obliterated by the reforming zeal of his son, Amenhotep IV. It was restored by Seti I, who recorded his restoration thus: "Restoration of the monument which the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menmare (Seti I), made for his father Amon-Re, King of all Gods." In restoring the monument, the sculptor of Seti found the old lines sufficiently traceable to be recut with tolerable certainty, not without some glaring errors, which cannot always be corrected. Four or five generations later, Merneptah demolished the splendid temple of Amenhotep III, containing this stela, and used the material, including the stela in a building of his own, where it fell down and remained until taken out by Petrie in February, 1896.

879. The upper third is occupied by a scene twice showing Amenhotep III with the usual legends, offering a libation to Amon. The inscription of thirty-one lines records Amen-

a Discovered by Petrie in February, 1896, on a black granite stela lying in the ruins of the Theban mortuary temple of Merneptah; this stela is 10 feet 3 inches by 5 feet 4 inches, and 13 inches thick. See Contemporary Review, May, 1896, 619; Century Magazine, August, 1896, 501 (view of stela in situ). Text: Photographic reproduction and transcription with translation and excellent commentary by Spiegelberg, Recueil, XX, 37-54; finally in Petrie, Six Temples, Pl. XI, XII. I have used a photograph, kindly sent me by E. Brugsch-Bey shortly after the discovery of the monument, at which time I made the translation; later notes drawn from Spiegelberg I have carefully credited to him. Important suggestions in Orientalistische Litteraturzeitung, 1898, No. 5, 156, 157.

b One can clearly see in the photograph that the inscription has been hammered out, as far as the end of l. 22, including also parts of lines 23-28, leaving the last three lines untouched (see, e.g., photographs in Recueil, XX, and Century Magazine, August, 1896, 501). Excepting the two figures of the king, the scene at the top was also erased.

c Cut between the two figures of Amon at the top of the monument; similar restorations by Seti often, e.g., on the obelisk of Hatshepsut.

d He cut on the back of it the hymn of victory, mentioning Israel: see III, 602 ff.
hotep III's chief buildings and other pious works in honor of Amon:

1. Introduction, ll. 1–2 (§ 882).
4. Sacred Barge of Amon, ll. 16–20 (§ 888).
5. Third Pylon of Karnak, ll. 20–23 (§ 889).
6. Temple of Soleb, ll. 23–26 (§ 890).
7. Hymn of Amon to the King, ll. 26–31 (§§ 891, 892).

880. The architectural data given by the scribe are very important, but are as usual, very general and vague, showing great, if not total, lack of technical knowledge of the subject. The treatment of temple floors with silver (ll. 3, 11, and 22) and the walls with gold or electrum (ll. 3, 11), although very vaguely described, is important. The settlement of Syrians around the temple of the (Memnon) Colossi is historically of importance also. The king's selection of his Soleb temple in Nubia, to be mentioned in preference to his Egyptian temples outside of Thebes, a shows his strong interest in the region above the second cataract, where he was so active, and where he caused himself to be worshiped. It is furthermore noticeable that the king makes no reference to his other Theban buildings, the temple of Mut and the temple at the northern gate of the Karnak inclosure, of either of which very little now remains. b a Thus he omits all reference to his Memphis temple, where he was evidently worshiped, for he appears with Ptah as one of the gods of Memphis (Papyrus Sallier, IV; Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 961, No. 23); and his temple there was called "House of Nibmare" (Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 963). A cultus statuette which he dedicated to himself as a god in this Memphis temple is in Alnwick collection; it bears the dedication: "Nibmare (Amenhotep III); he made it as his monument for his living image in The House of Nibmare" (Birch, Catalogue Alnwick Castle, 56–58). The El Kab temple, which he is often stated to have built, was erected by Thutmose IV, his father, for whom he only decorated it, as the inscription states: "Lo, the majesty of King Nibmare decorated this monument of his father, Thutmose IV, forever and ever" (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 80, b = J. J. Tylor, The Temple of Amenhotep III, Pl. 10; again Pl. 8 = Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, IV, 43).

b This is to be explained by the fact that the stela records only buildings of Amon.
Part of the dedicatory inscription of the latter is still preserved, and contains data of importance. It is introduced by the king's titulary, to which is appended:

881. Who raises a monument in Karnak, a marvelous thing, unlimited in — of gold, plentiful in gold, unlimited in malachite and lazuli; a place of rest for the lord of gods, made like his throne that is in heaven, that he (the king) might be thereby given satisfying life like Re forever. ——— b an inclosure made to flourish with monuments, made to shine with all flowers, filled with slaves (mr-l) due from the (ḥsā-) officials, being children of the chiefs of all countries, coming in obeisance to his fame. The Son of Re, Amenhotep, ruler of Thebes, made it for the chosen one of Re, because he loved his father, Amon, lord of Thebes, so much more than all the gods. He has been given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever.

Of all this the great building stela makes no mention. It is as follows:

Introduction

882. 1Live ........... c Amenhotep (III), Ruler of Thebes; beloved of Amon, lord of Thebes, presider over Karnak; given life, joy of his heart, that he may rule the Two Lands like Re, forever; 2the Good God, possessor of joy, who is very vigilant for him that begat him, Amon, king of gods; who hath made great his (Amon's) house, d who hath satisfied his beauty d by doing that which his ka desires.

e The colossi known as the Memnon colossi (cf. ll. 4, 5) still stand, but the temple, the entrance of which they flanked, has disappeared; see above, § 878. It was the mortuary temple of Amenhotep III, of which there is a further account inscribed on a huge stela now lying in the scanty ruins behind the colossi (§§ 904 ff.). For an account of the excavation around this temple, see Petrie, Six Temples in Thebes; the temple itself has never been excavated. View of the colossi, Mariette, Voyage dans la haute Égypte, II, 57, or my Egypt through the Stereoscope, No. 64.

Its Wealth

Its storehouse is filled with male and female slaves, with children of the princes of all the countries of the captivity of his majesty.

*a Called "House-of-Amon-on-the-West-of-Thebes" in the inscription on a black granite statue of Amenhotep III at Erment, published by Daressy, Recueil, XIX, 14, and Spiegelberg, Recueil, XX, 49.

*b The temple regarded as a stronghold; cf. remarks of Spiegelberg, Recueil, XX, 48.

*c Just how the metals were used on floor, walls, and doorways is not clear from these vague data, but they materially augment our ideas of the splendor of the Egyptian temple.

*d Probably the stela on which this text is cut.

*e Spiegelberg (Recueil, XX, 49) calls attention to the fact that the French expedition found eighteen of these statues on the west shore still in situ, some of which are now in the museums: in the British Museum one of black granite (Arundale and Bonomi, Gallery, Pl. 35); two heads (ibid., 107); also a black granite statue at Erment, first published by Daressy (Recueil, XIX, 14). Spiegelberg thinks it strange that the two Memnon colossi are not given separate mention, but they are clearly mentioned in the reference to "costly gritstone," which is the material of the colossi. Moreover, they are distinctly mentioned in the Dedication Inscription (1. 4, § 906). In further corroboration of the inscription, note the statement: "there were many of these statues which stood fronting the great colossi in the intervals of the front columns of the propylon" (Arundale and Bonomi, Gallery, 107), noted by Spiegelberg.

*f The enormous stela lying overthrown behind the Memnon colossi (§ 904 ff.). The word "station" is here determined with a stela, showing that, as at Amada (§ 796, 1. 15), the "station of the king" was marked by the stela against the back wall of the holy of holies.

*Cf. similar staves in the inscription of Ineni, § 103.
Its storehouses contain all good things, whose number is not known. It is surrounded with settlements of Syrians (Ḥ ṣ -rw), colonized with children of princes, its cattle are like the sand of the shore, they make up millions.

Western Pylon

885. The bow-rope of the Southland in it and the stern-rope of the Northland, even his majesty revealed himself like Ptah, was skilful-minded like Him-South-of-His-Wall (Ptah), searching out excellent things for his father, Amon-Re, King of Gods, making for him a very great pylon over against Amon. Its beautiful name which his majesty made was: "Amon-Has-Received-His-Divine-Barque," a place of rest for the lord of the gods at his "Feast of the Valley" on the western voyage of Amon to behold the western gods, in order that he may endow his majesty with satisfying life.

Luxor Temple

a Inscription of Ineni (l. 17, § 341) has: "the bow-rope of the South . . . . . . . the stern-rope of the North is she," as epithets of Hatshepsut. It seems to me that Spiegelberg (Recueil, XX, 50) has overlooked the determinative (a rope) in his rendering "Bug" and "Spiegel," "bow" and "stern." (Cf. Sethe, Untersuchungen, I, 52). In view of the Ineni passage, his rejection of the genitive signs seems to me impossible.

b Lit., "opened himself;" cf. ṣwb ṣrw, a synonymous phrase (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 18, l. 3), which Müller renders "sich zeigen" (Recueil, IX, 162).

c This is probably the pylon which flanked the Memnon Colossi, but is now entirely gone.

d The literal meaning of the phrase used for the barque is: "Bearer of his beauty;" it was a portable shrine.

e The well-known temple at modern Luxor, of which the southern portion is due to Amenhotep III. The architrave inscriptions (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 73, and Text, III, 80, 81) offer a short account of the building: "He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods, again erecting for him Luxor anew, of fine white sandstone, made very, very high and wide, adorned with electrum throughout, and all splendid, costly stones; a rest for Amon, a place of rest for the lord of gods, made like unto his horizon in heaven. That he might be given life." Statements like: "who built temples — sculptured their statues; that which was of brick was (re)built of stone;" or: "who again erected Luxor anew," of course refer to the older Middle Empire temple which Amenhotep III enlarged or rebuilt. On the entire history of the Luxor temple, see Borchhardt, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1896, 122–38.

rThe only “great temple” of Amenhotep III which is “over against” Luxor is the temple of Mut, which could hardly be referred to here without some reference to the goddess. Hence there may be some undiscovered building of Amenhotep III in the unexplored ground between Luxor and Karnak, to which reference is here made.

Sacred Barge of Amon

888. King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nibmare, Part of Re; Son of Re: Amenhotep (III), Ruler of Thebes. I made another monument for him who begat me, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, who established me upon his throne, making for him a great barge for the "Beginning-of-the-River" (named): "Amon-Re-in-the-Sacred-Barge," of new cedar which his majesty cut in the countries of God's-Land. It was dragged over the mountains of Retenu (Rtnw) by the princes of all countries. It was made very wide and large, there is no instance of doing the like. Its is adorned with silver, wrought with gold throughout, the great shrine is of electrum so that it fills the land with its brightness; its bows, they repeat the brightness; they bear great crowns, whose serpents twine along its two sides; they exercise protection behind them. Flagstaves are set up before it wrought with electrum, two great obelisks are between them; it is beautiful everywhere. The gods of Pe make jubilee to it; the gods of Nekhen praise it; the two Nile-gods of the South and the North, they embrace its beauty, its bows make Nun to shine as when the sun rises in heaven, to make his beautiful voyage at his feast of Opet on his western voyage of a million of millions of years.

As it stands, the text is certainly corrupt; the rendering of Spiegelberg ("die ganze Erde") seems impossible, in view of the m for r. This m indicates the above rendering, which is a common idea in respect of monuments of electrum; cf. e.g., obelisk of Hatshepsut, base inscription, south side, l. 7 (§ 315*). Since making the above remark, I find the same suggestion (by Müller?) in Orientalistische Literaturzeitung, May, 1898, 158, n. 2, where I also find a good suggestion for the conclusion of the phrase.

useful, the king, who has erected another monument for Amon, making for him a very great portal over against Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, wrought with gold throughout. The Divine Shadow, as a ram, is inlaid with real lazuli wrought with gold and many costly stones; there is no instance of doing the like. Its floor is adorned with silver; towers (sbd.t) are over against it. Stelae of lazuli are set up, one on each side. Its pylons reach heaven like the four pillars of heaven; its flagstaves shine more than the heavens, wrought with electrum. His majesty brought gold for it in the land of Karoy (K²-r²-y) on the first victorious campaign, slaying the wretched Kush.

Temple of Soleb

890. King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nibmare, beloved of Amon-Re; Son of Re: Amenhotep (III), Ruler of Thebes. I made other monuments for Amon, whose like hath not been. I built for thee thy house of millions of years in the ḫ—ḫ of Amon-Re, lord of Thebes (named): Khammat (Ḫ —m—m²c².t), a resting-place for my father at all his feasts. It is finished with fine white sandstone; it is wrought with gold throughout; its floor is adorned with aThe immaterial or intangible part of a god conceived as a shadow, a common conception both for gods and men (see Birch, Transactions of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, VIII, 386-97; Maspero, Dawn of Civilisation, 108). The hieroglyph and symbol for this shadow is a sunshade, often figured in mortuary vignettes; it is this which is thus referred to in Ineni (§ 104, l. 9): "its huge door was of Asiatic bronze, whereon was the Divine Shadow (det. with ithyphallic Min) inlaid with gold." In the above it is also connected with a door, but seems to be in the form of a ram; cf. also Spiegelberg, Recueil, XX, 53. Another similar reference to the "shadow" of the god is on one of the Soleb rams (Lepsius, Denkmaler, III, 89, c), but the context is broken off. A similar reference to the divine figure in connection with the door is found on the shrine of Saft: "The doors upon it (the shrine) are of black copper, inlaid with gold, the image upon it is of —" (Naville, The Shrine of Saft-et-Henneh, Pl. 6, l. 7).

See the two stelae of the Nubian War, §§ 844, 845, l. 5 in each; and scarab of marriage with Tiy, § 862.

Text has Kny, which is, of course, an error.

Emended. *Same word (š.h) in I, § 503, l. 16.

This is the name of the Soleb temple in Nubia; it means: "Shining (or rising) in (or as) Truth," which is also one of Amenhotep III's names, either in the full titulary, or alone, e. g., "which his son Khammat made for him" [east side of south tower, third pylon, Karnak (Mariette, Karnak, 34, l. 29)].

My living image, whom my limbs created,
Whom Mut, mistress of Ishru in Thebes, bore to me,
Mistress of the Nine Bows who brought thee up \(^f\)as sole lord of the people.
My heart greatly rejoices when I see thy beauty,
I work a wonder for thy majesty, and thou renewest youth,

I cause \(^g\)the chiefs of Kush, the wretched, to turn to thee,
Bearing all their tribute upon their backs.
When I turn my face to the north, I work a wonder for thee;

They present themselves to thee \(^h\)with their children,
In order that thou mayest give to them the breath of life.

King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Ruler of the Nine Bows, Lord of the Two Lands, Nibmare, Son of Re, his beloved Amenhotep (III), Ruler of Thebes, with whose monuments the heart of the gods is satisfied; that he may be given life, stability, satisfaction, health; that his heart may be joyful, like Re, forever.

BUILDING INSCRIPTIONS OF THE SOLEB TEMPLE

893. This Nubian temple, dedicated by Amenhotep III to the worship of himself, as well as of Amon, contains a number of building records. Among other things, they preserve the interesting name of the temple, which is not found in the account of the building given by the king in his great Theban building inscription (§890). The architrave dedications are not preserved, but only those upon the sculptures adorning the temple, the rams lining the avenue of approach, and the famous lions in the British Museum.

894. The inscriptions on the rams are these:

bLive the Good God, Nibmare, Son of Re, Amenhotep (III).
[He made] (it) as his monument for his image,c Nibmare, Lord of Nubia (T³-pd·t), great god, lord of heaven; making for him an excellent fortress, surrounded with a great wall, whose battlements shine more than the heavens, like the great obelisks, which the king, Amenhotep (III), Ruler of Thebes, made for a million of million of years, forever and ever. Live the Good God . . . . .d He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon, lord of Thebes; making for him an august temple, made very wide and large, and its beauty increased. Its pylons reach heaven, and the flagstaves, the stars of heaven; it is seen (on) both sides of the river, illuminating the Two Lands.

aOne now in Berlin (Ausführliches Verzeichniss des Berliner Museums, 23, 24). They were found by Lepsius at Gebel Barkal, whither they had been removed from Soleb by the Ethiopians; published, Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 89, 90.

bLepsius, Denkmäler, III, 89, a.

895. On another ram, a the temple is said to be "in the fortress Khammat (ḥc₃-m₃-c₃-t)," b and is dedicated to Amon (as in the great Building Inscription, § 890), and the king's ka. Another ram inscription c thus describes the building:

Making for him an august temple of fine white sandstone; all its portals are of electrum, their radiance is in the faces (of men), the Divine Shadow — — — — ." 896. The famous lions d contribute important historical data, from the state of their inscriptions. The dedications of Amenhotep III were cut out during the religious revolution of Ikhnaton, showing that the persecution of that king extended as far south as Soleb, and included even his own father as a god. They were restored by Tutenkhamon, who prefixed to the restored dedications a record of the restoration thus:

— — — rest the gods, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, Lord of Offering [Nebkheprure], e Son of Re, Lord of Diadems, Tutenkhamon, restorer of the monument of his father, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, Nibmare, Son of Re, Amenhotep (III), Ruler of Thebes. He made (it) as his dThese two magnificent animal figures were later carried away from Soleb and erected in Gebel Barkal (Napata) by the Ethiopians. That there should ever have been any doubt about this, especially in the minds of the British Museum authorities, (see Budge, History, IV, 112; VI, 100) is, to say the least, surprising. Not only do the above dedications show that the lions were originally erected at Soleb (Khammat), but the breast of one bears the inscription of the Ethiopian, stating that he removed it, as follows: "Good God, Lion of Rulers, fierce-eyed Lion when he spies his foes treading his path — (cartouche, name lost), who brought it." Below this, is the double name: "King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Enekhneferibre (nḥ-njr-yb-Rc), Son of Re, Amenisru (Ymn-ys-r-w)." (Published Lepsius, Auswahl der wichtigsten Urkunden, XIII; I had also my own copies of the originals.) See a similar removal record, IV, 649.

monument for his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, Atum, lord of Heliopolis, and Yoh\(^a\) \(Y^c h\), that he might be given life, like Re, forever.

897. On the other lion, the original inscription of Amenhotep III is better preserved,\(^b\) as only the name of the king (containing Amon) has been expunged, and later incorrectly restored, thus:

Horus, Mighty Bull ——— Nibmare, Son of Re, Nibmare\(^c\) (sic!). He made (it) as his monument for "His Living Image on Earth, Nibmare, Lord of Nubia in the Fortress of Khammat."\(^d\)

898. Finally, a doorpost of the temple bears the following dedication:\(^e\)

He made (it) as his monument for "His Living Image upon Earth, Nibmare, Lord of \([\text{Khenthen}\text{nofer;}]\)"\(^d\) making for him temples of fine white sandstone. All its portals are of electrum — — — — —.

GREAT INSCRIPTION OF THE THIRD KARNAK PYLON\(^f\)

899. This pylon, now the rear wall of the great Karnak hypostyle, was erected by Amenhotep III before the obelisks of Thutmose I as the front of the temple, which it continued to be until the famous hypostyle hall was built in front of it by the Nineteenth Dynasty kings. It is referred to in \(^a\)Thoth, the moon-god.

\(^b\)The inscription occurs twice on this lion, once in front and again behind. In front (facing the avenue) it has been completely hacked out, but behind the iconoclasts of Ikhnaton have hastily cut out only the royal names.

\(^c\)Incorrect restoration by Tutenkhamon; it should be, of course, "Amenhotep."

\(^d\)Cultus-name of the deified Amenhotep III. \(^e\)Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 87, a.

\(^f\)On the east face of the southern tower of the third pylon, in 71 vertical lines, of which only the ends have survived, the ends of the last 23 lines containing but two or three words each. It was seen and excerpted by Champollion (Notices descriptives, II, 126). The text was published by Mariette (Karnak, 34, 35) and by Dümichen (Historische Inschriften, II, 39); both number the lines backward, and are also excessively inaccurate; Dümichen even mixes up the lines, and evidently his papers were in confusion. I had excellent photographs of the original by Borchardt.
Amenhotep III's Building Inscription (§ 889), and its southern tower still bears the remnant of a long and magnificently cut inscription referring to the erection of the pylon. This inscription has the following content:

1. Laudation of the king (§ 900, ll. 1-24);
2. Offerings to Amon (§ 901, ll. 24-34).

The inscription is so fragmentary that much of it is unintelligible, but enough remains to show that the third pylon must have been a monument of the greatest richness and beauty.

DEDICATION STELA

904. This stela contained the dedication of the mortuary temple of Amenhotep III, which stood behind the (Memnon) Colossi at Thebes. It stood in the usual place, the "Station of the King," which it marked, being erected, like the similar stelae of Amenhotep II at Elephantine and Amâda, against the inside of the rear wall of the holy of holies. Here it proclaimed the king's gift of the temple to the god, on the spot where the king stood in officially absolving the ceremonies of the ritual.

The upper third of the stela is occupied by two conventional scenes, showing the king, Amenhotep III, and his a These obelisks probably stood in front of this pylon (III); they must have been removed to build the great hypostyle; the only obelisks of Amenhotep III now known at Karnak are in the northern temple, but only fragments have survived (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 2). Perhaps they stood on the two bases referred to in Baedeker's Egypt, 1902, 253.

b Ll. 59-71 contain only an incoherent word or two at the end; indeed, ll. 62 and 69-71 are entirely gone.

c An enormous sandstone stela about 30 feet high and 14 feet wide, still lying a few hundred feet behind the colossi of Amenhotep III at Thebes; text, Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 72.

d The stela is directly referred to in another building inscription of Amenhotep III in this same temple (§ 883, l. 5), where it is called "a station of the king, wrought with gold and many costly stones." The word "station" is here determined with a stela, and the text would indicate that it was overlaid and incrusted.

The text of twenty-four lines represents: (1) the king delivering the temple which stood behind the Colossi to Amon in a presentation address (ll. 2–13); (2) Amon accepting it with words of praise to the king (ll. 14–20); (3) the "Divine Ennead" calling upon the god to enter his temple, while they praise him and the king (ll. 20–24). The text is badly broken and certainly corrupt in a number of places.

There is among the titles of the king also a reference to the monument as "brought from Northern Heliopolis to Southern Heliopolis." The quarry of red gristone, whence the statues were taken, is at the Gebel el-Ahmar near Cairo (see I,493, l. 15, note) and Heliopolis; Southern Heliopolis is modern Erment, south of Thebes.

INSCRIPTIONS OF AMENHOTEP, SON OF HAPI

911. This famous official, who lived under Amenhotep III, was a descendant of an old noble family, the ancient nomarchs of Athribis, and still maintained the office of chief of the prophets of the temple at that place, which went with his ancient rank. He acquired a great reputation for wisdom. On the temple of Der el-Medineh at Thebes an inscription says of him: "His name shall abide forever, his sayings shall not perish." These sayings were thought to be referred to in the papyrus of Heter at Gizeh, but this has been clearly shown to be an error. The attribution of a mortuary papyrus to him is also very questionable. The only wisdom unquestionably assigned to him, though it is probably a pseudepigraphon, is found in an eighteen-line Greek scrawl of the third century B.C., on a limestone ostracon belonging to the Egypt Exploration Fund. It contains nine fragmentary sayings, of which Wilcken has found three also among the "Proverbs of the Seven Wise Men." Amenhotep was long supposed to have built the original temple on the site of the present Der el-Medineh temple; Sethe has shown the error of this supposition. He was long ago pointed out by Brugsch, on the basis of his statute inscription, as the architect of the Memnon colossi on the Theban plain—an error which a careful translation of the inscription immediately exposes.

912. He lived to be at least eighty years old, when the king granted him a statue in the Karnak temple of Amon with the following dedication:

I. STATUE INSCRIPTION c

913. This inscription is very difficult and obscure. The introduction (ll. 1–26) consists solely of eulogistic epithets and phrases applied to the deceased, and of mortuary texts, of no historical value. The remainder (ll. 26–43) contains his official career through three promotions, as follows:

First Promotion

915. The Good God, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nibmare (Amenhotep III), firstborn son of Harakhte, praised me. I was appointed to be inferior king's-\(^b\)scribe; \(^28\)I was introduced into the divine book, I beheld the excellent things of Thoth; I was equipped with their secrets; I opened\(^c\) all their passages\(^3\); one took counsel with me \(^29\)on all their matters.

Second Promotion

916. My lord again showed favor to me; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Nibmare, he put all the people subject to me, and the listing of their number under my control, as superior king's-\(^d\)scribe\(^e\) over recruits. \(^30\)I levied the (military) classes of my lord, my pen reckoned the numbers of millions; I put them in \(^1\)classes\(^3\) in the place of their \(^1\)elders\(^1\); the staff of old age\(^e\) as his beloved son. \(^31\)I taxed the houses with the numbers belonging thereto, I divided the troops (of workmen) and their houses, I filled out the subjects\(^f\) with the best of the captivity, which his majesty had captured \(^32\)on the battlefield. I appointed all their troops (\(\ell ^2\)\(\ell ^t\)), I levied — — — I placed troops at the heads of the way(s) to turn back the foreigners in their places. \(^33\)The two regions were surrounded\(^g\) with a watch scouting for the Sand-rangers. I did likewise at the heads of the river-mouths\(^h\), which were

I was the chief at the head of 35 the mighty men, to smite the Nubians and the Asiatics, the plans of my lord were a refuge behind me; when I wandered! his command surrounded me; his plans embraced all lands and all foreigners who were by his side. I reckoned up the captives of the victories of his majesty, being in charge of them. I did according to that which he (the king) said, I followed according to the things which he commanded me, I found them excellent things for the future.

Third Promotion

917. My lord a third time showed favor to me; Son of Re, Amenhotep (III), Ruler of Thebes, the sun-god is he, to whom hath been given an eternity of his jubilees without end. My lord made me chief of all works. I established the name of the king forever, I did not imitate that which had been done before. I fashioned for him a mountain of gritstone, for he is the heir of Atum. 39 I did according to my desire, executing his likeness in this his great house, with every precious stone, enduring like the heavens; there was not one who had done it (the like) since the time of the founding of his Two Lands. 40 I conducted the work of his statue, its immense in width, taller than his column, its beauty marred the pylon. Its length was 40 cubits in the august mountain of gritstone at the side of Re-Atum. I built an eight-vessel, I brought it (the statue) up-river; it was set up in [this] great house, enduring as heaven. My witnesses are ye, ye who shall come after us; the entire army was as one under my control, they wrought with joy, their hearts were glad, rejoicing and praising the Good God; they landed at Thebes with rejoicing, the monuments rested in their places forever.

Service with the King

918. I [saw] him fighting hand to hand upon the battlefield, while he was like Min in the year of I. I recorded the numbers of his captives as subjects of the temples while I was apportioner of ointment. I was versed in her art and she knew (it), while I was in front with my lord, and I was great before him. I did that which men loved and gods praised.

Benefits for Athribis

919. Behold ye, I did excellent things; do (so) to me, and it shall be done (likewise) to you; for I am an heir who furnished his city, and expelled its from every place. My lord did benefactions for my god. My lord [dug] his southern lake.

*a Text has plural, but the singular pronouns show the error.

*b A statue of Amenhotep III of the Gebel el-Ahmar stone before Harmhab's pylon at Karnak was about 15 meters high, and is probably the one referred to; for it is not stated that the statue was 40 cubits high, but the block in the quarry was 40 cubits "long." A similar reference to the block in the mountain in I, 698, 1. 6.

*c The same as the "Red Mountain" of Mariette, Karnak, 15, 24 (I, 493, l. 15, note) near Cairo, and still called Red Mountain (Gebel el-Ahmar) cf. Baedeker's Egypt, 1902, 74. The phrase "at the side of Re-Atum" refers to its location near the Heliopolis sanctuary of Re. Sethe notes similar phrases on the Sphinx tablet, 11. 6 and 7 (§ 814).

Royal Favor

920. I buried my father, doing again that which did. I interred my mother. My lord — my necessities, causing me to receive bread after the feasts. Men said to me: "it hath come to thee through the Lord of the Two Lands. There is no citizen to whom the like has been done." I executed truth .

II. MORTUARY TEMPLE EDICT

921. This document legally establishes in perpetuity an endowment for the maintenance of Amenhotep's mortuary cult. It was publicly read in his mortuary temple at Thebes to the more important officers of state assembled there in the king's presence, who are adjured to respect it, or suffer under the most dreadful curses. The surviving original is a late copy of the original of Amenhotep's day.

Date

922. 'Year 31, fourth month of the first season, sixth day, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, the Lord of the Two Lands, Nibmare, L. P. H.; Son of Re, of his body, Lord of Diadems, Amenhotep (III), L. P. H.

bHieratic text, being a copy of very late date, on a limestone stela in the British Museum, No. 138, published in transliteration by Birch (Chabas, Mélanges égyptologiques, II sér., 324-43); again by the same author in facsimile (Inscriptions in the Hieratic and Demotic Character, XXIX). I collated the original exhaustively and found the latter publication very inaccurate. It was translated by Brugsch, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1875, 125-27; Erman, Life in Ancient Egypt, 148 (Aegypten, 214, 215); the present translation is much indebted to Erman's version.

The Assembly

923. On this day, one (=the king) was in the ka-chapel\(^a\) of the hereditary prince, count, king's-scribe, Amenhotep. There were brought in: the governor of the city, and vizier, Amenhotep; the overseer of the treasury, Meriptah, and the king's-scribes of the army.

Establishment of Chapel

924. One said to them in the presence of his majesty, L. P. H.: “Hear the command which is given, to furnish the ka-chapel of the hereditary prince, the royal scribe, Amenhotep, called Huy, Son of Hapu, whose excellence is extolled\(^b\) in order to perpetuate his ka-chapel with slaves, male and female, forever; son to son, heir to heir; in order that none trespass upon it forever. It is commended to Amon-Re, king of gods, as long as it is upon earth; \(^5\) he is the king of eternity, he is the protector of the dead.

Curses on Violators

925. As for the general and scribe of the army who shall follow after me and shall find the ka-chapel beginning to decay, together with the male and female slaves who are cultivating (the field) for my endowment, and shall take away a man therefrom in order to put him (\(\text{to?}\)) any business of Pharaoh, L. P. H., or any commission, may his body be accursed\(^c\). Then if another trespasses upon them, and does not answer in their behalf, he shall suffer the destruction of Amon, lord of Thebes, he (the god) shall not permit them to be satisfied with the office of king's-scribe of the army, which they have received for me. \(^8\) He (Amon) shall deliver them into the flaming wrath of the king on the day of his anger; his serpent-diadem shall spit fire upon their heads, shall consume their limbs, shall devour their bodies, they shall become like Apophis on the morning of New Year's Day. They shall be engulfed in the sea, \(9\) it shall hide their corpses. They shall not receive the mortuary ceremonies of the righteous; they shall not eat the food of them that dwell in Keret; the waters by the flood of the river shall not be poured out for them. Their sons shall not be put into their places,

\(^a\)Not the “temple of Kak,” as usually rendered; see Sethe, Festschrift für Georg Ebers, III.

\(^c\)It is possible that this is the case of those who do respect the endowment; while the case of those who do not respect it begins with l. 7.
their wives shall be violated while their eyes see it. The nobles shall not set foot in their houses as long as they are upon earth; the leaders of the two sides shall not introduce them, nor shall they hear the words of the king in the hour of gladness. They shall belong to the sword on the day of destruction, they shall be called enemies; when their bodies be consumed, they shall hunger, without bread, and their bodies shall die. If the vizier, overseer of the treasury, chief overseer of the estate, superintendent of the granary, high priests, divine fathers, and priests of Amon, to whom has been read this edict, issued for the ka-chapel of the hereditary prince, the king's-scribe, Amenhotep, son of Hapu, shall not show solicitude for his ka-chapel, the edict shall touch them, and them especially.

Blessings on Preservers of Chapel

926. But if they shall show solicitude for the ka-chapel, with the male and female slaves who are cultivating (the field) for my endowment, then all favor shall be shown them. Amon-Re, king of gods, shall reward them with prosperous life. The king of your day, shall reward you as he rewards. There shall be doubled for you office upon office, ye shall receive from son to son and heir to heir. They shall be sent on as messengers, and the king of their day will reward them. Their bodies shall (rest) in the West after (a life of) 110 years, doubled to you shall be the mortuary oblations likewise.

Warning to Gendarmes

927. As for the officers of the gendarmes, belonging to the district of the mayor of the west side, in Khaft(et)-hir-nebes, who shall not protect my endowment each day, and on my feast-days on the first of the month, the edict shall touch them, and their bodies shall not escape. But if they shall hear all the edict, issued as a command, and they shall obey and shall not forsake it, good shall happen to them as (to) the just. They shall rest in the cemetery after years of old age.

STATUE OF NEBNEFER

928. This statue was probably dedicated in the chapel of Prince Wazmose; at least, there is a reference to this prince among the inscriptions which it bears. On the back, however, there is an historical inscription apparently recording the promotion of Nebnefer and the appointment of one Hui to his old place. The promotion was by special message of the king, which Nebnefer himself brought, and it was confirmed by a special formulary pronounced by the High Priest and witnessed by all four "prophets" for the temple, and one witness for the incumbent beside himself. The document thus furnishes us with interesting and important procedure in such temple appointments, which are as yet unknown in any other source.

929. ¹Year 20, second month of the first season, under the majesty of King Amenhotep III, beloved of Amon ² ....... b

Royal Message

On this day, behold [his majesty ³was in the temple]œ of Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, lord of Life-of-the-Two-Lands. Message, concerning which the king's-scribe, the steward, Khampet, came to the chief treasurer, the High Priest of Amon, ⁴[Meriptah] ⁵— from the Pharaoh, L. P. H., (saying): "Let the chief measurer of the storehouse of divine offerings be brought — before his fathers; ⁶— Hui being put into his place in the storehouse of divine offerings of Amon."

b Double name of the king and conventional epithets.

c This was probably not Memphis, but the temple of Ptah at Karnak, which bore the same names as the Ptah-temple at Memphis.

d Supplied from l. 8; the middle three lines evidently extended higher up the plinth than the others, and were an uncertain amount longer.
Installation

930. Then it was done according to [all] that [his majesty] said [the High Priest of Amo]n, Meriptah, triumphant, to the king's-scribe, the steward Khampet: a"As for that which is done of thy father Amon, lord of Thebes, in all his commands, as heaven endures, so shall that which he does endure, enduring and permanent forever."

Witnesses

931. Done in the presence of the chief treasurer, the High Priest of Amon, Meriptah; the second prophet, Enen (cnn); the third prophet, Amenemhet; the fourth prophet, Simut; the king's-scribe, Khampet; the steward, Sebeknakht.

a The following is evidently the formulary of confirmation in office, pronounced by the High Priest to the incumbent.

b The phrase is common; hence the remark of the authors, "Le passage semble être fautif," is strange.

c The four prophets (the High Priest’s title really reads “first prophet”) represent the temple, and for the incumbent there are only himself and one more.
REIGN OF IKHNATON

QUARRY INSCRIPTION AT SILSILEH

932. This inscription is among the earliest surviving documents of the great revolution under Ikhnaton. It records the opening of quarry-chambers at Silsileh to obtain stone for the king's first templeb to his new god, whose cult already seems to be in full development. Although Amon is not yet banished, Aton has his formal name, but not yet in the cartouches, in which it later always appears. The king is however, "High Priest" of his new god, whose sanctuary he is about to erect. Of this temple not one stone was left upon another by the king's enemies at his death. The materials have been found at Thebes, but scattered in various structures from Karnak to Erment, chiefly, however, in the Karnak pylons of Harmhab.® The name of this temple was: "Aton-l-is-Found-in-the-House-of-Aton,"d d See tomb of Ramose, § 941, note.

Blocks reused in repairs on the temple of Amenhotep II (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 50); in Karnak (ibid., 52); in town of Luxor (ibid., 89).

and it must have been a large and imposing sanctuary. It was erected early in the Aton schism, for the surviving fragments show a reference to Horus and Set. The name of Aton occurs without the cartouches, and the king still bears his old name. This last fact shows that the temple was built before the sixth year. It is also referred to in the tomb of Hatey (ḥt-ḥt) at Thebes (Kurna), who was "scribe, overseer of the granary in the house (ḥ.t) of the Aton," at a time when the Amon cult was still unrepressed. Thebes as a whole was now apparently called "City (nw.t)-of-the-Brightness-of-Aton," and the temple quarter was known as "Brightness-of-Aton-the-Great."e

933. The quarry inscription informs us that the highest officials of the court served in superintending the work of transportation. The date of the inscription must be very early in the king's reign, because the materials taken from the quarry were built into the temple, completed, and inscribed before the sixth year. The work in the quarry was therefore probably done in the first or second year. Over the inscrip-

*aIn the heart of Harmhab's pylon I found blocks of Ikhnaton's masonry of considerable dimensions; one cornice was 32 inches high. The king's leg, in a fragmentary relief, was 20 inches across at the lower edge of the apron; the k-vessel was 13 inches long; the dy-loaf was 12 inches high. The names of Aton and the king had been expunged before the destruction of the building.

*bFrom my own copies of blocks deep in Harmhab's pylon. I found there also a date which might have settled this question, but unfortunately the year is lost, and only the season and the day remain. [Later: This date is now published in Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 52.]

*cLepsius, Denkmäler, III, 110, d. The old name, "Amenhotep," continued until the fifth year of his reign (Griffith, Kahun Papyri, Pl. 38 and pp. 91 and 92). In the sixth year we find the new name, "Ikhnaton," on the boundary stelae at Amarna (§§ 949 ff.). The Theban temple must, therefore, have been built and sculptured before the sixth year.

*dDaressy, Annales, II, 2-4; Legrain, ibid., III, 265.

*fLegrain's arguments for dating the temple, or a temple of Aton at Thebes, before Ikhnaton's reign are inconclusive (Annales, III, 265).
tion was a relief showing the king worshiping before Amon, but it has been erased, probably by Ikhnaton himself. The inscription below is as follows:

934. ¹Live the Horus: Mighty Bull, Lofty of Plumes; Favorite of the Two Goddesses; Great in Kingship in [Karnak];² Golden Horus: Wearer of Diadems in the Southern Heliopolis; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, High Priest of Harakhte-Rejoicing-in-the-Horizon, in His Name: "Heat-Which-is-in-Aton:" Neferkheprure³-Wanre; ³Son of Re [Amenhotep,⁴ Divine Ruler of Thebes], great in his duration, living forever and ever; [Amon].⁵ Re, lord of heaven, ruler of eternity.⁶

¹Not shown on Lepsius’ plate, but given by him in his notes (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, IV, 96, 97).

²Lepsius has incorrectly restored Akhetaton in this lacuna. This mention of the city in the first or second year had caused me much difficulty; but the publication of this stela by Legrain (Annales, III, 263) shows that "Akhetaton" is an error. We should restore "Karnak" as in the contemporaneous Zernik stela (ibid., 260 f.). This fragmentary stela recorded similar quarry-work in the cliffs opposite and above Esneh. The king bears his old name, and the god’s name also is as in the Silsileh stela; it is undated, but is clearly from the same time as the Silsileh stela, and the expedition recorded was carried out by Eye, afterward king. There is another stela beside Eye’s, showing the "chief of quarrymen, Neferonpet," worshiping Amon (ibid., 261 f.).

³This is the Napkhurlifa of the Amarna Letters; it means: "Beautiful is the Being of Re." Wanre, the second part of the name, means, "Unique One of Re."

⁴This old form of the king's name has been erased because it contained the name of Amon.

⁵Erased.

⁶The connection of the god’s name is uncertain, but probably "beloved of" has been omitted before it (after it in original).

⁷The text has "works," but Brugsch has a similar example (Hieroglyphisch-demotisches Wörterbuch, Supplement, 1337), with "the people" as object of the verb, showing clearly what is meant here.

⁸Like the Hebrew "from Dan to Beersheba." On Samhudet, see Brugsch, Dictionnaire géographique, 704–6. Elephantine was, of course, at the first cataract, and Samhudet was in the Delta.

¹⁰Determined with an obelisk.
Behold, the officials, the companions, and the chiefs of the fan-bearers, were the chiefs of the quarry-service, for the transportation of stone.

TOMB OF THE VIZIER RAMOSE

936. This tomb contains reliefs and inscriptions which are among the most important documents of this reign, because among other facts they furnish contemporary and conclusive evidence of the identity of Amenhotep IV and Ikhnaton, the great religious revolutionary.

Ramose, the owner of the tomb, was an official high in the favor of the king and of exalted rank. He was:

"Governor of the (residence) city, vizier;" "hereditary prince, count of Horus in his house; a doer of truth, a hater of deceit, wearer of the royal seal, chief of works among the great monuments, chief of prophets of North and South, vizier, just judge; sole companion, approaching his lord, whom the Lord of the Two Lands loved because of his remarkable traits, who enters the palace, and comes forth with favor, with the utterances of whose mouth one (= the king) is satisfied;" "(mr t-ntr-) priest, the mouth that makes content in the whole land, (sm-) priest, master of all wardrobes, entering into the secrets of heaven, of earth [and of the nether world];" "master of secret things of the palace;" "attached to Nekhen, prophet of Mat, chief justice."

aSee Hammamat Stela of Ramses IV, l. 14 (IV, 466); also Brugsch (Aegyptologie, 216 f., note). In Papyrus Hood there is a "chief of the quarry-service of the whole land" (p. 216).

bA cliff-tomb in the hill of Shekh Abd-el-Kurna on the west shore at Thebes, known as Stuart's Tomb, No. 108. It was discovered by one "Mustapha Noak" in 1860, and opened successively by Ebers in 1872 and Villiers Stuart in 1879 (see Wiedemann, Recueil, XVII, 9). It was inadequately published by Stuart in The Funeral Tent of an Egyptian Queen, 89 ff.; and Egypt after the War, Pl. 27, and pp. 386-88. Bouriant has some notes on the tomb in Revue archéologique, 1882, N. S., XXIII, 279-84. and Recueil, VI, 55, 56. Nearly all the inscriptions were published by Piehl with great accuracy in Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 127-30; 1887, 37-39. I excavated the unpublished inscriptions and recopied the whole in December, 1894. Some signs had been lost since Piehl made his copies. The accompanying translations are based upon a collation with Piehl, and upon my own copies alone, where Piehl had not copied.

cThese are all the titles in the tomb, as found in my copies.
937. Ramose, as head of the religious, judicial, and administrative organization, must have been the most powerful official at the court of Ikhnaton. He had been vizier under the king's father, Amenhotep III;\(^a\) he was early won over to the Aton faith, and the particular value of his tomb lies in the fact that we may trace in it this conversion of Ramose at a time when Ikhnaton still called himself Amenhotep, and still permitted references to Amon and "the gods." This last term, as well as the name of Amon, has been expunged\(^b\) at a later date. The materials in the tomb are as follows:

Relief Scene

938. A king sits enthroned on the right, his face and figure executed in the usual conventional style; behind him the goddess Mat; before him, with upraised arms, Ramose.

\(^a\)It must be the same Ramose who, in an inscription on the island of Sehel, is called: "Hereditary prince, the two eyes of the king in the whole land, governor of the (residence) city and vizier, Ramose" (Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1216, gg - de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, I, 90, No. 79). See also Wiedemann, Recueil, 17, 9; Mariette, Monuments divers, 70, No. 21; ibid., 72, No. 50; and Petrie, Season in Egypt, 13, No. 334.

\(^b\)This expungement is very significant; for it is not the name of a particular god, but the word "gods," which is expunged. I have found this same erasure of the word "gods" at Karnak in the long offering inscription of Amenhotep III on Pylon III, and in the Coronation Inscription of Thutmose III; also on a number of Eighteenth Dynasty monuments in European museums. With this fact compare the erasure of the gods' names at Karnak as noted by Lepsius: "Auch hier [Temple of Ptah, northern Karnak] waren die Namen des Ptah und Amon wie auch der Hathor und ihre Figuren alle ausgekratzt; so auch auf dem Architrav der Thüre die Namen des Ptah. Ebenso sind sämtliche Götter im Tempel zu Med. Habu und in dem hinteren Theile des grossen Tempels von Karnak ausgekratzt; die Götterverfolgung muss also nicht nur dem Amon gegolten haben, sondern viel allgemeiner gewesen sein."—Lepsius (Denkmäler, Text, III, 8; read also end of section), and see ibid., 31. By comparing Leyden Stela, V, 26, and Vienna Stela, 53, it will be seen that the wife of a certain "overseer of the cattle of Amon" was a "musician of Upwawet;" but when her husband became "overseer of the cattle of the house of Aton," she was obliged to drop her title (see Baillet, Notice sur la collection égyptienne de l'Abbé Desnayers, 40, and Recueil, 23, 144; also Bergmann, Recueil, IX, 42). The persecution therefore included all the gods. See Breasted, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 40, 108-10.

939. The accompanying inscriptions are:

Over the King

King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, — re, given life, Son of Re, his beloved, Amenhotep, God, Ruler of Thebes, great in his duration.

Over Mat

Mat, daughter of Re, presider over the palace, mistress of heaven, ruler of the gods. She gives myriads of years.

Over Ramose

Utterance of the governor of the (residence) city, the vizier, Ramose, triumphant, for the benefit of thy ka: "An adjuration to thy father, 'Harakhte-Rejoicing-in-the-Horizon, in his name: Heat-Which-is-[in]-Aton," c that he may praise thee, that he may love thee, that he may establish thee, that he may give to thee myriads of years (so that) thy annals may be jubilees; that all lands may be under thy feet, that he may fell thy foes, dead or alive; that all joy may be with thee, all health with thee, all life with thee, and that thou mayest abide upon the throne of Re forever."

Relief Scene

Under the radiating sun-disk stand a king and queen, worshiping, all in the peculiar Amarna style. They are in a building, doubtless a part of the Theban Aton-temple. Outside are groups of bowing officials.

942. The inscriptions are these:

\(^a\)In two lines; a third mutilated line is omitted above. Over the king's head is also the winged sun-disk, with its usual inscription: "The Edjuan (Horus) great god, etc." This disappears entirely during the later Aton movement.

\(^b\)This entire speech of Ramose to the king appears twice over his head, with slight variants.

\(^c\)This and the mention in the Silsileh inscription are the earliest occurrences of Aton's name; it is not yet in the cartouche.

\(^e\)There are no children present as usual in such scenes so common at Amarna. This is perhaps another indication of the early date of this tomb in the reign.
By the Sun-Disk

By the King

Lord of the Two Lands, Nefer[hepru]re—, given life, Lord of Diadems, Amenhotep, God, Ruler of Thebes, great in his duration.

Over the Queen

Great King's-wife, his beloved, Mistress of the Two Lands,—living, flourishing.

943. These two reliefs show, first: that the Aton faith was in full swing under an Amenhotep whose prenomen begins like that of Ikhnaton; second, a king with the unmistakable features of Ikhnaton, worshiping the latter's peculiar god, appearing in public with his queen, as only Ikhnaton did, bears the name "Amenhotep." This is proof positive of the identity of Ikhnaton and Amenhotep IV.

944. The remaining reliefs illustrate the high favor of Ramose with the king.

Scene

The king stands at the left holding audience; before him in successive moments appears Ramose, kissing the earth, kneeling, standing decorated with gold, departing with servants bearing the gold collars just received from aThe god's two names are here in cartouches.

bThis is the name of the Aton-temple at Thebes, in which the reliefs represent the king and queen as standing. The phrase "red image of Aton" (Bouriant, Le Tombeau de Ramses & Cheikh-abd-el-Gournah, p. 7) is due to reading the bird here as the "red" bird (ḥḏr), but even then the translation is impossible, for the word "image" is lacking. "Gem-Aton" is of uncertain meaning, but the name was also applied by Ikhnaton to a new city founded by him for the Aton-worship in Nubia, in the central cataract region. This Nubian city survived a thousand years under the name "Gem-Aton," and is mentioned several times on the Nastesen Stela (see my remarks, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 40, 106 ff.).
the king, and finally issuing from the palace, when he is met by congratulating friends, rejoicing and carrying flowers.

Inscriptions

945. The inscriptions were very brief, and are now mostly too fragmentary for translation, but the speech of the king to Ramose contains interesting references to the origin of the Aton faith, unfortunately much broken. It is as follows:

“aThe words of Re are before thee, —— of my august father, who taught me their essence, —— them to me. All that is, his —— since he equipped the land —— in order to exalt me since the time of the god. It was known in my heart, opened to my face, I understood ——.”

946. The king is evidently referring to the revelation of the Aton faith directly to himself. To this Ramose makes the following remarkable reply:

“We, thy monuments shall endure like the heavens, for thy duration is like Aton therein. The existence of thy monuments is like the existence of the heavens; thou art the Only One of [Aton], in possession of his designs. Thou hast led the mountains; their secret chambers, the terror of thee is in the midst of them, as the terror of thee is in the hearts of the people; they hearken to thee as the people hearken.”

947. An inscription in the doorway might indicate that Ramose was later buried in this tomb; it runs thus:

“I have arrived in peace at my tomb, possessed of the favor of the Good God. I did the pleasure of the king in my time; I did not disregard a regulation which he commanded, I practiced no deceit against the people, in order that I might gain my tomb (hr't), upon the great West of Thebes.”

aThese accompanying inscriptions are directly below the upper row, depicting the decoration, and belong with a lower band connected with the same incident. They are only in ink and very faded; I believe my copy of them is the first made. They have never been published.

bSee similar idea, Kubbân Stela, l. 6 (III, 285).
But doubtless this language is only conventional, for the tomb was never finished, and there is at Amarna the tomb of a Ramose, perhaps the same man who has followed his king to the new capital.

948. This tomb at Thebes is in arrangement, style, and subject of reliefs exactly like those of Amarna, for which it doubtless served as a model. The rich gifts to Ramose which it depicts show how Ikhnaton gained his officials to his cause, while similar scenes upon the walls of almost every Amarna tomb show how he kept them faithful.

THE TELL EL-AMARNA LANDMARKS

949. Having finally broken with the Theban priesthood of Amon, Ikhnaton abandoned Thebes as capital and royal residence, and determined to found a new city devoted exclusively to the service of Aton, the new solar god. The site selected for the new residence and holy city was about one hundred and sixty miles above modern Cairo, on the east bank of a No. 11 in Daressy’s list (Recueil, XV, 50); I copied the inscriptions in the tomb (doorway, thickness, right hand), and they give this Ramose the titles: “Commander of the army of the Lord of the Two Lands, overseer of the White House of Amenhotep III,” which do not correspond with those of the Theban Ramose; but the rapid and sudden changes of the time may have transferred him to the head of the army. See also Wiedemann (Recueil, XVII, 9, 10) who opposes the identity.

b These fourteen landmarks are huge stelae varying in size from K, which “is 5 feet wide and 8 feet 3 inches high,” to U, which is “14½ feet wide and about 26 feet high.” They are cut into the limestone cliffs, and the quality of the stone is such that they have suffered extremely from wind and weather. No one stela contains a completely preserved text, but by combining all those thus far published, a complete text of the second class of stelae (the original six) was obtained. Professor Petrie has lettered all these stelae on his map (Tell el-Amarna, Pl. XXXIV), and furnished the first complete account of them. I have followed his lettering. Of the fourteen stelae (one more discovered since Petrie’s map was made) I was able to secure copies of eight, as follows:

1. A (northwest corner); Prisse, Monuments égyptiens, XIV, ll. 20–25 (end); Daressy, Recueil, XV, 61.
2. B (middle, west side, Gebel Tâne); Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 91, a–f (only the Nile, at a point where the cliffs, suddenly retreating some three miles from the river, and as suddenly approaching it again, over five miles lower down, thus with the river inclose a roughly semicircular plain about three miles wide by five miles long. In this plain he built his new city, a called Akhetaton, "Horizon of Aton," but it was his design from the first to consecrate and devote to the city and its god's service a large domain around it.

950. For this purpose he established, above and below the two points where the cliffs leave the river, a northern and southern boundary line, the two being about eight miles apart, and running from cliff to cliff clear across the Nile valley, which here varies from twelve to seventeen and a half miles in width. The boundaries were then marked by fourteen splendid stelae cut into the cliffs, some of them being as high as twenty-six feet. As the cliffs formed a natural boundary on the east and west, the northern and southern lines were of chief importance; hence the east and west ends of these two lines, where they struck the cliffs, were marked by four large stelae cut in the rocks. But, probably owing to the irregularity of the cliff lines, another pair were placed opposite each other in the eastern and western cliffs, midway between the northern and south-

3. F (southwest corner); hand copy by Petrie.
4. J (southernmost on river front, east side); hand copy by Petrie.
5. K (just north of J); Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 110, b.
6. S (southeast corner); best preserved of all; photograph and copy by Daressy, Recueil, XV, 52; Prisse, Monuments égyptiens, XIII.
7. U (middle east side); Prisse, ibid., XII, and hand copy by Petrie.
8. X (close by Shekh Saqfd, matching K on the south); recently discovered by Mr. N. de G. Davies, to whose kindness I am indebted for a squeeze. Professor Petrie kindly placed his copies of F, J, and U at my disposal.

*The modern name, "Tell el-Amarna," now universally applied to the locality, is a corruption of "El Amarieh;" see Petrie, Tell el-Amarna, 2.
ern lines\(^a\) (U and B). Finally, the irregularity of the cliffs forced the erection of no less than eight more, all on the east side, chiefly where the cliffs are broken by incoming valleys, across which the new stelae carry the line (total, fourteen). It is not improbable that there are others yet undiscovered.

951. In form these stelae are practically all of one design, showing at the top a relief scene in which appear the king, queen, and either two or three daughters, standing before an altar and adoring Aton, whose rays, terminating in hands, extend to them the symbol of life. All, including the god, are accompanied by their names in cartouches, and their titles. The inscription, beginning in the relief-field with a few vertical lines, continues below in horizontal lines. On either side of the stelae were often altars with statues of the king and his family.

The stelae (called "landmarks" in the translation) fall, according to content, into two classes.

952. The first class is represented by two stelae,\(^b\) containing a detailed endowment of the god, probably not confined to the gift of Akhetaton. They were of great length, containing nearly eighty lines each, but are so fragmentary that only a few detached phrases in the first half can be discerned.

953. After the date,\(^c\) the introduction, the account of the king's first visit to Akhetaton, and the oblation, all being identical with the beginning of the stelae of the second class

\(^a\)See conclusion of Stela A (§971), which is different from that of the others, and clearly defines the position of the original six stelae.

\(^b\)These two stelae (K and X) occupy important positions: one at the north and the other at the south end of the semicircle, where the cliffs approach to the river-bank above and below the city on the east bank.

\(^c\)The date is lost on X; in K, Lepsius, Denkmäler, has "year 4," with signs of weathering; but the month, which is the same as on all the second class of stelae (which are all of year 4), shows that Lepsius, Denkmäler, has misread 6 as 4.
§956] THE TELL EL-AMARNA LANDMARKS

(§§ 959 ff.), these two stelae proceed with a glorification of the king:

All [lands], all countries, the Haunebu [come to him] bearing their impost, their tribute upon their backs, [for] him who makes their life.

954. Then follows apparently the king’s solemn asseveration, in which he proclaims the gift of Akhetaton to Aton:

His majesty raised his hand to heaven, to him who made him, even Aton, [saying: “This is my testimony], forever, and this is my witness forever, this landmark . . . . . . . . . . I have made Akhetaton for my father as a dwelling for —. I have [‘demarked’] Akhetaton on its south, on its north, on its west, on its east. I shall not pass beyond the southern landmark of Akhetaton toward the south, nor shall I pass beyond the northern landmark of [Akhetaton toward the north].a . . . . . . . . . . He has made its circuit for his own —; he hath made his [altar] in its midst, whereon I make offering to him; this is it.”

955. Then follows the statement that Akhetaton shall be a new capital, where he will hold audience for all the land (cf. III, 63, Harmhab):

“The whole land [shall come hither] for the beautiful seat of Akhetaton shall be another seat, and I will give them audience, b whether they be north, or south, or west, or east. . . . . . . . .”

956. After a short break, the text proceeds with the building of the temple:

“I have made Akhetaton in this [place] — — — — that he may be satisfied therewith, forever and ever. I have made a temple of Aton for Aton, my father, in Akhetaton in this [place]. I have made — — [for Aton], my father, in Akhetaton in this place. I have made the ‘Shadow-of-Re,’ [for Aton, my father, in Akhetaton in this place] . . . . . . . . . .”

aThe only two stelae bearing this text stand at the extreme north and south.

bLit., “hearing.”

Still another of these phrases follows here, but the object made is lost; possibly each refers to a different temple at Akhetaton, of which there were at least three called “Shadow of Re” (see §§ 1017 ff.).
957. From here on the text is in such fragmentary condition that little can be made out. It is probable that these thirty-seven lines contained the decree endowing Aton with lands and revenues outside of Akhetaton. This is practically certain in the following fragment:

"As for my ground in every town (fmyt) of the north, of the south, of the west, or of the east, it is my — — ; it shall be brought — my — for Akhetaton."

In I. 45 "Kush" is mentioned, and it may be that the decree here passes from the gift of lands in Egypt to those in Kush.

958. The second class of stelae, of which there are twelve, are not so long, but to them belong the original six, three on each side of the river, which were later increased to twelve. After the date and titulary they record the king's presence in Akhetaton on that day, on his first visit there (ll. 1-4), his exploration of the city, and oblation to Aton (ll. 5-8) in celebration of the foundation of the city, exactly as in the first class of stelae (§§ 952 ff.). The king then proceeds to the southeastern stela (S), where, after a few words in praise of his queen and the princesses, his daughters, he declares the boundaries of his new city, marked by six stelae, four at the eastern and western ends of the northern and southern boundary lines (§ 962 and § 964), and two more (§ 963), one in the eastern and one in the western cliffs, midway between the northern and southern boundary lines. The size of the inclosure is then indicated (§ 965),

*They occupy both sides of the river, three on the west and nine on the east bank. The three on the west are the three original stelae, matching three original stelae on the east side, which were later increased to nine on the east side. The northernmost of the original eastern three has never been found; X, at present the northernmost on the east side, belongs to the first class, and not to the second class, to which the original six belong. The six are: (1) on the west side: A, B, and F; (2) on the east side: S, U, and the northeast stela still undiscovered. A differs in its conclusion from the others (see §§ 970-72).
and the whole is solemnly conveyed as a permanent gift to Aton (§966), the other landmarks being appealed to as containing a similar record (§967), which will in all cases be renewed in case it has suffered defacement or erasure from any cause (§968). A later note (§969) in conclusion records an inspection by the king in the year 8.

Introduction

959. Year 6, fourth month of the second season, thirteenth day.

1Live the Good God, satisfied with truth, lord of heaven, lord of Aton; live the great one who illuminates the Two Lands; live my father; live "Harakhte-Rejoicing-in-the-Horizon, in his name: Heat-Which-is-in-Aton," who is given life forever and ever.

Live Horus: Mighty-Bull, Beloved-of-Aton; Favorite of the Two Goddesses; Great-in-Kingship-in-Akhetaton; Golden Horus: Bearer-of-the-Name-of-Aton; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Living in Truth, Lord of the Two Lands: [Neferkhepru]re-Wanre; b Son of Re, Living in Truth, Lord of Diadems: Ikhnaton (Y 3 h-n-Ytm), great in duration, 2 given life forever and ever; Good God — whose beauty Aton created, the really good-hearted toward Irsu, c satisfying him with that which pleases his ka, doing that which is useful for him that begat him; 3 offering the earth to him that placed him upon his throne, supplying his eternal house with millions and hundred-thousands of things, exalter of Aton, magnifier of his name; who causes that the earth should belong to Irsu, 4 Ikhnaton. d a In Egyptian one word nb’ty, a feminine dual noun, with an adjectival ending, so that the whole means "he who belongs to, or is protégé of, the two goddesses," but the word for the latter is not as prominent as in English; hence Ikhnaton retained the old royal titulary without change, even including this somewhat compromising title, to preserve the old titulary complete. This is one of the few compromises with a traditional form by Ikhnaton. That he no longer retained a belief in the two goddesses is shown by the fact that the vulture, which regularly appears with wings outspread in protection over the heads of the other kings, is never found with Ikhnaton, but it is replaced by the sun-disk enveloping Ikhnaton in its rays.

b The first part is the Napkhurīva of the Amarna Letters; the whole means: "Beautiful is the Being of Re; the Unique One of Re."

c Yr-sw = "He that made him."

d Last two names of the titulary are repeated in full, as in l. 1.
Hereditary princess, great in the palace, lovely of face, beautiful in the double plume, lady of joy, abounding in favor, at the sound of whose voice there is rejoicing; a the Great King's-Wife, his beloved, the Mistress of the Two Lands, Nefernefruaton-Nofretete.

Founding of the City

960. 5On this day one was in Akhetaton in the pavilion of woven stuff which his majesty, L. P. H., made in Akhetaton, the name of which is: "Aton-is-Satisfied." His majesty, L. P. H., appeared upon a great chariot b of electrum, like Aton, when he rises in the horizon;
he filled the Two Lands with his loveliness. On beginning the goodly way to Akhetaton, at the first exploration of it c which his majesty, L. P.
H., made, in order to found it as a monument to Aton, according to the command d of his father Aton, who is given life forever and ever; in order to make for him a monument in its midst. One caused that a great oblation should be offered, consisting of bread, beer, oxen, calves, cattle, fowl, wine, gold, incense, all beautiful flowers. On this day was founded Akhetaton for the living Aton, that favor and love might be received, on behalf of King Ikhnaton.e

King Goes to Southeastern Landmark

961. As one proceeded southward, his majesty halted in his chariot in the presence of his father Aton, upon the southeastern f mountain of Akhetaton, while the rays of Aton were upon him in satisfying life, making youthful his limbs every day. Vivat g which the king, Ikhnaton, b S has: "upon a span of horses (and) upon a chariot, etc."

c Lit., "at the first time of finding it."
d The full double name is used here and later.
e Under the orthodox régime offerings were officially made "on behalf of"
(he d ḫ d') the king (see §57). We see here that their specific object was "favor and love;" of course, those of the god. It is this which is referred to in the stereotyped form of the royal oath: "As Re loves me, as Amon favors me." Cf. IV, 958D.
f This stela (S), from which this translation is made, is at the southeast corner.
The other stelae vary the text to suit their respective locations.
g This rendering of the word nh here is made certain by the introduction to the second date (l. 25): "Repetition of the vivat (nh)," followed by the date. The full vivat is the nh, followed by the entire titulary of the god, as we have it at the beginning of the inscription; but to save space the second date is introduced merely by the words: "Repetition of the vivat," which are thus a kind of abbreviation of the full introduction.
spake: "Live my father, Aton, who is given life forever! My heart is joyous over the king's-wife and over her children, who bring long life for the Great King's-Wife, Nofretete, living forever and ever, with the myriad of years. She is under the hand of the Pharaoh, L. P. H., who brings long life; the king's-daughter, Meretaton; the king's-daughter, Meketaton, her children, being under the hand of the King's-Wife, their mother, forever and ever. It is my oath by the truth, (namely), that which my heart shall speak; (and) that which I do not speak is falsity; forever and ever.

East and West Ends of Southern Boundary Lines

962. As for the southern landmark, which is upon the eastern mountain of Akhetaton, it is the landmark of Akhetaton, as far as which I make a stand; I shall not pass beyond it toward the south, forever and ever. The southwestern landmark is made over against it, upon the [western] mountain of Akhetaton, opposite.

Middle of Eastern and Western Boundary Lines

963. As for the middle landmark which is upon the eastern mountain of Akhetaton, it is the landmark of Akhetaton, as far as which I make a stand, upon the eastern mountain of Akhetaton; I shall not pass beyond it toward the east, forever and ever. The middle landmark which is upon the western mountain of Akhetaton is made over against it, opposite.

East and West Ends of Northern Boundary Line

964. As for the northeastern landmark of Akhetaton, as far as which I make a stand; it is the northern landmark of Akhetaton; I shall not pass beyond it toward the north, forever and ever. The northern landmark, which is upon the western mountain of Akhetaton is over against it, opposite.

a Lit., "who cause that the great king's-wife N. should grow old," in a good sense, meaning attain old age.

b The divergent conclusion of Stela A begins here (see §970).

c Or a "halt."

d This formula, repeated on all the stelae of the second class (except A), may be either a traditional one taken from the legal form used in establishing boundaries; or it may be an extraordinary statement peculiar to this remarkable king, asserting that he will never pass beyond the boundaries of Akhetaton, but remain within his god's domain all his life.

e The order of phrases differs slightly from that in the preceding two clauses.
Area Contained

965. Now, as for Akhetaton, from the southern landmarks to the northern landmarks measured between landmark and landmark upon the eastern mountain of Akhetaton, it makes 6 iter, 19 1 khet, 1 half-khet, 1 quarter-khet, and 4 cubits. Likewise, from the southwestern landmark of Akhetaton to the [northern landmarks] upon the western mountain of Akhetaton, it makes 6 iter, 1 khet, 1 half-khet, 1 quarter-khet, and 4 cubits; being the same on both sides.

Deed of Gift to Aton

966. Now, as for the area within the four landmarks, from the [eastern] mountain to the western mountain of Akhetaton, it belongs to my father, Aton, who is given life, forever and ever; whether mountains, cliffs, or marshes, or uplands, or fields, or waters, or towns, or shores, or people, or cattle, or trees, or anything which Aton, my father, has made, I have made it for Aton, my father, forever and ever.

Citation of the Other Landmarks

967. Moreover, it is recorded upon the landmark of stone, at the southeastern limit, and at the northeastern limit of Akhetaton likewise. It is recorded upon the western landmark of stone, at the southwestern limit likewise of Akhetaton.

aThe khet (ḥet) contained 100 cubits, but the iter varies in different localities; here it can be computed, for it is clear that these measurements concern only the original six stelae, the only ones known to the maker of this text. There is no doubt regarding which stelae are meant, as some have averred. The discovery of the northeastern stela, high above the river at Shekh Saqid, by Mr. Davies, gives us the northern terminus on the east side for the first time. Previous calculations, starting at the next stela southward (V), have been based on too short a total measurement. The discovery of the Shekh Saqid stela makes the east and west sides of Akhetaton of about the same length as the stela states they were, viz., some 45,830 feet, roughly, over 8½ miles. This makes the iter here used equal some 4,400 cubits, or 7,587 feet — roughly, 1¾ miles. This is longer than the iter as given by Griffith (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archeology, XV, 303–6), and Sethe (Untersuchungen, II, 3, 11) could now strike out his minimum of 1½ km. But these calculations antedate the discovery of the northeast stela, which was also unknown to Levy, Recueil, XVI, 162–72. See also Loret, Sphinx, VII, and Sethe, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 41, 58–60.
bThe word "opposite" renders the restoration practically certain.
cM ḫw, a kind of land.
dFor some reason, perhaps by oversight, the northwestern corner is omitted.
Permanence of the Record

968. It shall not be erased, it shall not be washed out, it shall not be abraded, it shall not be encumbered with detritus, [it] shall not be —. If it should disappear, if it should wear away, if the stela upon which it is, should fall, I will restore it again anew in this place in which it is.

Inspection Two Years Later

969. Repetition of the vivat. In the year 8, in the first month of the second season, the eighth day, one (i.e., his majesty) was in Akhetaton; the Pharaoh, L. P. H., halted, shining in the great chariot of electrum, while inspecting these landmarks of Aton, which are in the eastern mountain, at the southeastern limit of Akhetaton, established forever and ever for the living Aton.

970. The stela at the northwest corner (A) follows the conventional text of all the other stelae of the second class for thirteen lines, but then proceeds with the position of the stelae, the demarcation, etc., in a form quite different from all the others of the second class. It runs thus:

Landmarks and Boundaries

971. Said the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, [Neferkheprure-Wanre], Son of Re, living in truth, Ikhnaton, great in his duration, when setting up these landmarks (cartouche) given life, forever and ever: "As for these landmarks which I have set up at the boundaries of Akhetaton, the 3 landmarks upon the eastern mountain of Akhetaton, together with the 3 landmarks opposite them: the southern landmark which is upon the eastern mountain of Akhetaton as far as the landmark upon the western mountain of Akhetaton shall be for the southern boundary of Akhetaton; the northern landbAs numbered on Stela S. cThe numeral is broken away, except two strokes.

dThe restoration is clear from the word "likewise" at the end of the definition of the northern boundary (l. 23); Daressy has not left room for it in his publication, but the length of other lines (like 24) shows that enough is lost for this restoration. The northernmost and southernmost eastern and western stelae form the eastern and western termini of the northern and southern boundaries.
mark which is upon the eastern mountain of Akhetaton, a going to the landmark [upon] the western [mountain] of Akhetaton, shall be the northern boundary of Akhetaton likewise; the middle landmark which is upon the eastern mountain of Akhetaton, likewise the middle landmark which is opposite it upon the western mountain of Akhetaton."

Deed to Aton

972. "Now, as for the width of Akhetaton, mountain to mountain from its eastern horizon to its western horizon, it shall belong to my father, Aton, given life, forever and ever; whether its mountains, or its cliffs, — — —, or its —, or all its people, or all its cattle, or anything which Aton causes to exist, upon which his rays shine, or anything — — — of Akhetaton, they shall belong to my father, the living Aton, for the temple of Aton in Akhetaton, forever and ever. They shall be offered to his ka, the beautiful rays receiving them ————."

ASSUAN TABLET OF THE ARCHITECT BEK

973. The presence of Ikhnaton's architect and master-sculptor at Assuan is, of course, to be explained by the fact of the quarries there, from which he was taking stone for the temples at Akhetaton. It therefore bears the same relation to the Amarna temple as the Silsileh quarry inscription bears to the Theban Aton-temple. The expungement of Ikhnaton's figure from the relief shows that the persecution of his memory was extended as far south as the cataract, and the fragments found at Memphis, Heliopolis, and

Relief Scene

974. Before an altar, embraced by the hands terminating the rays of the sun which is above it, stands Bek at the right in gala costume, with a large bouquet of flowers. The space before Bek, on the left of the altar, contained the figure of Ikhnaton, as the inscription over Bek shows; but this figure has been obliterated⁴ by the king's enemies. The scene is accompanied by the following inscriptions:

975. b— Living, great Aton, celebrator of jubilees, lord of heaven, lord of earth, lord of every circuit of Aton, lord of the house of Aton in Akhetaton.

THE TELL EL-AMARNA TOMBS

977. Like all ancient Egyptian cities, the life of Akhetaton, so much of it as has survived, must be sought rather in the city of the dead than in the city of the living; and far more of Akhetaton has survived in its cemetery than in its streets. The tombs are themselves the product of the king’s bounty, and we find frequent statement of this in such remarks as this of a relative of the deceased official: “We see the good things which the Good Ruler hath done for his table-scribe (Ani), commanding for him goodly burial in Akhetaton.”

The tombs are themselves therefore tangible evidence of the royal favor in claiming which, each of the owners of these tombs has used so much space on their walls.

aThese tombs are cut into the limestone cliffs surrounding the plain of Amarna on the east side of the river. They are twenty-five in number, and fall into two groups, a northern (six) and a southern (nineteen). See Petrie’s map, Tell el-Amarna, Pl. XXXV; and excellent description, Baedeker’s Egypt, 1902, 195-99. The hymns here translated are usually engraved on the thickness or edge of the doorway (see Mariette, Voyage dans la haute Egypte, I, Pl. V); Davies, Amarna, I, 47, 48).

The relief scenes occupy the walls of the chambers. Neither scenes nor inscriptions have ever been completely published. Lepsius published twenty-one plates of selected material (Denkmäler, III, 91-111), the first basis for study of Amenhotep IV’s reign. The French Mission Archéologique au Caire spent a few days there and published some new material (Bouriant, Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, I, ff.), but it is not reliable. Finally Daressy has furnished a useful sketch of the tombs with some new material (Recueil, XV, 36-50). Many scenes have also appeared in the old publications (see list in Davies, Amarna, I, 3 ff.). On the basis of the above publications I published a study of the hymns: De Hymnis in Solem sub Rege Amenophide IV Conceptis (Berlin, 1894). For the following translations, I had also my own copies of all the hymns at Amarna, made in the winter of 1894-95. A full and accurate publication of all the tombs has been begun by N. de G. Davies, for the Egyptian Exploration Fund, and two volumes have appeared.

bTomb of Ani (Recueil, XV, 45). Such a practice is very old (see e. g. I, 242 ff.), but is nowhere so frequently mentioned as at Amarna.
978. But the walls also carry graphic evidence of that favor. Of the inscribed tombs at Amarna many show the owner standing before Ikhnaton and receiving rich decorations and gifts of gold. It is clear that Ikhnaton was holding all his great officials faithful to his reform, only by such means. These tombs contain, besides these scenes, many pictures from the life of the town, as illustrated in the functions of this or that official: the houses and gardens, the palaces and temples, even such a scene as that of the chief of the gendarmes bringing in prisoners. All such scenes have been studied, and their inscriptions as far as possible, or useful, translated below.

979. The long inscriptions contain all that we know of the Aton faith, in the form of hymns. These hymns are of two classes: (1) those recited by the king; (2) those recited by his officials. The hymns of the first class are of chiefly religious interest, and contain almost exclusively praise of Aton. Those of the second class, besides praise of Aton, contain also encomiums of the king and queen, mingled with an account of the reciter's faithfulness and favor with the king, prayers for the king, as well as for prosperity and "goodly burial" for the reciter himself. Facts of historical importance are thus brought out. These hymns, therefore, have been included herein as historical documents; but the hymns of the first class, although they contain the religious ideas which characterized a great historical movement, have not been translated here.b

980. The following six hymns of the second class include all such hymns not too fragmentary for translation. Numerous short and mutilated hymns, not included here, have been studied and employed wherever applicable or useful. The relief scenes, wherever accompanied by historically important inscriptions, have likewise been employed.

Tomb of Merire II

981. One of the most important scenes at Amarna, unaccompanied by inscriptions, is in the tomb of Merire II. It shows Ikhnaton, his queen, and six daughters, in a kiosk, or covered dais. The king and queen enthroned side by side have just stepped from their sedan chairs, which are set down before the dais. With trumpet sounding, Egyptian troops defile before them, and on either side of the military appear foreign embassies with their tribute: Nubians, Syrians, Libyans, and especially Hittites, who are here depicted for the first time on an Egyptian monument. They bear elaborately decorated vessels, undoubtedly of gold and silver.

TOMB OF MERIRE I

982. The reliefs and inscriptions in this tomb are of unusual interest. The king, proceeding to the temple of Aton, is shown riding in his chariot, accompanied by four daughters, by soldiers and officials. Before its door are the priests, who greet him with cries of "Welcome!" and one may distinguish a reference to "the first impost of Aton in the Aton-temple in Akhetaton." The occasion is, therefore, the celebration of the reception of the first dues of the god in the new capital; hence the temple shows a richly crowded altar in the court and many chambers filled with food and drink. Such scenes are naturally depicted in the tomb of Merire, who was "High Priest" or "great seer" (wr-m), of Aton—a title adopted from the sun-temple of Heliopolis. His appointment to this exalted office is recorded in the tomb. The king, with the queen and daughters, is shown upon the balcony of his palace before which appear Merire and his friends, acclaiming the praise of the king and queen:

983. "He trains the youth and the generations; the good ruler! As surely as the Aton rises, he shall be forever."

The "great seer" of the Aton in the Aton-temple in Akhetaton, Merire, triumphant, says: "How numerous are the things which the Aton is able to give, satisfying his heart."

984. A lady of the household of Merire, named Tenr, doubtless his wife, sings praise of Aton and the royal family:

"Thy rising is beautiful, O Living-Sun, Horizon-Ruler, Rejoicing-in-the-Horizon, in his name: Heat-Which-is-in-Aton, who is given life, forever and ever. O living Aton, beside whom there is no other, who heals the eyes with his rays, the maker of all things that are. When eLepsius, Denkmäler, III, 97, a; Davies, Amarna, I, xxxvi: she does not belong to the company before the king, but her words well suit the occasion, especially her reference to the queen's presence beside the king. Her hymn or song was common property, for much of it appears also verbatim on the tomb doorposts of Ahmose (§§ 1004 ff.), and assists in correcting the errors in this tomb of Merire. I had also my own copy, but the inscription has been much mutilated since Lepsius' day.

thou risest in the eastern horizon of heaven, to make live all that thou hast made, even men, cattle, them that fly and them that (only) flutter, and all reptiles that are in the earth, they live when they see thee, they sleep when thou settest. Grant thou thy beloved son, living in truth, Lord of the Two Lands, Neferkheprure-Wanre (Iknaton) that he may live with thee forever, that the Great King's-Wife, his beloved, Mistress of the Two Lands, Nefernefruaton-Nofretete, living forever and ever, may be by his side, doing that which pleases thy heart, seeing all that thou hast made every day. May he rejoice at the sight of thy beauty; grant to him eternity as king of the Two Lands.”

The great favorite of the Mistress of the Two Lands, Tenr (Ty-n-r²), triumphant; she says: “Praise to thee, O [fashioner] of years, creator of months, maker of days, reckoner of hours, lord of duration, by [whom] reckoning is made. [Grant] thou thy duration as Aton, to thy son, Wanre (Iknaton).”

985. The king proclaims from the balcony his appointment of Merire as High Priest (“great seer”) of Aton thus:

King's Speech

aSaid the king, living in truth, Lord of the Two Lands: Neferkheprure-Wanre, to the “great seer” of the Aton, Merire: “Behold, I am appointing thee for myself, to be ‘great seer’ of the Aton in the temple of Aton in Akhetaton, Írsu of thy beloved®, saying: ‘O my hearer of the call (ṣdım c §), who hears the teaching. As for any commission with which thou art charged, my heart is satisfied therewith; I give to thee the office, saying: ‘Thou shalt eat the food of Pharaoh, L. P. H., thy lord in the house of Aton.’”

986. In another scene® the reliefs depict further honors received from the king by Merire. Leaning on his staff as he stands before one of the richly filled magazines of the temple, and accompanied by the queen and his daughters, the king commands that Merire be decorated with gold. The fortunate official stands in the royal presence with arms upraised in praise, while attendants hang golden collars upon his neck, and four scribes record the gifts. The inscriptions furnish us with the words\(^a\) of the king and his favorite:

\textit{Words of the King}

\textbf{987.} \(^b\)Speech of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, living in truth, Lord of the Two Lands, Neferkheprure-Wanre, [to] the overseer of the silver-house, [concerning] the officer \((\text{w} \text{r} \text{m})\), "great seer" of the Aton in Akhetaton, Merire: "Put gold at his throat and at his back, and gold on his legs, because of his hearing the teaching of Pharaoh, L. P. H., concerning every saying in\(^e\) these beautiful seats which Pharaoh has made in the sanctuary\(^d\) in the Aton-house of Aton in Akhetaton, filled with every good thing, with much corn and southern grain, the Aton\(^e\)-offerings of the Aton."

\textit{Merire's Reply}

\textbf{988.} "Great seer" of the Aton in the Aton-temple in Akhetaton, fan-bearer on the right of the king, favorite of the Lord of the Two Lands, Merire; he says: "Health —, the beautiful youthfulness of the Aton; grant that he may attain this age;\(^f\) set him forever and ever.

\textbf{TOMB OF EYE\(^g\)}

\textbf{989.} Eye, who afterward became king, has left a fine scene in his tomb, showing the royal family on the palace

\(^e\) The old word, "god" (\(\text{ntr}\)), is evidently avoided here, for in the old term, "divine offerings" (\(\text{htp-ntr}\)), we have \(\text{ntr}\) replaced by Aton, thus: \(\text{htp-Ytn}\). There was thus an evident attempt to introduce the word Aton in place of the old word for "god" and "divine;" this accounts also for the term, "Aton-house (\(\text{pr-Ytn}\)) of the Aton," where the old texts have \(\text{H} \text{t-ntr}\) ("god's-house" = temple).

\(^f\) Lit., "make this age," viz., the age of the god; that is, may he live as long a life as the god.

\(^g\) Cliff-tomb (No. 25) at Amarna (No. 1) in the southern group; published by Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, III, 103-6, a, and 107, a-109. (These scenes [107, d-109] are balcony, throwing down collars and vessels of gold to Eye and his wife Tiy. Unfortunately, the inscriptions such as we find in a similar scene in Merire’s tomb (§§ 982 ff.) are here wanting. Only the comments of Eye’s servants in the rear of his house have been recorded.\(^a\) Eye had received a similar honor before his marriage with Tiy, and this is likewise depicted in his tomb, but without inscriptions. He was not an official of high rank, being only “Fan-bearer on the right of the king, master of all the horses of his majesty, his truly beloved scribe, the divine father, Eye (\(^3\)y).” His favor was doubtless due to his zeal in the new faith and his marriage with Tiy, the “great nurse, nourisher of the god, adorner of the king,” that is, she had been Ikhnaton’s nurse in his childhood.

990. Further indications of his favor\(^b\) are thus recorded:

I was one favored of his lord every day, great in favor from year to year, because of the exceeding greatness of my excellence in his opinion. He doubled for me my favors like the number of the sand; I was the first of the officials at the head of the people . . . . . . . . . I am a true witness, devoid of evil; my name has penetrated into the palace, because of my usefulness to the king, because of my hearing his teaching.

O everyone that liveth upon earth, every generation that is to be, I will tell you the way of life. I bear you witness that I was praised for what I said, I was content by reason of what I did; I was truthful upon earth, making praise to the living Aton.

given by Lepsius as from a second tomb [No. 3] of the same man; this is an error which has been perpetuated in the modern histories. Eye had but one tomb at Amarna; it contains all the material given by Lepsius as from two tombs. See Breasted, The Dial, Chicago, May 1, 1897, 283.) The two long hymns were published by Bouriant, Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, I, 2–5, and Daressy, Recueil, XV, 46, 47; both are excessively incorrect. The following translation (of Daressy’s hymn) is based on my own copy of the original. Unfortunately, I had not yet made these copies when I published my De Hymnis in Solem sub Rege Amenophide IV Conceptis.

\(^a\)Erman gives an excellent description of the whole scene, Life in Ancient Egypt, 119–21.

Hymn to Aton and the King

991. aPraise to thee! When thou risest in the horizon, O living Aton, lord of eternity. Obeisance to thy rising in heaven, to illuminate every land, with thy beauty. Thy rays are upon thy beloved son. Thy hand bhas a myriad of jubilees for the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Neferkheprure-Wanre, thy child who came forth from thy rays. Thou assignest to him thy lifetime and thy years. Thou hearest dfor him that which is in his heart. He is thy beloved, thou makest him like Aton. When thou risest, eternity is given him; when thou settest, thou givest him everlastingness. Thou begettest him in the morning like thine own forms; thou fordest him as thy emanation, dlike Aton, ruler of truth, who came forth from eternity, son of Re, wearing his beauty, who offers to him the product of his rays; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, living in truth, Lord of the Two Lands, Neferkheprure-Wanre; the Great King's-Wife, Nefernefruaton-Nofretete; living forever and ever.

Hymn to Aton and the King

992. eThe divine father, favorite of the Good God, fan-bearer at the right of the king, master of all the horses of his majesty, truly beloved scribe of the king, Eye. He saith: “Praise to thee! O living Aton, rising in heaven. He inundates the hearts, and all lands are in festivity because of his rising; their hearts bare happy with the joy of their lord, Irsub who shineth upon them. Thy beloved son presents truth before thy beautiful face; thou rejoicest when thou seest him, (for) he came forth from thee; son of eternity, who came forth from Aton, spirit of his spirit, gratifying the heart of Aton. When he rises in heaven, he rejoices in his son; he embraces him with his rays; he gives to him eternity as king, like the Aton; Neferkheprure-Wanre, this god, who made me, who caused my ka to be. Grant that I may be satisfied with seeing thee without ceasing; this lord who forms like Aton; rich in possessions a full Nile every day, making Egypt live. Silver and gold are like the sand of the shore; the land awakens to mighty rejoicing in his ka, the offspring of the Aton. Thou art eternal, Neferkheprure-Wanre; living and sound art thou, for he begat thee.”

a L. 1 contains the usual title: “Praise of Aton, the king and the queen,” indicating the content of the hymn.

Self-Praise

993. "The divine father, etc., Eye; he saith: "I am the truthful one of the king whom he created, the upright one of the Lord of the Two Lands, useful to his lord, following the ka of his majesty, like his favorite, who sees his beauty when he 'appears' in his palace. I am at the head of the princes, the companions of the king, the first of all the followers of his majesty. He put truth in my body, and my abomination is lying. I know that Wanre rejoices in it (truth), this lord, wise like Aton, knowing the truth. He doubles to me my favors in silver and gold; I am first of the officials, at the head of the people (rhy't). I have carried out his teaching."

Prayer for Self

994. "May I live praising his ka, may I be satisfied following him; (for) my breath of life is in him, this north wind, this myriad of high Niles every day, Neferkheprure-Wanre. Grant me long life in thy favor. How prosperous is thy favorite, O son of the Aton! All that he does endures and prospers, and the ka of the Lord of the Two Lands is with him forever, so that he is satisfied with life, when he reaches old age. O lord, who forms the people, and creates duration, who performs the pleasant obligation to his favorite, (whose) heart is satisfied with truth, whose abomination is lying. How prosperous is he who hears thy teaching of life, of life; he is satisfied with seeing thee without ceasing, and his two eyes see Aton every day. Grant to me a good old age like thy favorite; grant to me goodly burial by thy command in my house, wherein thou commandest me to rest, in the mountain of Akhetaton, the place of the favorite. May I hear thy sweet voice in the sanctuary when thou performest the pleasant ceremonies of thy father, the living Aton."

Prayer for King and Queen

995. "May he set thee forever and ever; may he endow thee with jubilees like the numbers of the shore, when measured with an ipet-rod; like reckoning the sea when measured with zawets, (or) a statement of the numbering of the mountains when weighed in balances; (or) the feathers of the birds, (or) the leaves of the trees, in jubilees for the king, Wanre (Ikhnaton), forever and ever as king; and for the Great

Thy father Aton rises in heaven, to protect thee \(^2\)every day, for he begat thee.”

Prayer for Self

996. Grant me to kiss the pure ground, to come forth in thy presence with \(^7\)offerings for thy father, Aton, of that which thy ka gives. Grant that \(^8\)my mortuary priest may abide and flourish for me, (as) for one who is on earth following thy ka, \(^9\)of who has been exalted\(^n\) for \(m\)y name’s sake, to the place of the favorites, wherein thou makest one to rest. TOMB OF MAI\(^d\)

997. Mai was one of the most powerful officials at the Amarna court, as is shown by his titles:

Hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, — — his Two Lands, commander of the army of the Lord of the Two Lands, overseer of the “House-of-Sending-Aton-to-Rest;” king’s-attendant in his august barge, master of the suite behind the Lord of the Two Lands, chief of all works of the king.

\(^{b}\)There was a “house for sending Aton to rest,” at Amarna, of which Mai was overseer (\(m\)r). Here doubtless the vesper service in the daily ritual was held at sunset.

\(^{d}\)Cliff-tomb (No. 14) in the southern group at Amarna (not numbered by Lepsius); published by Daressy, Recueil, XV, 38-41, where the name of the owner of the tomb is stated to be illegible. I found his name twice; it is certainly Mai (\(M\)\(^c\)\(y\)). Daressy’s copy is inaccurate; I have used my own for the translation. The tomb is unfinished, but it contains, besides the above hymn (left doorpost), an address by Mai (right doorpost), beginning: “Hear ye my speech, all ye people,” in five columns, very faint, and still unpublished; and two prayers published by Daressy, from which some of above titles of Mai are taken.
998. He has left a long hymn, containing some of the most interesting references to the king and his "teaching" which have survived to us.

Hymn to Aton

999. Thy rising is beautiful in the horizon of heaven, O living Aton, beginning of life. When thou risest in the horizon, thou fillest the earth with thy beauty. Thou art beautiful, great, brilliant, high over every hand. Thy rays embrace the lands, even all that thou hast made. Thou art Re, and thou takest them all captive; thou bindest them for thy beloved son.

Praise of the King and Akhetaton

1000. Thy rays are upon thy glorious emanation, the ruler of truth, who came forth from eternity. Thou grantest to him thy lifetime and thy years; thou hearest for him that which is in his heart. He is thy beloved; thou makest him like Aton; thy child, who came forth from thy rays, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Neferkheprure-Wanre, who hath made for thee the mighty Akhetaton, great in loveliness, mistress of pleasant ceremonies, rich in possessions, the offerings to Re in her midst; at the sight of her beauty there is rejoicing. She is lovely and beautiful; when one sees her, it is like a glimpse at heaven; her number cannot be calculated. When the Aton rises in her, he fills her with his rays, and he embraces his beloved son, son of eternity who came forth from Aton, and offers the earth to him who placed him on his throne, causing the earth to belong to Irsu.

Praise of Aton and King

1001. Every land is festive at his rising; they assemble, making oblations to his ka, to Aton, rising in the horizon every early morning. Thy son presents truth to thy beautiful face; thou rejoicest when thou seest him, (for) he came forth from thee. Thou settest him as king like the Aton, Neferkheprure-Wanre, living and sound, like the Aton.

Self-Praise

1002. Hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, — his Two Lands, commander of the army of the Lord of the Two Lands, overseer of the house of sending [the Aton] to rest, [Mai (Mesy)]; he saith:

"I am his servant, whom he created; upright for the Lord of the Two Lands, one useful to his lord, who put truth in my body; (my) abomination is lying. 10I know that the son of the Aton, Neferkheprure-Wanre, rejoices because of it, (for) he hath doubled to me my favors like the numbers of the sand. I am the head of the officials at the head of the people (rhyt). 11My lord has advanced me, (because) I have carried out his teaching, and I hear his word without ceasing. My eyes behold thy beauty every day."

Prayer for Self

1003. "O my lord, wise like Aton, satisfied with truth. How prosperous is he who hears thy teaching of life! May he be satisfied with seeing thee, when he reaches old age. Grant me goodly burial, of that which thy ka gives, in the house wherein thou commandest me to rest, [in] the mountain of Akhetaton, the place of the favorites. O thou Myriad of full Niles every day, Neferkheprure-Wanre, god, that madest me, through whose ka I live; grant that I may be satisfied with following thee without ceasing, O child of the Aton. Thou art for eternity, O thou Myriad of — — beseeching Wanre (Ikhonaton). How prosperous is he who follows thee! Grant him, that all that he does may abide forever. May his lord give him burial, (for) his mouth was full of truth."

TOMB OF AHMOSE

1004. Ahmose was "real king's-scribe, his beloved, fan-bearer on the right of the king, master of the judgment-hall. steward of the estate of Neferkheprure-Wanre (Ikhonaton)."

aCliff-tomb (No. 3) at Amarna, northern group (Lepsius, No. 4); the hymns are on the doorposts: left-hand, Sharpe, Egyptian Inscriptions, Pl. VII (very bad), and my own copy. I found this doorpost much mutilated since Sharpe's time, and could not check all he copied. Right-hand: Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 98, a; this doorpost is now so mutilated that I made no attempt to copy, in view of the short time at my disposal.
He has left the usual composite hymn upon the doorposts of his tomb.

1005. The two portions of this hymn, one introduced by praise to the rising, the other by praise to the setting, sun, form really one hymn, of the usual character above described (§ 979). The introductory praise of the god, the king, and the queen, is verbatim identical with the hymn of Tenr (§ 984), to which the reader is referred for the translation. Ahmose's hymn then proceeds with a tribute to the universality of the king's power, as follows:

Praise of the King

1006. — — — the praise of all that thou hast encircled. — — — presenting them to thy ka. Thy child whom thou thyself didst beget — — —. The south, as well as the north, the west and the east, [and the isles] in the midst of the sea are in jubilation to his ka. His southern boundary is as far as the wind, and (his) northern as far as the shining of Aton. All their princes make supplication, whom his fame has cowed through his beautiful ka, who makes festive the Two Lands, who supplies the needs of the whole land. Place him with thyself forever, according as he has loved to behold thee. Grant him very many jubilees of peaceful years. Grant him the love of thy heart, like the sands of the shore, like the scales of the fish in the river, (or) the hair of the cattle. May I be a follower of the Good God until he assigns the burial which he gives.

1007. Thy setting is beautiful, O living Aton, lord of lords, ruler of the Two Lands, — — — in the peace of the Two Lands. The people are in rejoicing before thee, giving praise to him who formed them, doing obeisance [to him who created] them, to thy beloved son, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, living in truth, Neferkheprure-

Wanre (Ikhnaton). The whole land, every country in thy every circuit, at thy appearance shall make jubilee to thy rising and to thy setting likewise, O god, living in truth before the eyes. Thou art the maker of that which is not, the maker of all these things that come forth from thy mouth.

_Praye for Selj_

1008. Grant to me advancement before the king every day, without ceasing; goodly burial after old age, on the highland of Akhetaton, when I have finished life in prosperity. May I be a follower of the Good God, when he treads any place he desires; may I be the companion of his two feet, for he trained me, when I was a child, until [I] attained revered age in peace and joy, a follower of the ruler, when he was at the feast, every day.

TOMB OF TUTU

1009. Tutu (Tw-tw) was an imi-khentit (ymy-ḥnty-t) in Akhetaton. He was decorated with gold, like most of his colleagues, and has recorded some remarkable statements concerning his king in the following hymn:

_Hymn to Aton and the King_

1010. 1— — —— b O Aton, given life forever and ever. As for thy son, the king, living in truth, Lord of the Two Lands [Neferkhep-rure-Wa]nre, thy child, who came forth from thy rays, thou establishest him in thy office of King of Upper and Lower Egypt, as ruler of the circuit of Aton. Thou givest him eternity, as thou hast made thyself, (for) thy son is thy emanation; spending for thee thy lifetime; Son of Re, great in duration; Great King's-Wife [Nefernefru]aton-[Nofretete], living forever. 2— — — forever, Lord of the Two Lands. Thy rays aCliff-tomb (No. 8) in the southern group at Amarna (Lepsius, No. 2); Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 107, a; Lepsius' squeeze of the same text; and my own copies of the original. The tomb contains, besides the above hymn, also a long and magnificent text (too long to be copied in the time at my disposal) and the short form of the great hymn.

bThis beginning is apparently not a title, as in the other hymns, but a direct address.
are upon thy beloved son; thy hand carries satisfying life. Thy love is great, immense, by thy august skin, when thou floodest heaven and earth with thy beauty. (Then) thy son, who came forth from thy limbs, adores thee, thou hearest for him that which is in his heart, (and) thou doest according to that which comes forth from his mouth. He is thy beloved, thou makest him like Aton. Although thou art in heaven, thy rays are upon [earth]. As thou begesttest thyself every day without ceasing, (so) thou hast formed him out of thine own rays to spend the lifetime of Aton. When thou saillest the heavens, his eye [sees] thy beauty, rejoicing with joy at beholding thee, O living Aton, (for) he is thy favorite. Those who are under the heavens, even all that see thy rays, for thou hast made them, that he might satisfy thy heart therewith. — — — — great in duration.

Hymn to Aton

1011. I come with praise to Aton, the living, the only god, lord of radiance, who makes light when he rises in heaven, who illuminates the Two Lands. When he made to live all that he created, he drove away the darkness. When he sends out his rays, every land is filled with his love. The herbage and the trees start up before thee; the denizens of the water spring up at thy shining; all people arise in their places. (When) [their limbs] are washed [they take] their clothing, [they do] all work, they make their products. Thou hast awakened the Two Lands, when thou risest in thy form of living Aton. Their mouths are filled with that which thou givest. All small cattle rest upon their herbage; thou expellest evil and hast given health. Every one lifts himself up because thou risest: they have seen their lord (when) he appears 1012. As for thine only son who came forth from thy body, thou embracest him with thy beautiful rays. in thy form of Aton, every land trips to thy rising. Thy rays bear a myriad of jubilees for thy son, living in truth, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Neferkheprure-Wanre, my god, my fashioner, and my creator.

Praise of the King

aRestored from Eye's great hymn (see my De Hymnis in Solem sub Rege Amenophide IV Conceptis, 19, v. 11).

bIbid., 34 and 36.
Prayer and Self-Praise

1013. Grant me that my eye may see him, that [my] hands may adore him, that my ear may hear his voice, that his ka may be before me without ceasing. I am the favorite servant, who [hears] his teaching, and his marvelous things are in my body without ceasing. I will speak truth to his majesty, (for) I know that he lives therein.

8. . . . . I do not that which his majesty hates, (for) my abomination is lying in my body, — — — —. I have sent up truth to his majesty, (for) I know that he lives therein. Thou art Re, begetter of truth; thou hast given — — — — — —. My voice was not [lifted up] in the king's house, nor was my step too broad in the palace. I took not the reward of lying, nor expelled the truth for the violent; but it was the truth which I executed by his (the king's) might before me; I was mighty through the ka of Wanre, I was honored with reward — — 10 — — — — — —.

I set not lying in my body . . . . . He glorified my teach- ableness every day, because I so fully carried out his teaching, not transgressing by any evil thing 11 . . . . . May I be one who may adore his majesty; may I be his follower. Grant that I may be satisfied with seeing thee . . . . . and assign to me — burial 12 after old age — — in the mountain of Akhetaton. . . . . . .

TOMB OF HUYb

1014. In Huy we have the usual favorite of Ikhnaton. His offices were responsible and important ones; for he was "Overseer of the royal harem, overseer of the White House, steward in the house of the great king's-wife, Tiy (Tyy)." The events depicted in his tomb are naturally those connected with his offices. As "overseer of the White House" he had charge of incoming tribute. A scened in the tomb shows the king on a splendid throne-chair, borne

aLl. 12–15 are mere fragments, showing that the prayers usual in these hymns form the conclusion.

bCliff-tomb (No. 1) at Amarna, in the northern group (No. 7); published by Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 100–102; sketches by Nestor l'Hôte in Amélineau, Histoire de la sépulture, Pls. 100–103; and my own copies.

dLepsius, Denkmäler, III, 100, b.
on the shoulders of eighteen soldiers, and accompanied by fan- and shade-bearers. The fragmentary inscription shows that he is going to inspect the incoming foreign tribute of the twelfth year.

1015. Year 12, second month of the second season, day 8. Live my father, [Aton], a given life forever and ever; [live] the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, [Ikhnaton] and the Great King’s-Wife, Nefernefruaton-Nofretete, living forever, at the arrival — — the tribute of Kharu (H 3-rw) and Kush, the west and east — united in one head, the isles [in the midst] of the sea — on the side —, the tribute — — the great storehouse of Akhetaton for receiving the impost of —, [that he may give to] them the breath of life.

1016. As steward of the queen-mother Tiy, we see him in charge of a feast, doubtless in her house, at which she entertains the king, his queen, and three daughters. On another occasion Huy stands in the door of a temple ushering into it the king, who is leading the queen-mother Tiy, followed by the princess Bekateton and the court. Before them are the words:

Conducting the great king’s-wife, r—1, Tiy, to show to her her “Shadow-of-Re.”

1017. This sanctuary, called here “Shadow-of-Re,” c is the queen-mother’s temple; for besides being called “hers” above, the titles of Aton in the same temple have twice appended to them the words: “in the ‘Shadow-of-Re’ of r—1, the Great King’s-Wife, Tiy.” It is perhaps the smaller of the two temples f found by Petrie at Amarna. As the relief shows, it was magnificently equipped with colonnades, statues, and cultus materials. Another temple of Aton, erected by the king’s-daughter Meretaton, is similarly referred to on an altar (?) block dedicated by the princess. It refers to Aton "in the 'Shadow-of-Re' of the king's daughter ....... Meretaton ......... in the chamber (called): 'Rejoicing-of-the-Aton' in the Aton-temple in Akhetaton."

1018. What was probably another sanctuary is referred to in an unpublished hymn from the tomb of Merire:

The singers and musicians are rejoicing with joy in the broad-hall (\textit{wsh't}) of the house: "Shadow-of-Re," thy temple in Akhetaton, the place wherein thou art pleased.

This is probably the king's own official sanctuary, and "\textit{Shadow-of-Re}" is thus not a proper name, but a designation of any Aton-temple. The temple of Aton at Heliopolis was called "Exaltation-of-Re-in-Heliopolis." This was perhaps the first of the Aton-temples. Another Aton-temple erected at Hermontis, was called: "Horizon-of-Aton-(y\textsuperscript{p}hw\textsuperscript{t-n-ytn})-in-Hermontis (ynw \textit{sm})." Still another, in Memphis, was called simply: "\textit{The-House-of-the-Aton}."

\item bMy own copy; this passage is also found in the tomb of Apy, which fact enabled me to correct the Merire passage, which is corrupt. The Apy passage uses "h't-bm\textit{bn}n" in place of "Shadow-of-Re," as given in Merire's tomb. (Piehl, \textit{Inscriptions}, 1st Ser., Pl. CXCI = Bouriant, \textit{Mémoires de la mission française au Caire}, I, 11, 12, ll. 6 and 7.) These passages show clearly that "Shadow-of-Re" is the name of the Akhetaton temple, and not of the god's statue, as supposed by some.
\item cTemples called "Shadow-of-Re" were found in the sacred districts of all the divinities of Egypt in the Twentieth Dynasty (IV, 363). Such a temple is known under Ramses II and also in the Twenty-first Dynasty; see Spiegelberg (\textit{Recueil}, 17, 159, 160), who thinks these later ones were in the necropolis.

REIGN OF TUTENKHAMON

TOMB OF HUY

1019. So little is known of the immediate successors of Ikhnaton that the tomb of Huy, viceroy of Kush under Tutenkhamon, is of the greatest importance. We know that this king marked the transition from the Aton faith back to Amon, having changed his name from Tutenkhaton to Tutenkhhamon; but on returning to Thebes he extended the temple of Aton. Nevertheless, he was forced by the priestly party to begin the restoration of the monuments defaced by Ikhnaton, and to recut the inscriptions and dedications to Amon, which they bore. We might infer that the Egyptian power in Asia was not wholly broken by Ikhnaton’s reform, in view of the rich tribute of Syria shown in the following document; but see the remarks below. That of Nubia naturally continued without interruption, as the scenes in this tomb likewise indicate. These scenes fall into three series:

I. Investiture of the Viceroy of Kush.
II. Tribute of the North.
III. Tribute of the South.

—Hewn into the cliff of Kurnet-Murrai on the west side at Thebes; published partially by Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 477–80; by Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 115–18; Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 301–6; Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1133–41; and Piehl, Inscriptions, Pls. 144, A–145; a good account of the scenes, Baedeker, Egypt, 288, 289. These scenes are among the most gorgeous and elaborate of the Empire.

—The old form, Tutenkhaton, occurs on a Berlin stela, No. 14197 (Ausführliches Verzeichniss des Berliner Museums, 128); see Erman, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 38, 112.

—Fragments of his extension are now rebuilt in the pylon of Harmhab at Karnak, Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, a–b; Bouriant, Recueil, VI, 51 ff.; and Piehl, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1884, 41. The name of Eye is found on similar reused blocks also.

I. INVESTITURE OF THE VICEROY OF KUSH

1020. The interesting and important ceremony depicted in this series of scenes throws light on a number of obscure points in the administration of Kush by the Pharaohs. We here learn its limits, viz., from El Kab on the north to Napata on the south. For Napata appears (§1025) the important variant Karoy, thus locating this otherwise unknown region, designated by the Eighteenth Dynasty kings as their southern boundary.

Scene

1021. King Tutenkhamon is enthroned at the left in a kiosk; before him are two lines of men in groups, representing successive incidents in the ceremony:

Reception of Huy

1022. An officer standing with back to the king receives Huy as he advances, accompanied by several courtiers. The inscriptions are these:

Over the Officer

The overseer of the White House; he says: "This is the seal from the Pharaoh, L. P. H., who assigns to thee (the territory) from Nekhen to Napata."

Over Huy

1023. King's-son of Kush ———.

Words of Courtiers

"Thou art the Son of Amon ———; he causes that the chiefs of all countries come to thee, bearing every good and choice thing of their countries."

aScenes and inscriptions copied by Erman, and published from his notes by Brugsch (Thesaurus, V, 1133-41).

bThis had been already noticed by Erman (Aegypten, 666), and was not new, as I supposed when I called attention to it in Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 40, 108.

cReading the my-sign as the usual determinative of htm, "seal;" see Piehl (Inscriptions, I, 112, n. 5).

dCartouche with name illegible.
Investiture of Huy

1024. Huy stands before an officer who holds a small object, perhaps an étui containing the seal, which is to be delivered to Huy. No inscriptions. Immediately beside this scene appears an official who extends to Huy the seal of office. The inscriptions are:

Over Official

1025. ['Take'] the seal of office, O king's-son of [Kush].

Over Huy

The office is assigned to the king's-son of Kush, Huy, from Nekhen to Karoy.

1026. Another scene shows Huy's reception by his family and officials (among whom are the "inspectors" (rwd·w)), as he issues from the palace.

Over Huy

The coming forth, favored, from the court, having been appointed in the presence of the Good God to be king's-son and governor of the southern countries, Huy. He accounts Khenthennofer, included under his authority, to offer it to the Lord of the Two Lands, like every subject of his majesty.

II. TRIBUTE OF THE NORTH

1027. It is evident in this series that the administration of Kush now requires two viceroy, for Huy's brother, Amenhotep, here appears as "King's-son of Kush." For reasons not evident in the inscriptions, these two viceroy of the South appear presenting to the king the tribute of the North. This circumstance looks suspicious. What should the viceroy of Kush have to do with the tribute of the North? Moreover, we know from the Amarna Letters that Egyptian power in Asia was at an end under Ikhnaton. One might be inclined to think, therefore, that the frequent representation of the tribute of the South and North in earlier Theban tombs of the Eighteenth Dynasty induced Huy to add the tribute of the North as a pendant to the tribute of the South which he actually collected. But it should not be forgotten that one of Ikhnaton's successors carried on war in Asia (III, 20), and this can hardly have been any other than Tutenkhamon. He may thus have been able to collect some northern tribute.

Scene

1028. King Tutenkhamon is enthroned at the left under a splendid kiosk. Before him bows the viceroy of Kush, Huy, behind whom comes a second viceroy of Kush, Huy's brother, Amenhotep, bearing gifts. These two officials are introducing four lines of Asiatics who bring a magnificent array of tribute, chiefly gold and silver vessels, costly stones, and horses.

1029. The following inscriptions accompany the scene:

Over Huy

King's-son of Kush, governor of the south countries, fan-bearer at the right of the king, Huy (Hwy), triumphant; he says: "May thy father, Amon, protect thee during myriads of jubilees (hb-št). May he give to thee eternity as king of the Two Lands, everlastingness as ruler of the Nine Bows. Thou art Re, and thy emanation is his emanation. Thou art heaven, a abiding like its four pillars, the earth sits beneath thee, because of thy permanence, O good ruler."

With Amenhotep

1030. Bringing in all the tribute to the Lord of the Two Lands, the presents of Retenu (Rtnw) the wretched; by the king's-messenger to every country, the king's-son of Kush, governor of the southern countries, Amenhotep, triumphant.

aMeaning, as enduring as heaven.
With Vessels

1031. Vessels of all the choicest of the best of their countries, in silver, gold, lapis lazuli, malachite, every splendid costly stone.

With an Official Receiving Asiatics

1032. All the chiefs of the north countries; they say: "How great is thy fame, O Good God! how mighty thy strength! there is none living in ignorance of thee."

The chiefs of all countries that knew not Egypt since the time of the god, are craving peace from his majesty that it may not be. "Give to us the breath which thou givest, etc., (as below)."

Over Asiatics

1033. The chiefs of Retenu (Rtnw) the Upper, who knew not Egypt since the time of the god, are craving peace from his majesty. They say: "Give to us the breath which thou givest, O lord. Tell us thy victories; and there shall be no revolters in thy time; but every land shall be in peace."

III. TRIBUTE OF THE SOUTH

1034. In this series the two viceroys present to the king the tribute of the lands under them. This ceremony took place in the temple, from which Huy then goes forth to embark for Nubia, and is received on his dahabiyeh by his local officials, who have accompanied him to Thebes.

Scene

1035. King Tutenkhamon is enthroned as in the previous scene, with Huy before him. In the king's presence a magnificent array of tribute; chiefly commercial gold and silver, gold and silver vessels, a chariot, shields, and furniture.

¹The two n's (dative?) are probably an error for one, viz., "that we may tell, etc."

²See Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 301–6; where the inscriptions are much more accurate than in the folio of Lepsius.
A second part of the scene shows Huy receiving three lines of Negroes, and a line of Egyptians below. In the top line of Negroes are children of the Kushite chiefs, among them a princess in a chariot drawn by oxen. The negro chiefs wear Egyptian clothing; they bring similar tribute, and also curiously decorated cattle. Behind all, we see six Nile boats landing. With the exception of the king's names, the inscriptions are confined to the second part of the scene.

Before Huy

1036. The arrival in peace — from the house of the hereditary prince, count, (mry-ntr-) priest, king's-son of Kush, Huy [having received] the favor of the Lord of the Two Lands, [who ordered] gold [to be put] upon his neck and his arms. [How many are the examples of thy favor, O Nebkheprure (Tutenkhamon)! One mentions them (one) time (each) by its name; they are too numerous to put them into writing.

Over the Upper Line of Negroes

1037. The chief of Miam (My cm), good ruler. The children of the chiefs of all countries.

Over the Middle Line of Negroes

The chiefs of Kush, they say: "Hail to thee, O king of Egypt, Sun of the Nine Bows! Give to us the breath which thou givest. Men live by thy love."*

Over the Egyptians

1038. The coming forth of the people of the king's-son, to receive him, when he received the favor of the Lord of the Two Lands; (from)} the house of the king's-son of Kush, king's-scribe, Amenhotep — — living again.

They say: "O ruler, L. P. H., good, mighty in creation, for whom the sun rises; many are the things [which] [his two hands] [accomplish]."

Over the Boats

Arrival from Kush bearing this good tribute of all the choicest of the best of the south countries. Landing at the city of the South (Thebes) by the king's-son of Kush, Huy.

Scene

1039. Huy leans on his staff; behind him are the members of his family; before him a richly decorated dahabiyeh with sail spread, and another with sail furled, bearing a chariot and horses. On the boats approaching Huy, are four rows of officials under Huy, followed by sailors and women with tambourines. The inscriptions show that the presentation ceremonies depicted above have just been completed in the temple, and Huy is now doubtless embarking for his post. The inscriptions are these:

Over Huy

1040. The coming from the temple of Amon after the pleasing ceremonies before him, to offer this land to thee;b by the hereditary prince, count, sole companion, great in [his office], great [in his ra]nk, great —, — king's-scribe, —— Amenhotep — —.

Over Huy's Family

The inscriptions are nearly vanished, but the words: "His son" (twice); "his mother," and "his sister," may be distinguished.

---

The door of the house from which they come is seen behind them; on it are the cartouches of Tutenkhamon.

bThe change of person is difficult.

REIGN OF EYE

LANDMARK OF EYE

1042. Documents of this king are rare. This stela shows the king, in relief at the top, offering flowers to "Hathor, mistress of Hotep." The exclusive worship of Aton had therefore been abandoned by him at this date, year 3. The inscription records a gift of land by the king to one of his officials, whose name is no longer visible, and to the latter's wife, Mutnezmet.

1043. Year 3, third month of the third season (eleventh month), first day, of King Eye, given life, while he was in Memphis.

His majesty commanded to endow him with lands, a reward for the king's- and for his wife, Mutnezmet. It was laid out in the district called: "[Field-of-the-Kheta," in the fields of the "House-of-Okheperkere (Thutmose I)" and the "House-of-Menkheprure (Thutmose IV)," a field of 154 stat.

The south is the "House-of-Menkheprure (Thutmose IV);" the north is the "House-of-Ptah" and the "House-of-Okheperkere (Thutmose I)," between his |—|; the west is [the "House-of-Okheperkere (Thutmose I)"|d; the east is the "House-of-Menkheprure (Thutmose IV)" between his |—|.

There came the chief king's-scribe, the steward, Ramose; the scribe, Merire;—Thay. Command was given to the attendant, Re, to transfer it.

Stela now in Cairo; found by the Great Pyramid, in the chapel of Pesibkhenno; published by Daressy (Recueil, 16, 123) and from Daressy by Spiegelberg (Rechnungen, 36).

Full fivefold titulary is used in the original.

The lacuna contained the remainder of a royal official's title, and his name, which latter ended in nfy.

The land, as already stated, lay in the fields of the House-of-Thutmose I and the House-of-Thutmose IV; the southern and eastern boundaries were formed by the House-of-Thutmose IV, and the northern boundary by the House-of-Thutmose I. Hence it is probable that the western boundary was also formed by the House-of-Thutmose I, and that Daressy has overlooked it in his copy, owing to its identity with the preceding boundary.

As witnesses? Spiegelberg renders "those who came," but the nfy which he renders as the relative pronoun occurs above, with the first, "his |—| (nwy)," and must therefore belong to nwy here.

The land.

INDEX .............................. 521
EXPLANATION OF TYPOGRAPHICAL SIGNS AND SPECIAL CHARACTERS

1. The introductions to the documents are in twelve-point type, like these lines.

2. All of the translations are in ten-point type, like this line.

3. In the footnotes and introductions all quotations from the documents in the original words of the translation are in italics, inclosed in quotation marks. Italics are not employed in the text of the volumes for any other purpose except for titles.

4. The lines of the original document are indicated in the translation by superior numbers.

5. The loss of a word in the original is indicated by —, two words by — —, three words by — — —, four words by — — — —, five words by — — — — —, and more than five by — — — — ———. A word in the original is estimated at a "square" as known to Egyptologists, and the estimate can be but a very rough one.

6. When any of the dashes, like those of No. 5, are inclosed in half-brackets, the dashes so inclosed indicate not lost, but uncertain words. Thus [—] represents one uncertain word, [— —] two uncertain words, and [———] more than five uncertain words.

7. When a word or group of words are inclosed in half-brackets, the words so inclosed are uncertain in meaning; that is, the translation is not above question.

8. Roman numerals I, II, III, and IV, not preceded by the title of any book or journal, refer to these four volumes of Historical Documents. The Arabic numerals following such Romans refer to the numbered paragraphs of these volumes. All paragraph marks (§ and §§, without a Roman) refer to paragraphs of the same volume.

THE NINETEENTH DYNASTY
REIGN OF HARMHAB

TOMB OF HARMHAB

1. This splendid limestone tomb was built by the general, Harmhab, who afterward became King Harmhab. His career before he gained the throne is openly narrated in his Coronation Inscription (§§ 22 ff.); but the first step in the study of his life is the demonstration of the identity of the general and the king. This was first proved by the observation that the Vienna fragment may be fitted upon the Leyden blocks (§§ 2–13). The construction of the tomb and execution of the reliefs belong to a period either just before or just after the Aton heresy of Ikhnaton; for Harmhab, in praising King Ikhnaton, states that he owes his kingdom to Amon (§8); furthermore, the gods of Heliopolis—Horus, Osiris, Isis, Nephthys, and Hathor—are mentioned. As Amon is not erased in the tomb, this, with the mention of the other gods, would indicate that the tomb was constructed under Ikhnaton’s weak successors, after the resumption of the Amon-worship, at a time when the commemoration of Harmhab’s favor under Ikhnaton was not yet a political faux pas. But this is not certain.

a It originally stood in Sakkara, but has been ruthlessly destroyed. The few fragments which have survived are now in six different museums.
b See my remarks, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 38, 47 ff.
c This has little or no bearing on the date of the event depicted in the relief, but only on the date of the execution of the relief. The later insertion of the uraeus shows that an anachronism like the assumed mention of Amon in Ikhnaton’s presence might easily be perpetrated after the worship of Amon had been resumed.
I. LEYDEN FRAGMENTS

I. STELA WITH ADORATION SCENE

2. The hawk-headed Re, enthroned, is worshiped by the deceased, standing, who "shows in his body exactly those deformities by which the king Chu-en-Aten is to be recognized. The belly projects forward prominently, and heavy masses of fat are distributed along the entire body. His hair is curled, and about the neck he wears the braided necklace with which Chu-en-Aten was accustomed to reward his most faithful servants." The inscription of twelve very short vertical lines over the heads of the figures, is as follows:

Over the God

3. i. Harakhte! Great god, lord of heaven, lord of earth; who cometh forth from the horizon. He illuminateth the Two Lands, the sun of darkness, as the great one, as Re.

Over Harmhab

4. Praise to thee! Re, lord of truth, great god, sovereign of Heliopolis! May he grant a fortunate life, in eternity, glory in heaven, favor in earth, for the ka of the commander in chief of the army, Harmhab, triumphant.

5. The content of the inscription, like the reliefs, shows plain traces of the influence of Ikhнатon's movement; although Aton is not mentioned. The following reliefs show clearly the relation of Harmhab to Ikhнатon.

*These fragments have never been published entire.

bLeyden Museum, V, 29; a rectangular tablet, the text of which was published by Wiedemann (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1885, 80, 81) without the reliefs of which he offers the above description.
2. REWARD OF GOLD

6. These reliefs are in two series, both representing Harmhab receiving the reward of gold from his king.

7. In the first series, the figure of the king (at the extreme right) is lost. Harmhab, wearing the uraeus, and with hands raised in rejoicing, is loaded with collars of gold; behind him (at the left) approach two long double lines of Asiatics, each pair led by two Egyptians; over these were lines of horsemen!

8. In the second series, the lower portion of the king's figure (at the extreme left) is preserved and shows unmistakably the peculiar characteristics found only in the representations of Ikhnaton. His queen stands behind him, as in the similar scenes at Amarna, and showing the same peculiarities of style. Below is Harmhab alone, his neck loaded with golden collars, having before him the lower ends of three lines of inscription, as follows:

'[Speech] ——— in his presence, by the hereditary prince, count, sole companion, king's scribe, Harmhab, triumphant. He says, while he answers [the king] ——— ['The kingdom is thine'] forever and ever; Amon has assigned it to thee. They muster [every] country ——— in their heart as one. Thy name is a fire

9. Adjoining this scene on the right is a continuation, aThese reliefs have never been published. I secured photographs of them through the kindness of Dr. Pleyte. They are described by Leemans, Description raisonnée des monuments égyptiens, 40-41, C, 1-3; see also Leemans, Monuments du Musée d'Antiquités, I, 31-34.

bThe upper portion, containing the inscriptions in each series, is unfortunately lost, and the extreme lower ends of a few lines remain.

cOnly a long line of prancing horses' feet are visible; as there are no chariot wheels among them, and no human feet of men leading them (except at the extreme front), we may suppose that we have here a unique scene on an Egyptian monument—a troop of Asiatic horsemen. That the horses are being driven in a loose herd in the presence of the king is also possible.

dThe head is lost, but of course it would show the uraeus, as everywhere else in the tomb.
showing Harmhab (on the left) received with acclamation by his household servants\(^a\) (on the right), as he returns wearing his newly received collars of gold. Besides his two Egyptian servants appears a group of Asiatics,\(^b\) like those in the first scene, all in postures of extravagant joy.\(^c\)

II. VIENNA FRAGMENT\(^d\)

10. The block contains a text of eight vertical lines above a relief scene, representing a group of Egyptian officials bowing (toward the left) to their superior, Harmhab (his figure is lost on the left), who is giving them instructions regarding the disposition of certain Asiatics, whose town has been attacked, plundered, and destroyed. The whole description shows that we have in these Asiatics, fugitives from the conditions in Palestine described in the Amarna Letters at this time. The arrival of these people must have fallen under the reign of Ikhnaton or his immediate successors. They desire a home in Egypt, as they say, "after the manner of your fathers' fathers since the beginning." This, with the letter in Papyrus Anastasi\(^e\) (VI, 4, 13 ff., and 5, 1 ff.), makes quite certain the custom of allowing the Asiatic Bedwin the privilege of settling in Egypt, to pasture their herds in the eastern Delta in times of distress, and is

\(^c\)One of them is on his back, and one on his belly. This explains the greeting in the Amarna letters: "At the feet of my lord the king . . . . . seven times and seven times with breast and back, I throw myself" (ed. Winckler, p. 285, No. 158, ll. 9–13). No. 157 has: "with belly and back."

\(^d\)In the imperial collection; published by Wiedemann, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XI, 425; and Bergmann, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, XXVII, 125–27. Neither publishes the reliefs, for which I had my own photograph and collation of the original. I have published the photograph showing the relief in ibid., 38, 47.

\(^e\)§§ 637 ff.
an interesting parallel to the similar favor shown to Abraham and the kindred of Joseph.

11. These seven lines read:

1— a Asiatics; others have been placed in their abodes
2—— they have been destroyed, and their town laid waste, and fire has been thrown 3———; b [they have come to entreat] the Great in Strength to send his mighty sword before 4———. Their countries are starving, they live like goats of the mountain, [their] children c 5——— saying: "A few of the Asiatics, who knew not how they should live, have come 6 [begging 'a home in the domain'] d of Pharaoh, L. P. H., after the manner of your e fathers' fathers since the beginning, under 7———. Now, the Pharaoh, L. P. H., gives them into your e hand, to protect their borders."

12. Behind the officials receiving these instructions stood the Asiatics mentioned, as is shown by the fragment of one line of their inscription still surviving. It reads:

——— their boundaries — — [Lord] l of the Two Lands. They give praise to the Good God, the Great in Strength, Zeserkheprure (Harmhab).

Now, as this Vienna block has been shown to belong to the Leyden reliefs, f the conclusion would be that the royal figure in the Leyden reliefs must be King Harmhab. But the royal figure is clearly that of Ikhnaton. The difficulty is solved by the explanation of another incongruity in the tomb. Throughout its reliefs the figure of the general, Harmhab, wears the uraeus. This uraeus, as has been a An uncertain amount is lacking at the beginning of each line; this is left unindicated by Wiedemann.

b Probably, "fire has been thrown [into their grain];" see I, 658, ll. 15, 16.

c An obvious emendation.

d The restoration is exceedingly uncertain, but something similar must be supplied.

e Plural.

f I have published the Vienna block and the adjoining Leyden fragments in Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 38, 47.
clearly proved, is a later insertion after the reliefs were finished. Hence the name of King Harmhab is a similar later insertion, and the Asiatics bowing, of course, like the officials, originally to the general Harmhab, are now represented as giving praise to the king Harmhab. The identity of the general and the king is thus demonstrated.

III. ALEXANDRIA FRAGMENTS

13. The text recounted a journey of Harmhab to the upper Nile, as messenger of some king—a journey from which he returned successfully, bringing tribute which the king publicly inspected. Under this text is the figure of Harmhab wearing the uraeus and leaning on a staff.

He was sent as royal messenger as far as Aton shines, coming no land stood before him; he captured it in the passing of a moment. His name shall be remembered in the land of He sailed northward. Behold, his majesty appeared upon a dais (used) at the bringing of tribute and the [tribute] of south and north was brought in. Behold, the prince, Harmhab, triumphant, stood by the side of .

IV. BRITISH MUSEUM FRAGMENTS

I. DOORPOSTS

14. These monuments are chiefly of a religious nature, but the movement of Ikhnaton was so largely religious that — Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 38, 49, 50. The fan which Harmhab carries in his hand, has been shifted to one side and distorted. The old lines still visible show that in its original position, the top of the fan would have interfered with the uraeus; hence it was shifted aside to insert the uraeus.

such texts from the transition period are historically important. Furthermore, the titles of Harmhab which they contain indicate unusual powers and connect the owner of this tomb with the Harmhab of the Turin inscription (§§ 22 ff.), thus confirming the identity of the general and the king, Harmhab.

15. Each of the doorposts has below a figure of Harmhab in adoration, wearing the uraeus as usual, and having strapped to his back his fan, as insignium of his office.
His form clearly shows traces of the style of art which prevailed under Ikhnaton, e. g., the thin ankles, above which the limbs thicken too suddenly.

16. The texts are in six vertical lines above and before the figures, one being a Sun-Hymn, as follows:

1Utterance of the hereditary prince, Harmhab, triumphant, when he worships Re at his rising, saying:

"Praise to thee! who becomest\textsuperscript{a} every day,
"Who begettest thyself\textsuperscript{a} each morning,
"Who comest\textsuperscript{a} forth from the body of thy\textsuperscript{a} mother without ceasing.
"The two regions come to thee bowing down,
"They give to thee praise, when thou risest,
"When thou hast illuminated the earth with brightness.
"Thy divine limbs flame as a mighty one in the heavens,
"Excellent god, eternal king,
"Lord of brightness, ruler of light,
"Upon his throne in the Morning-Barque,
"Great in brilliance in the Evening-Barque,
"Divine youth, heir of eternity,
"Who begetteth himself, who generateth himself.
"The great ennead worship thee,
"The lesser ennead exult to thee;
"They praise thee in thy beautiful forms,
"With thy brilliance in the Evening-Barque,
"As when the sacred apes spy thee.

\textsuperscript{a}The Egyptian idiom requires third person here.
"Rise thou, thy heart glad,
With thy diadems in the horizon of heaven;
Grant thou glory in heaven,
Power in earth,"
That I may go forth among thy followers of every day;
That my heart may be satisfied with all offerings,
May receive flower-offerings, from the sanctuary (h'a-t-bnbn),
"Upon the table of the lords of Heliopolis."

By the hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, privy councilor of the palace, superior in the whole land, fan-bearer at the right of the king, general of the Lord of the Two Lands, real king's-scribe, his beloved, the hereditary prince, Harmhab.

17. The other doorpost bears the usual prayer to Osiris (but is important for the titles of Harmhab), as follows:

Praise to thee! Presider over the west; Osiris, ruler of eternity; Wennofer, lord of Tazoser; Anubis, lord of Rosta; the gods, lords of the necropolis. May they grant bread, beer, oxen, fowl, libations of water, wine and milk for the hereditary prince, the general in chief of the Lord of the Two Lands, king's-scribe, scribe of recruits, fan-bearer at the right hand of the king, overseer, giving satisfaction in the whole land, great in his office, great in rank, the two eyes of the king in the Two Lands, favorite of Horus in the palace, satisfying the heart of the king, with all monuments, overseer of works in the mountain of grit-stone, deputy of the king, presiding over the Two Lands, Harmhab, triumphant; he saith: "Homage to thee! Presider over the west, Osiris in the midst of Abydos. I have come to thee (extending) my two hands in adoration of the beauty of thy majesty. Set thou me among thy followers, like the glorious ones who enter the nether world, who live in truth every day. May I be one among them, (for) my abomination was lying, I executed truth upon earth without neglecting it.

For the ka of the hereditary prince, real king's-scribe, his beloved, deputy of the king in the whole land, general in chief, Harmhab, triumphant."

2. STELA WITH THREE HYMNS

18. Above, occupying about one-third of the stela, is a relief showing the divinities Harakhte, Thoth, and Mat, standing, before whom stands Harmhab worshiping. His head is (in the photograph) almost wholly destroyed, and the uraeus, if present, cannot be discerned. Over Re are the words: "Harakhte, only god, king of the gods; he rises in the west, he sendeth his beauty—-.” Thoth and Mat bear the usual titles, while before Harmhab is a magical prayer.

19. The text of twenty-five lines addresses one after the other, Re, Thoth, and Mat, with the usual praise and prayers. These show clearly that the old traditional views are in full sway, although Aton is mentioned in l. 2: "Thou art beautiful, youthful, as Aton before thy mother Hathor.” The hymn is very interesting, but not historically important.

V. CAIRO FRAGMENTS

20. Two blocks, apparently doorposts, contain the following important titles of Harmhab above his figure on each block seated at an offering-table and wearing the uraeus. Each column begins with: "Hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, sole companion;” and then proceeds with the further titles:

* Privy councilor of the palace (pr-stny), great in love with his lord, chief prophet of Horus, lord of Sebi (Sby);c for the ka of the general in chief, Harmhab. +Prince of the greatest of the companions, confidant of especial confidants (conclusion as in l. 1); §king’s-follower on his expe-

c The place is unknown, but is probably connected, if not identical, with Alabastronpolis, the patron deity of which was also Horus; this Horus is the one whom the king claims as his special patron at his coronation (§ 27). The title, "chief prophet,” is an old nomarch title, and of course descended to Harmhab from his ancestors at Alabastronpolis.
ditions in the south and north country (conclusion as in l. i).

4. Greatest of the great, mightiest of the mighty; great lord of the people (conclusion as in l. i).

5. King’s-messenger at the head of his army, to the south and north country (conclusion as in l. i).

6. Chosen of the king, presider over the Two Lands, in order to carry on the administration of the Two Lands, general of generals of the Lord of the Two Lands; for the ka of the real king’s-scribe, his beloved, Harmhab.

7. Giving satisfaction in the entire land, privy councilor of the palace, unique in his qualities, recorder of the troops; for the ka of the chief steward, Harmhab.

8. Companion of the feet of his lord upon the battlefield on that day of slaying the Asiatics (Sī tyw) (conclusion as in l. i).

21. Several other fragments in Cairo contain the conventional mortuary prayers and show Harmhab wearing the uraeus and kneeling before various divinities, chiefly Osiris, Isis, and Nephthys. Finally there are two fragments in Bologna not noted heretofore; one shows him wearing the uraeus, and plowing in the fields of Yaru in the hereafter; the other contains part of an historical scene, showing the presentation of Negro captives, and mentioning the tribute of Palestine.

The king who favored him is not mentioned; but the Leyden tomb reliefs (§§ 2 ff.) show that he was a favorite of Ikhnaton. It is possible that he is to be found among Ikhnaton's favorites at Amarna as Patonemhab. He also enjoyed the favor of Tutenkhamon, and it must have been one of these two kings of whom he speaks; probably the latter. He was the descendant of an old nomarchical house at Alabastronpolis. Rising from such beginnings, throughout the precarious reigns of Ikhnaton's successors, Harmhab skilfully maintained himself, and gradually gained a position of such power that by conciliating the priestly party of Amon, which was then again in the ascendant, he finally succeeded in seizing the throne. Thus, after their long struggle with the Aton heresy, we see the Amonite priests seating a second Pharaoh on the throne, as they had seated Thutmose III. From his home in Alabastronpolis he is led by Horus, as the piously veiled language of the inscription puts it, into the presence of Amon at Thebes, where he is crowned and his

*Recueil, XV, 50. The tomb of this man is at Amarna. Such a change of name, involving the substitution of Aton for Horus (Har), is common at this time. But I am more inclined to find in Patonemhab the man who was won to Harmhab's cause and became high priest of Re at Heliopolis, with the name Premhab (Recueil, XVI, 123 f.).

titulary fixed by the gods. To make his claim on the crown legitimate, however, he next proceeds to the palace of the princess, Mutnezmet, the sister of Ikhnaton's queen, Nefernefruaton-Nofretete, who, although advanced in years, was a princess of the royal line, and is there recognized as her husband.

23. After the celebration of a feast in Luxor, the king proceeds northward, to restore the temples of the gods—an interesting indication of the destructive work of Ikhnaton's reform, in abolishing the old cults. Thus the old order and, particularly, the unchecked domination of Amon are restored. The calendar of feasts was immediately resumed and before he left Thebes, he celebrated the Feast of Ptah in his Theban temple. He left a record of it in the Ptah-temple there:

Year 1, fourth month of the first season, day 22, of the King Harmhab, the day of the feast of "Ptah-South-of-His-Wall," lord of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands" in Thebes; at his feast were founded [the offerings] of the ancestors ——."

This record enables us to determine that Harmhab remained in Thebes at least two months; for it is to be inferred that he was present at the above feast, which is about two months later than the Feast of Opet, during which he arrived at Thebes for his coronation.

Appointed Deputy

Marriage to Mutnezmet

28. He proceeded to the palace, he brought him before him to the shrine of his revered eldest daughter. She did obeisance to him, she embraced his beauty, and placed herself before him.

Rejoicing of the Gods

The gods, the lords of the fire-chamber were in exultation because of his coronation; Nekhbet, Buto, Neit, Isis, Nephthys, Horus, Set, all the ennead of gods who preside over the great throne lifted praises to the height of heaven, rejoicing at the satisfaction of Amon: “Behold, Amon hath come, his son before him, to the palace, to set his crown upon his head, to lengthen his whole life. We have gathered together, that we might establish for him. Let us count for him the adornments of Re; let us praise Amon on his behalf: ‘Thou hast brought to us our protector; grant to him the royal jubilees of Re, the years of Horus as king; for it is he who shall satisfy thy heart in the midst of Karnak, likewise Heliopolis and Memphis; it is he who shall make them splendid.’

The Gods Fix the Titulary

29. Let the great name of this Good God, and his titulary be made like (that of) the majesty of Re, as follows:
1. Horus: Mighty Bull, Ready in Plans;
2. Favorite of the Two Goddesses; Great in Marvels in Karnak;
3. Golden Horus: Satisfied with Truth, Creator of the Two Lands;
4. King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Zeserkheprure, Setepnere;
5. Son of Re: Mernamon, Harmhab, given life.
Festival in Luxor

The ennead of gods of Egypt, their hearts are happy. 21Behold, all the land was in joy, they cried out to heaven; great and small, they took up the jubilation; the whole land was rejoicing. After the completion of this feast in Luxor, Amon, king of gods, returned in peace to 22Thebesb (W 3 t t).

Restoration of the Temples

31. His majesty sailed down-stream as the image of Harakhte. Behold, he organized this land; he adjusted according to the time of Re. He restored the temples (from) the pools of the marshes c to Nubia (T p d t). He shaped all their images 23fin number more than before, increasing the beauty in that which he made. Re rejoiced when he saw them, which had been found ruined aforetime. He raised up their temples. He fashioned 100 images with all (their) bodies correct, and with all splendid costly stones. 24He sought the precincts d of the gods, which were in the districts in this land; he furnished them as they had been since the time of the first beginning. He established for them a daily offering every day; all the vessels of their temples 25were wrought of silver and gold. He equipped them with priests (w c b w), with ritual priests, and with the choicest of the army. He transferred to them lands and cattle, supplied with all equipment.

GRAFFITI IN THE THEBAN NECROPOLIS

32A. The significance of these graffiti does not consist alone in the light which they throw upon the history of the robbery of the royal tombs at Thebes, showing that their violation began at least two centuries earlier than we had supposed; but they reveal to us also the state of anarchy which followed the religious revolution of Ikhnaton. It is only at that time that such an act could have taken place at Thebes, and we thus discern the turbulent conditions from which Harmhab rescued the country.

32B. Year 8, third month of the first season (third month), day 1, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Zeserkhep-rure-Setepnere, Son of Re, Harmhab-Mernamon.

THE WARS OF HARMHAB

33. Very little is recorded of Harmhab’s relations with the foreign world. The scattered references on the surviving monuments are gathered here, recording his wars: I, in the North (§§ 34–36); II, in the South (§§ 37–44).

I. IN THE NORTH

34. The character and extent of these wars are very uncertain. The only sources are: (1) a list of names, of which remains of eleven are preserved, among which appears Kheta; and (2) a relief showing Harmhab leading three lines of captives and presenting them to Amon, Mut, and Khonsu. The costumes of the captives and their physiognomy indicate Asiatics. The inscription with the middle row is as follows:

35. The wretched princes of the Haunebu; [they say: “Hail to thee! Thy name has encircled the two ends of the earth, among all lands; every land fears because of thy fame; thy fear is in their heart.”

36. The lower row has the following:

The wretched princes of —; [they] say: “Hail to thee! like the great ————; [fear] has entered into their bodies, terror is in their hearts.”

39. Another scene represents Harmhab presenting the newly acquired products of Punt to Amon, as indicated in the accompanying inscription:

Description of the Scene

The Good God comes, he triumphs over the princes of every country. His bow is in his hand like the lord of Thebes (Montu), puissant king, mighty in strength, who carries away the princes of wretched Kush, King Zeserkheprure (Harmhab), a given life. His majesty came from the land of Kush, with the captives which his sword had made, according as his father Amon commanded him.

EDICT OF HARMHAB

dA large stela discovered by Maspero in February or March, 1882. It is, or when complete was, about five meters high by three wide, and stands against one that its very fragmentary state, together with the execrable manner in which it has been published, has deprived us of so many of its important data.

The edict contains the practical legislation of Harmhab by means of which he intended to prevent the oppressive abuses connected with the collection of taxes from the common people, who were continually robbed and impoverished by the fiscal officers. This legislation consists of a series of enactments, each of the following form:

a) Statement of the abuse as it existed before this legislation and the king's displeasure at it.

b) Statement of a hypothetical commission of the offense by the officials concerned.

c) Declaration of the penalty to be inflicted.

46. A very interesting question is whether these enactments have preserved on the stela the form and language of the original edict in the royal archives. It seems probable that, beginning with l. 13 (§50), we have the ipsissima verba of the original document, and that it continued to and included l. 2 (§62), although Müller is doubtful on this point.a

47. The content of the entire inscription is as follows:

Above was an adoration scene,* showing Harmhab worshiping before Amon.

I. Introduction (ll. 1–10, § 49).

IV. Enactment against robbing the poor of wood due the Pharaoh (ll. 17, 18, § 52).

V. Enactment against exacting dues from a poor man thus robbed (ll. 18–20, § 53).

VI. Enactment against robbing the poor of dues for the harem or the gods by the soldiers (ll. 20–22, § 54).

VII. Enactment against unlawful appropriation of slave service (ll. 22–24, § 55).

VIII. Enactment against stealing of hides by the soldiers (ll. 25–28, §§ 56, 57).

IX. Enactment against connivance of dishonest inspectors with thievish tax-collectors for a share of the booty (ll. 28–32, § 58).

X. Enactment against stealing vegetables under pretense of collecting taxes (ll. 32–35, § 59).

XI. Enactments too fragmentary for analysis (ll. 35–39; right side, ll. 1, 2, §§ 60–62).

XII. Narrative of the king's reforms, containing also an enactment against corrupt judges (ll. 3–7, §§ 63–65).

XIII. Narrative of the king's monthly audiences and largesses (ll. 7–10, § 66).

XIV. Laudation of the king, and conclusion (left side, § 67).

*Very fragmentary; it is the only source from which we gain the name of the king who issued the edict; Pl., Recueil, VI. Mr. Gardiner states that it is now missing.
48. In the translation it has been necessary to indicate the connection between the beginnings of the lines, a large portion of the ends having been lost. These connecting insertions contain only what was probably the intervening thought, without any attempt to reproduce the lost words.

II. INTRODUCTION: THE KING'S ZEAL FOR THE RELIEF OF THE PEOPLE (LL. 10–14)

50. His majesty took counsel with his heart [how he might\] d 11[exp]el evil and suppress lying. The plans of his majesty were an excellent refuge, e repelling violence behind d [and delivering the Egyptians from 12[the oppressions]] which were among them. Behold, his majesty spent the whole time seeking the welfare of Egypt and searching out instances g[of oppression in the land].

About two-thirds of a line.

Same phrase applied to Amenhotep III (II, 916, l. 35).

Müller inserts here a fragment containing the ends of three lines, which should conclude ll. 11, 12, and 13. These ends fit 13 very well, 11 fairly, and 12 not at all; for some reason Müller has ignored the end of l. 12, or it would have been apparent that the alleged fragment of the end of l. 12 does not connect with the beginning of l. 13.

Restored from l. 14.

Bouriant says: "Des lignes visibles aujourd'hui les quatre premières ne présentent plus que quelques signes très mutilés et ne pouvant fournir aucun sens; les vingt-deux suivantes ont perdu environ les deux tiers de leur longueur primitive, quelques-unes même ont perdu plus encore. A partir de la vingt-sixième, les lignes gagnent en longueur mais elles sont coupées de lacunes fréquentes...." This is verified by Mr. Gardiner's scale copy. After l. 31 they rapidly decrease in length, and become so fragmentary that a coherent rendering is impossible.

They often follow Müller, but I have carefully verified his conclusions in every case.

See Bouriant's remark above (note a); the lines contained the usual eulogistic introduction with names and titles of the king. Its length, one-fourth of the entire inscription, is unusual.
III. ENACTMENT AGAINST ROBBING THE POOR OF DUES FOR THE ROYAL BREWERIES AND KITCHENS (LL. 14–17)

51. If the poor man made for himself a craft with its sail, in order to be able to serve the Pharaoh, L. P. H., [loading it with the dues for the breweries and kitchens of the Pharaoh, and he was robbed of the craft and] the dues, the poor man stood rest of his goods and stripped of his many labors. [This is wrong, and the Pharaoh will suppress it by] his excellent measures. If there be a [poor man] who pays the dues of the breweries and kitchens of the Pharaoh, L. P. H., to the two deputies, [and he be robbed of his goods and his craft, my majesty commands: that every officer who seizeth the dues] and taketh the craft of any citizen of the army or of any person who is in the whole land, the law shall be executed against him, in that his nose shall be cut off, and he shall be sent to Tha[ru].

IV. AGAINST ROBBING THE POOR OF WOOD DUE THE PHARAOH (LL. 17, 18)

52. [Furthermore, concerning the impost of wood, my majesty commands that if any officer find a poor man without a craft, then let him bring to him a craft for his impost from another, and let him send him to bring for him the wood; thus he shall serve the Pharaoh.]

V. AGAINST EXACTING DUES FROM A POOR MAN THUS ROBBED (LL. 18–20)

53. [Furthermore, my majesty commands that if any poor man be oppressed by] his cargo be emptied by theft of them, and the poor man stand rest of his goods, [no further exactions for dues shall be made from him] when he has nothing. For it is not good, this report of very great injustice. My majesty commands that restitution be made to him; behold, ————.

Text has "stand."

This is a remarkable corroboration of Strabo, who mentions Rhinocolura as "so called from the colonists, whose noses had been mutilated. Some Ethiopian invaded Egypt and, instead of putting the malefactors to death, cut off their noses and settled them at Rhinocolura . . . ." (XVI, II, § 31; translation of Hamilton and Falconer, III, 176). See also Herodotus, II, 137, and Diodorus, I, 60 and 65; and Müller, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1888, 81.

The ambiguity of the pronouns is also in the original.
VI. AGAINST ROBBING THE POOR OF DUES FOR THE HAREM OR THE GODS BY THE SOLDIERS (LL. 20–22)

54. [Furthermore, as for those who] ——— and those who bring to the harem, likewise for the offerings of all gods, paying dues to the two deputies of the army and ——— [my majesty commands that if any officer is guilty of extortions or thefts], the law [shall be executed] against him, in that his nose shall be cut off, and (he) shall be sent to Tharu [T²-rw] likewise.

VII. AGAINST UNLAWFUL APPROPRIATION OF SLAVE SERVICE (LL. 22–24)

55. When the officers (sdm'w) of the Pharaoh's house of offerings have gone about tax-collecting in the towns, to take [katha (k³-t²)-plant], [they have seized the slaves of the people, and kept them at work] for 6 days or 7 days, without one's being able to depart from them afar, so that it was an excessive detention indeed. It shall be done likewise against them. If there be any place [where the stewards shall be tax-collecting, and any one] shall hear, saying: "They are tax-collecting, to take katha-plant for themselves," and another shall come to report, saying: "My man slave (or) my female slave has been taken away and detained many days at work by the stewards;" it shall be done likewise against them.

VIII. AGAINST STEALING OF HIDES BY THE SOLDIERS (LL. 25–28)

56. The two divisions of troops which are in the field, one in the southern region, the other in the northern region, stole hides in the whole land, not passing a year, without applying the brand of [the

It is therefore anticipatory, and hence the full statement of the penalty, as in §§ 51 and 54, may have been repeated in the lacuna at the end.
cThis important statement defines the two great divisions of the army, and shows that Herodotus' division of the Egyptian army of his time into Kalasiries and Hermotybies is not a late arrangement. royal house to cattle which were not due to them, thereby increasing their number, and stealing that which was stamped from them. They went out from house to house, beating and plundering without leaving a hide for the people. Then the officer of Pharaoh went about to each one, to collect the hides charged against him, and came to the people demanding, but the hides were not found with them (although!) the amount charged against them could be established. They satisfied them, saying: "They have been stolen from us." A wretched case is this, therefore it shall be [done] likewise.

57. When the overseer of the cattle of Pharaoh, L. P. H., goes about to attend to the loan-herds in the whole land, and there be not brought to him the hides of the which are on the lists, he shall not hold the people responsible for the hides if they have them not, but they shall be released by command of his majesty, according to his just purposes. As for any citizen of the army, (concerning) whom one shall hear, saying: "He goeth about stealing hides," beginning with this day, the law shall be executed against him, by beating him a hundred blows, opening five wounds, and taking from him by force the hides which he took.

IX. AGAINST CONNIVANCE OF DISHONEST INSPECTORS WITH THIEVISH TAX-COLLECTORS, FOR A SHARE OF THE BOOTY (LL. 28–32)

58. Now, as for this other instance of evil which the official staff were accustomed to commit, when they held inspection in the land, of that which happened against the law, [the table-scribe of the queen and the table-scribe of the harem went about after the official staff, punishing them and investigating the affair of the one who sailed down- or up-river. One investigated it among the officials in the time of the King Menkheperre (Thutmose III). Now, when the one who sailed down- or up-river whom they took; and when the superior officials of the king, Menkheperre, went about [after these officials] of each year, [that they might make an expedition to the city, and that these superior officials might come to these officials], saying: "Give thou [to us] the consideration for the careless expedition;" then, behold, the Pharaoh, L. P. H., made the expedition at the feast of Opet each year without carelessness. One prepared the way before the Pharaoh [and questioned the local magistrate, wherever he landed, concerning the corrupt official] causing him to what he (the corrupt official) was like. As for the one who goes about again, afterward, to seek the consideration, then these officials shall go about with the expedition concerning the affairs of these poor people.

My majesty commands to prevent that one shall do thus, beginning with this day the landing; he is the one against whom one shall prosecute it.

X. AGAINST STEALING VEGETABLES UNDER PRETENSE OF COLLECTING TAXES (LL. 32–35)

59. Likewise the collection of vegetables for the breweries [and kitchens of the Pharaoh and] Extortion was practiced, and the officials plundered the poor, taking the best of their vegetables, saying: "They are for the impost [of the Pharaoh]." [Thus they] robbed the poor of their labors, so that a double impost was levied. Now, my majesty commands that as for any officials who come to collect vegetables [for] the impost of Pharaoh, L. P. H., in the

60. The fragmentary condition of ll. 35–39 makes any coherent rendering impossible. They contain, however, a new enactment of the greatest interest regarding taxation of grain, in which there is an apparent contrast between the property owners, or citizens of the city, and the poor, thus:

61. Now as for these officials of the [herds], who go about —— in the southern region or the northern region collecting grain from the [citizens] of the city..., going about..., in the southern region or northern region collecting... from the poor...

Appointment of Two Judges

cThe reference to “him” (in l. 4) shows that there were but two of these judges, one in each of the two cities. The two viziers must be meant. Mr. Gardiner, however (Inscription of Mes, 34), regards the passage as referring to the two great courts of the South and North (knb’t c3’ t).

XIV. LAUDATION OF THE KING, AND CONCLUSION

67. Little can be made out of these nine lines. In line 9, the conclusion of the whole edict can be discerned:

Hear ye these commands which my majesty has made for the first time governing the whole land, when my majesty remembered these cases of oppression which occur before this land.

TOMB OF NEFERHOTEP

68. This beautiful tomb, so well known to the tourist visitors at Thebes, contains wall scenes and inscriptions of great importance for the study of religious and mortuary customs. But it also contains one scene of historical importance, depicting the honors received by Neferhotep at the hands of his king, Harmhab.

marshal, accompanied by the two viziers, and behind these Neferhotep, with arms uplifted in rejoicing, is being decorated with golden collars by two attendants. Golden collars and bracelets, also intended for him, are lying on a table before the balcony. The accompanying inscriptions are these:

Over King's-Attendants

70. Superintendant of a royal domain, king’s-butler, king’s-attendant in every place.

Before King

71. Year 3 under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Zeserkheprure-Setepnere (Harmhab).

Lo, his majesty appeared, like the sun in his palace of satisfying life, after offering bread to his father, Amon. At his coming forth from the Gold-House, acclamation passed through the whole land; and rejoicing, it reached heaven. The divine father of Amon, Neferhotep was summoned to receive the favor of the king’s-presence: myriads of everything, of silver, gold, garments, ointment, bread, beer, meat, and cakes, at the command of my lord Amon, who secures my favor in the (royal) presence.

72. The ritual priest, pleasing the heart of Amon, Neferhotep; he says: “How many are the possessions of him who knows the gifts of that god, the king of gods. Wise is he who knows him, favored is he who serves him, there is protection for him who follows him, he is the sun of his body, the Aton who is his, [forever] and ever.

73. After the presentation, Neferhotep, wearing his collars of gold, is met by his brother, Amenemyenet. Over his head is his name with the words: "Rewarded with silver and gold by the king himself." He is followed by another priest, wearing similar collars, and accompanied by the following words:

Arrival in peace, bearing the favor of the king, by the divine father of Amon, Perennefer, triumphant.

REIGN OF RAMSES I

WADI HALFA STELA*

74. This stela was erected by Ramses I in commemoration of his pious works at the temple of Horus of Bohen (Halfa). These works consisted of new offerings, an increase in the number of priests and servants, and an addition to the temple building. Seti I, in recording on a second stela his own works in this temple, uses the identical form and words of his father’s stela, with the exception of the new building record which Seti, who built nothing here, omits. The occurrence of Seti I’s name as king at the bottom shows that he was coregent with his father in the latter’s second year. His father died not more than six months after the erection of this stela (§ 157), and reigned a maximum of two and a half years.

75. The reference to the “captivity of his majesty” (l. 8) would indicate that Ramses I had somewhere in Nubia carried on war; but as the inscription places him in Memphis, the occurrence of Seti I’s name at the bottom may indicate that he (Seti) carried on the campaign, evidently in Nubia.

Now in the Louvre (C 59), where I made the copy of it used in the accompanying translation.

bAs both monuments are fragmentary, it is possible to fill up all the lacunes in Ramses I’s monument by reference to Seti’s, except one. The brackets in the translation therefore represent restorations from Seti’s stela.

Wall, lord of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands," and all the gods of Egypt (T³-mry), according as they gave to him [might and victory over all lands], united with one heart in praising thy ka. All lands, all countries, the Nine Bows are overthrown. His majesty, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Menpehtire (Ramses I), given life, commanded to establish divine offerings for his father, Min-Amon, residing in B[ohen, the first of] his [establishment] in his temple: 12 (pr·t-s) loaves; 100 (by²·t) loaves; 4 (ds) jars of beer; 10 bundles of vegetables.

Establishment of Priests

78. Likewise [this temple was filled with prophets, ritual priests] and priests (wc b); his storehouse was filled with male and female slaves, of the captivity of his majesty, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menpehtire (Ramses I), [given life, like Re, forever and ever].

New Building

79. His majesty was — watchful, he was not slothful in seeking excellent things to do them for his father] Min-Amon, residing in Bohen (Bhny), making for him a temple like the horizon of heaven, wherein Re [rises].

Here follows the double name of Seti I without connection with the preceding; it concludes the inscription.

a This was possibly not "first" in Ramses I's inscription; but it probably was so, or the number of his establishment would not be mentioned at all.
80. These reliefs form the most important document surviving from Seti I's reign, being practically our only source for his wars. Unfortunately, their function was a religious one; they furnish us a series of scenes presenting the wars of Seti I in their religious aspect, accompanied by a few meager explanatory inscriptions annexed to the principal actors in each scene. These scenes, like the Annals of Thutmose III, again illustrate the nature of the compact between the Pharaoh and his god: on the one hand, the god grants the Pharaoh the might which prevails over all the nations; on the other, the Pharaoh offers to the god the captives and the plunder thus gained. According to these scenes, the wars of Seti have but one aspect, and that is religious. Even in the arrangement of the scenes on the wall this is evident. Distributed symmetrically on each side of the temple door (see Fig. 1), the action of the suc-

*aThis, the most extensive series of war reliefs in Egypt, occupies the exterior of the entire northern wall of the great hypostyle hall in Karnak, and extends also eastward around the corner onto the eastern face of the eastern wall of the hall. The reliefs are arranged in three rows, one above the other, all of the top row being lost except one scene (see Fig. 1). They have been often published, and a statement of the publications will be found inserted in each scene (Fig. 1). But none of the publications meets the demands of modern epigraphic accuracy. I arranged all the inscriptions as given by the several publications in parallel columns, and checked these to some extent by photographs; but my photographs were unfortunately made after the lower row was again encumbered by débris. What purports to be an accurate publication of the inscriptions collated with photographs is given by Guieysse (Recueil, XI, 52–77). I collated over half of Guieysse’s publication, and found it so excessively inaccurate that it was useless to insert its variants, and I did not employ it further. (See my note, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 139, n. 5.) On the princes in these reliefs, see my remarks, ibid., 37, 130–39.
cessive scenes converges on that door, until the final scenes on each side of it represent the culminating sacrifice in the temple itself in the presence of the god. At the two extreme ends, as far from the door as possible, are the battles and marches of the war in distant lands; moving toward the door follow the capture and deportation of prisoners, the arrival in Egypt, the presentation of prisoners and spoil to Amon, and finally on either side of the door itself the slaying of captive princes, who are thus sacrificed in the temple by the king himself in the presence of Amon.

81. The only date in these reliefs is that of the year 1, which occurs only with the reliefs of the Shasu campaign. It is absurd to suppose that Seti I completed a war with the Libyans, a campaign against the Shasu, the conquest of Palestine and some of southern Syria, and a war with the Hittites, and finally accomplished the return to Thebes, all in one year.

In the opinion of the present writer, the arrangement above described indicates at least two great periods of war, each made by the artist to culminate in a human sacrifice before Amon. The first (east of the door, Scenes 1–11) is a war in the year 1 against the Shasu, followed by a a This does not overlook the fact that the geographical list accompanying each sacrificial scene is identically the same. The whole series of scenes was planned after the completion of Seti's conquests, and the total territory gained could not, of course, then be cut up and assigned to different campaigns. Moreover, these two lists are only intended to convey the impression of vast conquest, and are so full of mistakes and repetitions as to show clearly that their compiler had no definite idea of the territory covered.

b This date occurs only on the east side of the door (thrice, Scene 3, Scene 8, and Scene 9, all in the Shasu row), and dates both beginning and end of Seti's first campaign. There is no more reason for supposing that the Syrian campaign on the west side of the door, which bears no date, necessarily took place in year 1, than that two contiguous undated campaigns of Thutmose III must belong to the same year.

II. Campaigns against Libyans and Hittites. Scenes 12 to 20; West of Door.

campaign to the north as far east as the Hauran;\(^a\) thence westward along the Phoenician coast, perhaps as far as Simyra, and Ullaza; the second, preceded by a subordinate campaign against the Libyans, is the further prosecution of the Syrian conquest. The method pursued is exactly that of Thutmose III in his conquest of 130 years before (II, 396), viz., first to gain control of the Phoenician coast, and thoroughly establish connection with Egypt by sea, so that reinforcements and supplies for the next campaign might land at one of the Phoenician harbors from which as a base he could move upon the interior of Syria, especially the Orontes valley.\(^b\) From the coast the war was now carried inland and northward between the Lebanons, where the Egyptians met the Hittites for the first time in battle.\(^c\) It

\(^a\)Professor G. A. Smith discovered a monument showing Seti I worshiping Amon and Mut in the Hauran, in 1901, at "Tell-esh-Shihāb" (\textit{Athenaeum}, July 6, 1901; \textit{Académie des Inscriptions}, October 18, 1901). But see §140.

\(^b\)That Seti follows the method of Thutmose III is evident at every step. His first campaign, like that of Thutmose III, is through southern Palestine; then, like Thutmose III, he moves northward through Palestine and subdues the Lebanon. Before Thutmose III can move upon Kadesh, he secures the Phoenician coast (fifth campaign), and attacks Kadesh the next season. It can be no accident that the campaign of Seti's first year subdues Lebanon and the Phoenician coast, while the (undated) campaign west of the door shows him in the Hittite country on the Orontes. The undated Hittite campaign here clearly bears the same relation to the coast campaign as in the case of Thutmose III.

\(^c\)A glance at Fig. 1 will show that the arrangement of the wars on each side of the door strikingly indicates that they fall into two groups. One row on each side is a preliminary campaign near home, while the other rows on each side are the more important distant battles and conquests, thus:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Lost</th>
<th>Door</th>
<th>Lost</th>
<th>Kadesh</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Syria (without date)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Libya (without date)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shasu (year 1)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Hittites (without date)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

We thus get two groups of wars: (1) Shasu-Syrian wars; (2) Libyan-Hittite wars. The further question now arises, whether each row does not represent a separate war. This is clearly the case with the two lower rows on the right-hand is possible that Seti at this time reached even as far north as Naharin, as he claims in his lists;\(^a\) but the Hittite power was evidently not broken, and Seti could not push his permanent northern boundary beyond an east-and-west line running through the Phœnician coast (probably well south), eastward into the Hauran, and his son, Ramses II, was obliged to spend long years in the struggle for the upper Orontes valley (§§ 294 ff.).\(^b\)

82. x. In harmony with the supposition of several campaigns in Asia is the fact that Seti numbered his campaigns, or at least began to do so. Furthermore, on returning from the campaign of the year 1, a rebellion is announced to him, as in the case of Thutmose IV (II, 826) for example, calling for a further campaign. A stela,\(^c\) erected in the Ptah-temple at Karnak in his first year after his return from the first campaign, runs thus:

\(^a\)It must not be forgotten that, with the exception of the scene of the capture of Kadesh (Scene 16, Fig. 1), the entire uppermost row of Seti's reliefs (that is, about one-third of them) is lost. As the capture of Kadesh shows, this uppermost row dealt with his northernmost advance inland. We may therefore have lost in this row full corroboration of the northern advance claimed in the lists.

\(^b\)Other references to Seti's conquests are few in number: (1) The Wadi Halfa Stela (§§ 157 ff.). (2) The stela of Hori from Abydos (Mariette, Abydos, II, 51, which is incorrectly numbered 57), where Seti is seen before Osiris saying: "I have made for thee great herds of cattle from the captivity of my might." Hori's titles were: "Overseer of herds of the house (h'-t) of Menmore, (named:) 'The-Heart-is-Satisfied-in-Abydos,' and mayor, Hori, belonging to 'The-Tower (b'hn)-of-Ramases.'" The last is some fortified place (cf. Scene 3) established or named by Seti's father, Ramses, from which Hori came. (3) The Elephantine Stela (§§ 203, 204); (4) He is called: "Slayer of Palestine, smiter of Kush," in a rock inscription at Silsileh (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 141, g). (5) The list on the north wall, Karnak (loc. cit., III, 144; see note on Scene II, § 114, note).

Year 1 under the majesty of Seti I . . . . . . a His majesty returned with glad heart from his first victorious campaign, b when his onset passed over every country, and he took captive the rebellious countries by the puissance of his father, Amon, who decreed to him victorious might. He puts himself before him with glad heart b furnishing protection c for his son, assigning to him South, North, West, and East. They who invade his border are gathered together and delivered into his hand. There is none that thrusts aside his hand, carrying away their chiefs d as living captives, with their tribute upon their backs, presenting them to his august father, Amon, and his associate gods, in order to fill their storehouse with male and female slaves, e the captivity of every country. Lo, his majesty was at the Southern City (Thebes), performing the pleasing ceremonies of his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes ———

2. The announcement of hostilities, b by a messenger who found the king thus engaged, unquestionably followed. This cannot be the announcement of the Shasu invasion of the year 1, which is already past. It can only be that of the Libyans, who are now invading the Delta. This supposition becomes extremely probable, if not a certainty, when we note that Seti I spent the next year in the Delta, as proved by the bills f for the maintenance of his court during year 2 and part of year 3. They show that Seti spent practically the whole of the year 2 in the Delta, d Memphis, or Heliopolis. This would indicate that he fought the Libyan war in that year.

d In year 2 he was at Memphis from the second to the fourth of the first month (Bill 2); in the eastern Delta on the seventh, and in the same place from the fourteenth of the first month to the thirtieth of the fourth month (Bill 2), with the exception of the twenty-third and twenty-eighth of the fourth month, when he was in Memphis (Bill 5). On the sixteenth of the sixth month he was in Heliopolis (Bill 7); and from the seventh of the fourth month (with the above exceptions) to the seventeenth (?) of the eleventh month he was in the eastern Delta (Bill 3).
In the following treatment each scene is numbered as in Fig. 1, where its position on the wall can be instantly determined.

SCENE I. MARCH THROUGH SOUTHERN PALESTINE

83. On leaving Tharu, his last station in Egypt, Seti strikes into the desert south of and merging into Palestine. Here he finds only fortified water stations at intervals along the way, which are depicted (Fig. 2), each with its name added, in the relief. The interspersed inscriptions are these:

Over King, Left of Sun

Lord of the Two Lands: Menmare; Lord of Diadems [Seti-Merneptah].

84. Town (dmy) —.

SCENE 2. BATTLE WITH THE SHASUb

85. Pushing along this road in the Negeb, the king scatters the Shasu, who from time to time gather in sufficient numbers to meet him. One of these actions is depicted in this relief as taking place on the desert road, with the neighboring fortified stations indicated as in the preceding scene (§§ 83, 84).

aThe restoration of Guieysse, viz., bw- between Hw and ty, is merely a guess. It is more likely we should restore according to the broken line under the fort, where a word of which the beginning is lacking has also the determinative of a well (like the broken word in the fortress), thus: [H]3- -3-ty (and determinative of well). The H is uncertain, but exceedingly probable. Thus our word in the fortress is probably Hw-[ -3-ty, though two of the copies (Champollion, Notices descriptives, and Lepsius, Denkmäler) show the beginning of a bird with a stroke ( ), as the sign after Hw. This is surely "desert" or "ruin."

SCENE 3. CAPTURE OF PEKANAN b

87. The fighting with the Shasu, as depicted in the preceding scene, continued until Seti reached Canaan. Somewhere on the frontier, not far into Asia, Seti apparently meets a fortified town, to which the relief gives the name “Pekanan” or “the Canaan.” Exactly what this name means here is not certain. Pekanan is used in the text (§88) to indicate the limits of the war with the Shasu since the king has left Tharu, his last stop in Egypt. “The town of Pekanan” would seem, therefore, to indicate the place of his arrival in Canaan, as Müller thinks (Asien und Europa, 205); but this is not certain. The Egyptians called the entire west of Syria-Palestine “Canaan,” c and it a Determinative of legs is preserved.

Everyone that escapes his fingers says: "His might toward distant countries is the might of his father, Amon, who hath assigned to him victorious valor in the countries ($k^2 s\cdot wt$)."

SCENE 4. CAPTURE OF YENOAM

89. Seti has now traversed the entire length of Palestine. His lists (§ 114) show that after crossing Carmel he captured Peher and Bethshael, both in the plain of Jezreel, and then proceeded to Akko, whence he marched along the Phoenician coast to Tyre and Othu. Our relief represents the capture of Yenoam, which lies a short distance inland from the last two cities. It is depicted surrounded by forest, as we should expect.

Name in Fortress

Guieysse, "to thee."
SCENE 5. SUBMISSION OF THE CHIEFS OF LEBANON

91. Leaving Tyre and Othu, Seti now pushed northward, and advanced along the coast of Phœnicia, as indicated by his lists (§ 114). As he passes Lebanon, he receives the submission of its local dynasts, and secures cedar for his temples in Egypt. This the Syrians are depicted as felling, while one of Seti’s officers assures him of their submission. The name of this officer is not given, but he has been identified by Wiedemann with the prince appearing in the Libyan campaign, for which there is no evidence.

92. According to Seti’s lists (§ 114), he advanced northward along the coast past Simyra and Ullaza, but the upper row of reliefs, which contained the northernmost conquests, has unfortunately been lost, and we are unable to control the lists or trace this coast march in detail. If Seti really reached Simyra and Ullaza, it was only the intervening mountains on the east which prevented a collision with the Hittites.

93. Having secured the coast, as did his great ancestor, Thutmose III, Seti returned home with his plunder. He was now certain of a harbor for his sea connection with Syria on the next campaign—a connection which would greatly facilitate future operations in the North.

In Fortress

As shown by the one scene (the capture of Kadesh) preserved in this uppermost row.

It is difficult to say just where Seti attempted to fix his northern boundary in Phœnicia; if Ramses II’s stelae at Beyrut are boundary marks, as seems probable, then Seti’s boundary is almost certain to have been south of Beyrut, as Ramses would probably not mark off less than his father held.

So Guieysse, but Champollion, Notices descriptives, omits t₃, and Champol-

SCENE 8. RECEPTION IN EGYPT

98. Seti has now reached Egypt, and nears the frontier city, Tharu, driving and leading his prisoners. On the Egyptian side of the canal which passes by the city stands a body of officials acclaiming the victorious Pharaoh.

99. The most important item in this scene is the long inscription (§101), which informs us of the reason of Seti's chastisement of the Shasu. It was reported to him that the Bedwin (Shasu) were making common cause against the Palestinians (Kharu), and that this invasion had resulted in the complete overthrow of all authority in Palestine. That these Bedwin are the Khabiri of the Amarna Letters there can be no doubt. The conditions which confronted Seti I in Palestine are exactly those which we should expect in view of what we learn from the letters of Abdkhiba of Jerusalem. There is also further evidence of the same conditions, in the tomb of Harmhab (§§10 ff.). The attempt of the Hebrews to gain a footing in Palestine is undoubtedly involved in the larger movement of the Bedwin, which Seti here records.

b Part of the second name in Seti I's fivefold titulary, see infra, Redesiyyeh, § 169, l. 1.
One came to say to his majesty: "The vanquished Shasu (§ r-sw), they plan rebellion. Their tribal chiefs are gathered together, rising against the Asiatics of Kharita (H r-rw). They have taken to cursing, and quarreling, each of them slaying his neighbor, and they disregard the laws of the "palace."

The heart of his majesty, L. P. H., was glad on account of it. Lo, as for the Good God, he rejoices to begin battle, he is delighted to enter into it, his heart is satisfied at seeing blood, he cuts off the heads of the rebellious-hearted, he loves an hour of battle more than a day of rejoicing. His majesty slays them at one time. He leaves not a limb among them, and he that escapes his hand as a living captive, is carried off to Egypt.

Or: "when one transgresses against him."

See also Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 19.

My explanation in Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache (XXXVII, 136, n. 5) is incomplete, if not incorrect; sh, or swh, means "to bless or curse," these meanings being derived from a common idea, viz., "to invoke divine powers," a meaning used in magical texts.

This fragmentary name contained the syllable nb or hb; hence Lefebure restores Harmhab (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XII, 447); while Wiedemann at first favored Nebwa (Nb-w), (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XII, 258 ff.), and later thinks it was Amon-nefer-nebef (Recueil, XVIII, 121). See my note, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache (37, 137, note 1).

SCENE 9. PRESENTATION OF SHASU PRISONERS AND PRECIOUS VESSELS TO AMON

This bloody ceremony, which is of very ancient origin, is the king’s final recognition of his power as coming from the god, before whom he now sacrifices a number of the foes, whom the god has enabled him to vanquish. from the great stela of Amenhotep III recounting his buildings (II, 891, 892). Seti I had restored this splendid stela after its defacement by Ikhnaton (II, 878), and apparently at its restoration it was found to be so pleasing by Seti that he appropriated its form for his own use, but with many changes. Seti’s form of it was then again used by Ramses III on his Medinet Habu temple (IV, 137). The other part of Amon’s discourse (§ 117) is taken from a still earlier composition, the great Hymn of Victory of Thutmose III (II, 658 ff.), but again with some changes.

114. The title over the captive towns and countries led by Amon and a Theban genius, is restored from Scene 20, where it is repeated. This list of the towns and countries gained in these conquests was appended to each of the two sacrificial scenes (11 and 20) concluding the two great series.
Both lists are totally confused, even the stereotyped “Nine Bows” being broken up into two fragments. Evidently little reliance can be placed upon them, as they are placed here to serve a conventional function, viz., merely to convey the idea of vast conquests. Fortunately, a more careful list of Seti’s conquests is preserved upon a sphinx in his temple at Kurna, which is as follows: 1–9, the “Nine Bows;”
10, Kheta (ḥt); 11, Naharin (N-h-r-ny); 12, Alasa names (25–43) are haphazard selections\(^a\) of the famous towns and districts, chiefly of Asia, familiar to the Egyptians from earlier conquests. Only the towns in the northern plain of Jezreel, and in Phoenicia are grouped together (Nos. 13–24), but within the group they occur at haphazard. Not even such a grouping can be discovered in the aimless, confused conclusion (Nos. 25–43).\(^b\)

\(\text{115.}\) In harmony with the claims of these lists the words accompanying the king's action claim for him the great domain of his predecessors of the Eighteenth Dynasty, viz., from the "Horns of the Earth,"\(^c\) on the south, to the "marshes of Naharin," (§ 118) on the north. This is still literally true for the southern boundary, but is unquestionably an exaggeration in the case of the northern boundary. If Seti ever carried his arms as far as Naharin, he was unable to establish his boundary there, or hold anything inland, north of Galilee.

\(^a\)They do not seem to be taken from Scenes 11 and 20, as Müller states (Müller, \textit{Asien und Europa}, 191, n. 1), but are equally orderless and methodless selections from the names known to the compiler.

\(^b\)A relief on this same north wall of Karnak shows Amon presenting to an uncertain king a series of thirty captured towns. Müller (\textit{Asien und Europa}, 164-66) has shown that this list includes some towns in the west of central Palestine. He has attributed the relief to Ramses II, but the location of the document, where only Seti I's inscriptions are found would indicate that it belongs to the latter.

\(^c\)A stela at Ibrim contains similar references (Sayce, \textit{Recueil}, 16, 170 f.); the southern boundary is given as the "Horns of the Earth," and, referring to the northern, the king is called the "crusher of Retenu, carrying off their chiefs as living prisoners." SCENE 12. FIRST BATTLE WITH THE LIBYANSb

120. With this scene we pass to the other side of the door (cf. Fig. 1), to a group of nine scenes where there is no date preserved; and as shown above (§§ 86 ff.), they do not necessarily belong to the wars of year 1 on the east side of the door, but may have occurred at any time subsequent to the year 1. As we have shown above (§ 82), Seti spent practically his entire second year in the Delta, and he may well have fought the Libyan war in that year.

a Restored from Scene 20. b For bibliography, see Fig. 1.
121. As Seti's first war in Asia was introduced by a minor campaign against the Bedwin of Sinai and the Negeb, so now his second Asiatic war is preceded by a campaign against the Libyans. It is evident that the pressure of the Libyans into the Delta, which became so serious under Seti's grandson, Merneptah (§§ 569 ff.), already began under Seti himself. He was, therefore, unable to continue his conquests in Asia without chastising them. Unfortunately, the scene is purely conventional, and the descriptive texts contain nothing but general terms.

Scene 13. Second battle with the Libyans

123. This second battle scene in addition to the strength and vigor which give it value as an artistic composition, is of great importance because of the two princes, whom it represents as participating in the battle. One of them (behind Seti) bears the name of Ramses, and is of course, he who later became Ramses II. This fact has had great weight in the study of the reigns of Seti and of Ramses II, and has

materially modified the chronology of both reigns. But let it be noted, in the first place, that this figure of Ramses is in a scene of the Libyan war, without a date, far from the scenes of the Shasu war of year 1, on the other side of the door. This appearance of Ramses with his father was therefore not necessarily in his father's first year, as has been so often assumed.

Furthermore, a close examination of the accompanying figures will show, first, that this scene is no proof that Ramses ever appeared with his father in battle at all; and, second, that Ramses was not the first heir to Seti's throne. Behind the Libyan chief whom Seti hurls backward stands an Egyptian prince (Fig. 4, broken lines), facing toward the left, and watching, or possibly taking part in, the conflict. Behind Seti stands Prince Ramses (Fig. 3, dotted lines), facing toward the right, and likewise watching the conflict. Fig. 4 cannot also be Ramses, for he could not appear twice in the same scene. Its accompanying inscription is as follows: "Hereditary prince, first king's-son, of his body ————," in which, unfortunately, the name is wanting; where it could have stood before its disappearance is a question, for the skirt of the prince projects under the titles, and the name must therefore have been pushed to

\textsuperscript{a}Thus Maspero (Struggle of the Nations, 369, n. 3) concludes that Seti I married Ramses II's mother, Tuya, under Harmhab, and (ibid., 387, n. 5) that Seti I could not have reigned longer than fifteen to twenty years (possibly only twelve or fifteen), because Ramses II appears "as a stripling in the campaign of Seti's first year."

\textsuperscript{b}A full discussion of these questions by the present writer will be found in Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 130-39, from which the accompanying figures are taken.

\textsuperscript{c}It is very faint and has been overlooked in Champollion, Monuments, 207, 2, and in Rosellini, Monumenti Storici, 54, 2; the only publication containing it is Champollion, Notices descriptives, 99. Every sign is traceable in the photograph which I used for making the drawing.
Fig. 3.—Showing Two Superimposed Figures (dotted lines facing right; broken lines facing left).

the left (under the Libyan chief's elbow). The historical conclusion here is important: the "first king's-son" of Seti I was not his successor, Ramses; that is, that Ramses II had an older brother, who did not reach the throne.

125. But a further examination of this scene discloses the fact that this figure of Ramses' elder brother (Fig. 4) is not original and does not belong where it stands. The first glance shows that the contracted space between the chariot wheel (belonging to the next scene to the right) and the leg of the falling Libyan is too narrow for another figure, and the artist has barely been able to squeeze the prince in. Thus he is as much in one scene as the other, an anomalous arrangement! He stands with fan upraised in his right hand, as if to smite the falling Libyan. The fan runs directly across the vertical line of text! It is difficult to say where the right arm is; it seems to have been raised, and it may be that he was seizing his father's foe, as his father is doing. Passing through the fan, the large column of text extends down through the prince's head and body, to the bottom. It is clear, therefore, that at some time after Seti had completed these reliefs his eldest son had himself inserted here, as taking part in Seti's Libyan campaign. It is clear also that someone desired his removal, for his figure has been rudely chiseled away. Champollion speaks of him as a "prince martelé et surchargé avec débris de légende" (his titles follow), showing that also his accompanying inscription has been hammered out. The person to whom the figure of the eldest son would be most unwelcome, and who

\(^a\)There is now no trace of it there, owing to a large fissure in the stone. I am unfortunately obliged to work from photographs, as I did not study these reliefs when at Karnak, and the figures of the princes are now nearly covered with débris again.

\(^b\)Notices descriptives, II, 99.
would therefore be most desirous to remove it, is of course, the other prince in the same scene, Ramses. We are certainly correct in attributing the mutilation to him. Moreover, it is quite certain that he did this in order to have the figure of himself inserted in the same scene, for his own figure (Fig. 3, dotted lines) is not original to this scene.

126. In the first place, we notice in Fig. 3, as in Fig. 4, the narrowness of the space into which the prince's figure has been squeezed, so that his left foot passes through the feather of the fallen Libyan, whom Seti is trampling, and his left hand collides with the other feather. Further, we again notice a column of text extending down through the prince's head into his body. Ramses stands with right hand raised palm outward, as usual in salutation, and carrying his fan vertically before him in the left hand. A joint in the masonry has obliterated shoulders and face. The accompanying text is partly in one scene and partly in the next. It is as follows: "Prince (prc 'ty), king's-son, crown prince, of his body, his beloved, Ramses." The historical conclusions to be derived from this text will be taken up later.

127. A closer inspection of Ramses' figure shows that, in having himself inserted here, he at the same time improved the opportunity to efface another figure, which we will call X, over which his own has been cut. The motives for this second effacement are undoubtedly the same as for the first, and X was therefore Ramses' elder brother. But, as the elder brother has already been once effaced in this scene, we should expect that this second occurrence of his figure belonged to another scene, and such is clearly the case. Under Ramses' figure appears a second pair of feet striding in the opposite direction (the left; see broken lines); behind Ramses is the front point of a skirt; behind him is a third arm; across his figure is a quiver\(^a\) with the opening to the left; above him is a fan\(^b\), with the tip of the feather turned to the left.\(^c\) All these belong, of course, to the figure X (broken lines), facing to the left. A comparison of X with the prince in Fig. 5 shows clearly that X was striding in the same way after the chariot behind which he is. Especially characteristic are his left foot poised for the next step, the arm hanging down in front, and the fan over the shoulder. X therefore belongs to the scene to the left, representing Seti's triumphant return (Scene 14) from the Libyan war, riding in his chariot and driving his prisoners before him, like the prince following Seti in his return from the first Syrian war (Fig. 5). This is what we should expect; before Ramses' interference, the figure of his elder brother appeared once in each of the two scenes: the battle with the Libyans (Fig. 4) and the return (Fig. 3). Ramses preferred to appear in the battle and had himself inserted facing the right.

*These signs are so clear that they were copied by Rosellini, but in his publication (Monumenti Storici, 54, 2) he has shifted the column above too far to the right.

128. But if the figure of Ramses is a later insertion, that of his brother (X) is equally so; the latter's fan, quiver, and indeed his whole figure cut directly into the original column of text, as the figure of Ramses does. X has had himself inserted here. It is this fact which renders certain the identity of X and Seti's eldest son (Fig. 4); both desired

---

\(^b\)The fan was always borne with the tip of the feather pointing toward the front, as in Ramses' figure and in Fig. 5.

\(^c\)The feet and the quiver were seen and copied by Rosellini and Champollion, and appear in their publications (Rosellini, Monumenti Storici, 54; Champollion, Monuments, 297, 2), but seem to have remained unnoticed since.
to appear in Seti's Libyan war, both were the object of Ramses' hatred, and both were effaced by him.

129. To recapitulate, we find thus far three stages on this wall:

1. An uninterrupted column of text on each side of the battle scene; and no princes in either it or the scene of the return.

2. Seti's eldest son inserts his own figure at the right of the battle scene and at the right of the return.

3. Prince Ramses effaces the figure of his elder brother in both places, but over that of his brother in the return scene he inserts his own figure, so facing as to belong to the battle scene.

130. There are evidences of a similar insertion (Fig. 6) at the top of this same wall, on a few isolated blocks at the left of the capture of Kadesh (Scene 16). Here we see a figure (Fig. 6, broken lines) with uplifted arm, like that of Ramses in the battle scene, and wearing a quiver. Before this figure are the arms of a captive bound behind his back, showing that the man follows the king's chariot (as in Fig. 5), behind which, however, the king leads a line of captives. But this figure is likewise a later insertion, for a column of text extends down through it, and the head of the Syrian, who has fallen beneath the chariot, projects into the skirt. It is impossible to decide whether this figure is that of Ramses or his brother.

131. The historical results to be drawn from the above facts are not numerous, but are important. It is clear, in the first place, that these reliefs offer no evidence whatever that Ramses II ever took part in any campaign of his father, of whatever year. It is therefore no longer necessary to shorten the reign of Seti in order that Ramses may be sufficiently young at his (Ramses') accession, as Maspero considered unavoidable. As far as these reliefs are concerned, Ramses might even have been born after Seti’s accession. The fact alone that Ramses was obliged to insert his own figure in his father’s battle scenes, in order to appear there at all, of course creates a strong suspicion that he had nothing to do with the events they depict;\(^a\) and thus Seti’s reign may have been considerably longer than is usually attributed to him. He was about to celebrate his jubilee when he died, having left an obelisk unfinished, so that it was completed by his son, Ramses II (§§ 544 ff.). If his father reigned two and a half years, Seti’s jubilee might have fallen in the middle of his twenty-eighth year. But as he did not live to complete the obelisk and celebrate the jubilee, he may have died a few years before the jubilee, after a reign of over twenty years. A greater maximum is improbable, for the reason that Setau, viceroy of Kush in Seti I’s second year,\(^b\) is known also in Ramses II’s thirty-eighth year, which, if Seti reigned twenty years, makes Setau’s term of office at least fifty-seven years—an extraordinary tenure of office. For the extensive building which Seti I accomplished, twenty years are none too long a reign.

Behind Seti’s chariot, in this scene, his eldest son had himself inserted following the chariot, as does the prince behind the chariot in the return from Syria (Scene 8). The prince’s figure is here cut in over a column of inscription (see Fig. 3), showing that it is not a part of the relief as left by Seti. It was afterward erased and replaced by the figure of Ramses II, who faces the other way and belongs to the preceding scene (13).

The inscription over the Libyan prisoners in the upper line referring them to "Retenu" and calling them "Asiatics"(!), only shows the subordinate character of the Libyan campaign, and the exclusive importance of the Asiatic victories. It may also indicate that this presentation of Libyan spoil did not take place till after the second Asiatic war; but as these reliefs were not put on the temple wall until the close of Seti's wars, all the campaigns in Retenu are then past, and could be referred to.

142. Seti’s advance between the Lebanons necessarily brings him into collision with the Hittites, and we see him here in the first battle between Egyptians and Hittites known to us. Unfortunately, no details of the conflict are given.

\textsuperscript{a}Müller sees in this city the Kadesh on the Orontes (Asien und Europa, 217); but there seem to me conclusive reasons against this identification: (1) The relief shows a city on rocky heights, while Kadesh is in a low valley surrounded by moats (Müller thinks this due to the artist’s looseness). (2) It is said to be “of the land of Amor.” Now, Kadesh on the Orontes clearly did not belong to the land of the Amorites (see Meyer, Festschrift für Georg Ebers, 69), and the purpose of the addition, “of the land of Amor,” is precisely to distinguish the Galilean Kadesh from its more powerful neighbor in the north. (3) Müller’s argument that Seti failed to capture the city, which would be impossible if it were a small Galilean town, is refuted by the fact that ḫb is used by Ramses II of a whole list of captured cities (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 156, with metathesis ḫf).

aOn the use of ṛ, see my De Hymnis in Solem sub Rege Amenophide IV Conceptis, 22–25; but my explanation of the phrase in the sun-hymn, "yḥʾ k ṛ ṣn" (ibid.), is to be modified in view of this Seti passage. ṛ is here clearly equivalent to "number," as so often in the great Papyrus Harris, and is used like ʿnw, "number," in the sense of "all." "Yn," being parallel with "w ʿʃ, seize or bind," is clearly used as usual with the meaning: "carry away captive."

WADI HALFA STELA

157. As stated above (§ 74), this monument is practically a duplicate of a stela erected by Seti I at the same place six months before, recording his father's pious works in the southernmost of the two temples at Wadi Halfa. It was perhaps erected by Seti after his campaign of the first year, as it is dated in that year, and refers at the same time to "the captivity of his majesty." The king is only confirming the offerings established by his father, as they are identical with those on Ramses I's stela (§§ 74 ff.), and this identity, and the absence of Ramses I's name, make it certain that Ramses I had died in the interval between the two stelae. Moreover, both stelae are of Seti I's first year; on the first his father is still living; on the second, six months later, he is not mentioned. Hence he died in Seti's first year, and probably in his own second year; at most he reigned two and a half years.

Introduction

Establishment of Offerings

159. Lo, his majesty was 4 in the city of Memphis (H ' t-k 2-Pth) performing the ceremonies of his father, Harakhte, Ptah, the great, South-of-His-Wall, lord of Life-of-the-Two-Lands, Atum, lord of the bThis captivity might possibly refer to some raid of Seti's among the Nubians, for in an inscription at Silsileh (Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 165-67), otherwise consisting of conventional phrases only, he is called: "bringer of the limits of the land of the Negroes as living captives." Moreover, as the stela reproduces that of his father merely, the phrase may be only an inadvertent repetition.

\textbf{INSCRIPTIONS OF REDESIYEH}\(^c\)

162. The reliefs in the vestibule contain two stereotyped scenes, showing the king overthrowing the people of the north and south. These evidently do not refer to specific victories of Seti, but are of the conventional order. They are as follows:

163. \(^d\)Amon, leading ten peoples captive, extends the

It was discovered by Cailliaud in 1816. The inscriptions have never been completely published; the most important ones by Lepsius (\textit{Denkmäler}, III, 139–41, \(d\), copied thence by Rheinish, \textit{Chrestomathie}, Taf. 9); the long ones much better by Golénischeff (\textit{Recueil}, XIII, Pl. I and II). See also Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, Text, IV, 75–84.

Over Amon

164. Utterance of Amon: "Take to thyself the sword, O mighty king, Horus of the bows, in order to overthrow the chiefs of Kush, the wretched; in order to cut off their heads. Thy terror enters into their bodies, like Sekhmet when she rages."a

By the King

165. Same as above, only with Horusc in place of Amon, and Asiatics in place of Kushites; inscriptions as follows:

Utterance of Horus of Edfu: "Take to thyself the sword, O mighty King, Horus, shining in Thebes, in order to smite the rebellious countries, that violate thy boundaries. Thy fame is among them forever; (they) fall in their blood by the might of thy father, Amon, who hath decreed thee might and victory."

166. In addition to these unimportant scenes, the temple contains three inscriptionsd of great importance as indicating the revival of intercourse with the Red Sea region, and the exploitation of the gold mines in the Gebel Zebâra districte. According to these inscriptions, the road to the mines eastward though the desert, was so lacking in water that the working of the mines in Seti's time had languished. Seti undertook to establish communications by digging a well on this road thirty-seven miles from the Nile, claiming that he was the first to do so, although the name of a "king's-son" under Amenhotep III, named "Mermose,"* still surviving, cut on the rocks in the vicinity, proves the use of the station already in the Eighteenth Dynasty.

167. The first inscription, dated in the year 9, narrates the successful completion of the well and also the erection of a temple and establishment of a settlement at this station. The heretofore unnoticed motive for all this elaborate equipment is stated in the king's words to be (l. 13): "on behalf of my beautiful house in Abydos." This is, of course, Seti's famous temple at Abydos, which he says was erected "by oracle of the god" (l. 13). It is to endow the king's mortuary service in this temple that he is now restoring communications with the eastern gold regions. He therefore prays, as he worships for the first time in the new temple at the newly established station on the road to the mines, that the god may instruct coming generations of kings and princes to respect his establishment, presumably both at Abydos, and at the new station by which communication with the source of revenue for Abydos was to be maintained. This explains why the next inscription of nineteen lines, the longest of the three, is devoted almost exclusively to warnings and curses addressed to those who may in future interfere with the arrangements by which Seti hopes to perpetuate the income of his Abydos temple from the gold mines. Hence at its close (l. 19) he calls down the vengeance of Osiris, Isis, and Horus upon the person, wife, and children of any official of the necropolis (of course, at Abydos) who shall disregard ("avert the face from") "the command of Osiris." But, notwithstanding these solemn adjurations of Seti, he had not been dead a year when his mortuary endowments at Abydos were suspended (§ 263). They were then re-enacted by his son, Ramses II (§ 271, ll. 73–75; § 272, 77–89).

168. The third inscription records the gratitude of the king's people who use the new station and the road thus rendered easy. They call him "the good shepherd"a (l. 2), and it is not accidental that in the dedicatory inscription of Seti's Abydos temple, he is likewise called the "mighty shepherd,"b indicating that particular activity of the king, to which the temple owed its income.

I. FIRST INSCRIPTIONc

Introduction

169. Year 9, third month of the third season, the twentieth day, under the majesty of Horus: Mighty-Bull-Shining-in-Thebes-Vivifier-of-the-Two-Lands; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Uhemmesut,d Mighty of Sword, Expelling-the-Nine-Bows; Golden Horus: Repeating-Coronations, Mightiest-of-Bows-in-All-Lands; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: MenmareMn-m30t-Rc; Son of Re: Seti-Merneptah, given life forever and ever.

Seti's Excursion in the Desert

170. On this day, lo, as his majesty inspected the hill-country as far as the region of the mountains, his heart desired a to see the mines from which the electrum e is brought. Now, when his majesty had e Gold was commonly found with so large an admixture of silver as often to be thus spoken of; and in this same temple the god says to Seti: "I have given to thee the gold-countries, giving to thee what is in them of electrum, lapis lazuli and malachite." Lepsius, Metalle, 45, and Denkmäler, III, 141, b. The same in Ramses III's treasury (IV, 28).

ascended from the signs of numerous water courses, he made a halt in the road, in order to devise counsel with his heart, and he said: "How evil is the way without water! It is as with a traveler whose mouth is parched. How shall their throats be cooled, how shall he quench their thirst; for the lowland is far away, and the highland is vast. The thirsty man cries out for himself against a fatal country. Make haste! Let me take counsel of their needs. I will make for them a supply for preserving them alive, so that they will thank god in my name, in after years. They shall come, and the generations which are to be, shall come to charm by me, because of my might and because that, lo, I am kind-hearted, inclining toward the circuit runners."

The Successful Well

171. Now, after his majesty had spoken these his words, in his own heart, he coursed through the highland seeking a place to make a water-station. Lo, the god led him, in order to grant the request which he desired. Then were commanded workmen in stone, to dig a well upon the mountains, that he might sustain the fainting, and cool for him the burning heart in summer. Then this place was built in the great name of Menmare (Mn-m, Seti I), and the water inundated it in very great plenty like the two caves of Elephantine.

Plan for a Settlement and Temple

172. Said his majesty: "Behold, the god has performed my petition and he has brought to me water upon the mountains. Since the gods the way has been dangerous, (but) it has been made pleasant in my glorious reign. The districts of the colporteurs are refreshed, the land is extended, my reign is with might in every respect. It has not been known — — — under me. Another good thought has come into my heart, at command of the god, even the equipment of a town, in whose august midst shall be a resting-place, a settlement, with a temple. I will build a resting-place in this spot, in the great name of my fathers, the gods. May they grant that what I have wrought abide, that my name prosper, circulating through the hill-country."

This is the same as "water-supply," in the Assiut inscriptions (I, 407), but the mw is here omitted, as also sometimes elsewhere. See also II, 698.

Text has tph't and krt, from which the Krophi and Mophi, given by Herodotus as the Nile sources, were doubtless corrupted.
Construction of the Temple

173. Then his majesty commanded that the leader (ḫrḥ) of the king's workmen be commissioned, and with him the quarrymen, that there should be made by digging (§3 d) in this mountain, this temple, wherein is Amon, in whose midst is Re, in whose great house are Ptah, Osiris, Horus, Isis, Menmare (Seti I), and the divine ennead belonging in this temple.

Seti Worships in the New Temple

174. Now, after the stronghold was completed, adorned and its paintings executed, his majesty came to worship his fathers, all [the gods]. He said: "Praise to you, O great gods! who furnished heaven and earth according to their mind. May ye favor me forever, may ye establish my name eternally. As I have been profitable, as I have been useful to you, as I have been watchful for the things which ye desire, may ye speak to those who are still to come (yw ty sn), whether kings, or princes or people (rḥy t), that they establish for me my work in the place, on behalf of my beautiful house in Abydos, made by the oracle of the god, the existent one, that they may not subvert his plan. Say ye, that it was done by your oracle, for that ye are the lords. I have spent my life and my might for you, to attain my acceptability from you. Grant that my monuments may endure for me, and my name abide upon them."

II. SECOND INSCRIPTION

Address to Earlier Kings

175. *King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Menmare (Seti I), Son of Re: Seti-Merneptah. He saith to his fathers, all the Kings of Upper Egypt, the Kings of Lower Egypt, the rulers and the people (rḥy t): "Hearken to me, ye chiefs of bowmen of the Land of Egypt (T mry); may ye hear the things, O may ye —. I have desired to requite your virtues alike, ye being like gods; a lord is counted among the divine ennead. I have said this for the guidance of my caravaneers of the gold-washers to my temple, to set them carrying for my house ——— my temple."

aAll except the vestibule of the temple is excavated in the side of the mountain.

bLepsius, Denkmäler, 140, c = Golénischeff, Recueil, XIII, Pl. II.

cIt is possible to render also: "rulers of the people."
Warning to Caravaneers on the Inviolability of Gold

176. As for gold, it is the limbs of the gods;¹ not your possession. Take care lest ye say that which Re said at his beginning of speech: “My skin is of pure electrum.”

Warning to Caravaneers concerning Earlier Endowments

177. “Now, Amon, the lord of my temple. His two eyes are upon his possessions. They do not desire to be deprived of their belongings. Take heed against the incursions of their people, because they are like them that taste his —. Make not joy ——. As for the one who trespasses upon the matter of another, there shall come to him an end, by doing likewise; the monument of the violator shall be violated, and there shall not remain an example of the deceivers — — “the king.”

Seti’s New Plans

178. “——— to let you know that I have inaugurated a way, in order to save you; I have made the caravaneers into gold-washers in — in my name —— my — by my virtues. I have made them into caravaneers anew, in order that they might remain under me. I have not brought from other ⁸caravaneers —— among the children of my temple, or among the mountaineers of my sanctuary.”

Exhortation and Good Wishes to Future Kings

179. “As for any king who shall be after me, he shall establish my work, ⁹in order to cause to abide —— conveying his impost to the house of Menmare (Seti I), to gild all their images, made by Amon, Harakhte, Ptah-¹⁰Ta[te]nhen —— they flourish. May they rule the lands with gladness of heart, may they overthrow the Red Lands and Nubia; may their ka’s abide; may their food-offerings endure. May he satisfy ¹¹those who are upon earth; may Re hear ———.”

Warning to Kings Who Shall Disregard Seti’s Establishments

180. ——— saying: “Now, as for any king, who is to come, who shall overthrow any of my plans with me, he is one of whom the lands after me shall say, that I and they were as they are ¹²with him; an evil matter for the heart of the gods. Behold, one shall answer him in Heliopolis ———. They shall make answer concerning their affairs. They shall redden like flame of fire, and they shall consume their limbs, (because) they hearkened not to me. They shall consume the violator of my plans, in order to place him in the dungeon of the gate.”

Good Will for the King Who Respects Seti’s Establishments

190. “[As for him who respects] our affairs, cause to save him, void of his offense; for he is another who derives understanding from the divine ennead; they shall abide with him.”

Blessing on Seti’s Officials, Who Shall Survive Him

191. Now, as for any official who shall survive to (the time of) a king after me, he shall cause to remember good, in order to establish the matter which I have done in my name. May the god give reverence for him on earth; may his end be satisfaction brought to his ka.

Curse on Disregardful Officials Surviving Seti

192. Now, as for any official who shall bring near this thought to his lord, in order to take away the (ḥṣb w) people, to give them to another, by counsels of evil testimony; the fire shall burn his glowing limbs, the flame shall devour his members, because his majesty made all these things for their ka, the lords of my house. An abomination of the god is the transgression against his people. None turns away the violating hand except it be the caravaneers of the gold-washing, which I have made for the house of Menmare, protected and defended. It shall not be made to fall by any people who are in the whole land, by any chief archer of the gold, or by any inspector of the highlands.

Further Warning to Respect Endowment

193. Now, as for anyone who shall transgress against the people therein, putting (them) into another place, the gods and goddesses, the lords of my house shall execute upon him the appropriate penalty. (For) there is none to oppose that any of my property in the inventory should be beneath their feet, forever and ever; except it be the chief archer of the caravaneers of the gold-washing of the house of Menmare, by his hand, presenting their impost of gold to the house of Menmare.

_Curse on One Disregarding Command of Osiris_

194. As for anyone who shall avert the face from the command of Osiris, Osiris shall pursue him, Isis shall pursue his wife, Horus shall pursue his children, among all the princes of the necropolis, and they shall execute their judgment with him.

III. THIRD INSCRIPTION

195. Horus: Mighty-Bull-Shining-in-Thebes, Vivifier-of-the-Two-Lands; King of Upper and Lower Egypt [Menmare (Seti I)]; he made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, and his divine ennead; making for them a temple anew: wherein the gods are satisfied; before which he dug a well. Never was made the like of it by any king, save by the king, the maker of glorious things, the Son of Re, Seti-Merneptah, the good shepherd, who preserves his soldiers alive, the father and mother of all. They say from mouth to mouth: "O Amon, give to him eternity; double to him everlastingness. Ye gods dwelling in the well, give ye to him your duration; for he hath opened for us the way to march in; (when) it was closed up before us. We proceed and are saved; we arrive and are preserved alive. The difficult way, which is in our memory, has become a good way. He (the king) has caused the mining of the gold to be like the sight of the Horus-hawk. All generations that are to be, beseech for him eternity, that he may celebrate jubilees like Atum, that he may flourish like the Edfuan Horus,

The formal name of each god, as patron of the temple and well, was: "Amon or Horus (or any god in the ennead) dwelling in the well of Menmare" (see Lepsius, _Denkmäler_, III, 139, b, c, e, f).

e "T₂₂mn ḫr, etc.," and "T₂₂mn ḫr, etc.," are parallel, the first being a miswriting of the auxiliary verb.

f An obscure comparison; Golénischeff thinks it refers to the swiftness of the hawk's eye.
for he has made monuments upon the highlands for all the gods; he hath dug for water upon the mountains, (although) far from men, the supply of every messenger that traverses the highlands, with the life, stability, and satisfaction of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Menmare (Seti I), beloved of Amon-Re, king of gods.

196. On the neighboring rocks three of the officials instructed by Seti with the establishment or administration of the station have left inscriptions. In the first two the official's name is no longer legible, though in the second one may discern the words:

197. "Made by the officer of marines commissioned to dig (šd·t) 'The Well of Seti-Merneptah.'"

198. The third was made by Iny (Yny), an official of high rank, who is shown praising Seti I, thus:

"Praise to thy ka, O good and beautiful ruler, child of Amon, the sun (šw), in seeing whom one lives. O ka of every house, my god, who fashioned me, in order to make me; grant thou the food of the great. How prosperous is he who follows thee daily. [For the] ka of the chief of the stable, of the 'Stable of Seti-Merneptah,' charioteer of [his] majesty, king's-son of Kush —, chief of the gendarmes, Ini (Yny)"

BUILDING INSCRIPTIONS

199. Seti I has not left us any long record of his buildings, like those which we find in the Eighteenth Dynasty. Of his notable activity as a builder the only inscriptive witnesses are several quarry stelae, and the architrave and other dedication formulæ still to be found in the buildings themselves. Besides erecting new temples, Seti was active in restoring the old. Throughout the country he had his sculptors at work restoring the defacement of the gods’ names which had taken place under Ikhnaton, especially that of Amon. Examples of these restorations will be found frequently, as in the temple of Amenhotep III at El Kab, on the great building record of Amenhotep III at Thebes (II, 878); or on the obelisks of Hatshepsut (II, 312). They are usually recorded thus:

200. Restoration of the monument which King Seti I made in the house of — (name of a god).

Taking up first the quarry stelae, the following are the building inscriptions of Seti I:

e See his only surviving obelisk, from Heliopolis (§§ 544 ff.), and the mention of them on his temple model (§ 246).
f The remainder is totally unintelligible in the publication. A mutilated and badly copied rock inscription of Seti from the same locality (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 141, i), doubtless contained similar information as the above text, for it is also dated in “year 9” and begins: “His majesty, L. [P.] H., commanded to make great obelisks for Egypt. Then his majesty found ———.” (remainder lost).
2. ELEPHANTINE STELA

203. Above, Seti I worships Amon and Khnum; below, an inscription of eighteen lines, containing a prayer of the king to Khnum. It is very fragmentary, and the only data of historical importance are these:

204. 14—— Thou hast flooded thy temple with their food-offerings 15—— of silver, gold, lapis lazuli, and malachite; thou hast filled [thy] storehouse 16——. Thou hast given to me the South as well as the North, the West and the East, beneath [my sandals].

II. SILSILEH QUARRY STELA

205. In his sixth year Seti I sent an expedition of one thousand men to Silsileh to procure blocks of sandstone for his temples. He records with pride his humane treatment

b These are conventional terms, and may not apply to any particular conquests of Seti. A neighboring rock shows him in the ancient traditional style smiting the southern enemy, while the viceroy of Kush adores him. The latter is accompanied by the following inscription: "Fan-bearer on the king's right hand, governor of the Southern Country, king's-son, Amenemopet" (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 141, h = de Morgan, Catalogue des monuments, 28-5). This viceroy of Kush has left his name several times in this locality, e.g., on the island of Schel (ibid., 103, No. 53; also Mariette, Monuments divers, No. 53). Farther up the river he has left a considerable inscription (Sayce, Recueil, 16, 170 ff.). "Above the inscription is a representation of the Pharaoh in the act of slaying an enemy; behind him is a chariot drawn by two horses which are galloping away from the scene of combat, while to the left is a standing human figure. On the left-hand side of the last seven lines of hieroglyphic text are three vertical lines of inscription recording the name of Amen-mapet, the royal son of Kush, to the left of which again is the figure of a man kneeling on one knee and holding a 'fan' in his hand." This is Amenemopet, as the inscription beside him shows: the long inscription referred to contains only conventional praise of Seti I, in which occur the phrases: "Valiant king, making his boundary to the limits in the 'Horns of the Earth.' . . . hacking up their town . . . . The Southerners come to him in obeisance, and the Northerners with prostrations."

IV. MORTUARY TEMPLE AT THEBES (KURNA)

211. Besides the quarry inscription at Gebelèn, Seti has recorded the erection of his beautiful mortuary temple at Kurna in a series of dedication inscriptions in the building itself. Several show that the temple was also dedicated to the mortuary ritual of his deceased father:

Seti's portion of the hall contains architrave inscriptions and dedications, recording the building as his work, though it was finished under his son, Ramses II. Its name was:

mortuary temple for himself, sacred to all the gods of Egypt, it was also closely identified with the mortuary cult of the remote kings of the earliest dynasties, with whose tombs in the desert behind, it was connected by a pylon and a causeway. All Egypt was conceived as participating in and contributing to this service of the gods and the early kings; hence the nomes of all Egypt are represented at its doors in personified form.

226. The first and second pylons, with all of the first and most of the second court, have perished, and with them the dedication inscriptions of the architraves. Those which remain are connected with the seven chapels devoted to the king and six great divinities, which form a row across the rear of the second hypostyle hall. In the center is Amon; on the right, Osiris, Isis, and Horus; on the left, Harakhte, Ptah, and the king himself. Thus the right is devoted to the Osirian triad, and the center and left to the three great state-gods of Thebes, Heliopolis, and Memphis, with whom is naturally associated the king himself as head of the state. The seven aisles leading to these chapels each bear inscriptions devoted to the divinity to whose chapel the respective aisle leads. These aisles pass through the first and second hypostyle, and the connecting doors between the two hypostyles bore dedications each to the divinity to whose chapel the respective aisle leads. These dedications of Seti I were erased by Ramses II, who inserted his own; only four are still legible:

aA long inscription in one of the rear chambers represents the goddess Safkhet-abui as describing the temple, but it can hardly be called a dedication or building inscription (Mariette, Abydos, I, Pl. 50, 51), being chiefly of religious significance. On the foundation ceremony in this inscription, see Brugsch (Thesaurus, VI, 1268 f.).

bHe erased the name of Seti throughout the first hypostyle (Mariette, Abydos, I, 14, 37).

cMariette, Abydos, I, Pl. 13, c, d, e. The fourth (b), not read by Mariette, 227. King Seti I, given life. He made (it) as his monument for his mother Isis, the great, the divine mother; making for her a doorway of electrum (named): "Menmare-is-Rich-in-Food."

228. This formula was repeated at each of the doors, with only the necessary change in the name of the god and the door. The recesses for the opened double doors also bore each a dedication of the chapel itself, which was six times repeated on each doorway, varying only in the name of the chapel:

229. aSeti I; he made it as his monument for his father, Horus, residing in "House (h’ t)-of-Menmare;" making for him a Great House (h’ t- c3’ t) of gold, that he may be given life.

230. In the five repetitions on this door we find in place of "Great House" above: (2) Doorway; (3) Divine Monument; (4) Great House (pr wr); (5) August Palace; and (6) Place of the Heart's Rest. In the aisle of Ptah the chapel is called: b

(1) Great House (pr wr) Adorned with Electrum; (2) Splendid Palace like the Horizon of Heaven; (3) Temple made Festive with Provisions; (4) Glorious Temple upon the Excellent Seat; (5) August Temple of Gold; (6) Great Seat by the Side of 'Rosta'.

231. The chapels themselves also bear dedications. Three c of these refer to the temple as a whole, and mention only Osiris:

232. i. He made (it) as his monument for Osiris, residing in "House (h’ t)-of-Menmare;" making for him a temple like heaven; its is furnished by Borchardt's copies. The four are dedicated to Horus, Isis, Osiris, and Harakhte. Another dedication to Amon-Re, king of gods, Harakhte, Ptah of Memphis, and Osiris is published partially by Daressy (Recueil, 21, 6). See also Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 138, b–f.

234. a making for him a temple, beautiful, pure, glorious and excellent upon the divine soil of the lords of Tazeser, the cool seat of Wennofer, the rest.

235. The dedications on the chapel doorposts refer to the individual chapels, and mention on each one only the divinity to whom the respective chapel was devoted. The six are as follows:

236. 1a. Horus. He made (it) as his monument for his father, Horus, son of Isis, residing in "House-of-Menmare;" making for him a great seat shining in the faces (of men), its door is like a great illumination, by the side of his mother, Isis, (named): "Menmare-is-the-Protector-of-His-Father."

237. 1b. in his house of millions of years; door (named): ....

2a. Isis. making for her a Great Seat, its door glittering with every splendid costly stone, its door is gilded with electrum, giving forth radiance like the sun; (named): "Menmare-is-Enduring-in-Monuments."

2b. making for her a great house — house of millions of years; (named): ....

3a. Osiris. making for him a Great Seat, over against the lord of Tazeser, a great house (pr wr), gilded with electrum, its door [expels] darkness like the sun, when he appears in the morning; (named): "Menmare-is-the-Enricher-of-Abydos."

3b. making for him a very radiant —, its doorway gilded with electrum, its door — adorned with every splendid, costly stone; (named): ....

Same as No. 1.

Mariette, Abydos, I, Pl. 18, a–f. Each dedication is double, one on each doorpost. One is fuller than the other. I have rendered the fuller form (a), adding the shorter as a variant (b).

Same as 1a, as far as "Isis." As in 1a.
4a. AMON. (Lost.)
4b. (Only fragments.)

5b. (The same.)

6a. PTAH. . . . . . making for him a Great Seat, a chapel of the august god, its door gilded with electrum (named): "Menmare-Ruler-of-Thebes-is-Great-in-Might."

238. In each of the chapel doorways is a further fivefold dedication, each formula containing a different name for the respective chapel.

239. The colonnaded hall behind the Osiris-chapel contains a series of dedications inscribed on the columns. They begin with the usual formulary as above, but continue with various designations of the temple as a whole, each beginning with "making for him," thus:

240. 1. a pure palace anew, of fine limestone of Ayan.
2. a temple anew in the glorious seat of eternity.
3. a divine palace in the place which his heart loved.
4. an august adytum in the district of the lords of Tazoser.
5. an august adytum in the nome of the lord of Tazoser.
6. a great house (h't c), a splendid seat of the lords of eternity.
7. horizon of eternity, place for performing the pleasing ceremonies in the presence.
8. a pure audience-hall, excellent forever.
9. a palace, a door of the dwellers in the Nether World.
10. the great seat of the sanctuary.
11. a pure dwelling in the precinct of Tazoser.
12. a house like the heavens, its beauty illuminating the Two Lands.
13. a glorious seat, excellent for giving jubilees to the king.
14. this monument, beautiful, pure, flourishing, and excellent.
15. the favorite place of Wennofer by the side of Tazoser.

These thirty dedications were not copied by Mariette; but from Borchardt's copies it is evident that they contain for the most part the conventional designations, and need not be repeated here. There are some repetitions.

bMariette, Abydos, I, Pl. 19, e.
241. The seventh chapel, devoted in large measure to the king, was, after all, sacred to the gods in general, as the following dedications\(^a\) show:

242. He made (it) as his monument for his fathers, the gods residing in "House-of-Menmare," making for them an august Great House \((pr\ wr)\) in my house of millions of years, my great seat beside their majesties; (named): "Menmare-Equips-Abydos."

243. The other dedication begins with the same words, and proceeds: \(making\ for\ them — — \) my door of millions of years (named): "King Menmare — — .” ™. ™.

VI. TEMPLE MODEL\(^b\) OF HELIOPOLIS

244. This unique monument was the base block of a model temple and accessory monuments executed by Seti I at Heliopolis. It shows the sockets in which were set up the side walls, the pylons, colossal statues, a pair of obelisks, and the last pair of the avenue of sphinxes between which are the steps leading up to the temple. It was clearly not an architect’s working model, but served some religious purpose in the temple, like the model tools and implements always found in the temple foundation deposit, or the model temple offered by the kings to the gods. Supplementing the model, the inscriptions on the right and left edge mention the making of a holy of holies, which by metonymy may mean an entire temple; two pylons, doorways, two "pairs," and two obelisks. Now the materials given are such as are never used for such purposes in a real temple, and the inscriptions therefore unquestionably refer to the model.

\(^{a}\)Mariette, \(Abydos, I,\) Pl. 28, e.

\(^{b}\)A single block of gritstone about 34\(\frac{1}{2}\) by 44\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches, and 9\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches thick, "discovered at a village near Cairo in 1875," now in the possession of Commander H. H. Gorringe, U. S. N. It was published by Emil Brugsch in \(Recueil,\) 7-9, Pls. III and IV, and by Gorringe in his \(Egyptian Obelisks\) (New York, 1882), Pl. XXXII.
itself and to its parts. The model itself is the “holy of holies” (shm), also called “temple” (h·t-ntr) of conglomerate; the two miniature pylons were of some costly white stone, the doorways of bronze, the flagstaves (the “pairs”) of mesdet stone, and the obelisks of diorite. These valuable materials have long since been stolen, but the base block of conglomerate has survived, because of its ordinary material.

245. Although this model, as the inscriptions show, had its own religious function, it suggests real buildings of Seti I, at Heliopolis. As a matter of fact, he did erect at least one obelisk there, which now stands in the Piazza del Popolo in Rome. But it was still uninscribed at Seti I’s death, and its present inscriptions were placed upon it by his son, Ramses II (§§ 544–49), who reserved for himself one side of the obelisk, where he states the fact. He also affirms that Seti “filled Heliopolis with obelisks.” But no others have survived. A doorpost from Heliopolis bears the following dedication:

Seti I, beloved of Shu and Tefnut; he made (it) as his monument for his father, Atum, lord of Heliopolis; making for him a gate of grit-stone, the doors thereof of cedar, wrought with —, established as an eternal work, which his majesty made, because he so much desired — — for the gods of Heliopolis.

246. The building inscriptions on the model are as follows:

[He made (it) as] his monument for his father, Re-Atum-Khepri, by making for him an august holy of holies in the likeness of the horizon of heaven, a resting-place of the two horizons, in which the lords of Heliopolis rest, like Atum — — —.

REIGN OF RAMSES II

GREAT ABYDOS INSCRIPTIONa

251. This is the longest inscription of Ramses II's reign. Together with the Kubbân Stela, it has been regarded as the most important source for his youth and early regency. It shows us the young king in his first year journeying to Thebes, b and in mentioning a statue of his father erected by Ramses on that occasion at Thebes, the narrator takes occasion to summarize the king's works in provision for his father (ll. 22–26).c

252. Ramses now sails to Abydos (ll. 26–32), where he finds Seti I's beautiful temple (Baedeker, 218–23) unfinished, and its endowments violated (ll. 32, 33). He immediately summons his court and officials (ll. 33, 34), who come in with the usual fulsome adulation demanded by court etiquette (ll. 34–40), after which Ramses announces to them his intention to complete his father's buildings (ll. 40–43), and takes a Cut on the wall of the portico behind the colonnade at the rear of the first court in the famous temple of Seti I at Abydos. The inscription is in 116 vertical lines, the first 21 of which accompany a relief and are shorter. Numerous lacunae break the text. Published by Maspero (from a copy by Devéria): Essai sur l'inscription dédicatoire du temple d'Abydos, par G. Maspero (Paris, 1867); again by Mariette in 1880 (Abydos, I, 5–9). I also had a collation of Mariette with the original for the Berlin dictionary by Borchardt.

b Whence he came is quite uncertain. Maspero (Struggle of the Nations, 387) states that he came from Ethiopia, but for this I find no evidence. On the contrary, the mention of the statue erected in Memphis (l. 22) may indicate that he came from the north.

c Ll. 1–21 contain only the dialogue between the divinities (ll. 1–17) in the relief and Ramses (ll. 18–21). The translation begins with the words of Ramses (ll. 18–21). The works summarized in ll. 22–26 are (except the statues) not yet undertaken at the time of the visit to Thebes; but, being complete at the time of the composition of this inscription, the narrator inserts the summary here, forgetting that they were not complete at the time of which he is writing.
occasion to recall to his courtiers how his father had him public­ly crowned coregent while a mere child, giving him extensive authority and a harem (ll. 43–48). He proceeds to describe his administration as coregent (ll. 48–50), and reiterates in conclusion his determination to complete his father’s buildings (ll. 51–55). Hereupon the courtiers fairly outdo themselves in a long-winded eulogy of the dutiful son (ll. 55–69). The narrator now recounts the summons to the architects, artists, and workmen, who are commissioned to complete Seti I’s temple. At the same time the king re-enacts and reorganizes his father’s endowments for the maintenance of the temple and its mortuary service (ll. 69–75).

253. When all is done, Ramses addresses his deceased father, calling attention to all these pious works for his father’s welfare in the hereafter (ll. 75–93), and showing how it will be to his father’s interest to ensure unbroken continuance of these favors, by inducing the gods, among whom he now is, to grant Ramses a long reign. Ramses assures his father that his (Seti’s) mortuary offerings shall be maintained as long as he (Ramses) continues on the throne (ll. 93–98). To this remarkable compact Seti, in reply, agrees, intercedes with the gods, and assures Ramses that the gods have decreed a him an eternal reign, and that he himself enjoys the greatest felicity because of his son’s provision for him (ll. 98–116).

254. The inscription, it will be observed, is historically very important, as well as interesting in several respects. The statements regarding Ramses’ coregency in youth are detailed and circumstantial. His appearance in public for coronation, in the presence of his father, reminds us of the

similar account of Hatshepsut's coronation (II, 215 ff.). BUT the evidence of the Karnak reliefs (§§ 123 ff.) is so conclusively against his ever having been so chosen by Seti that, like the said story of Hatshepsut's coronation, we must regard it as a fabrication. Such a fiction could hardly have been published immediately on Seti's death, and when we remember Ramses' extraordinary compact with his deceased father, the question arises whether the inscription is a later product of Ramses' reign, and his long life is the source which suggested the fiction of the compact, to which the narrator now attributes Ramses' remarkable longevity. In any case, the inscription was written after the completion of his works for his father, and after some of his foreign campaigns (l. 93).

255. The king's visit to Thebes in his first year is corroborated by an independent document in the Theban tomb of the High Priest of Amon, Nebunnef (Nb-wm-nf). A relief in this tomb shows Ramses II, accompanied by his queen, Mutnofret, and the court, addressing Osiris. Before the god is the following inscription:

256. Year 1, third month of the first season, when his majesty went north from the Southern City, having celebrated the pleasing ceremonies of his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes... Khonsu in Thebes, Beautiful Rest, and the Divine Ennead...

bAgainst this is the motive for the account of his appointment as coregent—a motive which would have been influential only immediately after his accession, when he desired to support the legitimacy of his reign.

dwelling in Thebes; at his beautiful feast of Opet (named): "Returning-Thence-with-Praise."

257. As Nebunnef was High Priest, this great feast of Amon is naturally recorded in his tomb. It is the same feast, celebrated in the month Hathor, by Thutmose III on his return from his first campaign (II, 541, 550), and, this being the first celebration of it in Ramses' reign, it naturally called him to Thebes, whose powerful priesthood he could not fail to conciliate by appearing at their temple in person on such an important occasion.

258. Returning now to our great document, we find in the relief scene preceding the long inscription that the young King Ramses II appears offering an image of the goddess Mat (Truth) to Osiris, Isis, and his deified father, Seti I. The speeches of the divinities are of solely religious interest. The speech of Ramses, which merges into the long inscription itself, is of historical importance, and begins the following translation:

Speech of Ramses

259. 18Utterance of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Usermare-Setepnere (Ramses II) in the presence of his father, Osiris: "I champion thee, like thy son, Horus; I have done according to [his] doing. I repeat for thee monuments in the necropolis, I double offerings for thy ka. I answer on behalf of my father, he being in the Nether World (Dw), in the place — —, for the son becomes the champion of his father, like Horus, when he championed his father, forming him that fashioned him, making to live the name of him that begat him, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Ramses (II), given life, like Re, forever, beloved of Osiris, lord of Abydos."

statues of his father; King Menmare (Seti I) was he; one in Thebes, another in Memphis, in the temple which he built for them, an addition to the beauty of that which was in Abydos of Tower, which he loved, which his heart has desired since he was on earth, the soil of Wennofer (Osiris). He repeated the restoration of the monuments of his father, which are in the cemetery, making his name live, fashioning his statues, giving offerings abiding for his august ka — his house, supplying his altars, upbuilding that which was fallen in the house which he loved, erecting the seats in his temple, laying its walls, setting up its doorways, erecting the ruins in the seat of his father, in the district of Osiris the double façade made therein, in everything which the Great in Victory, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Ramses (II), given life, made for his father, Osiris, the King Menmare (Seti I), triumphant. He established for him possessions, supplied with food of the being kindly disposed toward him that begat him, his feelings inclining toward him that brought him up.

Ramses Sails from Thebes to Abydos

261. On one of these days it happened in the year 1, the third month of the first season, the twenty-third day, at the feast after the return of Amon to Karnak, that he (the king) came forth, favored with might and victory from Amon-Atum in Thebes, and he rewarded him with myriads of years, even to the duration of Re in heaven. Hear — exalted forever and ever. He raised his hand, bearing the censer, to the horizon of him who abides in the West, his offering being excellent and acceptable to his father, the lord of love. His majesty departed from the Southern City Re.

Ramses Relates His Appointment as Coregent

267. "I came forth from Re, [although] ye say, from Menmare (Seti I), who brought me up. The All-Lord himself made me great, while I was a child, until I reigned. He gave to me the land while I was in the egg; the great smelled the earth before me, when I was installed as eldest son, as hereditary prince upon the throne of Keb. "Place for him the crown upon his head," so spake he concerning me, while he was upon earth. "Let him organize this land, let him administer —, let him show his face to the people," so spake he because the love of me was so great in his bowels. He equipped me with household women, a royal harem, like the beauties of the palace, he chose for me wives, after ——, taking the concubines of —— his —, seizing — and female companions."

Ramses Describes His Administration as Coregent

Ramses Prays His Father to Intercede in His Behalf

Life and prosperity shall be with thee, — truth, might, and joy of heart, for him who is rich in years. 102Thine shall be might and victory, O thou great in victory; health shall be for thy limbs like (those of) Re in heaven. Joy and rejoicing shall be in thy every abode, O king, defending Egypt, binding the barbarians, spending the eternity 103 of thy lifetime as King of Upper Egypt, and as King of Lower Egypt, as Atum flourishes at rising and setting. Behold, I say to Re b with a b A similar prayer of Seti's is found at Kurna (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 150, a), in which he addresses Amon thus: "Grant thou to him (Ramses II) eternity, that he may make my name to live, by reason of the command that comes out of thy mouth." Here we see the same compact as in the Abydos inscription.

loving heart: ‘Grant to him\textsuperscript{a} eternity upon earth \textsuperscript{104}like Khepri.’ I have repeated to Osiris when I entered before him: ‘Double thou for him the duration of thy son, Horus.’ Behold, Re said in the horizon of heaven: ‘Grant eternity, everlastingness, myriads of years \textsuperscript{105}of royal jubilees for the son of his body, the beloved Meriamon-Ramses, given life, doer of excellent things.’ Atum has decreed to thee his duration as king. Might and victory shall be united \textsuperscript{106}behind thee. Thoth writes them at the side of the All-Lord, and the Great Ennead say: ‘Re, in his barque, lord of the morning-barque, collects them for him; his eye sees \textsuperscript{107}that which thou hast so excellently done. When he sails the heavens with the wind every day, great joy is behind him, because he remembers thy beauty; until Atum \textsuperscript{108}sets in the land of the West, thy love is in his body every day.’ Behold, Wennofer is lord of triumph (\textit{m\textsuperscript{3}c\textsuperscript{4}-hrw}) through that which thy majesty has done in the place of truth. I [Horus]\textsuperscript{b} awake him at the reminder of thy goodness; my heart hath joy indeed, because of the eternity which he has decreed for thee. Behold, I have received the things which thou hast given to me: my bread and my water with gladness of heart, breath \textsuperscript{110}reaches my nostrils, because of the deeds of a son, whose heart chooses to protect, free from negligence, knowing that which is seemly. Thou hast repeated monument on monument for Osiris under my authority in the presence \textsuperscript{111}in the midst of Abydos (\textit{Nf\textsuperscript{w}-wr}). I am magnified because of all that which thou hast done for me; I am placed at the head of the abode of the dead, I am transformed, I have become a god more \textsuperscript{112}beautiful than before, since thy heart has inclined to me, while I am in the nether world. I am thy true father, who am a god; I have mingled with the gods, following Aton; I \textsuperscript{113}know him who dwells in the barque — — like one in — — who is in — —. \textsuperscript{114}He [remembers] thy beauty — — —. Behold, thou hast a long life, Re has decreed to thee — — —, forever, like — — —. Thou art the living — of Atum, thy every word \textsuperscript{115}comes to pass like (that of) the All-Lord. Thou art the favorite egg of Khepri, the water of a god [which came forth] from him. KUBBÂN STELA

282. This document records the attempt of Ramses II to supply with water the desert road leading from the Nile at Kubbân to the gold-bearing regions on the east in the great Wadi c'Alâki. It is similar to the records of like attempts by Seti I at Redesiyeh (§§ 162-98), with which it should be compared. Seti I, indeed, had made a futile attempt to find water on this same road, having dug a well there 200 feet deep, as our document informs us (l. 21). In spite of this fact, Ramses makes another attempt, and sends out the viceroy of Kush for the purpose. He presently reports success at a depth of only 20 feet.

283. A statement in the ceremonious address of the court (ll. 13-19) has always been regarded as of great historical importance. It affirms that Ramses had held important official positions in the land since he was a lad in the tenth year of his age (l. 17). But this statement, we should remember, is found in the midst of a fulsome eulogy abounding aThis stela was discovered in the ruins on the south of the village of Kubbân, by Prisse d'Avennes. It is now in the château of the Count St. Ferriol at Uriage, near Grenoble. It was published by Prisse (Monuments égyptiens, XXI), but his text is excessively incorrect. The first twenty-five lines were then much more accurately published by Chabas (Les inscriptions des mines d'or), and again without change by Rheinisch (Chrestomathie, Taf. 10). The last fourteen lines (ll. 25-38) have lost the first two-thirds of their length. These have been republished with collation of the Louvre squeeze by Virey (Recueil XIV, 97, 98); his restorations are mostly gratuitous, and often grammatically impossible. An exhaustive copy of the original is very much needed.

in the most absurd exaggerations. It is probable, in view of these statements, however, that Ramses early developed administrative ability, which he was given opportunity to exercise while still very young. This was doubtless a privilege granted to many princes of the royal house; it does not indicate that Ramses came to the throne while a child, nor do the courtiers here make any such claim, though their words have been so misunderstood.b

284. A relief above the inscription shows Ramses II offering incense to "Horus, lord of Bek (B²k)," and "wine to Min residing in the mountain," resulting in the usual promises from the god. Then follows below the long inscription:

Introduction

285. ¹Year 3, first month of the second season, day 4, under the majesty of Horus: Mighty Bull, Beloved of Truth; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Defender of Egypt, Binder of the Barbarians; Golden Horus: Rich in years, Great in Victory; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Setepnere; Son of Re: Meriamon-Ramses (II), given life, forever and ever, beloved of Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, and presider over Karnak; ²shining upon the Horus-throne of the living, like his father, Re, every day; Good God, lord of the Southland, Horus of Edfu, of brilliant plumage, beautiful hawk of electrum. He protects Egypt with his wing, making shade for the people, as a wall of might and victory. When he went forth ³from the body, ⁴he was (already) terrible for capture, while his might was extending his boundaries; color was given to his limbs like the might of Montu. (He is) the double lord, ⁵on the day of whose birth there was exultation in heaven; the gods said: "Our seed is in him." ⁴The goddesses said: "He hath come forth from us to exercise the kingship of Re." ⁶Amon said: "I am Irsu, I have put justice into its place." The earth is established, heaven is satisfied, the divine ennead is content with his qualities, the Bull, mighty against Kush the wretched, smiting the rebels as far as the land of the Negro. His hoofs trample the Troglydites, his horn gores into them; his fame is mighty in Khenthennofer; as for his terror, it has reached Karoy (K 3 r y). His name circulates among all lands, because of the victories which his two hands have wrought. Gold comes forth from the mountain at his name, like (that of) his father, Horus, lord of Bek (B 3 -k 3 ), great in love in the southern countries, like Horus in the land of Miam (M 3 3 m 3 m), lord of Bohen (Bwbn); the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Setepnere; Son of Re, of his body, Lord of Diadems: Meriamon-Ramses (II), given life forever and ever, like his father, Re, every day.

Investigation of the Land of Akita

286. Now, when his majesty was in Memphis, performing the pleasing ceremonies of his fathers, all the gods of South and North, according as they gave to him might and victory, and long life of myriads of years; on one of these days it came to pass that, lo, his majesty was sitting upon a great throne of electrum, diademed with the double-feathered crown, recounting the countries, from which gold is brought, and devising plans for digging wells on a road lacking in water, after hearing said that there was much gold in the country of Akita (3-k 3 -y-t 3 ), whereas the road thereof was very lacking in water. If a few of the caravaneers of the gold-washing went thither, it was only half of them that arrived there, (for) they died of thirst on the road, together with the asses which they drove before them. There was not found for them their necessary supply of drink, in ascending and descending, from the water of the skins. Hence no gold was brought from this country for lack of water.

Court is Summoned

287. Said his majesty to the wearer of the royal seal, who was at his side: "Call the princes of the court, his majesty would counsel with them concerning this country, (how) I may take the necessary measures." They were immediately brought before the Good God, their hands uplifted to his ka, acclaiming and smelling the earth before his beautiful face. One (=the king) told them the character of this country, counseling with them concerning the plan of opening a well upon the road thereof.

Address of the Court

288. They said before his majesty: "Thou art like Re in all that thou doest; that which thy heart wishes comes to pass. If thou desiriest a matter in the night, in the morning it quickly comes to pass. We have been beholding a multitude of thy marvels, since thy appearance as king of the Two Lands; we have not heard, neither have our eyes seen, (yet) do they come to pass as they are. As for everything that comes out of thy mouth, it is like the words of Harakhte. Thy tongue is a pair of balances, more accurate are thy two lips than the correct weight of Thoth. What is that which thou knowest not? Who is the finisher of it like thee? Where is the place, which thou hast not seen? There is no country which thou hast not trodden. All matters pass through thy ears, since thou hast exercised authority over this land. Thou didst make plans while thou wast (still) in the egg, in thy office of child of a prince. The affairs of the Two Lands were told thee, while thou wert a child wearing the curl; no monument was executed, which was not under thy authority; there was no commission without thy knowledge. Thou wast chief of the army while thou wast "descending;" the workmen were unable to carry in the skins sufficient water for the round trip.

aSee the same idea in l. 22. This method of flattery by courtiers is not unique. The same assumption of a mysterious origin of completed works of the king is found regarding Hatshepsut's obelisks, and the statue of Amenhotep III erected by Amenhotep, son of Hapi.

If thou sayest to the water: ‘Come upon the mountain,’ the flood comes forth quickly after thy word, for thou art Re in limbs, and Khepri with his true form. Thou art the living image on earth of thy father, Atum of Heliopolis. Taste is in thy mouth, intelligence in thy heart; the seat of thy tongue is the shrine of truth, the god sits upon thy two lips. Thy words come to pass every day, thy heart is made into the likeness of (that of) Ptah, the creator of handicrafts. Thou art forever, it shall be done by thy plans, all that thou sayest is heard, O Sovereign, our lord.”

Statement of the Viceroy of Kush

289. “As for the country of Akita, this is said concerning it,” said the king’s-son of Kush the wretched, concerning it before his majesty, “that it has been in this manner lacking in water, since the time of the god. They die therein of thirst, and every earlier king desired to open a well therein, but did not succeed. King Menmare (Seti I) did the like, and caused to be dug a well of 120 cubits depth in his time. It is (however), forsaken on the road, (for) no water came out of it. (But) if thou thyself say to thy father Hapi, the father of the gods: ‘Let water be brought upon the mountain,’ he will do according to all that thou hast said, like all thy designs, which come to pass before us, (although) they have not been heard in conversation; because thy fathers, all the gods love thee, more than any king, who has been since Re.”

observed that the courtiers here (ll. 16, 17) make no claim that Ramses became king at ten years of age, as is so often stated. They affirm no more than the assumption of great trusts by Ramses at a very early age; there is no hint of coregency.

aThis is the same idea as in the Memphite system; ideas come from the heart (=mind). See my “Philosophy of a Memphite Priest” (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 39, 39 ff.).

bThis notion is also found in the Memphite system (ibid., pp. 46-48).

cIn the address of Ptah to Ramses II (Abu Simbel Stela, Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 194, ll. 14, 15), Ptah says: “I cause the mountains to shape for thee great, mighty, lofty monuments; I cause the highlands to fashion for thee [all] splendid costly stones.”

Ramses Determines to Dig a Well in Akita

290. Said his majesty to these princes: "How true is all that which ye have said — that no water has been dug in this country since the time of the god, as ye say. (But) I will open a well there, furnishing water every day as in [the valley of] the Nile, at command of my father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, and all the gods of Nubia, according as their heart is satisfied with the things desired. I will cause it to be said in the land — — — 25— —."

291. [Then these princes] praised their lord, smelling the ground, throwing themselves upon their bellies in the presence, exulting to the height of heaven.

Said his majesty to the chief king's-scribe —: "26—— of the road to Akita. Let a month become a day, when [thou] sendest 27——."

A Letter Announcing Success from the Viceroy of Kush

292. One came, bearing a letter from the king's-son of Kush the wretched, saying: 32" — — — [The well is finished]; that which thy majesty spake with his own mouth has come to pass; the water has come forth from it at 12 cubits, being 4 cubits therein in depth. 33—— it outside, as a god does, in satisfying the heart with that a That is, let a month of preparation become as short as a day.

b This scribe must have communicated the commission to the viceroy of Kush, for it is the latter who executes the task in Akita, as is shown by ll. 28 and 31.

THE ASIATIC WAR

294. Ramses II, with his two predecessors, inherited a very dangerous situation in Syria. Seti I had not succeeded in relieving that situation, and upon Ramses II fell the critical task of confronting and checking the southward advance of the Hittites, in their process of absorbing the Egyptian conquests in Syria. They were the most powerful people which Egypt had ever met, and the conflict lasted nearly twenty years, during which we may discern three periods. In the first of these we find Ramses, after having pushed his Phoenician boundary northward to Beyrut, marching down the Orontes against the Hittites at Kadesh. The remarkable battle which followed was without beneficial result. The second period finds Ramses battling for the recovery of Palestine, where there had arisen a general revolt, undoubtedly incited by the Hittites. This revolt suppressed, the third period finds him again in the Hittite country, conquering Naharin as far north as Tunip, where his progress was such that the Hittites were willing to resign all projects of further conquest in Syria and negotiate a permanent compact in a treaty, in arranging which no mention of the boundary\textsuperscript{a} adopted is made.

Or: “They (the reports) were agreeable to [the heart of the king].”

295. The materials for the three periods are very scanty, except for the battle of Kadesh and the treaty. These materials are as follows:\textsuperscript{b}

I. Beginning of the Hittite War.

1. First campaign: three illegible stelæ on the Nahr-el-Kelb near Beyrut (§ 297).
2. Second campaign, battle of Kadesh:
   a) Poem on the battle of Kadesh (§§ 305-15).
   b) Official record of the battle of Kadesh (§§ 316-27).
   c) Reliefs of the battle of Kadesh (§§ 328-51).

II. Palestinian revolt.

1. Reconquest of southern Palestine: a relief at Karnak showing the storming of Askalon (§§ 353-55).
2. Reconquest of northern Palestine: a short list of towns taken in the eighth year (§ 356); a relief at the Ramesseum, of the storming of Deper (§§ 356-62); a relief in the Hauran (§ 358).

III. Close of the Hittite War.

1. Conquest of Naharin: a small fragment at the Ramesseum, from an inscription describing the capture of Tunip (§§ 363-65); two short lists of conquered countries (§ 366).

I. BEGINNING OF THE HITTITE WAR

296. Like his great predecessors, Seti I and Thutmose III, Ramses II began his operations for the conquest of northern Syria by first securing the coast and then moving against the interior, where for the first time he comes into contact with the Hittites.

I. FIRST CAMPAIGN

297. Ramses II's first campaign was directed along the Phœnician coast, and extended as far as Beyrut, near which he erected a stela on the Nahr el-Kelb (Dog River) in his fourth year. Another stela, dated "year 2" a is called uncertain by Lepsius, b and is probably to be read "year 10;" for the first c is clearly 4; and there was but one campaign before that of the "year 5," d against Kadesh. A third stela is without date. These stelae e are so weathered that the records of the campaigns which they doubtless contained, are most totally illegible. f The location of the stela near the northern boundary of the conquests of Ramses' father, Seti I, is significant. They of course mark the advance boundary of Ramses II's northern conquests.

II. SECOND CAMPAIGN: THE BATTLE OF KADESH

298. This battle, in which Ramses meets the Hittites for the first time, forms the culmination of Ramses II's second

Syrian campaign, and furnishes nearly all we know of the beginning of his Syrian war. It is of especial interest, being the first battle in history of which we may follow the tactics and the disposition of both armies.\(^a\) About the end of \(^a\)Rev. H. G. Tomkins' study of this battle (Transactions of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, VII, 390 ff.) was unfortunately made without all the data to be gained from the texts, but shows good use of what he had. Failure to observe the sequence of events made any clear outline of movements impossible. Maspero's account of it in his one volume, Histoire, is excellent, but this account was altered in his...

April, Ramses marched northward from the fortress of Tharu on the Egyptian frontier, with an army of probably about 20,000 men, in four divisions: the division of Amon, which formed the advance, under the immediate command of the Pharaoh; and the divisions of Re, of Ptah, and of Sutekh, which followed that of Amon in the order given. Marching through Palestine, and along the Phoenician coast road, Ramses passed into Amor, where he formed his van of picked men, on the "shore in the land of Amor" (Poem, l. 18). Thereupon he left the coast, perhaps marching up the valley of the Litâny, and reached the last elevation on the east side of the Orontes, where the high valley (the Bukâ'a) drops to the level of the plain around Kadesh, about a day's march south of it. Here he camped (Poem, ll. 11, 12; Record, l. 2), without finding trace of the enemy. He therefore pushed on the next day, and as he reached the ford just south of Shabtuna, later Ribleh, a small town, some seven and a half miles south of Kadesh, he was informed by two Shasu-Bedwin, sent out by the Hittite king for this purpose, that the Asiatics had retreated far northward to the district of Aleppo, beyond Tunip (Record, ll. 2–6). With the division of Amon, therefore, Ramses crossed to the west side of the Orontes at Shabtuna (Poem, l. 12), leaving the other three divisions on the east side, dis-

*This word, which I render "division," is in Egyptian "army" (mšc), but it was probably about the size of a modern army division (see p. 153, note).

*bThe route is uncertain in Palestine (see Müller, Asien und Europa, 220), but must have been along the coast when he reached southern Phœnicia. It is barely possible, therefore, that Ramses embarked his army, after leaving Tharu, and landed at some Phœnecian port.

tributed along the road to the south. The division of Re, however, soon crossed at the same ford, with about a mile and a half between its van and the rear of the division of Amon\(^a\) (Fig. 9). With these two divisions following him in a long line, Ramses continued rapidly northward, leaving the other two (Ptah and Sutekh) marching slowly south of Shabtuna, till there was a wide gap between the two halves of his army.

299. Meanwhile the Asiatics (Poem, l. 17), with an army of probably 20,000 men, the combined forces of the north Syrian princes, under the Hittite king, together with a large proportion of mercenaries from states in Asia Minor, adjacent or subject to the Hittites\(^b\)—all these were concealed on the northwest of Kadesh, hidden from the Egyptians by the city. The Hittite king now uses the city to mask his movements, and as Ramses pushes northward on the west side of Kadesh, the Hittite commander shifts his position rapidly eastward and southward,\(^c\) all the time keeping the \(^b\)Poem, ll. 1, 2, 13–16, and 24; Record, ll. 6, 7. The language of the inscriptions puts the Syrian contingents in the same category with those of Asia Minor, but it is clear that the latter are only mercenaries, called "warriors" (hw-hy-r), i.e., professional soldiers, who are in the service of the Hittite king for hire (Poem, l. 16), under their own native commanders, whom the Poem represents as their princes. The Syrians, on the other hand, are real allies of the Hittites, and their kings are really present.

\(^c\)No direct statement of this movement is made in the sources, but after stating that the Hittites are "on the northwest of Kadesh" (Poem, l. 16, 17), while Ramses is still south of Kadesh, they further state that the Asiatics emerged for the attack "from the southern side of Kadesh" (Poem, l. 20; Record, l. 20), when Ramses is in camp northwest of Kadesh. The Hittites could not have shifted from the northwest of Kadesh to the south of it, along the west side, for here Ramses was marching northward. They must have passed eastward and southward on the east side of the city (Fig. 10), keeping themselves constantly "behind Kadesh," from Ramses' point of view. They could, of course, have passed through Kadesh if the gates were in such positions as to permit. But as they crossed the Orontes city between him and the advance of the Egyptians. To do this, he was obliged to transfer his army across the Orontes. Ramses, now quite unsuspicious, advances alone with only his household troops, and deliberately goes into camp northwest of the city (Poem, ll. 12 and 21; Record, ll. 7, 8; Reliefs, §336, ll. 3, 4; Fig. 10). Thus the Asiatics, with a strong fortress on their right for refuge in case of defeat, by their remarkably skilful maneuvering, have gained a position on Ramses' right flank, which, properly utilized, means his destruction.

300. As the division of Amon comes up and is settling in camp around the tent of Ramses (Reliefs, §331), an Egyptian scout brings in two of the enemy's scouts, who are beaten (Reliefs, §330) into confessing the proximity of the foe (Record, §321). Thoroughly alarmed, Ramses commands the vizier to order up the troops from the south of Shabtuna (§324), and the vizier, besides sending a horseman to hasten them, probably goes also himself in a chariot (Record, §324; Reliefs, §§333 f.). Meanwhile the threatening catastrophe becomes a fact: remaining with his infantry, the king of the Hittites sends his chariotry (Poem, ll. 18, 19) to the attack; they "came forth from the southern side of Kadesh, and they cut through the division of Re in its middle, while they were marching, without knowing, and without being drawn up for battle" (Poem, §311). Totally unprepared, caught thus in marching order, the Egyptians fled northward a toward Ramses' camp (Record, l. 21), while a messenger was sent to acquaint him with the disaster. But aThis is evidently the northern half of the division of Re, which thus retreats; the southern half apparently fell back southward on the marching division of Ptah.

the Hittite chariots, which made the attack, pressed the retreating Egyptians northward so rapidly that, while Ramses was sitting in his tent chiding his officers for their ignorance of the enemy's whereabouts, some members of the royal family were driven in headlong flight over the western barricade into the camp by the most advanced of the Hittite chariots (Record, ll. 19, 20; Reliefs, §332, a, b). These first hostile intruders were dragged from their chariots by the Egyptian foot in the camp and slain. The fleeing troops of the division of Re now arrive and sweep the camping division of Amon into panic and flight, while the advancing Hittite chariots rapidly enfold Ramses between their extended wings (Poem, l. 23; Record, l. 22; Reliefs, §336, a, ll. 7, 8, and scene), being 2,500 in number, and representing a force of 7,500 men. Ramses, having with him only his bodyguard, now saw the extended wings of the enemy close completely around him on four sides, seeming like four bodies of chariots (Poem, l. 23; Record, ll. 21, 22; Reliefs, §336, a, l. 8). For the moment, he is thus isolated, even from the troops which had accompanied him to the north of Kadesh.

301. On the west side, where the royal fugitives have just bThese are the northern portion of the division of Re. As the Hittites succeeded in cutting directly through this division, the southern portion of it should be represented on the plan (Fig. 12) somewhere south of Kadesh between Kadesh and the division of Ptah; but as their position succeeding the attack is quite uncertain, I have not attempted to indicate it.

cThis enfolding or flanking movement is clearly evident in the relief, where the Hittite chariots, with three men in each, may be easily distinguished from the Egyptian, which carry only two. See also Fig. 12.

dIt is this circumstance which has given rise to the proud boast, so often repeated in the Poem and in the Reliefs, that he was utterly alone, and won the battle single-handed.

eThey can be seen thus in the relief scene (Battle of Kadesh, Pl. V); see also Fig. 12.
been driven in, the enemy is already pressing into the camp. On the east the enfolding wing of the enemy is evidently weakest. Ramses did not hesitate an instant, but immediately rallied his household troops and charged into the invaders of his camp, in the endeavor to cut his way out, to rejoin his southern divisions. This unexpected onset gained him a moment's respite, during which he perceived how the enemy was massed against him on the south, and he therefore turned against the enemy's thin line on their extreme right, before they should have time to strengthen it after their rapid advance northward. He charged eastward into the scanty opposing line of chariots so impetuously that he drove them into the Orontes north of the city. In so doing he forsook his camp, which immediately fell into the hands of the enemy. It is unquestionably the rich plunder in Ramses' camp which diverts the Hittites for the moment and saves Ramses from being pushed into the river in his turn.

302. A body of troops, which it is difficult to connect with any of Ramses' four divisions, now unexpectedly arrives and begins his rescue. They are called "recruits (n'ryn), and are said to arrive from Amor. They enter the camp and slay the plundering Hittites to the last man (§ 340).

aIt is this episode which the reliefs depict so vivaciously in the battle scene (§ 335).

bBattle of Kadesh, 37, 38. Since reading my account of the incident, Eduard Meyer suggests to me that these troops may be reinforcements from the coast, which have landed at one of the Phoenician harbors, far enough south to be in Amor. It is not possible that these are infantry reinforcements belonging to the troops south of Shabtuna, although they are spoken of as arriving "from Amor," for the text mentioning them clearly distinguishes them from the divisions of Re and Ptah. But the course of the battle and the disposition of the troops are from this point quite uncertain. Ramses' desperate assault with his bodyguard is the subject and the raison d'être of all these documents, and they depict the whole victory as consisting in this one heroic incident. This over, the subsequent course of the battle between the opposing forces, in which the king is no longer so conspicuous, is of little importance to any of the three documents.
The fleeing troops of Ramses now rallied, and together with the "recruits" just mentioned, the Egyptian force engaged was no longer a mere handful.

303. It is apparently at the head of these forces that Ramses now charges six times into the mass of the Hittite chariotry that lies between him and the reinforcements approaching from the south, and brings the enemy to a stand. The Hittite king now sent in an additional thousand chariots from his reserves. Ramses has maintained himself for some three hours and at this juncture, while he is holding his own against fearful odds, the vizier arrives with the division of Ptah, and coming in from the south, quite unexpectedly strikes the Asiatics in the rear. After Ramses' stubborn stand this unforeseen blow in the rear quickly decides the contest, and the Hittite chariotry breaks and flees into the city. Caught between the closing lines of the Egyptians, some of them were taken prisoners and many slain; and the Hittite king was forced to see the day, begun so auspiciously for him, now lost, without being able to throw in against the Egyptian chariots the 8,000 or 9,000 foot which for some reason he held in reserve to the end on the other shore.

304. Whether Ramses attempted an assault upon this Asiatic infantry or not, is a question upon which our documents throw no light. The poem claims that there was another battle on the next day, which is extremely doubtful. In any case, it is clear that Kadesh is not taken, and Ramses,

\(a\). Poem on the Battle of Kadesh\(^c\)

305. This poem, long called the "Poem of Pentaur," is our most important document for a study of the battle of Kadesh. It is, fortunately for us, introduced by a sober and careful prose account of Ramses' departure from Egypt, his march to Kadesh, and the position of his four divisions up to the moment of the Asiatic attack. Supplemented by the texts are of two kinds: hieroglyphic and hieratic. The hieroglyphic text has been found in three copies on temple walls: at Luxor (Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, IV, 232–48; Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, II, 40–42; lower ends, Daressy, Revue égyptologique, IX, 58); Karnak (Rougé, ibid., IV, 206–31;

Brugsch, ibid., II, 29–32; Mariette, Karnak, 48–51); and Abydos (Mariette, Abydos, II, 4, 5). All these originals are excessively fragmentary, especially the one at Abydos, of which only the lower ends of the vertical lines have survived.
Of the publications the Karnak copies of Brugsch and Mariette are so incomplete as to be unusable, and Rougé's copies are neither accurate nor exhaustive. Besides the above publications, I had a collation of Abydos by Borchardt, and photographs of Karnak also by Borchardt, for which I am indebted to the Berlin dictionary.
Of the hieratic text there are two papyri, both belonging to the same roll; Papyrus Raifet, containing only one page of ten lines (published by Rougé, Recueil, I, and Papyrus Sallier III (select Papyrus I, 24–34), containing eleven pages. Raifet precedes Sallier III, but the beginning is lost. I arranged all the texts in parallel columns, and this quadruplex was then carefully collated with the original Papyrus Sallier III, in the British Museum, by Professor Erman. The texts were once similarly put together by E. de Rougé and published by J. de Rougé (Revue égypto-logique, III–IX), but without the Abydos copy, the lower part of Luxor, or a collation of the original Papyrus Sallier III. The addition of Abydos has filled a considerable number of lacunae, and the collation of Sallier III has likewise cleared up many difficulties. As a long passage is misplaced in the hieratic text, and it lacks also the beginning (ten lines), it was necessary to adopt the line numbering from the hieroglyphic for which the Luxor text was chosen. All passages on movements connected with the battle are published in my Battle of Kadesh.
official record of the battle (§§ 316 ff.), we are able to trace in it all Ramses' movements, immediately before and leading up to the battle.

The discussion of the poem as a literary composition does not fall within the scope of this volume.a

Introduction

306. bBeginning of the victory of King Usermare-Setepnere (Ramses II), [who is given life], forever, which he achieved in the land of Kheta (Hti²) and Naharin (N-h-ry-n), in the land of Arvad (Y-r²-\text{-}tw), c in Pedes (P-y-d²-s²), in the Derden (D²-r-d-ny), in the land of aMesa (M²-s²), in the land of Kelekesh ([K]²-r²-[k]y-\text{-}s²-c, sic!), —, Carchemish (K-[r²]-k-my-s²), Kode (Kdy), the land of Kadesh (Kdš), in the land of Ekereth (?-k²-r²-t), and Mesheneth (Mw-\text{-}s²-n-t).

Preparations and March to the Frontier at Tharu

307. Behold, his majesty prepared his infantry and his chariots, the Sherden e (S²-r²-dy-n²) of the captivity of his majesty from the bThe conventional phrase for beginning a literary composition.

cThis location of the battle in all these lands is probably a loose way of indicating that the land in which it took place was then in the possession of these nationalities. Of the old Syrian enemies of Egypt, we see in this list (also ll. 13–15 and 24): Naharin, Arvad, Carchemish, Kode, Kadesh, Nuges, Ekereth (Ugarit of Amarna Letters), Aleppo, and perhaps Mesheneth. The others, Kheta, Pedes, Derden, Mesa, Kelekesh, Kezweden, and Luka (or Lukat), are the Hittites and their neighbors in Asia Minor. Of the latter the Luka are almost certainly the Lycians, the Kelekesh, probably the Cilicians, the Derden, perhaps the Dardanians, and the Mesa, the Mysians. Kezweden was a part of the Hittite kingdom. The remnant is entirely uncertain, though many identifications have been proposed. See Müller's treatment (Asien und Europa, 334 f. and 355 ff.), and Hall (Annals of British School at Athens, VIII, 157).

dHymn of praise of the king's valor.

eEarliest mention of these mercenaries in an Egyptian document, although they were used at the close of the Eighteenth Dynasty, as shown by Amarna Letters, (ed. Winckler) where they were called Shirdana. They are identified with the Sardinians (Müller, Asien und Europa, 372 ff., where the Shirdana, of the Amarna Letters, are still unknown).
victories of his sword they gave the plan of battle. His majesty proceeded northward, his infantry and his chariotry being with him. He began the goodly way, to march. Year 5, the second month of the third season (tenth month), on the ninth day, his majesty passed the fortress of Tharu (T-rw) [like] Montu when he goes forth. Every country trembled before him, [fear] was in their hearts; all the rebels came bowing down for fear of the fame of his majesty, when his [army] came upon the narrow road, being like one who is upon the highway of—.

March from Tharu to the Region of Kadesh

308. Now, after many days after this, behold, his majesty was in "Usermare-Meriamon," the city of cedar. His majesty proceeded northward, and he then arrived at the highland of Kadesh (Kdš). Then his majesty, L. P. H., marched before, like his father, Montu lord of Thebes, and crossed over the channel

a Lacuna of uncertain length.
b Compare Uni, l. 19 (I, 312).
c Lit., "took the head of the goodly way," a phrase regularly used when a king sets out on an enterprise, like Queen Hatshepsut's expedition to Punt, Amenhotep III's wild cattle hunt, or Amenhotep IV's inspection of the Amarna boundaries (II, 960, l. 6).
d About the end of April.
e Lacuna of uncertain length.

%f* This word (g-wr) is a little uncertain; the meaning given is that of Brugsch, who states (Dictionnaire géographique, 995) that it designates here the narrow road between the Mediterranean and the lake of Serbonis. The meaning fits this passage well, but there is only one other example of the word (which is not decisive). Müller (Asien und Europa, 216) refers it above to the narrow way in the valley (Buka a) between the Lebanons, but the "many days" march leading to the Lebanon region is still in the future (ll. 11, 12), not in the past, as Müller states (ibid., 216, n. 3).
g Papyrus Raifet begins here.
h Some unknown city named after the king, and apparently reached after the departure from the coast. Müller places it near southern Lebanon (Asien und Europa, 273, 7).
i Lacuna of uncertain length, containing of course, some reference to the arrival among the cedars of Lebanon.
j This highland is "south of Kadesh," according to the Record (l. 2), and as he crosses to the west side of Orontes later on (l. 12), where the battle took place, the highland must be some hill on the east side. The plain between Orontes and Anti-Lebanon is here some twenty miles wide (Palestine Exploration Fund Quarterly Report, 1881, 166), and the highland referred to is that of Kamuf at el-Harmel (Fig. 7 and Battle of Kadesh, 19–21).
of the Orontes\(^a\) (\(\text{r}-\text{n-t}\)), there being with him the first division of Amon\(^b\) (named): “Victory-of-King-Usermare-Setepnere-L.-P.-H.”

\textbf{The Coalition of the Prince of Kheta}

\textbf{309.} When his majesty, L. P. H., reached the city,\(^c\) behold, \(^d\)the wretched, vanquished chief of Kheta (\(\text{H}t\)) had come, having gathered together all countries from the ends of the sea to the land of Kheta, which came entire: the Naharin (\(\text{N}-\text{h-ry-n}\)) likewise, and Arvad (\(\text{r}-\text{ry-t}\)), \(^e\)Mesa (\(\text{M}-\text{sw}\)), Keshkesh (\(\text{K}\)-\(\text{k}\)), \(^c\)Kelekesh (\(\text{K}-\text{k}-\text{ky-k}3\)), Luka (\(\text{Rw-k}\)), Kezweden (\(\text{K}-\text{g}-\text{w}-\text{dn}\)), Carchemish (\(\text{K}-\text{ry-k}3\)), Kode (\(\text{K}3\)), the entire land of Nuges (\(\text{N}-\text{g-s}\)), Mesheneth (\(\text{M}-\text{s}-\text{n}\)), and Kadesh (\(\text{K}d\)).

\(^d\)He left not a country which was not brought, togethether with his chiefs\(^f\) who were with him, every man bringing his chariots, an exceeding great multitude, without its like. They covered the mountains and the valleys; they were like grasshoppers with their multitudes. \(^g\)He left not silver nor gold\(^g\) in his land (but) he plundered it of all its possessions and gave to every country, in order to bring them with him to battle.

\(^a\)Compare the same phrase on Amenhotep II’s Syrian campaign (II, 784, l. 4). This is the crossing at the ford south of Shabtuna, where the Pharaoh was met by the two Shasu-Bedwin, with the false report (Record, II, 2, 3).

\(^b\)The rest of the army being some distance in the rear on the other side of the river. When the whole army is with him, the usual phrase is: “\textit{his infantry and his chariots being with him};” e.g., l. 9. Ramses is therefore already far in advance of the other three divisions, just as he was later when the Hittites attacked him.

\(^c\)Kadesh.

\(^d\)In place of these two names the hieroglyphic texts all have \(\text{Py-d}3\text{-}3\) and \(\text{Yr-wn}\). \(\text{K}3\text{kk}\) is supposed by Müller to be a corruption of \(\text{K}3\text{-}\text{ry}3\text{-}\text{k-y-}3\), but as it has a different \(\text{k}\) and occurs in the Papyrus side by side with Kelekesh, the supposition is doubtful, if not improbable. On the list as a whole, see p. 136, n. c.

\(^e\)Instead of Ekereth, Raifet has Kadesh, which is, of course, senseless repetition, like that of the other texts in repeating Kadesh at the end of the list.

\(^f\)It is incredible that the larger kingdoms of Asia Minor should have been represented at this battle by their kings (\(\text{wr-w}\)). These mercenaries of the Hittite king had, of course, their commanders; the Syrian princes were some of them really present, and the Egyptians were glad to class the mercenary commanders as similar princes, to the greater glory of the Pharaoh’s victory. The close of this section (§ 309) shows clearly how these mercenaries were enlisted.

\(^g\)Karnak, the only hieroglyphic text preserved here, has: “\textit{he left no silver at all (hd nb)}.” This may point to the more plentiful use of silver in Asia Minor, where it was produced.
Behold, the wretched, vanquished chief of Kheta, together with the numerous allied countries, were stationed in battle array, concealed on the northwest of the city of Kadesh, while his majesty was alone by himself, [with] his bodyguard, and the division of Amon was marching behind him. The division of Re crossed over the river-bed on the south side of the town of Shabtuna, at the distance of an iter from the division of Amon; the division of Ptah was on the south of the city of Aranami; and the division of Sutekh was marching upon the road. His majesty had formed the first rank of all the leaders of his army, while they were on the shore in the land of the Amor. Behold, the aSo Raifet. The hieroglyphic texts have: "were stationed, concealed in battle array, behind" the city of Kadesh."

bSee plan (Fig. 9) for the following positions.

cRaifet has in place of this phrase: "none other was with him," but the above text (Karnak) is more probably correct.

dRaifet has $S^3-bw-dw-n$, and says "west side." It is the town later called Ribleh (Battle of Kadesh, 21, 22). The location of this town is clear from the references given by the Poem and the Record. After camping on the "highlands south of Kadesh" (Record, l. 2), Ramses advances toward Kadesh, and on the way thither passes Shabtuna (Record, l. 3), which is near a ford over the Orontes, as our above passage shows. Shabtuna was therefore on the Orontes a few miles south of Kadesh. [Conder (Palestine Exploration Fund Quarterly Report, 1881, 169 ff.) was not furnished with proper data from the inscriptions, for the location of Shabtuna.] Ramses, having hitherto advanced on the east side of Orontes, is now moving on the west side, while half his force is still on the east side (Fig. 9).

eThis variable measure does not exceed 1½ miles (see II, 965).

fRaifet has: "the division of Ptah was opposite them." This indicates that Aranami was on the east side of the Orontes. It is certain that Aranami is south of Shabtuna, for the division of Ptah, here marching northward, while just south of Aranami, was still south of Shabtuna when sent for by Ramses after the attack of the Asians (Record, ll. 18, 19). See Battle of Kadesh, 22, 23.

A very indefinite indication, showing only that this division was far away somewhere on the road. It is not mentioned again, and did not get up in time for the battle.

hRaifet has "of."

iThe "shore of Amor" is the Mediterranean coast, at some point in southern Lebanon, where Ramses turned inland. (Cf. Meyer, Festschrift für Georg Ebers, 69, n. 2); it was long mistranslated "lake." This detail of Ramses' manipulation of his troops, therefore, refers back to an earlier stage of the campaign like a similar remark on the arrangement of the Hittite king's troops (at end of l. 19).
wretched vanquished chief of Kheta was stationed in the midst of the infantry which was with him, and he came not out to fight, for fear of his majesty. Then he made to go the people of the chariotry, an exceedingly numerous multitude like the sand, being three people to each span. Now, they had made their combinations (thus): among every three youths was one man of the vanquished of Kheta, equipped with all the weapons of battle. Lo, they had stationed them in battle array, concealed on the northwest the city of Kadesh.

The Attack of the Asiatics

311. They came forth from the southern side of Kadesh, and they cut through the division of Re in its middle, while they were marching without knowing and without being drawn up for battle. The infantry and chariotry of his majesty, L. P. H., retreated before them. Now, his majesty had halted on the north of the city of Kadesh, on the western side of the Orontes. Then came one to tell it to his majesty, L. P. H.

Ramses' Attack

312. His majesty, L. P. H., shone like his father Montu, when he took the adornments of war; as he seized his coat of mail, he was like Baal in his hour. The great span which bore his majesty, L. P. H., called: "Victory-in-Thebes," from the great stables of Ramses (II), bWith every two of the mercenaries was one Hittite, each three thus formed being in one chariot. This is omitted in the hieroglyphic texts.

*Here Papyrus Raifet ends and Papyrus Sallier begins.

Sallier adds: "without number;" but this is a misunderstanding by the ancient copyist.

dSo the Papyrus. The hieroglyphic versions have only "behind," but as the Egyptian army is south and southeast of Kadesh, "behind Kadesh" is for them the north and northwest.

*This messenger doubtless found the king already engaged in battle. At any rate, the messenger could only confirm what Ramses had already learned from the two Hittite scouts. Had he arrived earlier, the torture of the scouts would have been unnecessary. Their torture, therefore, shows that this messenger had not yet arrived. The attack in the south, therefore, which cut in two the marching division of Re, being at the most not more than a few miles from Ramses' camp, could not have taken place very long before the attack on said camp. This would indicate the rapidity with which the Egyptians were driven northward into Ramses' camp.
was in the midst of the leaders. His majesty halted in the rout; then he charged into the foe, the vanquished of Kheta, being alone by himself and none other with him. When his majesty went to look behind him, he found 2,500 chariotry surrounding him, in his way out, being all the youth of the wretched Kheta, together with its numerous allied countries: from Arvad (ʾ-r²-tw), from Mesa (M³-s²), from Pedes (P-y-d²-s²), from Keshkesh (Kš-kš), from Erwenet (Yr-wn't, sic!), from Kezweden (K³-g³-w³-d³-n³), from Aleppo (H-y-r³-bw), Eketeri (ʾ-k³-t-r-y, sic!), Kadesh (Kdš), and Luka (Rw-k³-t³), being three men to a span, acting in unison.

313. Now follow highly idealized and sometimes purely imaginary incidents, the creation of the poet, in which nothing is historical save the one fact that Ramses holds his own until the arrival of his southern army. He first calls upon Amon for help in his unequal battle. Amon responds and strengthens him against the foe. The king of the Kheta is obliged to summon his allied commanders and send them into the fray. Ramses addresses a scathing rebuke to his own troops, and when his charioteer is dismayed because they are entirely surrounded, he encourages him and charges six times into the hostile ranks, thus holding the enemy in check until his reinforcements from the south can come up. c

314. At evening the captives of every country are brought to the king's tent, and the next morning the plain is seen aThis phrase is not in Luxor (the only hieroglyphic text preserved at this point), and the connection in the hieroglyphic version was apparently: "The great span etc., . . . . . . . . was called, etc."

bThe same word (yjd) is used of the headlong flight of the Syrians before Thutmose III at the battle of Megiddo (II, 430, l. 4).

cBy Brugsch identified with Ilion! Müller would read the first syllable (Yr) as y³, producing Yawan, or Ionians. For this reading the evidence is insufficient.

dThe last six names are omitted by the hieroglyphic texts; hence the incorrect writings, as the papyrus is inaccurate.

eThere is no reference to the arrival of the "recruits," who began the rescue.
covered with the dead, especially of the family of the prince of Kheta. The army comes to the king's tent and celebrates his victory in a hymn of praise. But the king responds, reminding them of their cowardice, and reproaching them that they did not depend upon him to lead and protect them. The next morning Ramses drew up his battle lines and renewed the attack with such effect that the prince of Kheta sent a humble letter suing for peace, which the king read in triumph before his assembled troops, who thereupon gave him another ovation. Pleased with this flattery, he marches southward, and returns in peace to Thebes, where, of course, he is received with triumphant jubilation by the people.

315. The last three lines of Papyrus Sallier III (XI, 9-11), which is the only text in which the conclusion is preserved, furnish the date of "this writing, in the year 9, second month of the third season, day —, [under the majesty] of King Ramses II." This particular copy was one "which the scribe, Pentewere (Pn-t wr't) made" (XI, 11), a mere copyist, who was not the author of the poem, as is still usually stated.

b. Official Record of the Battle of Kadesh

316. This document is appended to the wall scenes (§§ 328-47), and seems to have been an official record of a This is corroborated by the reliefs.

b Even the Poem makes no claim that Ramses captured Kadesh, as is so often stated in the histories. It seems incredible, furthermore, that there should have been a successful battle on the next day, of which the reliefs and inscriptions should show not a single trace. It is possible to conclude with Müller (Asien und Europa, 216, n. 1) that the entire conclusion of the poem, recounting the Hittite king's letter proposing peace, is to be referred to the actual arrangements for peace in year 21; but see my Battle of Kadesh, 46. In any case, the poem is clearly wrong in placing a treaty of peace after the battle of Kadesh, for Ramses continued the conflict with the Hittites until long after this.

c Usually called "Pentaur;" that he was not the author of the poem, as formerly supposed, was shown by Erman (Neuägyptische Grammatik, 7).

d See my Battle of Kadesh, 7, for fuller discussion of bibliography. Three originals:
the battle. It is not as full as the Poem on the marches and positions of the two armies, but it narrates fully the inside history which led to Ramses' incautious advance to the north of Kadesh, furnishing an account of the earliest military ruse known in history. Of all this the Poem says nothing.

Of these Luxor is not given by Champollion and Rosellini, but was copied by Brugsch. Furthermore, the Abu Simbel text is bad, sometimes omitting whole passages. Champollion and Rosellini's copy of this text is unusable, two whole lines being omitted and often the sand-covered lower ends. Although I collated the Abu Simbel text exhaustively, the translation is based chiefly on the Ramesseum. For this text I had only Lepsius, Denkmäler; for Sharpe's copy is totally worthless. Though all the originals show lacunae, I found these disappeared on arranging them in parallel columns. A combined text by Guieysse (Recueil, VIII, 126–31) I found unreliable. The line numbers herein refer to the Ramesseum text. All passages on movements of the battle are also published in my Battle of Kadesh.

bThis shows that Zahi was not confined to Phoenicia, this passage making it extend inland over Lebanon and the Orontes valley. See also II, 616, ll. 9, 10.

cCompare Thutmose III's camp at Aruna (II, 425, ll. 56, 57).
northward, and his majesty had arrived at the locality south of the town of Shabtuna (§ 2-b-tw-n), there came two Shasu, to speak to his majesty as follows: "Our brethren, who belong to the greatest families with the vanquished chief of Kheta, have made us come to his majesty, to say: 'We will be subjects of Pharaoh, L. P. H., and we will flee from the vanquished chief of Kheta; for the vanquished chief of Kheta sits in the land of Aleppo (H y-r^2-bw), on the north of Tunip (T w-n-p). He fears because of Pharaoh, L. P. H., to come southward.'" Now, these Shasu spake these words, which they spake to his majesty, falsely, (for) the vanquished chief of Kheta made them come to spy where his majesty was, in order to cause the army of his majesty not to draw up for fighting him, to battle with the vanquished chief of Kheta.

Positions of the Two Armies

320. Lo, the vanquished chief of Kheta came with every chief of every country, their infantry and their chariotry, which he had brought with him by force, and stood, equipped, drawn up in line of battle behind Kadesh the Deceitful, while his majesty knew it not. Then his majesty proceeded northward and arrived on the northwest of Kadesh; and the army of his majesty [made camp] there.

Examination of Hittite Scouts

321. Then, as his majesty sat upon a throne of gold, there arrived a scout who was in the following of his majesty, and he brought two scouts of the vanquished chief of Kheta. They were conducted into the pre-sense, and his majesty said to them: "What are ye?" They said: "As for us, the vanquished chief of the Kheta has caused that we should come to spy out where his majesty is." Said his majesty to them: "He! Where is he, the vanquished chief of Kheta? Behold, I have heard, saying: 'He is in the land of Aleppo (Ḥy-r²-b²).'" Said they: "See, the vanquished chief of Kheta is stationed, together with many countries, which he has brought with him by force, being every country which is in the districts of the land of Kheta, the land of Naharin (N-hy-r-n), and all Kode (Kd). They are equipped with infantry and chariotry, bearing their weapons; more numerous are they than the sand of the shore. See, they are standing, drawn up for battle, behind Kadesh the Deceitful."

The Council of War

322. Then his majesty had the princes called into the presence, and had them hear every word which the two scouts of the vanquished chief of Kheta, who were in the presence, had spoken. Said his majesty to them: "See ye the manner wherewith the chiefs (mr) of the peasantry (ywty) and the officials under whom is the land of Pharaoh, L. P. H., have stood, daily, saying to the Pharaoh: 'The vanquished chief of Kheta is in the land of Aleppo (Ḥy-r²-b²); he has fled before his majesty, since hearing that, behold, he came.' So spake they to his majesty daily. But see, I have held a hearing in this very hour, with the two scouts of the vanquished chief of Kheta, to the effect that the vanquished chief of Kheta is coming, together with the numerous countries [that are with] him, being people and horses, like the multitudes of the sand. They are stationed behind Kadesh the b Clearly showing the composite character of the Hittite kingdom at this time.

c This is a clear indication of the extent of Kode; all the rest of the countries from Arvad to Asia Minor are included in the term "all Kode." But see Müller, Asien und Europa, 242, 48.

d "Behind Kadesh," from Ramses' present position in his camp on the north of Kadesh is, of course, south of Kadesh, where the Hittites moved out for the attack on the division of Re.

e Or: "infantry;" these officials are parallel with "the governors of the foreign countries" in 1. 17. It is clear that the king is chiding the officials in authority both in Asia and Egypt, that is, both his provincial and Egyptian officers.
Deceitful. But the governors of the countries and the officials under whose authority is the land of Pharaoh, L. P. H., were not able to tell it to us.”

323. Said the princes who were in the presence of his majesty: “It is a great fault, which the governors of the countries and the officials of Pharaoh, L. P. H., have committed in not informing that the vanquished chief of Kheta was near the king; and (in) that they told his report to his majesty daily.”

The Divisions in the South Are Ordered Up

324. Then the vizier was ordered to hasten the army of his majesty, while they were marching on the south of Shabtuna, in order to bring them to the place where his majesty was.

The Attack of the Asiatics

325. Lo, while his majesty sat talking with the princes, the vanquished chief of Kheta came, and the numerous countries, which were with him. They crossed over the channel on the south of aLit., “that the vanquished chief of Kheta was where the king was.”

---

bViz., the false report of the Hittite which he sent out by the two Shasu (ll. 3, 4).

cThe vizier sent the message by a horseman, and probably went also by chariot himself (§§ 333–4).

dThis is one of the most important statements in the documents on this battle. It shows that, while Ramses is in camp on the north of Kadesh the main body of his army is south of Kadesh on the march in the vicinity of Shabtuna (see Fig. 11). Besides the division of Amon, which is with Ramses, only the division of Re has passed Shabtuna.

eThe messenger announcing the attack on the division of Re in the south had up to this point not yet arrived, and Ramses apparently receives no notice of the attack until it is upon him.

fSo Ramesseum; Abu Simbel has: “with [his] infantry and his chariotry likewise;” but this is incorrect; the entire battle was one of chariotry, as the reliefs show.

gThis channel is, of course, that of Orontes, the Hittite king having previously led his forces from the west to the east side, now goes back to the west side, in order to get around the city, while keeping it between him and the Egyptians. Being a city which he commanded, he could, of course, go through it, and emerge for his attack on the south side, unless prevented by lack of gates at the proper points. But this would probably have exposed his issuing forces to the view of the marching division of Re, as the city wall was necessarily clearly in view across the moat. In any case, there must have been some cover south of the city from which the Asiatics emerged for the attack.
Kadesh, and charged into the army of his majesty while they were marching, and not expecting it. Then the infantry and chariotry of his majesty retreated before them, northward to the place where his majesty was. Lo, the foes of the vanquished chief of Kheta surrounded the bodyguard of his majesty, who were by his side.

\textit{Ramses' Personal Attack}

326. When his majesty saw them, he was enraged against them, like his father, Montu, lord of Thebes. He seized the adornments of battle, and arrayed himself in his coat of mail. He was like Baal in his hour. Then he betook himself to his horses, and led quickly on, being alone by himself. He charged into the foes of the vanquished chief of Kheta, and the numerous countries which were with him. His majesty was like Sutekh, the great in strength, smiting and slaying among them; his majesty hurled them headlong, one upon another into the water of the Orontes.

\textit{Ramses' Own Statement}

327. “I charged all countries, while I was alone, my infantry and my chariotry having forsaken me. Not one among them stood to turn about. I swear, as Re loves me, as my father, Atum, favors me, that, as for every matter which his majesty has stated, I did it in truth, in the presence of my infantry and my chariotry.”

c. \textit{The Reliefs of the Battle of Kadesh}

328. The pictured story of the battle of Kadesh presented in these reliefs, like the great epic poem on the battle, was a source of such gratification to Ramses, that he had them reproduced six times in the temples of Upper Egypt and Nubia, and doubtless also several times in the vanished temples of Lower Egypt. As will be seen, owing to the primitive character of Egyptian topographical and architectural drawing, these scenes cannot be made to coincide with the data of the inscriptions, but they furnish invaluable side lights on the battle, and the accompanying inscriptions add facts of the greatest importance.

The inscriptions from all these reliefs have been combined (from the publications) by Guieysse (Recueil, VIII, 120-42) in a handy form for reference, but it is not reliable. An exhaustive publication of the combined originals is very much needed. For the following translations I arranged my own combined text, placing all the publications of all the originals in parallel columns. These are published, in so far as they concern the movements of the armies, in my Battle of Kadesh. All the reliefs are also published there, Pl. I-VII.

II. THE CAMP

331. In the midst of a rectangular inclosure, barricaded with shields, appears the royal tent, surrounded by the small tents of the officers and the animated life of the camp, which the "first division," that of Amon, is engaged in arranging. This is the camp north or northwest of Kadesh (Record, l. 7; Poem, l. 21). Within the royal tent, Ramses sits, chiding his officers for their neglect, when suddenly the extreme north end of the Hittite right wing bursts in at the

The lion behind the king's tent is his personal pet. He is shown at Luxor fettered; at Abu Simbel (Champollion, Monuments, 15) with the Pharaoh on the march; at Bet-Walli beside the Pharaoh's throne (Champollion, Monuments, 62); and finally at Derr in two scenes (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 183, b, and 184, a), where the king is sacrificing prisoners to Amon-Re. In these last scenes he is accompanied by the inscription: "The lion, follower of his majesty, slayer of his enemies" (cf. Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 90); and he is biting one of the prisoners. There is no basis in all this for the current statement that this lion accompanied his master in the battle, where (Champollion, Monuments, 25, and Rosellini, Monumenti Storici, 87) a lion in the decoration of the chariot has been mistaken for the Pharaoh's pet (see Battle of Kadesh, 44, 45).

333. These messengers are the ones sent southward by the vizier (Record, § 324, ll. 18 and 19) to hasten the forces still in the south near Shabtuna. To carry such a message, they must either make a wide detour westward, to go around the enemy’s lines, or hazard the dangerous passage through them. To render the arrival of the orders more certain, the vizier dispatches a horseman, and goes himselfb in a chariot. Their orders seem to concern only the division of bThe Luxor relief contains a fragment of inscription showing that the vizier himself probably went. Among the approaching reinforcements hastening up in the rear of the Hittites to relieve Ramses, appear the words: “Arrival of the vizier numbered 314). This shows that the vizier got through, and brought up the reinforcements himself.

IV. THE BATTLE

335. We here see the city of Kadesh, by which the battle was fought, so thoroughly moated that it seems to lie in the very Orontes itself, rather than on it. The four drawings of the city preserved show great differences among themselves; and it is evident that no clear idea of the relative positions of city and combatants can be gained from them. We must remember that, according to the inscriptions, the Pharaoh is north of the city. It would seem that a bend in the river enables him to charge directly toward the city, viz., southward, and to drive the enemy into the river. But if the side of the Egyptian drawing where the Pharaoh is, is north, then it represents him as on the east side of the river. Or again, if, as the texts state, he should be on the west side of the river in the Egyptian drawing, then the drawing represents him as south of the city and charging northward.

bSee Müller's useful comparison of the four (Asien und Europa, 214, 215).

cI have discussed the value of the reliefs fully in my Battle of Kadesh, 40-46.
In no way can any of the four ancient drawings of this battle-field be made to coincide with the data of the inscriptions. This is not remarkable when we remember that they do not coincide with each other. In these, as in all Egyptian drawings, each part is drawn largely irrespective of its relations to any of the other parts. We can here gain no true conception of the plan of the battle. Some facts stated in the inscriptions may be clearly seen in the reliefs however. We observe the Hittite chariotry (above and below) enfold­ing Ramses within its extended wings. We see also how he drives into the river those in his immediate front, including many prominent allies, officials, and even relatives of the Hittite king. The king of Aleppo is held head downward by his soldiers on the farther shore, that he may disgorge the water which he has swallowed. Here also stands the Hittite king with 8,000 foot, which he makes no effort to bring into action. The inscriptions are these:

Over King's Horses and Chariot

336. ¹The Good God, mighty in valor, great in victory, crushing all countries, King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Setepnere; Son of Re; Ramses-Meriamon. ³The stand which his majesty made while he was camping on the north-west of Kadesh. He charged into the midst of the foe belonging to the vanquished chief of Kheta, while he was alone by himself, and no other with him. ⁷He found surrounding him ²2,500 horse in four bodies on his every side. ⁹He slaughtered them, making (them) heaps beneath his horses. ¹¹He slew all the chiefs of all the countries, the allies of the vanquished chief of Kheta, together with his own great chiefs, his infantry and his chariotry. He overthrew them prostrate upon their faces, and hurled them down, one upon another into the waters of the Orontes. His majesty was behind them like a fierce-eyed lion in their place. Lo, the vanquished chief of Kheta stood extending backward his arms in praise of the Good God.

Among the Fleeing Enemy

337. Tergen — (Ty-r²-g²-n—).

Tergenenes (Ty-r²-g²-n²-s²), charioteer of the vanquished chief of Kheta.

²So Ramesseum; Abu Simbel has: “Other warriors (tw-hy-r²) — before him, 9,000.” The “other” is to distinguish them from the troops in battle. Luxor has merely: “[The army] of the vanquished chief of Kadesh, very numerous in men and horses.” As the 2,500 Hittite chariots had (three men each) 7,500 men, we get 16,000, to 17,000 men as the total Asiatic force. Ramses will possibly have had about 20,000, and thus each of his four divisions was about 5,000 strong, or about equal to a modern army division. A body of troops mentioned in the Anastasi Papyrus No. 1, as belonging to Ramses II, contained 5,000 men, all foreign mercenaries. See Battle of Kadesh, 9.

His majesty 8he overthrew them 8---. 9[The vanquished chief of Kheta] said: "He is like 10Sutekh, great in might; Baal is 11in his limbs."
V. THE DEFENSE OF THE CAMP

339. While Ramses was at the front early in the battle, his camp was entered by the Hittite advance; but on the arrival of the "recruits" from Amor, the latter fell upon these spoilers and slaughtered them.

In Front of Troops

340. The arrival of the recruits of Pharaoh, L. P. H., from the land of Amor (EEDED). They found that the force of the vanquished chief of Kheta had surrounded the camp of his majesty on its western side. His majesty had been camping alone, no army with him, [awaiting the] arrival of his officers and his army and the division with which Pharaoh, L. P. H., was, had not finished setting up the camp. Now the division of Re and the division of Ptah were on the march; they had not (yet) arrived, and their officers were in the forest of Bewey (B3-w-y). Then the recruits cut off the foe belonging to the vanquished chief of Kheta, while they (the foe) were entering into the camp, and Pharaoh's officers slew them; they left not a single survivor among them. Their hearts were filled with the mighty valor of Pharaoh, their good lord; he was behind them like a steward of —, like a wall of iron, forever and ever.

VI. AFTER THE BATTLE

sentation of Ramses' triumph than the meager scene at Abu Simbel. It showed the king receiving the prisoners, captured according to the accompanying inscriptions, by himself! These inscriptions are as follows:

Ramses' Officers Bringing Captives before Him

342. Bringing in prisoners before his majesty, being those which [he] brought off in the victory of his sword in this wretched land of Kheta, when his majesty caused to be [announced to] his infantry and his chariots, saying: "[Behold, these are] the prisoners of my own capture, while I was alone, no infantry being with me, nor any prince with me, nor any chariots."

Beside a Group of Prisoners

343. List (shwy) of those countries which his majesty slew, while alone by himself: Corpses, horses, and chariots, bows, swords, all the weapons of warfare.

Beside Another Group of Prisoners

344. Receiving the prisoners which his majesty brought off, in the victory of his sword in this wretched land of Kheta and this wretched land [of] Naharin (N-h-ry-n), together with the chiefs of all countries who came with the vanquished chief of Kheta, as living captives.

Over Fleeing Chariots

345. Warriors (Tw-hy-r) of the chariots of the camp of the vanquished chief of Kheta.

The texts at Abu Simbel are not so full; they are the following:

Behind Chariot

346. The Good God, who fought for his army, whose sword repulsed the Nine Bows; king, mighty in victory, who hath not his like; charging into the multitudes of every country, making them prostrate bodies. His face is fierce-eyed before the chief of Kheta, and the countries of Naharin.

VII. PRESENTATION OF CAPTIVES TO AMON

348. As his father, Seti I, is seen presenting captives and spoil to Amon, on the north wall of the great Karnak hypostyle, so Ramses appears in a like capacity on its south wall. Here he leads and presents to Amon, Mut, and Khonsu, three rows of prisoners, accompanied by inscriptions which show that they are captives taken at the battle of Kadesh:

349. List of the chiefs of Kheta, which his majesty, L. P. H., brought as living captives to the house of his father, Amon: Derden (D-\(r^2\)-d-n-y), Pedes (P-y-d-s\(^2\)), Kele[kesh] (K-y-\(r^2\)-k-y-s\(^2\)) ———.

350. These are followed by four short lines of prisoners, each led by one of Ramses' sons:

a) ——— [behind his majesty, by the] ——— scribe, commander in chief of the army, Amenhirkhepeshef.

b) ——— [behind] his majesty, by the king's-son, Khamwese.

c) ——— behind his majesty, by the king's-son, Meriamon.

d) ——— behind his majesty, by the king's-son, Seti.

351. All these are designated as:

Captives from the northern countries, who came to overthrow his majesty, whom his majesty slew, and whose subjects he brought as living captives, to fill the storehouse of his father, Amon.

III. PALESTINIAN REVOLT

352. At some time between the fifth and eighth years all Palestine, doubtless incited by the Hittites, revolted against

Ramses II, and he was obliged to take up the reconquest of his Asiatic possessions, at his very door, in the later Philistine country with the siege of Askalon.a

I. RECONQUEST OF SOUTHERN PALESTINE

353. A relief at Karnak represents the storming of the city of Askalon, and the accompanying inscription refers to its rebellion. Of course, Askalon did not revolt alone, but must have been in league with the other cities of Palestine.

354. In the relief we see the king in his chariot charging the bearded defenders, lined up outside a battlemented city, which is located on an elevation. The storming ladders are up, and an Egyptian officer is demolishing the city gate with an ax, while the inhabitants appear on the walls, beseeching mercy. By the city is the following inscription:

355. The wretched city (dmy), which his majesty captured, when it rebelled, Askalon (r-s-k-rw-n²). It (the city) says: “It is joy to be subject to thee, and delight to cross thy boundaries. Take thou the heritage, that we may speak of thy valor in all unknown countries.”

Over the king’s horses appears the usual glorification of his valor.

II. RECONQUEST OF NORTHERN PALESTINE

356. By the eighth year Ramses has reached northern Palestine again, and captures the cities of western Galilee.

aThe place of this siege in Ramses II’s wars is uncertain; but as western Galilee revolted in his eighth year, it is not unlikely that the revolt of Askalon is to be connected with that of west Galilee. Indeed, one name in the list of the eighth year may be Askalon (Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 871, I, No. 2 r-n²). The date “IXth year” (Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 400) for the capture of Askalon is without any documentary support.

The only document is a list\(^a\) showing rows of battlemented cities from which Egyptian officers drive prisoners. Each city bears an inscription beginning: "City which his majesty plundered in the year 8," after which appears the name of a city.\(^b\) Only a few of these names have survived, among which are: a "city on the mount of Bethanath (\(B^\circ -y-ty-^c-n-ty\))", named Kerpet (\(K^\circ -r^c-pw\)-[\(\text{I}^\circ\])\); Merem (\(M^\circ -r^c-m\), Hebrew, Marom "Height"); and Sherem (\(S^\circ -r^c-m\), Hebrew, Salom, "Greeting"). The only place not in the west Galilean region is a city "in the land of Amor (\(\^2-m-w-r^c\)), Deper (\(D^\circ -pw-r^c\))," which carries us over to the region of Tabor.\(^c\) The capture of this city has been depicted with great spirit and much detail in a splendid relief at the Ramesseum.\(^d\) It shows Ramses' sons\(^e\) playing a prominent part in the battle.

357. The accompanying inscriptions unfortunately contain almost exclusively the conventional praise of the king's valor. They disclose, however, the important fact that the

Another series of cities, on the outside of the south wall of the great hypostyle at Karnak, evidently bore inscriptions of the same form, though none is now complete; see Lepsius, \(\text{Denkmälere, Text, III, 20, and Champollion, \(\text{Notices descriptives, II, 120}\).}

Hittites have pushed southward since the battle of Kadesh and temporarily occupied the Tabor region, from which Ramses now ejects them (ll. 11-13). This is the extreme southern limit of the Hittite advance, and was, of course, purely transitory, as their remains are not found south of Hamath. This extreme advance is undoubtedly to be connected with the revolt in Palestine.

358. It was perhaps at this time that the northern trans-Jordan region, the Hauran, again came under the control of Ramses, and some official erected a memorial relief of him there, representing him offering to one of the local gods, with possibly a Semitic name.

The Deper scene, which is our longest document on this period, contains the following inscriptions:

359. "Said the vanquished of Kheta in praising the Good God: "Give to us the breath that thou givest, O good ruler. Lo, we are under thy sandals; thy terror, it has penetrated the land of Kheta. Its chief is fallen, because of thy fame; we are like herds of horses, when the fierce-eyed lion attacks them."

360. "The Good God, mighty in valor in the countries, stout-hearted in the array, firm on the steed, beautiful in the chariot, when he has taken the bow, shooting, (or) fighting hand to hand, — firm, whom none escapes, — — taking the beautiful corselet in the array, and returning when he has triumphed over the vanquished chief of Kheta. When he overthrew him, he scattered him like straw before the wind, (so that) he forsook his city, for fear of him. He (Ramses) set his fame therein for every day. His might was in his limbs like fire; a bull fighting upon his boundary, seizing upon the things which he has captured, a survivor of his hand he has not left. He is a tempest in the countries, great in tumult; bringing the storm-cloud against the chiefs, to desolate their cities, making all their places

IV. CAMPAIGN IN NAHARIN

363. Having thus, in the Palestinian war, recovered Palestine, Ramses again pushed northward and advanced into Naharin.

I. CONQUEST OF NAHARIN

364. In a fragment at the Ramesseum we find him fighting at Tunip. He has, it would seem, already held this important city of the north, and had set up in it a statue of himself. The city had then revolted, and Ramses is now recapturing it. The inscription evidently narrated some personal exploit of Ramses without his coat of mail.

a Or: "taking the breath — — —.

366. In harmony with this fragment, we find that the listsb of cities and countries, which Ramses claims to have conquered, mention Naharin, Lower Retenu, Arvad, Keftyew, and Ketnee⁵ in the Orontes valley. The fact that these northern regions had to some extent already been under Ramses' control indicates long and arduous campaigning against the Hittites. The revolt of these regions, evident from the Ramesseum fragment just translated, was therefore undoubtedly late in the Asiatic war, and probably had something to do with Ramses' willingness to make peace, later sealed by a treaty of alliance with the Hittites in the year 21, seventeen years after the beginning of the war.

aThe date "year 12," usually read here is impossible; it is not supported by any of the three copies.

bOn a colossus at Karnak (Mariette, Karnak, 38) and another at Abydos (Mariette, Abydos, II, 2). The list on the north wall of Karnak (Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 119; Brugsch, Geographische Inschriften, II, 75; Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 144) attributed by Müller to Ramses II, I have credited to Seti I (p. 57, n. b). See also Daressy, Recueil, XX, 119.

cThe mention of Shinar (Babylonia), Assur, Cyprus, and the like, can, of course, only mean the receipt of gifts from the kings of those countries, as under Thutmose III, who controlled none of them but probably Cyprus.
II. TREATY WITH THE HITTITES

367. After possibly fifteen years of warfare in Syria, Ramses II consents to a peace with the Hittites. This peace is sealed in a treaty of alliance which forms one of the most remarkable documents which have survived from ancient Egypt. The copy preserved to us is clearly a translation from an original in a foreign language, and in his rendering the Egyptian translator has not always succeeded too well.

368. For recording upon the temple walls, the royal scribe has prefixed: (1) the date (l. 1); (2) the account of the arrival of two Hittite messengers with the treaty on a silver tablet; and (3) the heading of the copy as preserved in the royal archives. In content the treaty which follows is clear and well arranged. After a title or caption, it proceeds with the following eighteen paragraphs:

1. Review of the former relations of the two countries, the immemorial peace of earlier times, and the later war.

aThere are two originals: (1) At Karnak on wall extending south of the great hypostyle, published by Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 195-204 (only 30 lines); Rosellini, Monumenti Storici, xiv; Burton, Excerpta hieroglyphica, 17 (not used); Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 146; Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, I, 28 (ll. 1-20); Bouriant, Recueil, XIII, 153-60; collation of the geographical names by Sayce, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XXI, 194 ff.; Müller, Vorderasiatische Gesellschaft, VII, 5, Taf. I-XVI; I had also photographs by Borchardt. (2) At the Ramesseum; only fragments of the last 10 lines; Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 585, 586; Sharpe, Egyptian Inscriptions, II, 50; Bouriant, Recueil, XIV, 67-70. In spite of the mutilated condition of the two monuments, the frequent repetitions make restoration certain in almost all cases. Müller's edition is the only one which is done with care and accuracy; a number of readings may be added to Müller's text from Sharpe's copy, which seems to have escaped him. The following translation was already in my manuscript when Müller's publication appeared. His text added a few new readings, but otherwise the translation remains unchanged.

bIn view of Amarna Letter No. 35, from the Hittite king, Seplel (see Knudtzon, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 35, 141 f.), in Babylonian writing and language, the original of this treaty may have been in the same form.

\(^a\) It was kept by them in fact, as is shown by the relations of Merneptah with Kheta (§ 580, l. 24).

\(^b\) Knudtzon (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 35, 141 f.) has found in the Amarna collection a cuneiform letter (No. 35) from this king (called Ṣu-ub-bi-tu-li-u-ma) to a king of Egypt, called Khur[iya], who, from the content of the letter, is certainly Napkhurfya, the cuneiform for Neferkheprure (Amenhotep IV). Sepel desires, in this letter, to continue with the Pharaoh the friendly relations hitherto existing between himself (S.) and the Pharaoh’s father, who has just died. This is clearly Amenhotep III, to whom we may therefore carry back the first treaty between Egypt and Kheta. But the Amarna letters show how badly the Hittites observed the treaty. On the chronological difficulty, see p. 167, n. c.

\(^c\) These two paragraphs form a frequent conclusion of documents intended to be valid in perpetuity, and they mark the logical conclusion here.
extradited from Kheta, who are to suffer no injury in person, family, or property.

17. The same regarding those extradited from Egypt.

18. This final paragraph belongs only to the copy, and not to the treaty. It describes the figures and seals on the silver tablet, and records the words accompanying these seals.

369. Space does not permit further discussion of this remarkable document, but it will be evident that, notwithstanding Ramses' conquest of such northern cities as Tunip in Naharin (§§ 344 f.), he never succeeded in breaking the power of the Hittites. Evidently his complete success in stopping the further southward advance of so powerful an invader was no small reason for congratulation.

aThe names of two Egyptian envoys have here disappeared. Whence they came is not clear. They may have gone out to meet the two Hittite envoys a day's journey or two; or they may have been the Egyptian commissioners who had negotiated the treaty at the court of Kheta.

bThe restoration is based on l. 4, where we have a verbatim repetition of this connection.

cDouble name.

dThere is no word for "grandson" in Egyptian; text has "son of the son."

eThe loss is greater than this by several words. In view of the preceding words ("setting peace") and similar phrases frequent in the treaty (e. g., ll. 9, 10), it seems to me that Müller (Vorderasiatische Gesellschaft, VII, 215-21) overemphasizes the alliance side of the document. It is not only a treaty of alliance, but also a treaty of peace, and the war evidently continued until the negotiations for the treaty began, which could hardly have been earlier than a year before the date of the arrival of the messengers in Egypt. They reached Egypt in late winter or early spring (twenty-first of Tybi), somewhere around the first of February; and the preceding summer may have seen the last of the hostilities. The treaty distinctly states (ll. 8, 9) that it marks the beginning of a relation designed by the gods to conclude hostilities between the two nations.

167

Former Relations of the Two Countries

374. 1. Now, at the beginning, since eternity, the relations of the great ruler of Egypt with the great chief of Kheta were (such) that the god prevented hostilities between them, by treaty. Whereas, in the time of Metella (Mw-t-n-r²), the great chief of Kheta, my brother, he fought with Ramses II,¹ the great ruler of Egypt, yet afterward, beginning with this day, behold, Khetasar, the great chief of Kheta, is [in] a treaty-relation for establishing the relations which the Re made, and which Sutekh made,² for the land of Egypt, with the land of Kheta, in order not to permit hostilities to arise between them, forever.

The New Peace Pact

375. 2. Behold then, Khetasar, the great chief of Kheta, is in treaty relation with Usermare-Setepnere (Ramses II), the great ruler of Egypt, beginning with this day, in order to bring about good peace and good brotherhood between us forever, while he is in brotherhood with me, he is in peace with me; and I am in brotherhood with him, and I am in peace with him, forever. Since Metella (Mw-t-n-r²), the great chief of Kheta, my brother, succumbed to his fate,³ and Khetasar sat as ¹A cartouche is visible.

²Re and Sutekh are here the gods of Egypt and Kheta respectively.

³Lit., “departed (hnn) after his fate;” this, of course, indicates his death.

The succession of his brother justifies the suspicion that his death was due to his brother; but this is not certain. Furthermore, this death of Metella is clearly the occasion of the peace, and not the occasion of the war with Ramses II, as often stated (Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 389). Thus the opponent of Ramses II was Metella (l. 8), and Khetasar hastens to make peace soon after his accession (l. 10). We may roughly reconstruct thus:

Amenhotep III, end of reign
Ikhnaton
Ikhnaton’s ephemeral successors
Harmhab
Ramses I Seti I
Ramses II to about year 20
Ramses II from year 20 on Seplel, father of Merasar, father of Metella Khetasar

brothers

The three generations of Hittite kings ruled accordingly over 110 years—over 37 years each—an exceptionally high average for three successive kings in the orient. This would indicate some uncertainty as to the identity of Sepel and Subbiluliuma of Amarna Letter No. 35, which carries him back to Amenhotep III (see note, p. 164). He may therefore possibly be no earlier than Harmhab, and, as Müller has suggested (op. cit., 226), the Amarna letter may be from an earlier Sepel.
168 NINETEENTH DYNASTY: RAMSES II

11great chief of Kheta upon the throne of his father, behold, I am together with Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, and he is [with me in] our peace and our brotherhood. It is better than the former peace and brotherhood which were in the land. Behold, I, even the great chief of Kheta, am with 11[Ramses II], the great ruler of Egypt, in good peace and in good brotherhood. The children of the children of the great chief of Kheta shall be in brotherhood and peace with the children of the children of Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, being in our relations of brotherhood and our relations 11[of peace], that the [land of Egypt] may be with the land of Kheta in peace and brotherhood like ourselves, forever.

Mutual Renunciation of Further Conquests

376. 3. There shall be no hostilities between them, forever. The great chief of Kheta shall not pass over into the land of Egypt, forever, to take anything therefrom. Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, shall not pass over into the land 11[of Kheta, to take anything] therefrom, forever.

Reaffirmation of the Former Treaties

377. 4. As for the formerb treaty which was in the time of Seplel (S3-p3-rw-rw), the great chief of Kheta, likewise the formerb treaty which was in the time of Metella (Mw-t-n-r3), the great chief of Kheta, my father, c I will hold to it. Behold, Ramses-Meriamon. the great aSo Müller, but he does not give room for "with."

bThis word (mty) has not been hitherto understood in this connection; there is no doubt about its meaning, "customary, usual, habitual," and then "former." Compare Amâda Stela (II, 798), where a new four-day list of offerings is established for Anuket "as an increase upon the 3 days of her customary (mty) feast;" or II, 619; after new offerings are presented, the old ones are to be offered "according to the measure of the customary (mtt) offering which is in this temple;" after a feast a god returns to his "customary (mtt) seat" (Recueil, 16, 56, l. 6, above).

c"Father" is either used here as in Egypt, where any predecessor on the throne is called "father;" or the name "Metella" is an error for Merasar, who was certainly the father of Metella and Khetasar. Now, as Khetasar has already (ll. 7, 8) referred to the ancient peace as continuing down to, but broken under, Metella, a new treaty under Metella above mentioned (l. 14) is surprising. He may be marking the beginning and end of the same treaty: beginning under Sepel and ending, because broken, under Metella. The Pharaoh with whom Metella's treaty was maintained can hardly be any other than Seti I. (See "it," ll. 14, 15.)
ruler of Egypt, will hold up to it with us together, beginning with this day. We will hold to it, and we will deal in this former manner.

Egypt's Defensive Alliance with Kheta

378. 5. If another enemy come against the lands of Usermare-Setep-nere (Ramses II), the great ruler of Egypt, and he shall send to the great chief of Kheta, saying: "Come with me as reinforcement against him," the great chief of Kheta shall come, and the great chief of Kheta shall slay his enemy. But if it be not the desire of the great chief of Kheta to come, he shall send his infantry and his chariotry, and shall slay his enemy.

Chastisement of Syrian Subjects

379. 6. Or if Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, be provoked against delinquent subjects, when they have committed some other fault against him, and he come to slay them, then the great chief of Kheta shall act with the lord of Egypt.

Kheta's Defensive Alliance with Egypt

380. 7. If another enemy come against the great chief of Kheta, and he shall send to the great chief (sic!) Usermare-Setepnere for reinforcements then he shall come to him as reinforcement, to slay his enemy. But if it be the desire of Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, to come, he shall send his infantry and his chariotry and shall slay his enemy. — seeing them, besides returning answer to the land of Kheta.

The stipulations of the former treaty, as known to both parties, are not stated.

This word (modified by s w, which Müller regards as a conjunction) must refer to Asiatic subjects of Egypt, who rebel or fail to pay tribute. Kheta is not, in such a case, to interfere in Egypt's attempts at punishment, but is to act in harmony with Egypt. Egypt's obligation in the corresponding clause is much more elaborate, but is unfortunately not clear, owing to its fragmentary condition. Evidently the two clauses mean that both are to act in harmony in Syria; each is to assist the other there, and not take advantage of any revolt in the other's dependencies, for self-aggrandizement.

There is not room for the message, as in the corresponding paragraph.

Omitted in original.

There is evidently a second alternative of some kind here, to which the Egyptian king may resort, which is not found in the corresponding clause defining the Hittite obligation.
Chastisement of Syrian Subjects

381. 8. Now if subjects of the great chief of Kheta transgress against him, and Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, shall —— the land of Kheta and the land of Egypt, that is to say: "I will come after their punishment, to Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, living forever, — — — — the land of Kheta. . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . their appointing him for them, to be lord, to cause that Usermare-Setepnere, the great ruler of Egypt, shall be silent from his speech forever. If he — his — the land of Kheta, and he shall turn back [again to] the great chief of Kheta ———.

Extradition of Political Fugitives in Kheta

382. 9. [If any great man of the land of Egypt shall flee and shall come to] the great chief of Kheta, from either a town or of the lands of Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, and they shall come to the great chief of Kheta, then the great chief of Kheta shall not receive them, (but) the great chief of Kheta shall cause them to be brought to Usermare-Setepnere, the great ruler of Egypt, t[heir] lord therefor.

Extradition of Emigrants to Kheta

383. 10. Or if there flee a man, or two men who are unknown, and they shall come to the land of Kheta, to become foreign subjects, then they shall not be settled in the land of Kheta, but they shall be brought to Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt.

a Or: "fate;" have we here: hr-ṣ₁⁻p₂ yf (or p₁ ysn) ṣ₂ y, as in l. 10?

b A few unintelligible fragments are omitted; about one-fifth line.

c This last is the legal phraseology of receipts, by which all future claim is renounced. From the end of l. 19 on we have additional enactments not found in the corresponding clause of the Hittite obligations.

d The persons who flee are of two classes: "great men" and "men who are not known," viz., people of no consequence from the Egyptian point of view, but merely mechanics, artisans or servants.

e These, being people of no rank, come only "to the land of Kheta;" but the "great men" go personally "to the great chief of Kheta." The verb used for the "great men" shows also the distinction between the two classes; it is ṣṣp, "receive," whereas, referring to the unknown persons, we find w ṣ ḫ (possibly "admit"), probably "settle," that is, allow them to settle down (but w ṣ ḫ is also used once of the "great men," l. 24).
Extradition of Political Fugitives in Egypt

384. 11. Or if any great man shall flee from the land of Kheta, [and he shall come to] Usermare-Setepnere, the great ruler of Egypt, (from) either a town or a district,\(^a\) or \(^a[any region of] those belonging to the land of Kheta, and they shall come to Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, then Usermare-Setepnere, the great ruler of Egypt, shall not receive them, (but) Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, shall cause them to be brought to the great chief of Kheta. \(\) They shall not be settled.

Extradition of Emigrants to Egypt

385. 12. Likewise, if there flee a man, or two, or three, \(^a[who are not] known, and they shall come to the land of Egypt, to become foreign subjects, then Usermare-Setepnere, the great ruler of Egypt, shall not settle them, (but) he shall cause them to be brought to the great chief of Kheta.

The Witness of the Gods of Kheta and Egypt

386. 13. As for the words of this contract of the great chief of Kheta, with Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, written upon this silver tablet; as for these words, a thousand gods of the male gods and of the female gods, of those of the land of Kheta, together with a thousand gods, of the male gods and of the female gods of those of the land of Egypt, they are with me as witnesses [to] these words: the Sun-god, lord of the heavens, the Sun-god, of the city of Ernen (\(\mathcal{D}^3-pw-y^3-r^3-n^3-d^3\)), Sutekh, the lord of the heavens, Sutekh of Kheta, Sutekh of the city of Ernen, Sutekh of the city Zepyaned (\(\mathcal{D}^3-pw-y^3-r^3-n-d^3\)), Sutekh of the city of Perek (\(P^3-y-r^3-k^3\)), Sutekh of the city of Khesesep (\(\mathcal{H}^3-y-s^3-s^3-p^3\)), Sutekh of the city Seres (\(S^3-ry-sw\)), Sutekh of the city of Aleppo (\(\mathcal{H}^3-y-r^3-p^3\)), Sutekh of the city of Rekhsen (\(R^3-h^3-sy-n^3\)), Sutekh \(~[of the city of —], \) Sutekh of the \(^b\) We expect here the name of the Hittite king; hence the above (Müller) is very uncertain.

Curse on the Violator of the Treaty

387. 14. Now, these words, which are upon this silver tablet, are for the land of Kheta and for the land of Egypt. As for him who shall not keep them, the thousand gods of the land of Kheta, and the thousand gods of the land of Egypt shall desolate his house, his land, and his subjects.

Blessing on the Observer of the Treaty

388. 15. Now as for him who shall keep these words, which are upon this silver tablet, whether they be of Kheta, or whether they be people of Egypt, and they shall not devise (aught) against them; the thousand gods of the land of Kheta, together with the thousand gods of the land of Egypt, shall preserve his health, and his life, together with his issue, with his land, and his subjects.

Treatment of Extradited Persons by Kheta

389. 16. If a man flee from the land of Egypt, or two or three, and come to the great chief of Kheta, the great chief of Kheta shall seize upon them, and shall cause them to be brought back to Usermare-Setepnere, the great ruler of Egypt. Now, as for the man who shall be brought (back) to Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, let not his crime be set up against him; let not his house be injured, nor his wives, nor his children, [let] him [not be killed], and let no injury be done to his eyes, to his ears, to his mouth, nor to his feet. Let not any crime be set up against him.

Treatment of Extradited Persons by Egypt

390. 17. Likewise if a man flee from the land of Kheta, be it one, be it two, (or) be it three, and they shall come to Usermare-Setepnere, the great ruler of Egypt, let Ramses-Meriamon, the great ruler of Egypt, seize upon them, and let him cause that they be brought to the great chief of Kheta; and the great chief of Kheta shall not set up their crime against them; let not his house be injured, nor his wives, nor his children, let him not be killed, and let no injury be done to his ears, to his eyes, to his mouth, nor to his feet. Let not any crime be set up against him.

Figures and Seals on the Front of the Silver Plate

391. 18. That which is in the middle of this silver tablet: on its front side is a figure in the likeness of Sutekh embracing the likeness of the great chief of Kheta, surrounded by the following words: “The seal of Sutekh, the ruler of the heavens; the seal of the treaty which Khetasar, the great chief of Kheta, the valiant, the son of Merasar (M-r 3 s 3 r 3 ), the valiant, the great chief of Kheta, the valiant, made.”

aFrom here on, see Bouriant’s reconstruction, Recueil, XIV, 68, 69.

bThat this phrase begins the description of the silver plate is self-evident; but is rendered still more clear by the parallel phrase in l. 37 and l. 38.

cThis word (hpyw) is the usual one for inlay-figures in descriptions of Egyptian monuments; it may equally well mean “design” or “device.” The sculptures of Boghazkoi show a figure of the Hittite ruler embraced by his god (see Messerschmidt, Corpus Inscriptionum Hettitarum, Taf. 27 E; di Cara, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, 13, 196; and Müller, Vorderasiatische Gesellschaft, VII, 233 f.). [Later: Krall’s review of Müller’s publication of the text contains the same explanation of the figures on the plate.]
That\textsuperscript{a} which is in the midst of the surrounding design\textsuperscript{b} is the seal \[of Sutekh, the ruler of the heavens]. \[That which is \textit{in the middle\textsuperscript{3}} on\] its other side is a figure, in the likeness of \[\textit{of} \text{Kheta, embracing the figure of the princess of Kheta, surrounded by the following words:}\]

"The seal of the \textsuperscript{38}Sun-god of the city of Ernen \[\(\text{r-n-n}\)], the lord of the land; the seal of Petkhep \[\(\text{Pw-tw-hy-p}\)], the princess\textsuperscript{d} of the land of Kheta, the daughter of the land of Kezweden \[\(\text{K y-d}\textsuperscript{3} -w\textsuperscript{2}-d-n\)], the \[\textit{of} \text{Ernen, the mistress of the land, the votress of the goddess.}\]

That which is in the midst of the surrounding design is the seal of the Sun-god of Ernen, the lord of every land."

RELATIONS OF EGYPT WITH THE HITTITES AFTER THE WAR

\[\text{392.}\] Ramses II regarded the conclusion of his war with the Hittites as a triumph for himself. Peace once established, he referred to himself continually as the conqueror of the Hittites.\textsuperscript{e} Especially at Abu Simbel is this noticeable, where his inscriptions speak of him as one:

"Who has made the land of Kush as if it had not existed; who has caused the land of Kheta to cease the contradiction of its mouth . . . . smiter of the land of Kheta . . . . . smiter of the land of Kheta, which is made heaps of dead."\textsuperscript{f}

This attitude is also evident in his obelisk inscriptions, e. g., at Tanis he is spoken of as "\textit{carrying off the chiefs of Retenu as living prisoners, crushing the land of Kheta;}"

\begin{itemize}
  \item \textsuperscript{a}So here and in l. 38, as the duplicate (Sharpe's copy) shows.
  \item \textsuperscript{b}Lit., \"the surrounding of the design;\" the same also in the last line.
  \item \textsuperscript{d}Lit., \"chietlainess,\" being the feminine \([\text{wr}\text{t}]\) of the word which we render \"chief\" \([\text{wr}]\), lit., \"great one.\"
  \item \textsuperscript{e}Besides the following, it should be noticed that the latest copies of the Kadesh Poem represent Ramses in the same light (see Müller, \textit{Asien und Europa}, 216, n. 1; and infra, § 314, n.).

and again, "penetrating this land of Kheta, capturing it with valor, making a great slaughter among his heroes."a

393. This is the light then, in which the Egyptians chose to represent their relations with Kheta. But the peace was not broken, and we are able to trace the amicable relations between the two nations through the thirty-fifth year of Ramses' reign, and we know it continued also into that of his successor. The documents are:

I. Blessing of Ptah (§§ 394-414).
II. Marriage Stela (§§ 415-24).
III. Message of the Chief of Kheta to the Chief of Kode (§§ 425, 426).
IV. Coptos Stela (§§ 427, 428).
V. Bentresh Stela (§§ 429-447).

I. THE BLESSING OF PTAHb

394. This remarkable document contains a long address of Ptah to Ramses II, which promises him all possible good fortune (ll. 3-28). To this Ramses replies by enumerating some of his good works for the god (ll. 29-37). The document is chiefly of religious interest, but both addresses contain references to historical events of importance.

395. The speech of Ptah mentions his building of the aAll of Ramses II's obelisks were erected at least nine years after the close of the Hittite war; the above texts are translated from Petrie, Tanis, I, VII, No. 45, and VIII, No. 49.

The document was later appropriated by Ramses III and engraved by him upon the first pylon of the Medinet Habu Temple, published by Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, I, 7-10; Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, II, 131-38. The translation herein is made with constant reference to the later version (called M), which is very useful, as the older text (called A) omits the first person singular ending frequently and is in places corrupt. Important variants from M are given in the notes.
residence city, Tanis (ll. 16–18), and the visit of the Hittite king (ll. 24–28), bringing his eldest daughter, which had occurred in the year 34, a year before the erection of our stela. It furnishes us with a shorter account of the incident than the Marriage Stela (§§415–24). It is interesting to note that the visit is attributed to the influence of Ptah (ll. 15 and 25), just as in the Coptos Stela (§§427, 428), which refers to the same or a similar incident.

396. The reply of Ramses mentions in particular his temple buildings at Memphis (ll. 32–34) and their endowment (ll. 34, 35).

397. A relief at the top of the stela shows Ramses II smiting three Asiatic enemies before Ptah-Tatenen, who is leading to him six captives, one of whom is a Negro, and the rest are bearded; but, as the names show, the latter should be Negroes (p. 202, n. c). The inscription below, of thirty-seven lines, is as follows:

398. ¹Year 35, first month of the second season, day 13, under the majesty of . . . . . . Ramses II,a given life.

Introduction

my champion, that thou wouldst indeed do profitable things for my ka. I fashioned thee to rise like Re, exalted thee before the gods, King Ramses II, given life. The companions of Ptah jubilate, thy Meskhenet rejoices in jubilation since they have seen me, a likeness to my august, great, and mighty body. The priestesses of the house of Ptah, the Hathors of the house of Atum are in festivity, their hearts are in joy. Their hands are uplifted in acclaim since they have seen thy beautiful form. Thy amiability is like my majesty; the gods and goddesses acclaim thy beauty, praising, and assigning to me laudation, saying: "Thou art our august father, who hast fashioned for us a god like thee, Ramses II, given life."

Ptah Promises Happiness

401. "When I see thee my heart rejoices, and I receive thee in an embrace of gold, I enfold thee with permanence, stability and satisfaction; I endow thee with health and joy of heart; I immerse thee in rejoicing, joy, gladness of heart, and delights,—forever."

Ptah Promises Wisdom

402. "I make thy heart divine like me, I choose thee, I weigh thee, I prepare thee, that thy heart may discern, that thy utterance may be profitable. There is nothing whatever which thou dost not know, (for) I have completed thee this day and before, that thou mayest make all men live by thy instruction, O King Ramses II, given life."

Ptah Promises Power

403. "I have set thee as everlasting king, ruler established forever. I have wrought thy limbs of electrum, thy bones of copper, thy organs of iron. I have given to thee the divine office, that thou mayest rule the Two Lands like the King of Upper and Lower Egypt."
Ptah Promises Agricultural Wealth

404. "I give thee a great Nile, I endow for thee the Two Lands with wealth, produce, food, and luxuries, giving plenty in every place where thou treadest; I give to thee constant harvests, to feed the Two Lands at all times; the sheaves thereof are like the sand of the shore, their granaries approach heaven, and their grain-heaps are like mountains. There is joy and laudation at seeing thee, (for) plenty of fish and fowl are under thy feet. The South and North are satisfied with thy ka. Heaven is given to thee and that which is in it; earth is led to thee and that which is in it; the pool comes to thee bearing its fowl. Harsekhaf bears her provisions, the best of the ka of Re; Thoth has set them on thy every side, that thou mayest open thy mouth, to enrich whom thou pleasest, according as thou art the living Khnum, and thy dominion is in victory and might like (that of) Re when he ruled the Two Lands, O King Ramses II, given life."

Ptah Promises Mineral and Industrial Wealth

405. "I cause the mountains to shape for thee great, mighty, perfected monuments; I cause the countries to fashion for thee splendid, costly stone, for employment in monuments in thy name. I make profitable for thee all works; I cause all labor to serve thee, everything that goes on two legs, (or) upon four legs, everything that flies, and all that soars. I put it into the heart of every land to offer and to labor for thee themselves; chiefs, great and small, with one accord do profitable things for thy ka, King Ramses II, given life."
Ramses’ Residence City and its Buildings

406. “Thou hast made an august residence, to make strong the boundary of the Two Lands (named): “House-of-Ramses-Meriamon-Given-Life,” a that it may flourish on earth like the four pillars of heaven — — — a sovereign therein, a that thou mayest celebrate the royal jubilees that I celebrated therein. I put on thy crown with my own two hands, when thou appearest upon the great double staircase. Men and gods acclaim thy name b like mine when thou celebratest the royal jubilees. b Thou fashionest the statues, thou buildest their holy places as I c did at the first beginning.”

Ptah Promises Long Life and Prosperity

407. “I give to thee years of royal jubilees, my rule, my place, my throne. I endow thy limbs with life, satisfaction and protection behind thee, d with prosperity and health. I protect Egypt under thy authority, the Two Lands are diffused with the satisfying life of Ramses II, given life.”

Ptah Promises Power

408. “I have set for thee the might, victory, and strength of thy sword in every land, I have bound for thee the hearts of all lands, e I have set them beneath thy feet. When thou appearest every day, f the captives of the Nine Bows are brought to thee, the great chiefs of every land present to thee their children, I assign them to thy mighty sword, to do what thou pleasest with them, g O King Ramses II, given life. Ptah the Author of Ramses' Prosperity

409. "I cause to befall thee thy great wonders, and every good thing to happen to thee. The Two Lands under thee are in acclamation, Egypt flourishes, rejoicing, O Ramses II, given life. I have transferred my dignity to thee; thy great and marvelous excellence approaches heaven; the Two Lands are in joy, they who are therein rejoice at that which has happened to thee. As for the mountains, the waters, and the buildings upon the land, they remove at thy good name, when they behold this command."

Visit of the Hittites

410. Reply of Ramses

411. "Utterance of the divine king, Lord of the Two Lands, lord of the form of a Khepri, in whose limbs is Re, who came forth from Re, whom Ptah-Tatenen begat, King Ramses II, given life; to his father, from whom he came forth, Tatenen, father of the gods: "I am thy son whom thou hast placed upon thy throne. Thou hast assigned to me thy kingdom, thou hast fashioned me in thy likeness and thy form, which thou hast assigned to me and hast created. I shall do again every good thing that thou desirest, while I am sole lord, as thou wast, to settle the affairs of the land. I have created Egypt for thee anew, I have made it as at the beginning, I have wrought the gods' forms from thy limbs, even to their color and to their bodies; I have equipped Egypt according to their desire, I have built it up with temples."

Building of Memphis Temple

412. "I have enlarged thy house in Memphis, protected with everlasting works, with excellent labor, in stone, wrought with gold and genuine costly stones, I constructed thy forecourt on the north with an august double façade before thee. Their doors are like the horizon of heaven, causing (even) strangers to praise thee. I made for thee an august temple in the midst of the inclosure. Thou god, whom I have fashioned, art in its secret chapel, resting upon its great throne."

Endowment of Memphis Temple

413. "It is equipped with priests, prophets, peasant-slaves, lands, and cattle. It is made festive with innumerable divine offerings consisting of all things. I have celebrated thy great feast of royal jubilees, as thou commandest them me. All things that are, are brought to thee in great offerings, at thy desire: bulls (wn-dw), cattle beyond limit. I have brought all their number in millions; as for the fat thereof, it has reached heaven, and the dwellers in heaven have received it."

Foreign Conquests

I have branded the people of the Nine Bows and the whole land with thy name, they belong to thy ka, forever, for thou art the creator of them; by command of this thy son, who is upon thy throne, 37lord of gods and men, sovereign celebrating the jubilees like thee \(^1\) when thou bearest the two sistrems, \(^a\) son of the white crown, heir of the red crown, \(^a\) possessing the Two Lands in peace, Ramses II, given life, forever and ever."

II. MARRIAGE STELA \(^b\)

415. This monument enables us to trace more fully the further relations between Egypt and the Hittites after the peace had been negotiated. A relief at the top shows the king of the Hittites and his daughter in the presence of Ramses. Before the daughter are the words: "Matnejrure,\(^c\) daughter of the chief of Kheta." A mutilated inscription accompanying the two visitors contained their words of praise to Ramses II. The beginning is entirely lost for five lines, where it proceeds:\(^d\)

Speech of King of Kheta

Thou didst command the land of Kheta, thou takest captive the people — with all their possessions, the eldest\(^e\) daughter being at their

\(^a\)Amend so; see Naville's commentary.

\(^b\)Cut in the face of the south wall of the excavated court in front of the temple of Abu Simbel. The lower half being covered by sand, Lepsius saw only the relief at the top and eighteen lines (of the forty-one lines) below; this much he published (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 196), but without indication that it was not the whole. The entire inscription, without the relief, was published by Bouriant (Recueil, XVIII, 164–66). In l. 36–39, I was able to control Bouriant's publication by the copy of Steindorff, which he kindly placed at my disposal. The original is much mutilated, and so indistinct that some passages have been omitted as too uncertain in text for translation.

\(^c\)Misread by Lepsius; for proper reading, see § 417.

\(^d\)Bouriant did not copy this; the following translation is made from Steindorff's copy of the original.

\(^e\)As the Hittite king is speaking, one expects "my daughter" as in l. 32 of the long inscription, which repeats these words.
head, to — — — before thy beautiful face. Thou commandest them — — under thy feet forever and ever, together with the whole land of Kheta. While thou shinest upon the throne of Re, every land is under [thy] feet, forever.

416. Below the relief is a long inscription of forty-one lines beginning with the date "year 34," Three-fourths (twenty-nine lines) of this inscription are devoted to an extravagant encomium of the Pharaoh, containing only the hackneyed phrases of conventional praise, relieved by two references to the defeat of Kheta. The last fourth of the document (ll. 30–41) then proceeds with an incident, of which the mutilated condition of the monument and the excessively inaccurate publication permit us to gain only the meagerest outline. After a reference to the treaty of peace, the king of the Hittites is represented as reverting to their defeat by Ramses, and he apparently proposes that they proceed to Egypt. This they do, bringing rich gifts, and the news soon reaches Ramses, who is filled with delight, and prepares to receive his visitors; the chiefs of Kheta, Kode, and "the chiefs of every land." He seems to be concerned for their arrival in the uncertainties of winter travel, and offers an oblation to Sutekh on their behalf. When finally, with the escort he had sent to meet them, they arrive in safety, they appear with the Hittite king’s eldest daughter at their head, the troops of Egypt "mingling with the foot and horse of Kheta." A great feast seems to have been immediately held, where those who had once faced each other in combat now eat and drink together, while the Asiatic princes approach the Pharaoh in audience.

417. It is probably at this feast that the Hittite princess thus brought to Egypt was married to Ramses. The historical character of this marriage is further evidenced by the colossus of Ramses II at Tanis, attached to which is a statue of a queen bearing the inscription:

aMariette, Recueil, IX, 13; Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 74; Petrie, Tanis, I, 24, Pl. 5, 36 B.
"Great king's-wife, mistress (ḥn·t) of the Two Lands: Matnefrure (M ∕ nfr · w · Rc), daughter of the great chief of Kheta."

This inscription, therefore, renders unquestionable the main facts of the following narrative on the Marriage Stela.

The Treaty of Peace

418. The chief of Kheta sent, asking of me permanent peace. Never did he — for them. Now after the great fame of the Lord of the Two Lands, King Ramses (II).

419. Then spake the chief of the land of Kheta to his army and his nobles, saying: "Now is our land devastated; Sutekh is our lord to protect us, (but) he has not fighting with them. We have been taken captive with all our possessions; my eldest daughter being before them."

420. Then they came with their possessions, and their splendid gifts before them, of silver and gold, marvels many and great, horses to — them, — living things.

His majesty received the word—[in] the palace, with joy of heart.

Ramses Makes Preparations to Receive Them

422. When he heard such strange and unexpected matters... he commanded the army and the princes to receive in front of them in haste.

Ramses' Sacrifices to Sutekh for Good Weather

423. Then his majesty took counsel with his own heart, saying: "What are these newcomers like! When there goes not a messenger to Zahi (D ² -h ²) in these days of flood on the upper heights in winter. Then he offered an oblation for and for Sutekh. Then he came praying, saying: "Heaven is and earth is under thy feet. That which thou commandest is all that happens. Thou—to make the flood and the cold upon the heights... which thou hast assigned to me, King Ramses (II)."

Then his father, Sutekh, heard every word... ARRIVAL OF RAMSES' ESCORT WITH THE VISITORS

424. His army came, their limbs being sound, and they were long in stride... The daughter of the great chief of Kheta marched in front of his majesty in following her. They were mingled with foot and horse of Kheta; they were warriors as well as regulars; they ate and they drank not fighting face to face... between them, after the manner of the *a*This is probably the "army" escort of the visitors, by which term ("army") Ramses refers to the whole expedition now on the way to Egypt.

*b*Lit., "they go not by messenger," or "as a messenger."

*c*Bouriant has miscopied the word, as is shown by its second occurrence in this same line; it is perhaps k², "height."

*d*It is evident that Ramses expresses to himself here his wonder that these visitors are coming in the winter rainy season, when hardly a state messenger could reach Zahi; though the language he uses is obscure and difficult. He now offers to Sutekh a gift for the sake of good weather and the safe arrival of the visitors. The similar reference in the poem (§ 426) on the same occasion to Ramses' power over rain and storm is hardly accidental. The author of the poem knew of the Abu Simbel Stela. For a similar offering for favorable weather on a voyage, see Punt Expedition (II, 252).

god himself, King Ramses (II). The great chiefs of every land came; they were bowed down, turning back in fear, when they saw [his majesty; the chief of] Kheta ['came'] among them, [to seek the favor] of King Ramses (II).

III. MESSAGE OF THE CHIEF OF KHETA TO THE CHIEF OF KODE

425. This poetic fragment perhaps indicates that Ramses II invited the chief of Kheta and other Asiatic chiefs, at least the chief of Kode, to Egypt, and this invitation a court poet of course regards as a command (Poem below, l. 2). To this invitation the Abu Simbel stela (§§ 415–24) makes no reference, and the whole ten-line poem, being of course only the fancy of a court poet to embellish his description of the glories of Ramses' capitol, to which the Hittite visitors came, may have no foundation in fact. Such a visit, however, and the marriage alliance which it consummated, as we know from the Amarna Letters, must have occasioned much preliminary correspondence, of which this poem offers us a hint.

426. The great chief (wr-£) of Kheta sent to the chief (wr) of Kode (saying):

"Equip thyself that we may proceed to Egypt,
That we may say: 'The behest of the god comes to pass;'
Let us make overtures to Ramses II, L. P. H.,
For he gives breath to whom he will,
And every country lies at his disposition.
Kheta is in his power alone,
If the god accepts not his offering,
It (Kheta) sees no rain,\(^b\)
For it is in the power of Ramses (II), L. P. H.,
The Bull, loving valor."

\(^a\)Papyrus Anastasi II, Pl. II, ll. 1–5 = ibid. IV, Pl. VI, ll. 7–10. Their connection with the Hittite king's visit was first noted by Erman, Aegypten, 707.

\(^b\)Lit., "water of heaven;" it can hardly be an accident that the prose account (§ 423) also narrates an instance of Ramses' power with the god in respect of rain and storm.
IV. COPTOS STELA

427. This document recorded the visit to Egypt of a number of the Asiatic princes bearing gifts for the Pharaoh. It is a visit precisely like that of the Hittite king (§ 410) and his neighbors, and reference is made to "his other daughter," as if another princess were being brought to Ramses in marriage. As the mention of this princess occurs directly after a reference to Keshkesh, one of the allies of the Hittite king; as the envoys are later (l. 13) said to be "the children of the great chiefs of the land of Kheta," and as there is a reference to a coming "to Egypt for the second time," this may possibly be the account of Ramses' marriage to a second Hittite princess. The pious priests attribute both the visit and the gifts, to the gods (l. 9), and particularly, among the gods of Egypt, to Ptah, precisely as is done in the Blessing of Ptah in referring to the visit of the Hittite king with his daughter (§ 410, l. 25).

428. 3b ——— [chiefs of]c all countries conveying their tribute, 4——— of much gold, of much silver, of all costly stones, 5——— very many captives of Keshkesh (Kš-kš), many captives of[if]——— in writing for King Ramses (II) 7——— many [herds] of goats, many herds of small cattled before his other daughter 8——— Ramses II, given life, to Egypt for the second time. It was not troops who brought them; it was not 9——— [the god]s of the land of Egypt, aA "black quartzose" stela found by Petrie in the Coptos temple; it had contained an older, probably Middle Kingdom, inscription, which Ramses II had dressed off for the reception of his own inscription (Petrie, Coptos, 15). It has been broken so that about half the document is missing, the line of breakage being from the beginning of the first to the end of the last line. Text, ibid., XVIII; I had also a copy by Schaefer, which added a little at the broken edge, and furnished one correction.

bThe extreme ends of the first two lines show remains of the titulary.

cBoth the following context and the remains seen by Schaefer render this restoration probable, if not certain.

the gods of every country, while they caused the great chiefs of every country to convey their — themselves to King Ramses (II), given life. to convey their gold, to convey their silver, to convey their vessels of green stone to King Ramses (II), given life; to bring their herds of horses, to bring their herds of their herds of goats, to bring their herds of large cattle. The children of the great chiefs of the land of Kheta came bearing them themselves, from the boundaries of the lands of King Ramses (II), given life; themselves. It was not a prince who came to bring them, it was not the infantry who came to bring them, it was not the chariotry who came to bring them, it was not the mercenaries who went to bring them; it was Ptah, father of the gods, who has put all lands, and all countries under the feet of this Good God, forever and ever.

V. BENTRESH STELA

429. It is clear that the visit of the Hittite king to Egypt was for the purpose of personally presenting his daughter to Ramses II in marriage. This marriage made a great impression upon the people, and the story of it circulated among them as the introduction to a legend which had grown up from another incident closely connected with the marriage. In the Eighteenth Dynasty, Dushratta, king of Mitanni, sent to Egypt the goddess Ishtar of Ninevah, in the year 35 or 36 of Amenhotep III, doubtless for the sake aRemains of the determinative of the verb of going may be seen.

bDiscovered by Rosellini in a small temple of Graeco-Roman age now perished, which stood by the Khonsu-temple at Karnak (Erman, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 58; Rosellini, Monumenti Storici, II, 48 f.; but when first seen by Champollion it was in the "ruines du Sud-Est" (Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 280). It was carried to Paris by Prisse, and is now in the Bibliothèque Nationale. It was published by him (Monuments égyptiens, XXIV) afterwards from Champollion's copy (Notices descriptives, II, 280-90); Birch, Egyptian Texts, 77-81; Rougé, Etude sur une stèle égyptienne appartenant à la Bibliothèque Impériale, Paris, 1858 (extrait du Journal Asiatique, August, 1856; August, 1857, June and August to September, 1858; Rheinisich, Chrestomathie, Taf. 12; finally Ledrain, Les monuments Eg. de la Bib. of the old king's health; she had likewise gone to Egypt in the time of Dushratta's father. The chief of Kheta sent in like manner to Egypt, desiring that Khonsu be brought to Kheta for the purpose of healing his daughter, the younger sister of Ramses' queen, Matnefrure. This was done, and although no contemporary record of the incident has survived, it gradually found place among the folk-tales of the time.

430. Some eight or nine hundred years later, in Persian or early Greek times, the priests of Khonsu at Thebes determined to record the story to the greater glory of their god. They put the current tale into language as archaic as they could command, and engraved it upon a stela, which is now our source for the document. In doing this they evidently found some difficulty. The current version, of course, spoke of the king only as Ramses or Ramses-Meriamon. The priests, desiring to lend an official air to their stela, attempted to prefix to the king's name his full titulary, and in doing so used that of Thutmose IV! Nor was their knowledge sufficient to correct the errors or remove the absurdities of the popular version of the story. They consistently carry through seventeen months as the length of time necessary to go from Egypt to Bekhten (Bhịm), a land otherwise unknown; Nefrure, a corruption of Matnefrure, the real name of the Hittite chief's daughter; a date before the year 23 for the marriage of Matnefrure, which cThe real age and origin of the Bentresh Stela were first noticed by Erman (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 54 ff.), but as the earlier case of Ishtar (Amarna Letters, ed. Winckler, 20) was then unknown, Erman naturally denied the content of the stela much of an historical basis.

really took place in the year 34—these and other errors, which will be evident to the reader, were calmly accepted by the priestly editors. Incidentally, this document therefore shows clearly how utterly ignorant of earlier Egyptian history were these late priests; and suggests caution in the use of the priest Manetho's work, who lived at about the time when this tale was put into writing.

431. The upper fourth of the stela is occupied by a relief, showing on either side the two sacred barques of the Khonsu's borne on the shoulders of priests. That on the right is Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest, to whom Ramses II is offering incense; while that on the left belongs to "Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes, Great God, Smiter of Evil Spirits." Before him his priest, offering incense, is accompanied by the inscription:

432. The name of the prophet, priest of Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes, is Khonsuhetneterneb (H₇sw-h₃t-ntr-nb't, sic!).

Below the relief is the long inscription, as follows:

Introduction

433. ¹Horus: Mighty Bull, Likeness of Diadems, Abiding in Kingship, like Atum; Golden Horus: Mighty of Strength, Expelling the Nine Bows;² King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Setepnere; Son of Re, of his Body: Ramses-Meriamon, ³beloved of Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, and all the gods of Thebes. . . .

²These three names (the second title, "Favorite of the Two Goddesses," has been omitted before "Abiding, etc.") are those of Thutmose IV! The last two, however, show clearly that Ramses II is meant.

peace, because of the fame of his majesty. From the marshes a was their tribute; silver, gold, lapis lazuli, b malachite and every sweet wood of God's-Land were upon their backs, each one leading his neighbor.

Marriage of Ramses and Chief of Bekhten's Daughter

435. Then the chief of Bekhten (Bḥtn) caused his tribute to be brought, and he placed his eldest daughter in front thereof, b praising his majesty, and craving life from him. Now, c she was exceedingly beautiful to the heart of his majesty, beyond everything. Then they affixed c her titulary as: "Great King's-Wife, Nefrure (Nfr·w-R)." d When his majesty arrived in Egypt, she fulfilled all the functions of king's-wife.

Arrival of the Messenger from Bekhten

436. When the year 23, the tenth month, the twenty-second day, came, while his majesty was in Thebes, the victorious, the mistress of cities, performing the pleasing ceremonies of his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, at his beautiful feast of Southern Opet (Luxor), his favorite seat, of the beginning (of the world), came one to say to his majesty: "A messenger of the chief of Bekhten has come, bearing many gifts for the King's-Wife." Then he was brought before his majesty together with his gifts. He said, praising his majesty: "Praise to thee, Sun of the Nine Bows! Give us life from thee." So spake he, smelling the earth before his majesty. He spake again before his majesty: "I come to thee, 9O king, my lord, on account of Bentresh (B-n-t-r-ꜣ), thy great e sister of the King's-Wife, Nefrure. Sickness has penetrated into f her limbs. May thy majesty send a wise man to see her."

a At the northern limits of the earth. The division may be wrong here; "from the marshes" goes better with the verb "came," but too much seems to intervene. The following would then be: "Their tribute, silver, etc., were upon their, etc."

b Exactly as in the documents on the coming of Matnefrure, especially the Ptah Stela (§ 410), with which the above passage is also in verbal agreement.

c To all seals and documents; that is, she takes an official Egyptian name on becoming a queen. On the use of this word "affix" (wād), see my New Chapter (Sethe, Untersuchungen, II, 2, 19, 20).

d This is, of course, an error of the late priests for M·t-nfr·w-R, the real name of the Hittite king's daughter (§ 417).

e Possibly to be rendered "oldest."

f Lit., "has mingled with."
Dispatch of the Wise Man to Bekhten

437. Then said his majesty: "Bring to me the sacred scribes and the officials of the court." They were led to him immediately. Said his majesty: "Let one read to you, till ye hear this thing. Then bring to me one experienced in his heart, who can write with his fingers, from your midst." The king's scribe, Thutemhab, came before his majesty, and his majesty commanded that he go to Bekhten together with this messenger.

Arrival of the Wise Man in Bekhten

438. The wise man arrived in Bekhten; he found Bentresh in the condition of one possessed of a spirit. He found unable to contend with him.

Message of the Chief of Bekhten to Ramses

439. The chief of Bekhten repeated in the presence of his majesty, saying: "O king, my lord, let his majesty command to have this god brought ——."e Then the wise man whom his majesty had sent, returned to his majesty in the year 26, the ninth month, at the feast of Amon, while his majesty was in Thebes.

a Tt nt pr c nh = lit., "those in charge of the writings of the house of life," a title especially common in Ptolemaic times. In the Canopus Decree it is rendered by the Greek θεογραμματεῖς.

b A man of this name and of the same office lived in the time of Ramses II, and his stela is in Leyden (Lieblein, 884; Erman, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 55).

c Sw for sy; several words, now no longer visible on the stone here, were seen and copied by Prisse, but more correctly by Rheinisch.

d This alone would indicate that the chief of Bekhten, finding the wise man unable to cast out the spirit, went himself to Egypt to ask that the god be sent to do so. The loss between the two parts of the stela, just below this point, makes it difficult to trace the connection, but it seems more probable that the words of the chief of Bekhten are a message, sent by the returning wise man to Ramses, for it is clear that he received some message at the beginning of l. 13; and, further, the chief of Bekhten is found in Bekhten by the god on his arrival there. The chief therefore certainly remained in Bekhten.

e Lacuna of uncertain length, between the two fragments of the stela.

f As the god later consumes one year and five months (l. 17) in going to Bekhten, the round trip between Egypt and Bekhten should take some thirty-four months. This exactly suits the above passage, according to which the returning wise man has been absent nearly three years, which allows for a short stay in Bekhten.
Ramses' Interview with the Two Khonsu's

440. Then his majesty repeated (it) before Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest, saying: "O my good lord, I repeat before thee concerning the daughter of the chief of Bekhten." Then they led Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest to Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker, the great god, smiting the evil spirits. Then said his majesty before Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest: "O thou good lord, if thou inclinest thy face to Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker, the great god, smiting the evil spirits, he shall be conveyed to Bekhten." There was violent nodding. Then said his majesty: "Send thy protection with him, that I may cause his majesty to go to Bekhten, to save the daughter of the chief of Bekhten." Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest nodded the head violently. Then he wrought the protection of Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes, four times.

Departure of Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker

441. His majesty commanded to cause Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes to proceed to a great ship, five transports (k̪k̪·t̪), numerous chariots and horses of the west and the east.

Arrival of the God in Bekhten

442. This god arrived in Bekhten in a full year and five months. Then the chief of Bekhten came, with his soldiers and his nobles, before Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker. He threw himself upon his belly, saying: "Thou comest to us, thou art welcome with us, by command of the King Usermare-Setepnere (Ramses II)."

Cure of Bentresh

443. Then this god went to the place where Bentresh was. Then he wrought the protection of the daughter of the chief of Bekhten. She became well immediately.

Conciliation of the Spirit

444. Then said this spirit which was in her before Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes: "Thou comest in peace, thou great god, smiting the barbarians. Thy city is Bekhten, thy servants are its people, I am thy servant. I will go to the place whence I came, to satisfy thy..."

heart concerning that, on account of which thou comest. (But) let thy majesty command to celebrate a feast-day with me and with the chief of Bekhten.” Then this god nodded to his priest, saying: “Let the chief of Bekhten make a great offering before this spirit.” While these things were happening, which Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes wrought with the spirit, the chief of Bekhten stood with his soldiers, and feared very greatly. Then he made a great offering before Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes and the spirit; and the chief of Bekhten celebrated a feast-day with them. Then the spirit departed in peace to the place he desired, by command of Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes, and the chief of Bekhten rejoiced very greatly, together with every man who was in Bekhten.

Retention of the God in Bekhten

445. Then he took counsel with his heart, saying: “I will cause this god to remain with me in Bekhten; I will not permit that he return to Egypt.” Then this god tarried three years and nine months in Bekhten.

Vision of the Chief of Bekhten

Then the chief of Bekhten slept upon his bed, and he saw this god coming to him, to forsake his shrine; he was a hawk of gold, and he flew upward toward Egypt. He (the chief) awoke in fright.

Departure of the God for Egypt

446. Then he said to the priest of Khonsu-the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes: “This god, he is still with us; let him depart to Egypt; let his chariot depart to Egypt.” Then the chief of Bekhten caused this god to proceed to Egypt, and gave to him very many gifts of every good thing, very many soldiers and horses.

Arrival of the God in Egypt

447. They arrived in peace at Thebes. Then came the city of Thebes, and the-Plan-Maker-in-Thebes to the house of Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest. He set the gifts which the chief of Bekhten had given to him, of good things, before Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest, (but) he gave not every thing thereof into his house. Khonsu-the-

Plan-Maker-in-Thebes arrived at his place in peace in the year 33, the second month, the ninth day, of King Usermare-Setepnere; that he might be given life like Re, forever.

NUBIAN WARS AND REFERENCES TO NORTHERN WARS

448. The temples of Nubia contain many references of an indefinite character to Ramses II's Nubian wars, from which it is impossible to gain any idea of them, the localities conquered, or the date of the campaigns. These references are often so mingled with those of the northern wars against the Asiacs and Libyans that it is not possible to separate and classify them all. They are continued through the temples of Egypt also. Of the Libyan war we learn little more than the fact, though the Tanis Stela furnishes an important hint of an alliance of the Libyans with the Sherden and a naval battle (§ 491). To our knowledge of aThe round trip consumed 34 months (1 year and 5 months each way, l. 17), and he had remained in Bekhten 45 months (l. 24), a total absence of 79 months, or 6 years and 7 months. As he left Egypt in the ninth month of the year 26 (l. 13, date of wise man's return to summon him), if that date be late in the year 26, an absence of 6 years and 7 months would put his return in the year 33, as the priestly author of the inscription has done.

bScenes showing Ramses sacrificing foreign captives of the north and south are found in practically all his temples; e.g., at the Ramesseum (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 159, b), where we find beside the scene the words: "Slaying their chiefs, making them as if they had not been;" and again: "The chiefs of the countries of the south and the north, whom his majesty carried away as living captives." On his obelisks also there are very general references to his wars; thus at Tanis (Petrie, Tanis, I, VII, No. 45) he is called one, "capturing Nubia by his valor, wasting Tehenu;" and "great in valor like a bull in Retenu;" again (ibid., No. 47): "carrying off the chiefs of Retenu as living prisoners, crushing the land of Kheta." At Kurna, in the temple, some divinity addressed Ramses thus (Piehl, Inscriptions, I, 145 A): "—— the gods of Khenthennofer and Wawat in their nomes, and lands; the chiefs of God's-Land, who fashion every splendid costly stone for their son, Ramses II —— lapis lazuli of Tefrer, every costly stone that is in the two mountains, the products of Nun. The subjects of the Negroes come to thee by land and water, bringing down-stream all the reckonings of Nubia in the records of Thoth, in order to make festive the temple of thy father, Amon, lord of gods." 459. The scenes in this series are chiefly, if not exclusively, symbolical, and therefore do not depict specific events. They were evidently devised to form a pendant to the other series on the southern wall, which does depict an actual Nubian campaign.

Scene

460. Ramses II, charging in his chariot, leans over and seizes two of the enemy by the turban, and cuts them down with his sword; before him the mass of the enemy flees. They are bearded, and are undoubtedly Semites.

Inscription

461. ——— valiant son of Amon, lord of the sword, protector of his army in battle, mighty against — — — his hand, firm in the chariot, like the lord of Thebes, ——— victorious, fighting millions, mighty Bull among myriads, ——— smiting the rebellious ———.

Scene

462. A symbolic scene showing an Asiatic city, on the walls of which the inhabitants gather, with hands uplifted, beseeching mercy. The city chief or petty prince in the citadel is seized by the gigantic Ramses, who stands over him with upraised sword. A prince (with sidelock) advances to the gate with a battle axe.

Inscriptions

463. The inscriptions have all perished except the words of the captured chief:

Said the wretched chief, in magnifying the Lord of the Two Lands:

"there is no other like Baal, O ruler, his real son, forever."

Scene

464. Ramses II slays with the sword a Libyan whom he has seized by the hair and forced to the knees. A hound leaps upon the Libyan's hip. Approaching Ramses in front, with uplifted arms, are two rows of officials, now almost vanished.

Inscription behind Ramses

465. O Good God, great in terror, victorious lion, lord of the sword, embracing the rebellious lands of Tehenu (Thnw); thy sword has overthrown the Nine Bows, slaying him who is beneath thy sandals, like Re, every [day] forever and ever.

Inscriptions

469. The inscriptions have all disappeared except two short lines:

Behind Ramses

Thy might and thy victory are in all lands and all countries; thy terror is in their hearts.

Sceneb

470. Ramses II, enthroned in state, with his tame lion by his side, gives audience to his vizier (from the costume), followed by six officers; and to his son, Amenhirurnamef, leading Asiatic prisoners.

II. SOUTHERN WAR

472. This series evidently depicts particular events in Ramses II's Nubian war. When this war took place it is difficult to say with certainty,\(^a\) but it was under the administration of Amenemopet as viceroy of Kush, and must, therefore, have fallen in the first half of Ramses' reign.\(^b\)

The scene of the war is equally uncertain. The three lists\(^c\) of conquered Nubian countries consist of unfamiliar names, from which little can be obtained as to the locality of the war. Brugsch thinks that the Abu Simbel list does not extend above Napata.\(^d\)

Scene\(^e\)

473. Ramses, standing in his chariot with drawn bow, charges the Negroes, who flee in a horde before him into a palm grove, in which two Negroes lead away a wounded

---

\(^a\)There is a current statement that Ramses II was viceroy of Ethiopia before Seti I's death, and that the battle depicted in our reliefs took place then. Not only is there no evidence that Ramses II was ever viceroy of Kush, but our reliefs further show that Amenemopet was viceroy at this time.

\(^b\)The Assuan stela (§§ 478, 479), which is dated in the year 2, may possibly have been erected on this campaign.

Inscriptions

474. An inscription over the enemy has disappeared, except the words: "\(\ldots\) those who transgress his boundaries." Two others have survived:\(^b\)

Over First Prince

Said the fan-bearer on the right of the king, the hereditary prince, the king's-son, of his body, his beloved, Amenhirunamaf: "\(\ldots\) in the South; I rejoice, my heart is joyful, (for) my father smites his enemies; he puts forth the might of his strength against the Nine Bows."

On the right sits Ramses enthroned; approaching from the left are two long lines of Negroes, bringing furniture of ebony and ivory, panther hides, gold in large rings, bows, myrrh, shields, elephants' tusks, billets of ebony, ostrich feathers, ostrich eggs, live animals, including monkeys, panthers, a giraffe, ibexes, a dog, oxen with carved horns, an ostrich. At the end are also two Negro women, one carrying her children in a basket. Led by two Egyptians at the head of the lower line are two bound Negroes. The lower line is introduced by the vizier, and two officials, followed by the viceroy of Kush, bearing a table hung with skins and decorated with flowers. At the head of the upper row (which represents the scene a moment after that of the lower row) is the king’s-son, Amenhirurnamef, presenting the gifts which together with the splendid table have been placed on the ground. Behind the table which he has just set down appears the viceroy of Kush, receiving decorations for good service.

Inscriptions

476. Behind Ramses are four columns containing an elaborate titulary, in which is the phrase: “making boundaries as he pleases in Retenu.” The other texts are brief and fragmentary.

III. ASSUAN STELA*

478. This monument contains only a fulsome eulogy of Ramses II, in which reference is made to all his wars. Its position at the Nubian frontier would indicate that it was erected on some Nubian expedition of Ramses II, and its date, "year 2," may, therefore, be that of the Nubian war, recorded at Bet el-Walli.

479. 1. Year 2, eleventh month, twenty-sixth day, under the majesty of Ramses II, beloved of Amon-Re, king of Gods, and Khnum, lord of the cataract region.

He has overthrown myriads in the space of a moment; great wall of his army in the day of battle, whose fear has penetrated all lands. ⁵Egypt rejoices when the ruler is among them (i.e., the lands); he has extended its boundaries forever, plundering the Asiatics (Sī tyw) and capturing their cities. ⁶He has crushed the foreigners of the north, the Temeh have fallen for fear of him, the Asiatics are anxious for breath from him, ⁷who sends Egypt on campaigns; their hearts are filled with his designs, as they sit in the shadow of his sword, and ⁸they fear not any country. He plunders the warriors (ḥ ² w) of the sea, the great lake of the north, while they lie sleeping. ⁹A vigilant king, accurate in design; there fails not anything that he has said. IV. LUXOR TEMPLE

480. Besides the reliefs and inscriptions relating to the battle of Kadesh (§§ 305–51), the Luxor temple contains a number of references to Ramses II's wars, conquests, and relations with foreign countries. On a granite statue, under a list of northern and southern countries, is the usual statement of the extent of Pharaoh's power, including the

"Great Circle (ṣn wr), the sea, the southern countries of the land of the Negro as far as the marsh lands, as far as the limits of the darkness, even to the four pillars of heaven."

481. More important is a scene among the reliefs which portrays the presentation of annual dues\(^a\) by the king's sons and the chief officials of the kingdom. These dues consist of both "tribute" (yn-w) and taxes or impost (bk\(\cdot\)w), besides "dues" (hsb\(\cdot\)t); and they come from Nubia, Asia, and Egypt. At the head of the procession are seventeen sons of Ramses, of whom the first four are:

482. 1. Hereditary prince, king's-son, crown prince, of his body, commander in chief of the army, Amonhirkhepeshef.
2. King's-son, of his body, commander of the army\(^b\) of the Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses.
3. Captain of archers, master of horse, Perehirunamef.\(^c\)

483. These are all well known elsewhere, especially Khamwese, as they took part in the king's wars (§ 362). The thirteenth in the row is Merneptah, who, on the death of his twelve elder brothers and his father, became king.

Behind the princes is a line of men bearing "des offrandes, conduisant des boeufs à cornes singulières comme à Abydos."

Above them all is an inscription, designating them as:

484. The hereditary prince \(^d\) of the palace\(^d\), king's-son, crown prince; \([\text{the king's-sons}^d]\), the grandees of the palace \(\text{of their lord, their father, Ramses II, given life. The governors of the city and} viziers, companions, treasurers of the palace, overseers of the silver- and gold-house, commanders of the army, commanders of infantry (mnjyt), captains of archers, master builders, governors of southern and northern countries, chief treasurers, chief mayors, stewards, leaders of leaders, and town commandants, overseers of horns, overseers of hoofs, overseers of feathers, of Egypt, the marshal of the two thrones of Upper and Lower Egypt, the counts, and superior prophets, coming with bowed head, bearing their tribute of the impost of Nubia (T₂-pd·t), every product of Asiatic countries, the dues (ḥṣb·t) of Egypt, to behold the beauty of their lord, King Ramses II.

V. ABYDOS TEMPLE

485. Ramses II's mortuary temple at Abydos, as we have already noted, contains reliefs from the Kadesh series (§ 328), as well as a copy of the Kadesh poem (§§ 305–15). Besides these, the mortuary reliefs also contain references to his wars. These reliefs show a long procession of priests and officers, bringing an immense and varied array of offerings for Ramses II's mortuary temple, in which these reliefs appear. Like others of their class, these scenes are of purely religious and mortuary significance, except the last. This represents a section of the procession headed by a superb bull, and an ibex; these animals, with their attendants and some lesser offerings, face a long procession in a double line of Egyptian troops who are summoned by a trumpeter. Four men at the head of the troops are followed by a royal span drawing an empty chariot, accompanied by an orderly with sandals strung on his arm as usual. Behind the troops who follow the chariot are Negroes, Asiatics, Puntites, and perhaps Libyans. Over the whole is an inscription in one long line, the beginning of which is very fragmentary; scattered among the figures were also some inscriptions, most of which have now disappeared:

Lo, as for a king, he is the divine seed,\(^b\) while he is a dweller in heaven, as when he was on earth; he assumes the forms, which he desires, like the Moon-god. Establish ye the offerings of this my temple of Osiris, whose august image rests therein, the divine ennead which follows him, being united at his side; (then) shall favors be craved from them, making sound your limbs. An excellent reward shall be his who doeth it, according as ye protect my house for its gods, and hearken to the Good God, Ramses II, given life."

\(^a\) The mutilated beginning contained an address to Ramses II.

\(^b\) Lit., "divine water."
VI. TANIS STELÆ

487. The Tanis temple contained at least four large granite stelae commemorating Ramses II’s prowess in war. Of two of these only insignificant fragments have survived; and the third contains a conventional encomium much mutilated. At the end was the narrative of some specific event, of which the following is discernible:

He (Ramses II) said to the king’s-messenger —— fortresses equipped with everything for ——.

488. The fourth stela is almost entirely the conventional praise of the king’s valor; but the last three lines contained a reference to rebellious Sherden and ships of war, which would indicate a naval battle in connection with the Libyan war, with whom the Sherden were, of course, allied.

_Ramses’ Valor_

489. *Live the Horus, Mighty Bull . . . . . . . . . Every land fears before him; he is like *a lion when he has tasted combat; no land can stand before him, King Ramses II; charging into the array, *he turns not back, he is the first of the front rank of his army; valiant upon the steed, when he takes his bow, shooting on his right, and he who stands in the rear escapes him not; mighty in strength, with victorious arm, bearing the mace and the shield; crushing the chiefs beneath his feet; no one is able to sustain the combat, every country flees before him, the terror of him is like fire behind them.

aThe remainder of 1. 8 from this point on was omitted by Rougé, who passes to the second half of 1. 9 which he represents as the beginning of 1. 9 ("the land of the Negro, etc.").

bThis is the word used for crossing a river; it probably refers to a crossing of one of the branches of the Nile in the western Delta by Ramses or his western foes (see IV, p. 49, n. b).

cThe Kadesh poem refers to the capture of Sherden before that campaign (§ 307); and Papyrus Anastasi II mentions "the Sherden whom thou hast taken in thy might" (V, 2), who have been sent as Egyptian mercenaries against the "tribes of the desert." The reference to the "Sherden of the sea, who are of the captivity of his majesty," may belong to the reign of Merneptah (Anastasi II, verso of Pl. 8, l. 1). of the Eighteenth Dynasty, has survived to us. The great inscription of Abydos concerns almost solely Seti I's temple there, which is chiefly the work of Seti himself. The account of Ramses I's buildings preserved in his inscriptions is therefore but a slight indication of the vast extent of his building achievements; and this fact must be clearly borne in mind, in using the following inscriptions.\(^a\)

493. They comprise:

I. Great Temple of Abu Simbel (§§495-99).
II. Small Temple of Abu Simbel (§§500, 501).
III. Temple of Serreh (§ 502).
IV. Temple of Derr (§ 503).
V. Temple of Sebû\(^a\) (§ 504).
VI. Temple of el Kab (§ 505).
VII. Temple of Luxor (§§506-8).
VIII. Temple of Karnak (§§509-13).
IX. The Ramesseum (§§514, 515).
X. Temple of Kurna (§§516-22).
XI. Seti I's Temple at Abydos and Great Abydos Inscription (§§262-77).
XII. Ramses II's Temple at Abydos (§§524-29).
XIII. Memphis Temples (§§530-37) and further:
2. Blessing of Ptah (§§412-413, ll. 32, 35).
XIV. City of Tanis (Blessing of Ptah, § 406, ll. 16-18).\(^b\)

\(^a\) For example, in Nubia Ramses II built at least six new temples: (1) Bet el-Walli; (2) Gerf Husen; (3) Es-Sebû\(^a\); (4) Derr; (5) Abu Simbel (large temple); (6) Abu Simbel (small temple). Of these I was able to find the dedication inscriptions of the last four only.

\(^b\) Poetical description of the city by an Egyptian scribe: Papyrus Anastasi II, Pl. I, l. 1–Pl. II, l. 5 = ibid., IV, Pl. V, Pl. VI, ll. 1–10. It is in this passage that the message of the chief of Kheta (§§425, 426) to the chief of Kode is found (cf. Chabas, Mélanges égyptologiques, 2\(^e\) sér., 151. Maspero, Du genre épistolaire, 102; Erman, Aegypten, 242). A longer description of the city in a similar vein is found in Papyrus Anastasi III, Pl. I, l. 11–Pl. III, l. 9 (cf. Chabas, op. cit., 132–34. Maspero, op. cit., 103–6; Brugsch, Geschichte, 545–48).
Besides the above, there are occasional unimportant doorway inscriptions, giving the building record in the conventional form as at Bet el-Walli, Kalabsheh\textsuperscript{a} or a similar statue dedication as at Sebût\textsuperscript{c}a. There must also be a number of architrave dedication inscriptions, like those of the Ramesseum, which are still unpublished.

I. GREAT TEMPLE OF ABU SIMBEL\textsuperscript{b}

This, the most remarkable of the grotto temples of Egypt, was already far advanced in its construction, in the reign of Seti I. It is impossible to find any other explanation of the fact that an inscription of Ramses II's first year\textsuperscript{c} is found in the doorway at the rear of the first hall, which connects it with the second hall.

The building inscription accompanies a relief\textsuperscript{d} showing Ramses II enthroned, with an official named Ramses-eshahab ($R^c\:\text{-}\ms\text{-sw}\:\:\text{-}\:\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}\\text{.}\text{\(\textsf{$}

King's-butler of his majesty, L. P. H., Ramses-eshahab, triumphant; he says: "As for all that comes out of thy mouth, it is like the words of Harakhte."

497. A longer inscription above and behind him is introduced by the full fivefold titulary of Ramses II, accompanied by poetic epithets, such as "he who spreads out his wings over his army," and closing appropriately with "maker of monuments in the house of Horus, his august father." The inscription then proceeds:

498. Behold, as for his majesty, L. P. H., he is vigilant in seeking every profitable occasion, by doing excellent things for his father, Horus, lord of He (H), making for him his house of myriads of years, by excavating in this mountain of He, [which no] one before [did], except the son of Amon, lord of —. His might is in all lands; bringing for him multitudes of workmen from the captivity of his sword in every country. He has filled the houses (pr'-w) of the gods with the children of Retenu (Rtnw). [Afterward he] gave orders to the king's-butler, Ramses-eshahab, to equip the land of Kush anew in the great name of his majesty, L. P. H. He said: "Praise to thee! O valiant king of Egypt, sun of the Nine Bows. There is no rebel in thy time, every land is pacified. Thy father, Amon, has decreed for thee that every land be beneath thy feet; he gives to thee south as well as north, west and east, and the isles in the midst of the sea.

499. A dedication to Harakhte is as follows:
Ramses II; he made (it) as his monument for his father, Harakhte, great god, lord of Nubia (T²-pd·t).

II. SMALL TEMPLE OF ABU SIMBEL

500. The smaller grotto temple on the north of the large temple was made by Ramses II for his queen, Nefretiri, as the divinity to whom it was dedicated:

Its origin is sometimes also ascribed to the queen herself.

bThe Great King's-Wife, Nefretiri, beloved of Mut; she made a house in the pure mountain.

501. Other references to the construction of the monument are these:

cRamses-Meriamon, beloved of Amon, like Re, forever, made a house of very great monuments, for the Great King's-Wife, Nefretiri, fair of face — —.

His majesty commanded to make a house in Nubia \((T\,^3\cdot\,pd\cdot\,t)\), hewn in the mountain. Never was done the like before.

502. "Southward of the village of Serreh, ... on the western bank of the Nile, and about ten miles north of Halfa, are the foundations of a temple built by Ramses II." The architrave dedications have perished, but one of the doors still bears the words (twice):

Great door of Usermare-Setepnere; he made (it) as his monument for his living image in the land of Nubia \((T\,^3\cdot\,pd\cdot\,t)\); its beautiful name, which his majesty made, is: "Usermare-is-Splendid-in-Strength."

Ramses II was thus himself the god of this temple, as Amenhotep III was at the Nubian temple of Soleb.

IV. TEMPLE OF DERR

503. This temple was dedicated to Re-Harakhte by Ramses II. On its later history, see IV, §§474–83.

V. TEMPLE OF SEBÛ c A

504. A so-called hemispeos, by the village of Sebû c a, built by Ramses II, who called it “House of Amon.” He was himself one of the deities worshiped in it.

The dedications are as follows:

cRamses II; he made (it) as a monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods.

A pillar in the forecourt bears the following:

Ramses-Meriamon in the House of Amon; he made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, making for him a great and august pillar, adorned with every splendid costly stone; that he might be given life, stability, and satisfaction, like Re, every day.

VI. TEMPLE OF EL KAB

505. A small temple to Nekhbet, built within the city wall by Ramses II, bears the following dedication:

e[Ramses II; he made (it) as his monument for his mother, Nekhbet], making for her a great pylon, — I — ³ of fine white sandstone, its length is 15 cubits; its door is of cedar, the mounting thereof of copper; with the great name of [my majesty] ————.

506. Ramses II built a peristyle court in front of the Eighteenth Dynasty Luxor temple, with a façade of two large pylon-towers. To do this, he destroyed a beautiful granite chapel of Thutmose III, which had stood in front of the Eighteenth Dynasty temple. The architect was the High Priest of Amon, Beknekhonsu, who has left a brief record of the building on his statue (§§ 561-68). The king's only building record, as far as published, is contained in the following dedication inscriptions:

507. bMighty Bull, exalter of Thebes, Favorite of the Two Goddesses, establishing monuments in Luxor for his father, Amon, who placed him upon his throne; Golden Horus, seeking excellent things for him who fashioned him; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Setepnere. He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods, making for him the "Temple (ht-nlr)-of-Ramses-Meriamon-in-the-House (pr)-of-Amon," of fine white sandstone, which the Son of Re, Ramses-Meriamon, given life, like Re, forever, made for him.

508. The other two dedications are substantially the same as far as the words: "house of Amon;" one d then proceeds:

In front of Luxor, erecting for him a pylon (bn't) anew; its flag-staves approach heaven; which the Son of Re, etc. (as above).

The other continues:

Its beauty is unto the height of heaven, a place of the appearance for the lord of the gods, at his feast of (Luxor).

VIII. TEMPLE OF KARNAK

509. Ramses II brought to completion at Karnak the works begun by his two predecessors. He erected all of the columns in the southern half of the great hypostyle hall, except the two short rows immediately south of the nave, Seti I having completed the northern half, the nave with both rows of flower-columns and the first row of bud-columns of the southern half. Ramses II further built a girdle wall entirely around the Eighteenth Dynasty temple, to widen it to the increased width of the new hall in front. The Nineteenth Dynasty Karnak temple thus became the largest temple ever erected in the history of building, whether ancient or modern.

510. Although the conception, and for the most part the erection, of the great hall belong to Seti I and his father, the dedication inscriptions were largely added by Ramses II in his own name.

*a*Ramses II, mighty king, making monuments in the house of his father, Amon, building his house in eternal work, established forever. Lo, the Good God inclined his heart to make monuments, sleeping or waking, he ceased not seeking to do excellent things. It was his majesty who gave the regulations, and led the work on his monuments. All his plans come to pass immediately, like those of his father, Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, a likeness indeed of that which the excellent maker, the maker of excellent things, made, which his majesty made of excellent and eternal work. Every country is beneath thy feet, O king, ruler of the Nine Bows, Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses II. He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes (Ns\·wt t\·w\·y), making for him the "Temple-of-the-Spirit-(Y\·h)-of-Ramses-Meriamon-in-the-House-of-Amon-over-against-Karnak (Yp\·t-ys\·wt)," of fine white sandstone; a resting-place for the lord of gods, a beautiful refuge for the divine ennead; surrounded by — columns; the walls thereof are like the two mountains of Aphroditopolis, Ye shall endow him with satisfying life, ye shall form his protecting suite, and be his associate when he is with you. He shall be a spirit as ye are spirits; his name shall flourish as your names flourish to the end of the two periods (of sixty years) and forever; according to that which he has built for Karnak for the first time, of fine white sandstone. He hath given joy to my dwelling more than (his) predecessors have done...."

\textbf{512.} Ramses II; he made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, making for him the "Temple-of-the-Spirit-of-Ramses-Meriamon-in-the-House-of-Amon," of fine white sandstone. Its beauty (reaches) to the height of heaven, over against Karnak; its august columns are of Electrum, made like every place that is in heaven. (It is) mistress of silver, queen of gold, it contains every splendid costly stone. "I have made it for thee with a loving heart, as a profitable son does for his father, by enlarging the monuments of him that begat him, and establishing the house of him that caused him to take the whole land."

\textit{b} Live the Good God, who makes monuments for his father, Amon-Re.

\textbf{513.} The dedications on the architraves\textsuperscript{c} of the nave, above the windows, are also of Ramses II, and only repeat the above dedications. IX. THE RAMESSEUM

514. The beautiful mortuary temple of Ramses II on the west side at Thebes, known as the Ramesseum, was combined with a palace which has since perished. The temple itself, while it has preserved some of the most important historical records of Ramses II’s reign contains no building inscription except the usual dedication on the architraves:

515. Ramses II; he made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, making for him a great and august broad-hall (ws h·t) of fine white sandstone, its nave of great flower-columns, surrounded by bud-columns: a place of rest for the lord of gods at his beautiful “Feast of the Valley;” that he might, through him, be given life shaping his sacred barque like the horizon-god, founding daily offerings, doing the things which please his father, causing that his house should be for him like Thebes, supplied with every good thing, granaries reaching heaven, an august treasury containing silver, gold, royal linen, every real costly stone, which King Ramses II brought for him.

a Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 159, shows an “Appearance of the king, like Re, in his palace (c h c) which is in the temple (h·t ntr).” This fact was already noticed by Erman, Aegypten, 107, 108.

b Sharpe, Egyptian Inscriptions, II, 53; Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, 53, No. 2; Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 134 (see also 133). The name of the Ramesseum was: “The-House (h·t)-of-Usermare-Setepnere (Ramses II), L.-P.-H., -in-the-House-of-Amon” (Wiedemann, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 34); also mentioned on a stela at Vienna (Recueil, IX, 50, 51). An architect of the Ramesseum is mentioned on his fragmentary statue at Cairo (Daressy, Recueil, 22, 143); its treasurer (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 249); and its deputy (ibid., 250).

c The text has ḫḥ hrs, evidently meaning “its center,” as the columns of the Ramesseum hypostyle are so arranged, and no other colonnades are thus placed in this temple. It is not an error, for it is repeated on another architrave (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 134, with a slight mistake).

d The connection has been omitted by Sharpe, but it is evidently the conclusion of a second dedication.
X. TEMPLE OF KURNA

516. This mortuary temple of Seti I was left unfinished by him, and his son, Ramses II, states the fact in his inscriptions, narrating also that he completed it for his father; in doing which he made his own dedication inscriptions more prominent than those of his father.

517. aHe made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods, lord of heaven, ruler of Thebes, restoring the house of his father, King Seti I, triumphant. Behold, he went to his retreat, he attained heaven, he joined Re in heaven; while this his house was in course of construction. Its doors were in ruin at their stations, and all its walls of stone and brick; no work therein was finished, neither inscriptions nor sculpture. Then his son, the Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses II, commanded to build the works in his house of millions of years, over against Karnak, and [to fashion] his image resting in his house, gilded with electrum, when the god sails in person at his feast of the valley to rest in c his house, as the first of the kings.

518. dUtterance of the gods and goddesses who are in the Northland, to their son, King Ramses II, given life: "We have come to thee, our arms bearing offerings, and supplied with provision and food. We have gathered to thee every good thing of all that grows upon earth, e in order to make festive the house of thy father. As thou art his beloved son, so art thou like Horus, the protector of his father, in taking the inheritance of the Two Lands. How goodly is the son who restores what is ruined! Thou hast built the house of thy father, completed in its work, thou hast fashioned his image for ——— of gold ——— thou hast — divine offerings ——— I have — that f Ramses II; he made (it) as his monument for his father's father, the Good God, Ramses I, triumphant.

522. While acknowledging thus the original dedication of the temple to the mortuary service of his father and grandfather, Ramses added also a series of dedications in his own name alone. These are as follows:

aRamses II; he made (it) as his monument to his father, for his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, making for him a house of millions of years on the west of Thebes, (of) fine white sandstone, the doors thereof of real cedar, which [the Son of Re], Ramses-Meriamon, given life, like Re, made for him.

523. See Great Abydos Inscription (§§ 262–77).

XII. RAMSES II'S TEMPLE AT ABYDOS c

524. This inscription contains a brief record of the building and endowment of Ramses II's mortuary temple at Abydos.

525. Lo, his majesty, L. P. H., was "Son-Whom-He-Loves," the champion of his father, Wennofer, by making for him a beautiful, august temple, established for eternity, of fine limestone of Ayan; a great double pylon of excellent work; portals of granite, the doors thereto of copper, wrought with figures in real electrum; a great seat of alabaster, mounted in granite, his excellent seat of the beginning; a meskhen-chamber for his divine ennead, his august father who rests therein, and Re when he has reached heaven. His protecting image is beside him that fashioned him, like Horus, upon the throne of his father.

526. (He) established for him permanent daily offerings, at the beginnings of the seasons, all feasts at their times, offered to his ka.

bOmitting introductory formula, which is as in preceding.

cInscription engraved on the exterior of the south wall of Ramses II's temple at Abydos; published by Mariette, Abydos, II, Pl. 3 (cf. ibid., XI, § 139); see also Mariette, Voyage dans la haute Egypte, I, 29.
He filled it with every thing, overflowing with food and provision, bulls, calves, oxen, geese, bread, wine, fruit; (it) was filled with peasant-slaves, doubled in fields, made numerous in herds; the granaries were filled to bursting, the grain-heaps approached heaven,—a for the storehouse of divine offerings, from the captivity of his victorious sword.

527. His treasury was filled with every costly stone, silver, gold in blocks; the magazine was filled with every thing from the tribute of all countries. He planted many gardens, set with every (kind of) tree, all sweet and fragrant woods, the plants of Punt. The Son of Re, Lord of Diadems, Ramses-Meriamon, beloved of Osiris, First of the Westerners, great god, lord of Abydos, made (it) for him.

528. The dedications of the temple doors are as follows:

1. He made (it) as his monument for his father, Osiris, residing in “House (h-t) of Ramses-Meriamon-Possessing-Abydos;” making for him a doorway of black granite, the doors mounted with copper, and gilded with electrum, c which his son, Ramses II, made for him.

2. Live the god, the Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses II. He made (it) as his monument for his father, Osiris, lord of Abydos, making for him a great doorway of pink granite, the doors of bronze in beaten work (called): “Portal-of-Usermare-Setepnere-Raiser-of-Monuments-in-Abydos.”

529. The dedication inscription of the shrine-chamber is partially preserved on a fragment of alabaster, thus:

He made (it) as his monument for his father, Osiris, making for him a “Great Seat” of pure alabaster ________.

XIII. MEMPHIS TEMPLES d

530. Ramses II built largely at Memphis, and a temple on the south of the sacred lake was chiefly due to him.

---

a There is a sign for “slave” here, but a verb (?) is lacking in the lacuna.

b Brugsch (Recueil de monuments, I, Pl. XII), who does not state (p. 22) in which temple he found them. The numbers refer to those on his plate.

c These doors are said to be “of electrum” in an inscription at the base of the same door. Its name is also given there as the “Portal-of-Usermare-Setepnere-Possessed-of-Eternity.”

d See Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 422, 423; Wiedemann, Aegyptische Geschichte, 445; note 3; H. Brugsch, (Zeitschrift fürgägyptische Sprache, VII, 2),
One of his temples there was called "The-House-of-Millions-of-Years-of-King-Usermare-Setepnere-in-the-House-of-Amon-in-Memphis." But Ramses' works in Memphis have perished with the city. The chief literary references to them are in the Great Abydos Inscription (§ 260, l. 22), and the Blessing of Ptah (§§ 412, 413, ll. 32–35). A paragraph in a letter of instructions from an official to his subordinate refers to Ramses II's Thoth-temple in Memphis, and mentions repairs on the Sphinx, which may be of later date:

531. bI have heard that thou hast taken the eight laborers (ḥ² y) who were working in the "House-of-Thoth-of-Ramses-Meriamon,-L.-P.-H.,-Satisfied-with-Truth" in Memphis. Thou shalt deliver them to draw stone for c the Sphinx in Memphis.

532. References to Ramses II's Ptah-temple are rare. The following interesting building inscription d is so fragmentary that the name of the king is uncertain. As it lies in the temple chiefly due to Ramses II, he is the most probable king to whom we may refer it. It was upon a great stela which marked the "Station of the King," or ceremonial station occupied by the Pharaoh during the official ritual ceremonies. Like similar steleæ at Thebes in the temples

c Or: "to." Vyse found an incomplete stela of Ramses II between the feet of the Sphinx.

d Fragment of a large stela of gritstone still 13 feet high and over 2½ feet wide. The beginnings of 12 horizontal lines are preserved. It was found in the ruins of Ramses II's Memphite temple of Ptah; published by Daressy, Annales, III, 27, 28. Fragments of two other similar steleæ, too scanty for use here, were also found by Daressy in this temple (ibid., 28).
of Amenhotep III (II, 904, 910), Elephantine (II, 791), and Amâda (II, 791–97), it bore an account of the erection of the building in which it stood. As in the building inscriptions of Thutmose III (II, 131 ff.), Amenhotep III (II, 878–92), and others, it is introduced by an account of the king’s coronation. Enough of the fragmentary inscription is preserved, to show that, as in the coronations of Thutmose III and Harmhab, Amon appeared in public, delivered an oracle proclaiming him king, and proceeded to the palace to crown him. In all probability, therefore, the oracle and the crowning by Amon, were the regular custom at the accession of every king in the Empire. Hence the innumerable conventional references to Amon’s having fixed the diadem upon the Pharaoh’s head designate an actual ceremony. That this prerogative of Amon was not originally his, but was usurped from Re, is evident. Undoubtedly a similar ceremony took place at Heliopolis at the accession of every Pharaoh, from the Fifth Dynasty on, to the assumption of the rite by Amon at an uncertain date after the rise of Thebes.

STELA OF THE YEAR 400

538. This monument was erected at Tanis by an important official of Ramses II, named Seti. He had been dispatched thither to erect a stela in honor of Seti I, and improved the *aThe determinative is a stela, as elsewhere. The place meant is the same as at Thebes, Elephantine, and Amâda, see II, 140, note. The material above mentioned, "gritstone," is that of the stela bearing the inscription, which is here meant. It stood therefore in the holy of holies, and not at the front of the temple, as Daressy thought (Annales, III, 28).

bY dr't, with determinative of a house.

cProbably *w hr'm.

dPossibly Daressy has omitted R, and we should read "Ramses;" or ms is vulgar writing for ms-sw="He who begat him."

eThe last line is obscure, but it is clear that the account of the building is concluded in l. 11.

fGranite stela discovered at Tanis by Mariette and reburied there by him. It could not be found at the excavation of Tanis by Petrie (Tanis, II, 32); hence opportunity to place a stela of his own, bearing a record of his visit in the temple, to which he appended prayers for the favor of the god, as so many officials did in Abydos. Although headed with the full titulary of Ramses II, the document is dated in the four hundredth year of King Opehtiset-Nubti, a Hyksos ruler. This remarkable fact shows that the reign of this king began an era—the only one known in Egypt—which had survived in use at Tanis into the Ramessid times. Unfortunately, the stela does not give the year of Ramses II in which it was erected. Wiedemann dates it, as it seems to me with probability, at Ramses II’s death. In any case, the knowledge of the lapse of 400 years between the Hyksos Nubti and some year of Ramses II is of great value.

539. At the top of the monument is a relief, showing Ramses II offering wine to Set. Behind the king stands Seti, the author of the monument, praying, as follows:

— — — thy ka, O Set, son of Nut, mayest thou grant a happy life following thy ka, to the ka of ......... b [Seti].

540. Below the relief is Seti’s record of his commission, with the appended prayer, as follows:

Live ........... c King Ramses II, sovereign, who equips the Two Lands with monuments in his name, so that Re rises in heaven for love of him, King Ramses II.

541. His majesty commanded to make a great stela of granite

ROYAL JUBILEE INSCRIPTIONS

543. The sources for the jubilee celebrations of Ramses II are fuller than for those of any other king. Unfortunately, his obelisks, although far more numerous c than those of his aSeti I was not the grandfather, but the father, of Ramses II; hence Wiede­ mann has suggested (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1879, 142) that when the upper part of the stela containing the titulary, etc., of Ramses II had been completed, Ramses died, and “his majesty” refers to his son and successor, who sent confirmatory orders for the erection of the monument in Seti I’s honor. Seti I could then be referred to as his majesty’s grandfather. The rendering “grandfather” is, however, open to objection; it is possible that we should render: “father of his fathers,” although it is a question how much attention should be paid to the plural strokes after “father” in a text of this age.

bThis name is thought by some to refer to the god Set, but, of course, no one in the time of Ramses II believed that Set ruled 400 years before! [Later: See the same view by Ed. Meyer, Aegyptische Chronologie, 66.]

cRamses II erected no less than fourteen obelisks at Tanis alone (Petrie, Tanis, I, Pl. VII–XI; Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 194–97); then the well-ancestors, bear inscriptions of a very vague and general nature, extolling the king's power and glory,\(^a\) and containing no references to the royal jubilees, to celebrate which they were erected. Indeed, they do not, for the most part, show even the former conventional dedication inscription.\(^b\)

544. A good example of this, is the Heliopolis obelisk, left uninscribed by Seti I, which was then inscribed by Ramses II, who with, for him, unusual generosity, appropriated only one side for his own inscription. Its inscriptions are as follows:\(^c\)

\[\text{North Side}\]

545. \ldots \ldots d\ (Seti I), whose monuments are excellent in Heliopolis seat of eternity, like the four pillars of heaven, abiding, enduring at known pair in Luxor (one now in Paris); a pair in Karnak (Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, III, 148, a); four now in Rome (one a forgery); one now in Florence; besides usurping those of his predecessors, particularly that of his father, Seti I, at Heliopolis. A Berlin scarab (No. 1947, \textit{Ausführliches Verzeichniss des Berliner Museums}, 420), commemorates the erection of obelisks by him. A pair of obelisks taken out of the Elephantine quarry, probably by Ramses, are commemorated by the official in charge in an inscription on the island of Sehel, thus: "\textit{Real king's-confidant, his beloved, conducting the work on two great obelisks, High Priest of Khnum, Anuket, and Satet, Amenhotep.}" (Mariette, \textit{Monuments divers}, V, 70, No. 17 = Brugsch, \textit{Thesaurus}, V, 1214 = de Morgan, \textit{Catalogue des monuments}, 94, 140 = Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, Text, IV, 125, [6]. Not in Petrie, \textit{Season in Egypt}, but see No. 58, \textit{ibid.})

\(^a\)The historical references in the obelisk inscriptions will be found in § 392 and § 448, note.

\(^b\)As the obelisks at Tanis are all prostrate, there may be dedications on the hidden sides, which have never been turned up. The only dedication to be found on any of Ramses II's obelisks thus far is on the two Luxor obelisks. The one still in Luxor reads (Sharpe, \textit{Egyptian Inscriptions}, II, 60): "\textit{He made (ii) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, erecting for him two great obelisks of granite.}" The other one, now in Paris, reads: "\textit{Ramses II; he made (ii) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, making for him a great obelisk (called): 'Ramses-Meriamon-is-the-Beloved-of-Atum.'}" (Sharpe, \textit{Egyptian Inscriptions}, I, 42, 43; Saint-Maur, \textit{Voyage du Luxor en Egypte} [Paris, 1835], Pl. II; Champollion-Figeac, \textit{L'Obélisque de Louqsor transporté à Paris} [Paris, 1833]). For Beknekhonsu's record of the erection of these Luxor obelisks, see his statue inscription (§§ 561-68).

May Ramses (II)-Meriamon, beloved of Atum, lord of Heliopolis, be given life through him (nfr).

549. It will be seen that the obelisk has become more and more a monument of a general character in celebration of the king's glory, and has lost its exclusive significance as a memorial of the royal jubilee. This is indicated also by the fact that memorial inscriptions commemorating the celebration of the royal jubilees are to be found in Upper Egypt from el Kab to Philæ, as if other record than the obelisks were necessary. From these commemorative inscriptions the following table of jubilees may be reconstructed:\(^b\)

Of the Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Setepnere, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Meriamon, given life forever. His majesty commissioned the (\textit{sm-}) priest, the king's-son, Khamwese, to celebrate the royal jubilees in the whole land.

His majesty commanded to commission the (\textit{sm-}) priest, king's-son, Khamwese, to celebrate the royal jubilees in the whole land in South and North.

IV. THIRD GEBEL SILSILEH INSCRIPTION\textsuperscript{e}

555. This inscription is a duplicate of the preceding, the lacuna in which it supplies. It shows an incorrect variant, calling the jubilee of year 37, the fourth.

\textsuperscript{a}On the rocks of the island of Bigeh: Champollion, \textit{Notices descriptives}, I, 162; Sharpe, \textit{Egyptian Inscriptions}, II, 58; Young, \textit{Hieroglyphics}, 42; Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, Text, IV, 175; Brugsch, \textit{Recueil de monuments}, II, 83, 3. De Morgan (\textit{Catalogue des monuments}) has omitted this inscription.

\textsuperscript{c}The "39" given by Wiedemann (\textit{Aegyptische Geschichte}, 465) is taken from Brugsch, \textit{Recueil de monuments}, which has 39; but it is an error, as all the other publications have 37, except Champollion, \textit{Notices descriptives}, which has 36.

556. Year 30. First occurrence of the royal jubilee.
Year 34. Repetition of the royal jubilee.
Year 37. Third occurrence of the royal jubilee.
Year 40. Fourth occurrence of the royal jubilee.

VI. SEHEL INSCRIPTION

557. Year 40. Came the king's-son, (sm-) priest of Ptah, satisfying the heart of the Lord of the Two Lands, Khamwese, to celebrate the [fourth] royal jubilee [in the whole land in South and North].

VII. EL KAB INSCRIPTION

558. Year 41. Came the king's-son, (sm-) priest of Ptah, satisfying the heart of the Lord of the Two Lands, Khamwese, to celebrate the fifth royal jubilee [in the whole land].
VIII. FIFTH GEBEL SILSILEH INSCRIPTION

559. Year 42, first month of the second season, day 1, of King Ramses II, given life, forever and ever. His majesty commanded to commission the vizier Khay (חק), to inaugurate the fifth royal jubilee of King Ramses II, in the whole land.

IX. SIXTH GEBEL SILSILEH INSCRIPTION

560. Year 44. First month of the second season, day 1, under the majesty of the king, the Lord of the Two Lands, Usermare-Setepnere, given life forever — —; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems, Ramses-Meriamon, given life, like Re, forever.

His majesty commanded to commission the hereditary prince (מר-נטר) priest, chief justice, judge, governor of the (residence) city, vizier, Khay, [triumphant, to celebrate the sixth royal jubilee, in the whole land, in the districts of South and North.

INSCRIPTION OF BEKNEKHONSU

561. The most important of Ramses II's officials who has transmitted a mortuary autobiography to us, was Beknekhonsu, the High Priest of Amon. He tells us every step in his career, with the length of each office, as follows:

aLegrain, Recueil, XXVI, 219, n. 3. bStela on the right of the entrance of the great rock chapel of Harmhab at Gebel Silsileh; published by Champollion, Monuments, 119; Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, 83, 2: Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1128, IV. A relief above the inscription shows Ramses II accompanied by Mat, before Amon, Mut, Khonsu, Harakhte, and Sebek of Gebel Silsileh. Below the inscription is Khay kneeling, with a few lines of adoration before him.
cSo Brugsch; Champollion, Monuments, has 45.
dOn the back of a squatting statue of Beknekhonsu, now in the Glyptothek at Munich (No. 30). It was carefully published by Devéria, Mémoires de l’Institut égyptien, 1862, I, 701-54; reprinted in Bibliothèque égyptologique, IV, 276-323 (plate opposite p. 288). A collation with a photograph showed the text to be without error. It was again inaccurately published by Brugsch (Thesaurus, 1240 f., where even a year is incorrect: 6 for 27! l. 3). The tomb of Beknekhonsu was found by Champollion (Notices descriptives, I, 538) at Thebes in Assasif; smaller objects from his tomb are noted by Devéria (Bibliothèque égyptologique, IV, 295, 296).
Infancy, 4 years, from 1 to 4.
Youth, 12 years, from 5 to 16. (Being chief of the stable at least a part of this time.)
Priest, 4 years, from 17 to 20.
Divine father, 12 years, from 21 to 32.
Third prophet, 15 years, from 33 to 47.
Second prophet, 12 years, from 48 to 59.
High Priest,\(^a\) 27 years, from 60 to 86.

562. Beginning under Seti I, he must have been of about the same age as Ramses II, and was likewise the only official known to us who survived almost if not quite, as long as the aged Ramses himself.\(^b\) In addition to his sacerdotal duties, he was also chief architect, and as such built a temple for Ramses II, "at the upper portal of the house of Amon," which can only be the Luxor temple of Ramses II. He also refers to its obelisks, its flagstaves, its lake, its gardens, and other accessories which he provided for the temple. He is further found serving as judge in a civil suit in the forty-sixth year of Ramses II.\(^c\)

\(^b\)The statue of a Beknekhonsu, High Priest of Amon under Ramses III, found in the temple of Mut (Benson and Gourlay, The Temple of Mut in Asher, 343-47), cannot, for reasons of chronology, as well as because at least two high priests held office in the interim, be identified as that of our Beknekhonsu.

the upper\textsuperscript{a} portal of the house (\textit{pr}) of Amon. I erected obelisks\textsuperscript{b} therein, of granite, whose beauty approached heaven. A wall \textsuperscript{c} was before it of stone over against Thebes; it was flooded,\textsuperscript{d} and the gardens were planted with trees. I made very great double doors of electrum; their beauty met the heavens. I hewed very great flagstaves, and I erected them in the august forecourt in front of his temple.”

\textit{Sacred Barges}

\textsuperscript{a}This is the southern gate of the temenos of the Karnak temple toward Luxor, to which the four southern pylons of Karnak led. At this portal the great obelisk of Thutmosis III was erected by Thutmosis IV (Lateran Obelisk, II, 835), who also calls it the “\textit{upper portal of Karnak}.” The only temple of Ramses II at this portal is the Luxor temple; but the name given it by Beknekhonsu does not accord with the name of Luxor temple (see § 507).

\textsuperscript{b}These are the two Luxor obelisks of Ramses II, of which one is still in situ, and the other in the Place de la Concorde, Paris.

\textsuperscript{c}He means that the wall surrounded or gave access to a temple lake. Cf. the work of Ramses IX (Mariette, \textit{Karnak}, 40, l. 7), whose wall (\textit{d\textsuperscript{3}d\textsuperscript{3}} as here) gave access to the Karnak lake. There is certainly no reference to the Kurna temple and the Ramesseum, as some have thought.
REIGN OF MERNEPTAH

THE INVASION OF LIBYANS AND MEDITERRANEAN PEOPLES

569. For this, one of the most serious invasions which have ever threatened Egypt, we possess a series of four documents, which furnish a fairly full account of its course, the ensuing battle, and the resulting relief in Egypt. They are the following:

I. The Great Karnak Inscription (§§ 572–92).
II. The Cairo Column (§§ 593–95).
III. The Athribis Stela (§§ 596–601).
IV. The Hymn of Victory (§§ 602–17).

570. These sources enable us to see the already aged Merneptah facing the evil conditions on his Libyan frontier, inherited from the decades of neglect which concluded his great father's reign. The Libyans have for years past been pushing into and occupying the western Delta.¹ They pressed in almost to the gates of Memphis, eastward to the district of Heliopolis, and southward to the two oases nearest the Fayûm. Worse than this, they had made a coalition ¹Golénisheff's interesting and suggestive letter (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 40, 101–6) draws geographical data from a new papyrus in his possession, on the basis of which he would place this immigration and invasion (as well as those under Ramses III) south of the Fayûm near Ehnas. His arguments are not without force, but the conclusion seems to me to be refuted by the statement that this invasion and the battle which repelled it occurred in the “western rw d” (Karnak Inscription, l. 30, where “western” is omitted, and Athribis stela, l. 7). Rw d is a term used only of the Delta, the two halves of which are called the eastern and western rw d (Spiegelberg, Rechnungen). The invasions under Ramses III were also in the “western rw d” (IV, 405). See also Harris, 10, 8 (IV, 224). Furthermore, the improbability that the Libyans would enter Egypt by way of the northern oases, going around the south side of the Fayûm, to reach the region of Memphis, is evident.

with the maritime peoples of the Mediterranean, who now poured into the Delta from Sardinia on the west to Asia Minor on the east. The mention of these peoples in these documents is the earliest appearance of Europeans in literature, and has always been the center of much study and interest. With the sympathy, if not the direct assistance of the Kheta, the Libyan king, Meryey, put himself at the head of these combined allies and invaded the Delta, bringing his wives and belongings, and apparently intending a permanent occupation. Some time during the first half of the tenth month (late in March), in Merneptah's fifth year, a messenger reached him with the news. Rallying his forces immediately, Merneptah met the enemy on the third of the eleventh month (about April 15) at Perire in the western Delta, and in six hours' fighting routed their combined forces with immense slaughter. He pursued them from Perire to the rise of the Libyan desert, called the "Mount of the Horns of the Earth."

571. It is difficult to understand the exact interrelation of the numbers given in the Great Karnak Inscription and the Athribis Stela, but over 9,000 of the enemy were slain, possibly as many more taken prisoners, while many horses and cattle, and vast numbers of weapons were captured. The Libyan king was forced to ignominious flight, his camp, his wives, and his personal belongings falling into the hands

a The layman has long been misled regarding this event by such titles for it as "Invasion of the Greeks," although there is now no doubt that the early peoples of southern Europe participated in this invasion. Since the study of Sardinian art by Perrot and Chipiez, as Müller has shown, we must accept the Sherden as Sardinians; the Teresh may then equally well be the Etruscans (Tyrsenoi), and the Shekelesh might be the Sikeli (if $i$ be an ethnic termination in these western names; but see IV, 59). Maspero has suggested Sagalassos in Asia Minor. The Ekwesh are not impossibly the Achaeans, and from Asia Minor are the Luka or Lycians. Compare Müller, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, X; and Asien und Europa, 335-59; 371-84; and Hall, Annual of the British School at Athens, VIII, 157.
of the Egyptians. After setting fire to the camp, the Egyptians carried the plunder in triumph to the king, who viewed the trophies of the dead, the prisoners, and the spoil. He then returned home, and in the royal palace, probably at Memphis, he delivered a triumphal address, to which the court responded with acclamation. The people of the Delta, on hearing the news, break out into rejoicing that peace and safety are restored to them.

I. GREAT KARNAK INSCRIPTION

572. This, one of the longest documents preserved on the temple walls of Egypt, gives the fullest account which has survived to us of the great victory of Merneptah over the Libyans. The prominence of Ptah in the narrative betrays the Memphite origin of the document, but the original which doubtless once existed in Memphis has now perished.

573. The document does not offer us any idea of the aA long inscription of originally eighty lines, engraved on the inside (west) of the eastern wall connecting the main Karnak temple with Pylon VII (Baedeker’s plan), the northernmost of the southern pylons. The upper ends of the lines have lost the space of one course of masonry, equivalent to about four to five words. The text, noted first by Champollion, was partially published by Lepsius (Denkmäler, III, 199, a; only ll. 44-77 and list of names, Text, III, 43); Brugsch then purposed to publish the first half, omitted by Lepsius, and inserted ll. 8-43 in his Geographische Inschriften, II, Pl. 25 (not Pl. 85, as stated in Records of the Past, IV, 37, nor 35, as given in Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 432). Brugsch numbered his lines 1 to 36, but he really omitted ll. 1-7. It was finally completely published by Dümichen (Historische Inschriften, I, 2-6), Mariette (who copies Dümichen’s mistakes, Karnak, 52-55), and de Rougé (Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 179-98). None of these publications is very exact; both Lepsius and Brugsch omit the lower ends of the lines, doubtless still covered in their day, without any indication of the fact. Rougé found the upper ends of ll. 36-41 (on a block rediscovered by Legrain in 1901, see l. 36, p. 246, n. a), and properly placed them; I arranged all the publications in parallel columns, and the resulting text, while tolerably close to the original and preserving some signs now lost, was not sufficiently accurate. Later I secured good photographs of the inscription through the kindness of Borchardt, which added some readings of importance. The new fragments found by Legrain (Annales, IV, 2-4) contain nothing of importance except the reference to the “western rdw;” they arrived too late to be available in the following text.

course of the battle, beginning the account of the conflict itself almost immediately with the rout of the Libyans; but it is gratifyingly full regarding the conditions which led up to the battle and the immense plunder which resulted from it. In style it is often so highly colored, and effuse in poetic figures, that the translation is rendered difficult.

a The presence of the list of hostile allies at the beginning of the inscription would indicate with great probability that the opening words were the same as in the Kadesh Poem, which likewise begins with a list of the allied foes.

b The loss is one course of masonry at the top—at most four or five words at the beginning of each line.

c Double name, as also in all other places in the inscription.

d Hebrew בֵּיתָ. This remark may possibly refer to the Libyans and indicate the distribution of their immigrants from Per-Berset on the west to the Heliopolitan canal on the east.

Libyan Aggression

577. 8— — — — not cared for, it was forsaken as pasture for cattle because of the Nine Bows, it was left waste from the times of the ancestors. All the kings of Upper Egypt abode in their pyramids 9— — — —; the kings of Lower Egypt [rested]e in the midst of their cities, inclosed in the state palace, for lack of troops; they had no bowmen to answer against them.

Accession of Merneptah, and His Preparations

578. It happened 10f— — — — he [assumed] the throne of Horus, he was appointed to preserve the folk (p·t) alive, he hath arisen as king to protect the people (rhy·t). There was might in him to do it, because of — — — g in 11— — — — Meber (M 3-b 3-r 3),h the choicest of his bowmen were mustered, his chariots were brought up from every side, his scouts were in — — — his [—] in 12— — — — his —. He considered not hundreds of thousands in the day of the array. His infantry (mnf·t) marched out, the heavy armed troops arrived, beautiful in appearance, leading the bowmen against every land.

aThis town has nothing to do with modern Belbès on the eastern margin of the Delta (classic Byblos? See Brugsch, Dictionnaire géographique, 197); but was in the western Delta (see IV, 370).

bRougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, has yr (the eye) = “do, make,” perhaps used as in Uni (I, 322, ll. 41, 42, note) with the meaning “reach, visit.”

cText has not “north,” but either šd or e·nd with the d written out alphabetically, and a long horizontal determinative lost in a joint of the masonry.

dA canal leaving the Nile by Heliopolis; the Sheken canal is otherwise unknown (see Brugsch, Dictionnaire géographique, 77).

eThe parallelism demands a verb similar in meaning to “abode.”

fThere is here a reference to the accession of Merneptah, as Brugsch has noticed (Geschichte, 569).

gFragments of words; Brugsch’s “weil er war das Ebenbild des [schön] gesichtigen” (=Ptah) is quite impossible.

hA syllable or two may be lost at the beginning; it is the name of an unknown foreign country. The connection before it is not clear, but it is evident that the practical preparations for the campaign begin here.

iLit., “those who bear the hand-to-hand fighting;” these are heavily armed foreign mercenaries.
News of Coalition of Libyans and Sea-Peoples against Egypt

579. a—13— —— the third season, saying: "The wretched, fallen chief of Libya, Meryey (M-\(r^{2} -y^{2} -yw-y\)), son of Ded (Dy-d), has fallen upon the country of Tehenu with his bowmen 14— — —— Sherden ([5]^{2} -r^{2} -d-n), Shekelesh ([5]^{2} -k-rw-\($^{2}\)), Ekwesh (\(3^{b} -k^{b} -w^{b} -$^{2}\)), Luka (Rw-kw), Teresh (Tw-ry-\($^{2}\)), taking the best of every warrior and every man of war (\(\phi hrr\)) of his country. He has brought his wife and his\(^{c}\) children 15— — — — leaders of the camp, and he has reached the western boundary in the fields of Perire."\(^{d}\)

Merneptah's Speech

580. Lo, his majesty was enraged at their report, like a lion; 16The assembled his court\(^{1}\), and said to them: "Hear ye the command of your lord; I give — — as ye shall do, saying: I am the ruler who shepherds\(^{e}\) you; I spend my time searching out 17— — — — you, as a father, who preserves alive his children; while ye fear like birds, and ye know not the goodness of that which he does. Is there none answering in 18— — — — [IShall the land be\(^{1}\) wa]sted and forsaken at the invasion of every country, while the Nine Bows plunder its borders, and rebels invade it every day? ---

\(^{a}\)This announcement was made in the tenth month, as is shown by the Cairo column (§ 595), which fills out the lacuna at the beginning of the above section. Allowing the fourteen days for the muster of the troops (l. 28), and remembering that the armies met in battle on the third of the eleventh month, it will be seen that the news must have reached the king during the first half of the tenth month.

\(^{b}\)The first syllable is omitted by Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, Mariette, Karnak, and Brugsch, Geographische Inschriften; being given only by de Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, where it is probably a correction by de Rougé himself.

\(^{c}\)So Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques; Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, and Mariette, Karnak, have "their."

\(^{d}\)Pr-yr misread by Brugsch as Pr-Yr-\($^{ps-t}\), and then identified with Prosopis. This is shown to be incorrect by the short version (§ 600, l. 9). See Müller (Asien und Europa, 357, n. 3), who would identify it as the \(Y^{2} rw\) of the Pyramid Texts (Mernere, 182=Pepi, 145; cf. also Teti, 351=Pepi, II, 174), "a border town of the natron district."

\(^{f}\)The restoration is certain, the determinative (papyrus roll) is clear, and there is just room for the "great"-sign (\($^{2}\)) above it. In exactly the same connection it is used in Ramesses III's Libyan wars (IV, 405, see note).
months dwelling. They have reached the hills of the oasis, and have cut off the district of Toyeh. It has been since the kings of Upper Egypt, in the records of other times. It was not known as worms, not considering their bodies, (but) loving death and despising life. Their hearts are exalted against the people their chief. They spend their time going about the land, fighting, to fill their bodies daily. They come to the land of Egypt, to seek the necessities of their mouths; their desire is my bringing them like netted fish on their bellies. Their chief is like a dog, a man of boasting, without courage; he does not abide — bringing to an end the Pedetishew whom I caused to take grain in ships, to keep alive that land of Kheta. Lo, I am he whom the gods under me, King Merneptah, given life. By my ka, by the —, as I flourish as ruler of the Two Lands the land shall be made Egypt. Amon nods approval, when one speaks in aThe usual designation of the oasis otherwise called by the Egyptians the "Northern Oasis," and by the Greeks "The Lesser." It lies exactly southwest of the Fayum, in N. 28°, less than one hundred miles west of the Nile valley.

bBrugsch (Dictionnaire géographique, 70) has n hr n (for m hr n) = "in front of," that is, "cut off in front of," which does not alter the meaning.

cThis is the oasis now called "Farafrah," about seventy-five miles west of south of the "Northern Oasis." The Libyans had thus taken the two oases nearest them, south of the natron district.

eOf Egypt (rhy't).

fOr: "the Pedetishew bring to an end."

The king evidently regards Kheta as included in the coalition of northern peoples against Egypt, and the logic of the reference seems to be Kheta’s ingratitude in joining a combination against the Egyptians, who had sent grain for her maintenance, as if such grain had not been sent in a commercial way, but from philanthropic motives, which, of course, was probably not the case. In view of the mention of Kheta among the defeated peoples in the Hymn of Victory (§ 617, l. 26), the question arises whether Kheta already in the year 3 had not been in such close sympathy with the plans of these allies that Merneptah had extended against the Kheta also the campaign on which the Asiatic peoples and towns mentioned in the Hymn of Victory (§ 617, ll. 26-28) were pillaged. I can only answer this question in the affirmative. The plunder of a few towns on the Hittite border in Syria would be quite sufficient, in the eyes of an oriental, to justify the boast in l. 26.

Or: "say they in Thebes."
Thebes. He has turned his back against the Meshwesh ($M-\tilde{s}w\tilde{s}$), and looks [not] on the land of Temeh ($T-m-h$), when they are "$-\tilde{m}$."

Beginning of the Campaign

581. — — — —$^a$ the leaders of the bowmen in front thereof to overthrow the land of Libya. When they went forth, the hand of the god was with them; (even) Amon was with them as their shield. The land of Egypt was commanded, saying: "$-\tilde{m}$ — — — — ready to march in fourteen days."

Merneptah’s Dream

582. Then his majesty saw in a dream as if a statue of Ptah were standing before Pharaoh, L. P. H. He was like the height of "$-\tilde{m}$. He spake to him: “Take thou (it),” while he extended to him the sword,$^b$ “and banish thou the fearful heart from thee.” Pharaoh, L. P. H., spake to him: “Lo, "$-\tilde{m}$ — — —.”

Approach of the Two Armies

583. — infantry and chariotry in (great) number$^d$ were camped before them on the shore ($rw\tilde{d}$) in front of the district of Perire ($Pr-yr$). Lo, the wretched chief of Libya — — — — in the night of the second day of the third month of the third season (eleventh month) when the land grew light (enough) for advancing with them. The wretched fallen chief of Libya came at the time of the third day of the third month of the third season (eleventh month), and he brought — — — — until they arrived. The infantry of his majesty went forth together with his chariotry, Amon-Re being with them, and the Ombite (Set) giving to them the hand.

$^a$ It is clear that the king’s speech is concluded in the lacuna, and that the march of the troops now begins.

$^b$ Compare the frequent reliefs in which the god extends a sword ($\lambda p\dot{s}$) to the king. There is not in this speech any warning to Merneptah to withhold himself from the battle, and remain at home, as indicated in the translation of Chabas (Etudes sur l’antiquité historique, 195). This old misunderstanding of Chabas has gained general currency in the histories. [Later: See W. M. Müller (Orientalistische Litteraturzeitung, V, December, 1902, 477) for the similarity of this dream story to that in Herodotus, II, 141.]

$^c$ The answer of the Pharaoh was evidently very short.

$^d$ See § 570, note.
The Battle

584. ["Every man"] their blood, there was none that escaped among them. Lo, the bowmen of his majesty spent six hours of destruction among them; they were delivered to the sword upon of the country. Lo, as they fought; the wretched chief of Libya halted, his heart fearing; withdrew (again), stopped, knelt, [leaving] sandals, his bow, and his quiver in haste behind [him], and every [thing] that was with him. of his limbs, great terror coursed in his members. [they] slew of his possessions, his equipment, his silver, his gold, his vessels of bronze, the furniture of his wife, his throne, his bows, his arrows, all his works, which he had brought from his land, consisting of oxen, goats, and asses, [all were carried away] to the palace, to bring them in, together with the captives. Lo, the wretched chief of Libya was in speed to flee by himself, while all the people among the captains among the wounded of the sword. Lo, the officers, who were upon the horses of his majesty, set themselves after them felled with arrows, carried off, slain.

Retrospect

585. No [man] has seen it in the annals of the kings of Lower Egypt; lo, this land of Egypt was in [the]ir power, in a state of weakness in the time of the kings of Upper Egypt, so that their hand could not be repelled, these — out of love of their beloved son, in order to protect Egypt for her lord, that the temples of Egypt might be saved, and in order to announce the mighty power of the [Good] God.

Later (1901) Legrain found the same block under the débris, and published it (Annales du service, II, 269), without recognizing that it had long before been seen and copied by de Rougé. The recovery of this block, however, shows that the loss at the beginnings of the lines is, for the main part of the inscription, only the space of one course of masonry.

\textit{bLit., \textit{"phaulli with the foreskins" (Krn't=\textit{דרולווע}). Müller's objections (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archceology, 1888, 147 ff.) to this rendering, it seems to me, do not take full account of the use of the word in this text. He maintains that \textit{krn't="horn"} (long ago suggested by Chabas, \textit{Etudes sur L'antiquité historique}, 234, n. 2) means simply phallus, because Athribis Stela uses it in the same place where our long text has \textit{"phallus,"} or interchangeably with \textit{"phal-lus."} But \textit{krn't} is something which the Sherden and the other allies did not have (l. 54)! Moreover, it is something connected with the phallic which they did not have. As the phonetic equivalence \textit{krn't=\textit{דרולווע}} is unexceptionable, it seems to me the rendering \textit{"foreskin"} is very probable. The question of the homes of these people is in greater uncertainty than the rendering of \textit{krn't}, and should be decided by this rendering rather than the reverse.}

a This is the palace balcony on which the Pharaoh appeared to the people. It is also mentioned in a similar connection in Papyrus Harris (infra, IV, 408), and is several times depicted in the Amarna tombs (e.g., Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 103–9). Cf. also Harmhab Decree (II, 66, l. 9).

b Athribis Stela, l. 8 (§ 600).

cPr m. It occurs also in the parallel passage in the Athribis Stela (§ 600, l. 8), and twice in Papyrus Harris (§ 2, and 31, 6, one of which was north of Heliopolis). It is clear that the limits of the flight and pursuit are being given as in the battle under Ramses III; they are given in the Athribis Stela (II. 8, 9) as the château in Perire and the "mount of the Horns of the Earth;" this terminus is the same as under Ramses III, and of course is the rise of the Libyan desert, or some elevation near it, upon which Ramses III had built a town. (The term, "Horns of the Earth," is also used of the southern limit of territory known to the Egyptians.) Whether the beginning point of the flight, viz., Perire, is the same as at Ramses III, is perhaps uncertain, but the above facts concerning the pr m, and the parallel character of the two invasions would certainly at least place them near together, and it is probable that they are identical. (See also Pr-m, y, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 40, 102.)

d Brugsch has "destroyer of" in this lacuna, but it is in none of the texts.

a It is noticeable that this designation, both here and in the Athribis Stela (1. 13), is inserted only after the Ekwesh. In the Athribis Stela Ekwesh is cut off by a numeral from the preceding, showing that the designation there belongs only to them.

b All the texts indicate a lacuna here at the top of 1. 53, and yet the half of the word “foreskin” at the bottom of 1. 52 fits exactly the other half at the top of 1. 53. This may be an accident, but if correct, then there is no lacuna at top of 1. 53, and no place for a number between. The number corresponding to this place in the Athribis Stela (viz., 2201 + x) is not found in this text till 1. 56.

c Müller’s 212 (Asien und Europa, 358) is an error; all four texts have 222.

d Why the number of hands cut off should exceed the number of men, when one hand was cut from each man, does not appear.

e Lepsius, Denkmäler, has 750.

f Apparently only 6,111 of the 6,359 mentioned in 1. 51 were carried before the king.

So Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, and Lepsius, Denkmäler; but Mariette, Karnak, and Rouge, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, have 2,362 (none has 72 as in Müller, Asien und Europa, 358).

aThis is probably the total of the slain, Libyan and non-Libyan, for the corresponding number in the Athribis Stela (l. 17) has before it: “fallen of Libya, total number;” the non-Libyan foreigners being thus merely designated as of the Libyan party. Of the actual Libyans slain we have a total of 6,359 (l. 51), and of non-Libyan foreigners at least 2,370 (l. 56). This makes a total of 8,729, omitting a few hundred non-Libyans, who would doubtless bring the total up to 9,376, as given in our text above. But it is possible that this number refers only to captives, in this case, as the Athribis Stela gives at least 9,300 killed (l. 17), the total of killed and captured would be over 18,000! See also Müller, Asien und Europa, 358, n. 5.

bProbably smaller weapons; at the end is the determinative of a foreign country, probably Libya.

cDümichen, Historische Inschriften, shows an uncertain 100, and a 1; Mariette, Karnak, idem; Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, a 10 and a 1; Lepsius, Denkmäler, remains of the same; Brugsch (Geschichte, 576) has 113. But the photograph is practically certain as 12.

dThe last word indicates men, as shown by the determinative.

eThis space was left empty on the monument; Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, says: “Cette partie n’a pas été gravée;” Lepsius, Denkmäler, “leer.”

fSo Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, and Mariette, Karnak; Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, and Lepsius, Denkmäler, have 1,307.

II. THE CAIRO COLUMNd

593. This document first furnished the date of Merneptah's great Libyan victory, and was therefore formerly of greater importance than at present.

It contained a shorter account of the announcement of the invasion to the king, which fills out the lacuna in the great Karnak Inscription (§ 579, ll. 12, 13), preceding the announcement. The historical content of the document is as follows:

b There is perhaps a reference to this in the Athribis Stela (recto, l. 4), where the king is called: one "who causes Egypt to sleep until the morning." Ll. 76, 77 contain only scanty fragments of conventional phrases; ll. 78 and 79 have each only two signs visible at the bottom. They must be near the end of the inscription, but the exact number of lines lost at the end is uncertain.

c These are the last two lines of text preserved; they are too fragmentary for use here. Mariette, Karnak (Texte, 75), states that there are two more lines, but his plate (55) gives ll. 78–80, without any visible signs.

d Section of a granite column now in the Cairo Museum, first noticed in the court of the building of the minister of public instruction in Cairo by Brugsch (Geschichte, 577, note); then removed to the museum and published (without the reliefs) by Maspero (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1881, 118).

III. THE ATHRIBIS STELA\(^d\)

596. This monument contains a shorter account of Merneptah's Libyan campaign, closing with a list of the killed, the captured, and the spoil. It forms a useful supplement to the Karnak document, furnishing, among other data, the exact date of the battle in Merneptah's fifth year.

Recto

\(^a\) Called only "dieu innommé" by Maspero, who has not published the relief; but he states that the heads are lost, and the god therefore unrecognizable.

\(^b\) Name of a country, of which only "— -n-r —" is now visible.

\(^c\) Only a few traces.

\(^d\) A granite stela from Athribis in the southern Delta, now in Cairo; published without reliefs by Maspero (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 65-67). It is inscribed on both sides. A piece broken off vertically through the ends of the horizontal lines is now lost, depriving us of several words at the end of each line of the recto, and at the beginning of each line of the verso. The exact amount of the loss is determined on the verso at the beginning of l. 9, by comparison with the Karnak Inscription (§ 588, l. 49). As Maspero has published only from the squeeze, his text (used here) is sometimes uncertain; and a collation of the original is much needed.
Below is an inscription of sixteen lines, mostly conventional praise of the king. It contains the following references to the campaign against the Libyans:

Introduction; Valor of Merneptah

598. Year 5, third month of third season (eleventh month), third day, under the majesty of King [Merneptah] achieving his fame against the land of Temeh they speak of his victories in the land of Me[ishwesh] who puts Libya under the might of his terror. making their camps into wastes of the Red Land, taking every herb that came forth from their fields. No field grew, to keep alive Re himself has cursed the people since they crossed into [Egypt] with one accord. They are delivered to the sword in the hand of Merneptah-Hotepphirma. The families of Libya are scattered upon the dykes like mice seizing among them like a hawk, (while) there is found among them no place of refuge like Sekhmet. His arrows fail not among the limbs of his enemies; every survivor among them [is carried off as a living captive] They live on herbs like [wild] cattle.

Verso

599. The other side of the stela shows, at the top, another relief like the first, except that the two gods are here Har-akhte and Sutekh. Below it is an inscription of nineteen lines, of which the first four contain only the customary fulsome laudation of the king. Specific references to the Libyan campaign begin with l. 5, as follows:

IV. HYMN ON THE VICTORY OVER THE LIBYANSd (ISRAEL STELA)

602. This composition is one of a class common in the Nineteenth Dynasty. It is a poetic encomium in celebration of the great victory of Merneptah over the Libyans in the fifth year of his reign. It adds nothing to the facts furnished by the Karnak inscription (§§ 572–92) concerning this victory, except the picturesque description of the joy and relief among the Egyptians (ll. 21–26, §616). Without the Karnak inscription little could have been gathered from this document of the importance of Merneptah's victory, or the gravity of the danger from which it brought relief; for, as Spiegelberg has remarked, it never even mentions the northern allies of the Libyans. Many of the descriptive passages too, are so figurative and highly colored as to be unintelligible.

bKarnak (§ 588, l. 58) has 9,376.

This numeral refers to the weapons, etc., beginning in l. 58 (Karnak, § 589).

dOn a stela discovered by Petrie in the ruins of Merneptah's mortuary temple at Thebes, in 1896. The inscription occupies the back of the stela of Amenhotep III, taken from his mortuary temple by Merneptah (see II, § 878). It was first published by Spiegelberg (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 34, 1 ff.), and again by him (Six Temples, Pls. XIII, XIV). I had also photographs, kindly sent me by E. Brugsch-Bey, made by him on a large scale from a squeeze. There is a duplicate original in Karnak, of which only a fragment has survived. It is published by Dümichen (Historische Inschriften, I, 1), and by Erman (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 34). I have collated it for the accompanying translation. A considerable literature on the Israel passage has arisen, which will be found on p. 257, note. On the elucidation of the text in general, besides Spiegelberg's commentary (with his publication of the text), see: Piehl, Sphinx, IV, 125; Müller, Recueil, XX, 31, 32; Griffith, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XIX, 1897, 293–300.
603. The monument has attracted wide attention, because of the reference to Israel in the last section. This is the earliest mention of Israel known to us in literature, not excluding the Hebrew Scriptures themselves. It occurs in a clear-cut strophe (§ 617) of twelve lines, which forms the conclusion of the composition. This strophe opens and closes with a couplet containing a universal statement of the subjugation of foreign peoples in general, while the eight lines between are a rapid list of certain of the defeated foreigners, among whom is Israel. The assertion of the defeat of Israel is so brief and bald that little can be drawn from it. Moreover, it is made up of conventional phrases, applied also to other peoples. Much has been made of the second phrase, "his seed (pr't) is not." It has been applied to the seed of Israel and referred to the slaying of the male children of the Israelites by the Egyptians! But this phrase is

The treatment which this phrase has received by some biblical scholars furnishes another curious example of the totally misleading use of such evidence, where it is received at second hand. Thus in the Expositor (March, 1897, 161, note) we find the statement that Spiegelberg renders this phrase ("his seed is not") thus: "without fear" (!). An examination shows that Spiegelberg, translating into German, quite properly rendered the phrase: "ohne Frucht" ("without fruit"). The German "Frucht" was then misread by the writer in the Expositor as "Furcht" = "fear"! From the Expositor this absurdity then passed into other articles and gained currency. Some of the essays on the passage are therefore to be used with the greatest caution; but see: Hommel, Neue Kirchliche Zeitschrift, VII, 581-86; Müller, Independent, July 9, 1896, 940; Sellin, Neue Kirchliche Zeitschrift, VII, 502-14; Molandre, Revue des religions, September—October, 1897; Steindorff, Zeitschrift für alttestamentliche Wissenschaft, XVI, 1896, 330-33; and Mittheilungen des Deutschen Palästinischen Vereins, 1896, 45, 46; Marshall; Expositor, July, 1896; Petrie, Contemporary Review, May, 1896, 617-27; and Century Magazine, August, 1896; Spiegelberg, Sitzungsberichte der Preussischen Akademie, 1896, 593 ff.; Naville, Recueil, XX, 32-37; Brandt, Theologische Tijdschrift, 1896, 505-12; Fries, Sphinx, I, 208 ff.; Daressy, Revue archéologique, XXXIII, 263 ff.; Wiedemann, Le Muséeon, XVII, 89–107; Halévy, Revue sémitique, 1896, 285 ff. found five times elsewhere in the inscriptions referring to a number of other peoples as follows:

604. 1. "Those who reached my border are desolated, their seed is not" (referring to northern invaders). b
2. "The Libyans and the Seped are wasted, their seed is not." c
3. "The fire has penetrated us, our seed is not" (words of defeated Libyans). d
4. "Their cities are made ashes, wasted, desolated; their seed is not" (referring to the Meshwesh). e
5. "[Gored] is the chief of [Amor], ... his seed is not." f

605. The words, "his (their, our) seed is not," are, therefore, a conventional phrase applicable to any defeated and plundered people, and cannot possibly designate an incident peculiar to the history of Israel, like the slaying of the male children(!). Israel, clearly located among Palestinian peoples by the inscription, was defeated and plundered by Merneptah. This inscription is not the only evidence of a campaign by him in Palestine, although the fact seems to have been entirely overlooked in the discussion of the Israel passage. Merneptah was in Asia in his third year, as the journal of a border commandant shows (§ 633, VI. 9; § 635, V, 5).

For the mention of a specific town, or even nation, in such an epithet, in a titulary must refer to some definite occurrence. In the same way Ramses III called himself in his titulary "Conqueror of the Meshwesh (IV, 84), and had the records of his defeat of the Meshwesh perished, we should still be justified in concluding that he had overthrown them.\(^b\) It is certain, therefore, that Merneptah campaigned in Palestine, and there can be no doubt that Israel there suffered defeat and pillage at his hands.

He gratified the heart of Memphis on their foes, making Tatenen rejoice over his enemies. He opened the gates of the walled city which were stopped up, and caused his temples to receive their food (even), King Merneptah, the unique one, who establishes the hearts of hundreds of thousands of myriads, so that breath enters into their nostrils at the sight of him. He has penetrated the land of Temeh in his lifetime, and put eternal fear in the heart of the Meshwesh. He has turned back Libya, who invaded Egypt, and great fear of Egypt is in their hearts.

The Rout of the Libyans

609. Their advanced columns they left behind them, their feet made no stand, but fled. Their archers threw down their bows, and the heart of their fleet ones was weary with marching. They loosed their water skins and threw them to the ground, their were taken and thrown out.

The Fall of the Libyan Chief

610. The wretched, fallen chief of Libya, fled by favor of night alone, with no plume upon his head, his two feet failed. His women were taken before his face, the grain of his supplies was plundered, and he had no water in the skin to keep him alive. The face of his brothers was hostile to slay him, one fought another among his leaders. Their camp was burned and made a roast, all his possessions were food for the troops. When he arrived in his country, he was the complaint of every one in his land. Ashamed, he bowed himself down, an evil fate removed (his) plume. They all spoke against him, among the inhabitants of his city: "He is in the power of the gods, the lords of Memphis; 9the lord of Egypt has cursed his name, Meryey (m-w-r[^]-y[^]-y)), the abomination of Memphis, from son to son of his family, forever. Binre-Meriamon is in pursuit of his children; Merneptah-Hotephirma is appointed to be his fate."

Merneptah's Fame in Libya

611. He has become a proverb[^] for Libya (R[^]-bw); the youth say to youth, concerning his victories: "It has not been done to us before[^] since the time of Re," say they. 1 Every old man says to his son: "Alas for Libya!" They have ceased to live in the pleasant fashion of walking in the field; their going about is stopped in a single day. The Tehenu are consumed in a single year. Sutekh has turned his back upon their chief; their settlements are desolated with his consent[^]. There is no work of carrying[^]—[^] in these days. Concealment is good; there is safety in the cavern. 2 The great lord of Egypt, possessor of might[^]and victory! Who will fight, knowing his stride? The fool, the witless is he who receives him;[^]he shall not know the morrow, who transgresses his boundary.

Divine Protection of Egypt

612. Since the time of the gods, say they, Egypt has been the only daughter of Re; his son is he who 13sits upon the throne of Shu. No one can make a design to invade her people, for the eye of every god is behind him who would violate her; it (the eye)[^] captures the rear of her foes. Meryey (M-r3-y3-γ), the evil-doer, whom the god, the lord who is in Memphis, has overthrown, he has been judged with him in Heliopolis, and the divine ennead declared him guilty of his crimes.

Merneptah Divinely Appointed

613. The All-Lord has said: "Give the sword to my son, the upright of heart, the good and kindly Merneptah, the champion on behalf of Memphis, the advocate of Heliopolis, who opens the towns that were closed up. Let him set free multitudes who are bound in every district, let him give offerings to the temples, let him send in incense before the god, let him cause the princes to recover their possessions, let him cause the poor to re-enter their cities."

Heliopolis Praises Merneptah

614. They say among the lords of Heliopolis regarding their son, Merneptah: "Give to him duration like Re, let him be advocate of him who is oppressed in every country. Egypt has been assigned to him as the portion of him who has gained it for himself forever. His strength is its people. Lo, when one dwells in the time of this hero, the breath of life comes immediately. . . . . . . . so they say.

The Gods Delivered Meryey to Merneptah

615. Meryey (M-w-r3-wy-γ), the wretched, vanquished chief of Libya, came to invade the "Walls-of-the-Sovereign" (Memphis), who is its lord, whose son shines on his throne, the King Merneptah. Ptah said concerning the vanquished (chief) of Libya: "All his crimes shall be gathered and returned upon his (own) head. Deliver him into the hand of Merneptah, that he may make him disgorge what he has swallowed, like a crocodile. Behold, the swift is the captor of the swift; and the king shall snare him, (though) his strength be known; for Amon shall bind him in his hand and shall deliver him to his ka in Hermonthis, (to him) the King Merneptah."

Rejoicing of the Egyptians

616. Great joy has come in Egypt; rejoicing comes forth from the towns of Tomeri. They converse of the victories which Merneptah has achieved among the Tehenu: "How amiable is he, the victorious ruler! How magnified is the king among the gods! How fortunate is he, the commanding lord! Sit happily down and talk, or walk far out upon the way, (for) there is no fear in the heart of the people. The strongholds are left to themselves, the wells are opened (again). The messengers skirt the battlements of the walls, shaded from the sun, until their watchmen wake. The soldiers lie sleeping, and the border scouts are in the field at their (own) desire. The herds of the field are left as cattle sent forth, without herdmen, crossing (at will) the fullness of the stream. There is no uplifting of a shout in the night: 'Stop! Behold, one comes, one comes with the speech of strangers!' One comes and goes with singing, and there is no lamentation of mourning people. The towns are settled again anew; as for the one that ploweth his harvest, he shall eat it. Re has turned himself to Egypt; he was born, destined to be her protector, the King Merneptah."

INSCRIPTIONS OF THE HIGH PRIEST OF AMON, ROY

618. The documents left by Roy are of the greatest importance as showing when the office of High Priest of Amon was for the first time transmitted from father to son, and thus came to be regarded as hereditary. Moreover, an examination of them discloses the fact that this arrogation of power by the High Priest of Amon took place under Merneptah, not at the close of the Nineteenth Dynasty, as commonly supposed, but at the latest in the reign of Merneptah, and possibly still earlier, in the reign of Ramses II. Roy lived in the reign of Merneptah (§§628 ff.), and inherited the high priesthood of Amon from his father, Rome, heretofore considered his son.\(^b\) Roy's father, Rome, therefore lived under Ramses II, and must have been the successor of Beknekhonsu\(^c\) (§§561–68). Roy's son was named Bekne-

\(^a\)The meaning of this phrase is rendered evident by an epithet applied to Ramses II on his Tanis stela (§490, l. 9), viz., "husband of Egypt," meaning, of course, "protector of Egypt." Hence a land may be widowed (=without a "husband," =without a protector), and Palestine had no protector against Egypt.

\(^b\)Since the above was written Wreszcinski's very useful list of the high priests of Amon has appeared (Die Hohenpriester des Amun, von W. Wreszcinski, Berlin, 1904), in which he also makes Rome the elder, and probably the father of Roy (ibid., 14, note).

\(^c\)Beginning sixty years from some point in the reign of Seti I, Beknekhonsu was High Priest of Amon for twenty-seven years. This brings the close of his term to at least the sixtieth year of Ramses II's reign, so that Rome must have succeeded him. It can hardly be an accident that one of the prophets of Amon in Ramses II's forty-sixth year, under the high priesthood of Beknekhonsu, was named Rome (Berlin legal papyrus No. 3047; Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1879, l. 5).
khonsu; hence, as the name thus appears in Roy's family, he (Roy) may have been the grandson of the Beknekhonsu of Ramses II's reign, in which case the hereditary character of the office began with Beknekhonsu. Roy survived into the reign of Seti II; but already under Merneptah he succeeded in gaining high office for his son, with prospects of succeeding to the high priesthood. According to Legrain, his statue recently found in the great Karnak cache bears the following statement:

"Le roi a donné que mes enfants soient rassemblés en corporation (tribu) de mon sang, les établissant parmi les prophètes qui sont sous sa direction. Moi, je suis premier prophète d'Amon, et mon fils est établi à côté de moi en qualité de second prophète et de sous-directeur du palais du roi à l'occident de Thèbes; le fils de mon fils recevra les titres de quatrième prophète d'Amon, de père divin, d'officier et de prêtre."

Legrain has accepted the current conclusion that Roy was the father of Rome, and hence identifies Roy's son above, who became second prophet, with Rome. The narrative of Roy, however, does not give the name of his son; but it is given in the Karnak relief (§ 620) as Beknekhonsu, who must therefore be the son referred to on this new Karnak statue.

---

a Brugsch, Thesaurus, 1321.
b Recueil, 27, 72. Legrain gives no text.
c As now published (Recueil, 27), Legrain's data furnish no evidence that Roy was the father, and Rome his son. The fact that he is able to reconstruct from Twenty-second Dynasty statues a genealogy reaching back to a second prophet, Rome, has no bearing. We know that our Rome is called High Priest of Amon on contemporary monuments; hence the second prophet, Rome, who heads Legrain's genealogy (Recueil, 27, 73), was evidently a different person. The monuments found by Legrain, when published in extenso, may contain evidence that Rome was the son and Roy the father; for I admit that some difficulties attend the supposition that the reverse was true; but the evidence now accessible is certainly strongly in favor of this conclusion.
I. KARNAK INSCRIPTION

619. This document is of importance, first, because of its place, viz., on the walls of the Karnak temple of Amon, where heretofore none but the Pharaoh's name might appear. At the east end of Pylon VIII, built by Thutmose I, was the kitchen or refectory of the high priests of Amon. In view of the extensive household of the high priests at this time, it must have been a considerable building. In Roy's time it had fallen into ruin; and in the reign of Merneptah (§ 625) Roy rebuilt and enlarged it. On the east end of Pylon VIII, near the entrance to the building, where all who went in would see it, he left a record of his pious work, calling upon all the bakers, confectioners, and the like, who daily entered there, to remember him for it and to pray to Amon for him. To this record he prefixed a hymn of praise to Amon, which he placed in the mouth of his deceased father, Rome. Rome recounts his own long life accorded him by Amon, and adds: "My son is in my place, my office is in his hand, in hereditary succession, forever" (l. 6). Rome is thus represented as regarding the hereditary character of the office of High Priest as a matter of course; which would indicate that the beginning of the hereditary succession was earlier, as indicated above (§ 618). The use of the temple wall, and the restoration of one of its connected buildings by the High Priest of Amon, are significant symptoms of the tendency which two hundred years later placed the High Priest on the throne of Egypt.

On the east end of Pylon VIII, overlooking the sacred lake; published: Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 237, c; Stern, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, XI, 74 ff. (partially); and Brugsch, Thesaurus, VI, 1321, 1322 (partially). I had a photograph (for which I am indebted to Borchardt) which filled out many of the lacunae in Lepsius, Denkmäler, and made possible the study of the document as a whole, which, as it has not been done since Stern (1873), furnishes new and important facts.

The dwelling of the High Priest was farther east, south of the lake.
620. Beside the inscription, in relief, are two priests in the attitude of prayer; the first must be Roy, though no name is appended; for the second figure is not Roy (as shown by the accompanying inscription). The second figure is accompanied by the words: "His son, the second prophet of Amon, Beknekhonsu." This second figure and the name have been chiseled out by political enemies, probably at the fall of Seti II, into whose reign Roy survived.

The inscription is as follows:

Praise by Rome

621. Giving praise to Amon-Re, smelling the earth to his beautiful face, by the High Priest of Amon, Rome (R<sup>3</sup>-m). He says: .......

Here follows conventional praise of the god, with a prayer for the king, after which Rome proceeds:

Speech of Rome

622. "Thou didst grant me long life carrying thy image, while my eye beheld thy two uraei every day, and my limbs were endued with health ....... Thou didst prolong my existence during a pleas-

<sup>b</sup>Lepsius, Denkmäler, gives the name as that of Seti II, like the two scenes on the left; but I cannot read this name on the photograph. It was not read by either Stern or Brugsch. If Lepsius has not introduced it from the neighboring adoration of Amon by Seti II, and it actually stands in our passage, it must be a prayer for the king put into the mouth of the deceased Rome; just as the deceased Seti I is made to pray for Ramses II at Abydos. Our inscription in that case dates from the reign of Seti II. The matter can be settled only by an examination of the original; but historically the reasons against reading Seti II are strong, for Roy would then have been High Priest through the reigns of successive kings hostile to each other, Merneptah, Amenmeses, Siptah, and Seti II, in whose quarrels the High Priest of Amon was, of course, involved. It is not likely that the same High Priest continued under them all.

<sup>c</sup>The tense of the original permits translating all the following as a prayer until 1. 6, where the nominal sentence, "my son is, etc." cannot be optative. Hence the whole is historical, and not a prayer. Again, as both Rome and Roy are given the title High Priest of Amon, one of them must be dead; and the deceased is of course he whose son has succeeded him. Hence we must conclude that Rome is the father, and not the son (otherwise Maspero, Momies royales, 666).
ant life, abiding in thy temple, while my limbs were [sound], following thy ka, while my eye beheld the way, until I arrived at the West of Thebes, satisfied with seeing Amon. 6 My son is in my place, my office is in his hand, in hereditary succession forever, as is done for a just man, profitable in the house of his lord.”

Introduction of Roy’s Speech

623. For the ka of the only excellent and just one, the favored of his god, Amon, profitable to Mut, and amiable to Khonsu, pleasing the heart of the Lord of the Two Lands; hereditary prince, divine father, pure of hands, master of secrets of heaven, earth, and the nether world, of Kamephis (Amon), sem priest in the eternal horizon, great seer of Re-Atum in Thebes, third prophet of Amon, second prophet of Amon, High Priest of Amon, Roy, triumphant. He saith:

Roy’s Speech

624. “O ye priests and scribes of the house of Amon, good servants of the divine offerings, bakers, mixers, confectioners, makers of cakes, and loaves, those who perform their every duty for their lord; who shall enter into this refectory, which is in [the house of Amon].

Roy’s Restoration

625. “I found this house in complete ruin; its walls falling, the woodwork wretched, the doorposts of wood perishing, the paint faded.
I [laid it out] with increase throughout, heightened and widened and established. I made its doorposts of sandstone, I mounted upon them doors of real cedar; a place for the bakers and mixers who are in it. I made it a better work than before, for the protection of the servants of Amon, lord of gods.”

Roy’s Admonition

626. “Give ye heed and hear ye what I say! Trespass not against any thing which I have made; prosper my name,—my virtues (ṣḥ), speak favorably for me in the presence of Amon; then shall he favor you,—according as he does,—[Iye shall attain] old age in his house, his food shall be yours, ye shall bequeath (your offices) to your children in hereditary succession in his house forever. Place offerings before my statue, pour out libations upon the ground for my name, set flowers before me when ye enter, bespeak for me his favor with a loving heart for my god, Amon, lord of gods. Then shall be given to you other things which.—. Cause [this writing] to be read, in order to do according to my sayings which are before you. Put my good reputation in the mouth of the youth, according as I have done excellent things in the House of Amon on every occasion,—Amon, because of these my.—. May he grant me 110 years bearing [his] image forever. I said in my heart his ka.” For the ka of the High Priest of Amon, Roy.

II. SISILEH STELA

627. The building which Roy erected at Karnak was partially of sandstone, and as the High Priest of Amon was regularly chief architect of the buildings at Karnak, it is

b His statue must have been in the temple near this place.
c A relief (Lepsius, Denkmäler, 237, c) beside this long inscription shows Rome and Roy kneeling with upraised hands before two royal cartouches, the names in which are chiseled out. Lepsius’ notebook offers no help as to their reading. The two men have each the title “High Priest of Amon.” There is no sign of the relationship between them, and both are m ḥrw (“triumphant”). Below are the words: “The assistant whom his majesty taught, the High Priest of Amon, Rome, made (it).” If made in the lifetime of Rome, the expunged names will be those of Merneptah. Over this scene is one showing Seti II worshiping Amon; it has no necessary connection with that of Rome and Roy.
d Champollion, Monuments, 102 = Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 200, a. probable that Roy went to Silsileh himself to superintend the quarrying of the sandstone for his building at Karnak. Our inscription does not state the object of his visit, but nothing else is known to us which would bring the High Priest of Amon to Silsileh. This dates Roy's building in Merneptah's reign.

628. The stela shows King Merneptah and Roy worshipping before Amon. Below are the name and titles of Roy as in above Karnak inscription (§ 625, ll. 6, 7). Down each side is a prayer, one for Roy, and the other for Rome, with no statement of the relationship between them. Both bear the title, "High Priest of Amon," which they could not have borne simultaneously. One is, therefore, already deceased in Merneptah's reign, and as Roy appears assisting the king in the relief, it is Rome who is the deceased father. Hence the old supposition that Rome was the son and still lived under Seti II is incorrect, as we found was indicated also by the Karnak inscription. Rome, therefore, if deceased in Merneptah's short reign, must have been High Priest of Amon during the latter part of Ramses II's reign, and possibly survived into the reign of Merneptah.*

DAYBOOK OF A FRONTIER OFFICIAL

*The other inscriptions mentioning Roy are of no historical importance: a carnelian buckle with his name and titles is in Paris (Bibliothèque Nationale, No. 1468, bis), and a mortuary stela of one of his subordinates is in Leyden (V, 8). I owe the first reference to Dr. Wresscinski.

the names and the business of the messengers who passed through the place on their way to Syria. In addition to the important and interesting glimpse of the active intercourse between Egypt and Syria in the thirteenth century B.C., which the document affords us, it is of importance also as showing that Merneptah in his third year was in Syria, undoubtedly on the campaign during which he plundered Israel, as related in his Hymn of Victory of the year 5 (§ 617).

The notes are of the most hurried character, and so abbreviated that the prepositions are omitted.

Fifteenth Day

630. VI: Year 3, first month of the third season (ninth month), fifteenth day:
There went up the servant of Baal, Roy (R²-y), son of Zeper (D²-pw-r), of Gaza (G²-d²-y, sic!), who had with him for Syria (H²-rw) two different letters, to wit: (for) the captain of infantry, Khay (H²-y), one letter; (for) the chief of Tyre, Baalat-Remeg (B-²-l-tw-R³-m-g-w), one letter.

Seventeenth Day

631. Year 3, first month of the third season (ninth month), seventeenth day:
There arrived the captains of the archers of the Well of Merneptah-Hotephirma, L. P. H., which is (on) the highland, to report in the fortress which is in Tharu (T²-rw).

Uncertain Day

632. Year 3, first month of the third season (ninth month), 7th day:
There returned the attendant, Thutiy, son of Thekerem (T²-k²-rw-m) of Geket (G²-k²-ty); Methdet (M-²-dw-ty-w), son of Shem-Baal (S³-m-B-³-r) (of) the same (town); Sutekhmose, son of Eperdegel (³-pr-d-³-p³) (of) the same (town), who had with him, for the place where the king was, (for) the captain of infantry, Khay (מֵיה), a gift (יִנְבֵּי תָּו, sic!) and a letter.

633. V There went up the attendant, Nakhtamon, son of Thara (תִּרְחָא), who journeyed to Upper Tyre (דָּרָא לְוֶ-רֶא), who had with him for Syria (מֵיה לְרוֹ), two different letters, to wit: (for) the captain of infantry, Penamon, one letter; (for) the steward, Ramsesnakht, of this town, one letter.

634. 4 There returned the chief of the stable, Pemerkhetem (פֶּרֶמֶרֶק הֶט), son of Ani, of the Town of Merneptah-Hotephirma, which is in the district of the Aram (תוֹרָא), who had with him (for) the place where the king was, two letters, to wit: (for) the captain of infantry, Peremhab (פֶּרֶמֶרֶק חֶב), one letter; (for) the deputy, Peremhab, one letter.

Twenty-fifth Day

635. 8 Year 3, first month of the third season (ninth month), twenty-fifth day:

There went up the charioteer, Enwau (עֵנֵו מֶוַ), of the great stable of the court of Binre-Meriamon, (Merneptah), L. P. H.

REIGN OF SIPTAH

NUBIAN GRAFFITI

639. The only inscriptions of important historical content from the reign of Siptah are the graffiti of his viceroys in Nubia, especially those at Wadi Halfa. They show that he was at first called Ramses-Siptah, and later Merneptah-Siptah. He went out to Nubia apparently in his first year, as far as Abu Simbel, to appoint Seti his new viceroy of Kush (No. 1), and Neferhor the official who brought the new viceroy out to his post, recorded his arrival at Wadi Halfa (No. 2). The "reward" brought by Neferhor on this occasion for the officials of Nubia can be nothing else than the new king's attempt to win and hold them to his support. He evidently succeeded, for in the year 3 the treasury official, Piyay, records his visit at Wadi Halfa to receive the tribute of Kush (No. 3).

640. In the same year Seti is still viceroy, recording his devotion to the king on the rocks at the first cataract (Nos. 5 and 6). He is now also "governor of the gold-country of Amon" and "chief steward of the king." Siptah ruled at least three years longer, for one of his messengers visited Wadi Halfa in the year 6 (No. 8). Another of his supporters to whom much interest attaches in these graffiti is his treasurer, Bay. This man was chief treasurer, and a man of some power, or he could not have excavated a tomb in the Valley of the Kings; but a mistranslation of Brugsch has given currency to a totally false idea of Bay's position. In both the graffiti (Nos. 6 and 7) commemorating Bay, there is attached to his name a relative clause: "whom the king established in the seat of his father," a not uncommon statement, indicating that a man has inherited his father's office. Brugsch's rendering, following de Rouge, in "in dem er (Seti) den König auf den Thron seines Vaters setzte," is grammatically untenable; hence the prevailing interpretation in all the histories since de Rouge's time, that the king owed his throne to Bay, is without foundation. On the contrary, the old hypothesis of Rouge, that the powerful noble of this reign was the viceroy of Kush, Seti, who became King Seti II, succeeding Siptah, is supported by these graffiti. Seti becomes "governor of the gold-country of Amon," which places him in close communication with the powerful priesthood of Amon, from whom so many usurpers drew their strength.

641. The succession of the kings of the time, supposed to be against Rouge's supposition, is clearly in support of it; but the evidence either has been overlooked or has only recently been published. There is space here to note only some of the main points in the evidence. Amenmeses, the successor of Merneptah, was a usurper and persecuted the memory of Merneptah, for example at the Ramesseum, where he set his own name over that of Merneptah. Amenmeses was in turn treated in the same way by his successor, Siptah, who inserted his own name over that of Amenmeses dIndeed, there is a definite connection between the High Priest of Amon and Nubia, for he became viceroy of Nubia as his power increased (Annales, IV, 9).

in a relief\(^a\) at Kurna, showing Amenmeses worshiping the Theban divinities, who are associated with Ramses II and Seti I, from whom Amenmeses was probably descended. The succession of Amenmeses-Siptah is therefore certain. On examining the position of Seti II with reference to the said two kings, the evidence of his first tomb in the Valley of the Kings is conclusive. Lepsius' careful and exhaustive examination\(^b\) of the royal names in the tomb of Siptah's queen, Tewosret, shows conclusively that Seti II usurped this tomb. He therefore followed Siptah, and may very well have been that king's powerful viceroy of Nubia, Seti, whom we find commemorated in the following graffiti. In Ramses III's time he was looked upon as the only legitimate king between Merneptah and Setnakht.\(^c\)

642. d1. Praise to Amon! May he grant life, prosperity and health to the ka of the king's-messenger to every country, companion of the feet of the Lord of the Two Lands, favorite of Horus in the palace (the king), first charioteer of his majesty, Rekhpehtuf (Rh-ḥptw'j). His lord came to establish the king's-son of Kush, Seti, upon his seat, in the year 1 of the Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses-Siptah.

\(^a\) Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 201, e; Text, III, 91, 92; so Rouge, op. cit., 185. The Horus-name of Amenmeses in the body of the text below (l. 1), was overlooked and not changed by Siptah, thus betraying the identity of the original king to whom the monument belonged. The mythological reference on this monument, to the rearing of Amenmeses by Isis in Khemmis is, of course, applied to any king in the inscriptions (e. g., Thutmose III; II, 138), and does not at all show the actual birthplace of the king. This ancient misunderstanding appears again in Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archceology, 1904, 37.

\(^b\) Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, Text, 209-14; Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, III, 123-36. Seti II did not use the tomb after his usurpation of it, but hewed another and larger one (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 214 ff.; Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, III, 146 ff.). The empty tomb of Tewosret was then usurped by Setnakht, who enlarged it (loc. cit.).

643. 2.² Year 1 of the Good God, Ramses-Siptah, given life. Praise to thy ka, O Horus, lord of Bohen! May he grant life, prosperity, health, fitness for service, favor and love, to the ka of the king’s-messenger to every country, priest of the Moon-god, Thoth, the scribe (named) Neferhor, son of Neferhor, scribe of the archives of Pharaoh, L. P. H., when he came with rewards for the officials (h²tyw) of Nubia (T³-pd-t), and to bring the king’s-son of Kush, Seti on his first expedition.

644. 3.³ Year 3 under the majesty of King Siptah. The fan-bearer on the king’s right hand, king’s-scribe, overseer of the treasury, king’s-scribe of the archives of Pharaoh, steward in the house (h’t) in the house of Amon, Piyay (Pyy³y) came to receive the tribute of the land of Kush.

645. 4.⁴ Year 3 of King Siptah. The first charioteer of his majesty, king’s-messenger to every country, to establish the chiefs upon their thrones, satisfying the heart of his lord, Hori, son of Kem (K³m), triumphant, of the great stable of Seti-Merneptah, of the court. He made it in the year 3.

646. 5.⁵ (Name of Siptah). Year 3, first month of the third season, day twenty. Praise to thy ka! O mighty king! May he grant favor to the ka of the fan-bearer on the king’s right hand, king’s-son of Kush, governor of south countries, Seti.

²Halfa temple, Sayce’s 14; Steindorff’s manuscript.

³This unusual form of Siptah’s name occurs also at Abu Simbel (No. 1, § 642)—a fact overlooked in proposing to identify this king with Amenmeses (Recueil, XVII, 162, note), who never has Siptah as the second part of his given name. We must therefore accept two forms of Siptah’s name; (1) Ramses-Siptah, used at the beginning of his reign; (2) Merneptah-Siptah, introduced not later than the year 3 (No. 4, § 645). The change is paralleled, e.g., by the alteration in Seti II’s name (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 214).

⁴Halfa temple, on a large ram, Sayce’s, II. ²Double name.

⁵As this word “house” (h’t) is at the bottom of a line, something has evidently escaped the copyists below; we have here the official name of an Amon-temple, with the name of the king lacking before “in the house of Amon.”

⁹His titles are repeated below, with “hereditary prince” prefixed.
647. 6. A relief shows King Siptah enthroned, with his treasurer, Bay, behind him; Seti, the viceroy of Kush, is before him in the attitude of praise. The inscriptions are:

Over Bay

Wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, casting out lying, presenting truth; whom the king established [in] the seat of his father, great chief treasurer of the whole land, Ramses-Khementerc-Bay.

Over Seti

Praise to thee! O mighty king! By the king's-son of Kush, governor of the gold countries of Amon, fan-bearer on the king's right hand, chief steward of the king, king's-scribe of the records of Pharaoh, L. P. H., Seti.

648. 7. Another similar relief shows King Siptah offering flowers to Amon; Bay appears behind the king, and over them both are the words:

King's Prayer

Giving praise to Amon-Re, doing obeisance to his ka. May he protect his son, Lord of the Two Lands, Ikhnere-Setepnere (Siptah).

Bay's Prayer

649. May they grant recognition to truth, and reward to him who doeth it (truth), a prosperous life with a happy heart, joy of heart, possession of health; for the ka of the great chief treasurer of the whole land,

Fan-bearer on the king's right hand, king's-messenger to Kharu and Kush, ———— (name lost).

a That this is a relative clause is shown by the second relative, "whom he loved," which shows that we should not render smn as a participle. The n-form, which we should expect in earlier times, is perhaps involved in the n of smn (Sethe, Verbum, 1, § 226); but more probably the form is simply in accord with the prevailing tendency of the old n-form to give way to sdm'ṣ at this time.

b A third inscription of the reign of Siptah, containing the same phrase, is at Wadi Halfa (Steindorff's manuscript), and is, of course, to be assigned to Bay, although his name is lost.

INDEX

EXPLANATION OF TYPOGRAPHICAL SIGNS AND SPECIAL CHARACTERS

1. The introductions to the documents are in twelve-point type, like these lines.

2. All of the translations are in ten-point type, like this line.

3. In the footnotes and introductions all quotations from the documents in the original words of the translation are in italics, inclosed in quotation marks. Italics are not employed in the text of the volumes for any other purpose except for titles.

4. The lines of the original document are indicated in the translation by superior numbers.

5. The loss of a word in the original is indicated by —, two words by ——, three words by ———, four words by ————, five words by ———— ————, and more than five by ———— ———— ————. A word in the original is estimated at a “square” as known to Egyptologists, and the estimate can be but a very rough one.

6. When any of the dashes, like those of No. 5, are inclosed in half-brackets, the dashes so inclosed indicate not lost, but uncertain words. Thus [—] represents one uncertain word, [— —] two uncertain words, and [———] more than five uncertain words.

7. When a word or group of words are inclosed in half-brackets, the words so inclosed are uncertain in meaning; that is, the translation is not above question.

8. Roman numerals I, II, III, and IV, not preceded by the title of any book or journal, refer to these four volumes of Historical Documents. The Arabic numerals following such Romans refer to the numbered paragraphs of these volumes. All paragraph marks (§ and §§, without a Roman) refer to paragraphs of the same volume.

THE TWENTIETH DYNASTY
1. This building is the most completely preserved temple of Egypt, antedating the Ptolemaic period. With its inscriptions and reliefs, it forms a vast record of the reign of Ramses III, parallel with the other record which he has left us in the great Papyrus Harris (§§ 151–412). It was dedicated by the king in his twelfth year, by the introduction of a new calendar of feasts, with richly endowed offerings (§§ 139–45). It was entirely built by Ramses III, as its inscriptions show. To this fact, as well as to its fine state of preservation, is due its importance. That imposing line of similar temples, of the Eighteenth Dynasty, which once extended eastward and northeastward from Medinet Habu, has now almost entirely vanished. The one exception is the ruined temple of Thutmose III, beside the Medinet Habu temple. The Nineteenth Dynasty temples, crowded into the same line, have likewise perished, leaving the wreck of the Ramesseum and the Kurna temple of Seti I. Each of these temples was, with slight exception (Kurna), the work of one king, and the scenes on the Ramesseum pylons, as well as those at Medinet Habu, indicate what an irreparable loss we have suffered in the destruction of these records of individual reigns. The Medinet Habu temple is therefore unique, and we must intensely regret that it was a Twentieth rather than an Eighteenth Dynasty temple which survived.

2. We shall first notice the inscriptions which concern the building (§§ 3–34); second, the historical records preserved on its walls (§§ 35–138); and, third, the great calendar of feasts (§§ 139–45). The inscriptions of earliest date (year 5) are found farthest back, viz., in the second court; while the second pylon, which forms the front of this court, bears an immense inscription of the year 8. The first pylon, the final front of the temple, carries records of the eleventh and twelfth years; so that the gradual growth of the temple from rear to front is clear. At the same time, it must be remembered that the cutting of the scenes and inscriptions was sometimes delayed. Thus the door of the treasury in the oldest part of the temple bears a scene depicting events of the eighth year or later.

Besides the records of the building on its own walls, there is also a record of it in Papyrus Harris (§ 189).

3. In all the dedicatory inscriptions which follow, the traditional formula is introduced by the king's name, preceding the pronoun "he." This has been omitted in the translations throughout. Beginning at the rear, with the oldest portion of the building, we find a dedicatory inscription running around the holy of holies, which is as follows:

4. aHe made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods, making for him a great and august temple of fine, white sandstone, its doors of genuine electrum; an august palace for his image, which is in his house. He made it for him in the sacred district by the side of "Lord of Life," the pure ground of the ruler of Thebes, the eternal resting-place, the accustomed court of the lord of Tazoser, the path of the leaders of the Nether World. I did not overturn the tombs of the lords of life, b the tomb-chambers of the ancestors, the glorious place a"Paroi extérieure . . . côté nord . . . Dernière partie du palais" (meaning temple), Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 739 f.; but "Inschrift um die Cella," Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 213, d.

bA euphemism for the dead; the king means that in locating his temple in the ancient Theban cemetery he did not appropriate the ground occupied by the old tombs. It is to the already ancient necropolis that the series of epithets (beginning "sacred district" and continuing to the end) refers.

which was at the beginning, of the lord of Rosta, the divine way of the gods and the cavern-dwellers\(^a\) to the revered dead.

5. On a chapel of Khonsu, in the heart of the oldest port­ tion, is the following dedication:\(^b\)

He made (it) as (his) monument for his father, Khonsu, residing in Thebes; making for him an august "Great Seat"\(^c\) of fine white sandstone, the door of electrum, in "The-House (\(h\cdot t\))-of-Usermare-Meriamon-Possessed-of-Eternity-on-the-West-of-Thebes;" that he may establish his son, Lord of Diadems, Ramses, Ruler of Heliopolis, as excellent sovereign upon the throne of Atum, like Re, forever.

6. What is now the second court, but originally the first court, was then built in front of the older structure. It contains inscriptions of the year 5; and its dedication is as follows:

7. \(^d\)He made it as (his) monument for his father, Amon-Re, making for him "The-House (\(h\cdot t\))-of-Usermare-Meriamon-Possessed-of-Eternity-in-the-House-of-Amon," like unto the great palace of the horizon; of fine sandstone. The "Great Seat" is of gold, its pavement of silver, is doors of gold and black granite;\(^e\) the broad-hall of stone of Ayan, the doors thereof of copper in beaten work, the inlay-figures of electrum and every splendid costly stone. When the sun rises, he shines into its midst, his splendor envelops its house, the favorite seat of \(^f\)his\(^1\) father, Amon. When he sets, he touches its beauty, silver, electrum, and every costly stone. . . . . .

8. Another inscription\(^f\) in the same court also refers to the building. We find among the epithets following the name of the king:

\(^a\)Meaning the inhabitants of the nether world, the dead.
\(^b\)"Troisième salle hypostyle," Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 138.
\(^c\)Or: "a great place, an august shrine."
\(^d\)Brugsch, Thesaurus, 1307 = Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 732 f.
"Sur la frise de la seconde cour, à partir du milieu de la frise de la galerie ouest;"
see also Mariette, Voyage dans la haute Égypte, II, 53.
\(^e\)Or: "black copper."
\(^f\)Second court, "galerie de l'ouest;" Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 738.
9. During the festival of Min, on the walls of this same (second) court, the king recites to the god the building and equipment of the temple:

\[\text{Thou didst find me as a babe upon the breast, thou didst establish me, thou didst place (me) upon thy throne. I built for thee an august house in thy name, of fine white sandstone. Its form is like the horizon of heaven, over against Karnak on the west of Thebes.}\]

\[\text{Its doorposts are of fine gold, the inlay-figures of every splendid costly stone. Its treasury overflows with everything, even that which the hands of Tatenen (Ptah) made. I fashioned images of the gods and goddesses to rest in the midst of thy house. I made my image before thy front, the regalia of every splendid costly stone, in order to follow thee at thy every appearance, at thy every feast every day, when thou proceedest before its beautiful face. Thou multipli}\]

\[\text{est for it the years in millions. Thou makest it like one among thy divine ennead, established before thee, forever. I bring to thee the tribute of every land, in order to flood thy treasury and thy storehouse. I multiply for thee feasts again, in order to provision thy temple. I multiply for thee wheat in heaps, thy granary approaches heaven; cattle yards, oxen, bullocks, steers; the sea bears galleys and transports; and poultry yards are supplied with thy divine offerings, the bird-pools are gathered in them.} \]

10. Forming the front of this court, the king erected a great pylon, which bears records of the year 5 on its back,

\[\text{Chief measurer of the granary of the house of Amon, Userhet,} \]

\[\text{there is an inscription in which Ramses III is called: “the great Nile, the great harvest-goddess of Egypt, making monuments with a loving heart for his father, Amon . . . . . . making for him a very great granary, whose grain-heaps approach heaven” (Naville, Inscriptions historiques de Pinodjem III, 6, n. 3).} \] facing the court, and of the year 8 on its front. It has also on its back the following dedication:

aHe made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods; making for him a festive hall, b before his portal, surrounded by great, new monuments, like the horizon of heaven.

This, of course, refers to the erection of this addition c in front of the earlier portal.

11. d The dedication of the granite portal of this pylon (now the second pylon), once the entrance portal of the temple, is as follows:

He made a monument for his father, Amon-Re, making for him a great doorway of fine granite, the door of cedar, bound with copper, the inlay-figures of electrum. Its beautiful name is: "Usermare-Meriamon, Amon-Rejoices-to-See-Him."

12. The present first court was then erected before this pylon; it bears records of year 8 and possibly year 12. Its dedication inscription is as follows:

eHe made a monument as a great benefaction from a heart of love for his father, Amon-Re-Iny, g ruler of Thebes, making for him a house of millions of years on the west of Thebes. Its beauty reaches Manu, like the heavens which bear the sun; the sun sails to therein, his love pervades its house.

b Lit., "the broad" (wsryt), indicating the shape of the hall.

c It would require examination on the spot to decide exactly what new portion is meant.

d Second pylon, doorposts of granite doorway facing first court; Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 731 f. = Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 210, c; = Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1308; Lepsius, ibid., III, 210, d, is the same dedication on the other doorpost, but lacking the name of the portal.

g Uncertain divinity here identified with Amon (cf. Lanzone, I, 62). Another dedication on the back of the second pylon, over the roof of the colonnade behind it, is verbatim the same as far as the name of Amon, to which it then merely appends a series of epithets (photograph).
13. Another dedication in the same court is the following:

aHe made a monument for Amon, he made a house of millions of years, on the west of Thebes. It is the place of his heart's satisfaction, in the district of Manu, the pure ground of the lord of gods, the resting-place of his divine ennead, the divine adytum since the time of the god, for the king of gods. He is satisfied when he rests in it; when he reaches (it), he is joyful of heart.

14. The following is still another dedication of the same court:

bHe made a monument for his father, Amon-Re, making for him "The - House - of - Usermare - Meriamon - Possessed-of-Eternity-in-the-House-of-Amon," west of Thebes, of good white [sand]stone; the "Great Seat" — of electrum, the doorways of gold, the doors of copper, in beaten work, the in[lay-figures of electrum] ————.

15. The great pylon which forms the front of this court has on its back inscriptions of the year 11, and on its front records of years 11 and 12. It has the following dedications:

cHe made a monument for his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, making for him a very great pylon, before his august house.

He made a monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods; erecting for him great flagstaves of real cedar of the royal domain.

And again:

16. e[He made a monument for his father], Amon-Re, king of gods;

c First pylon, left (southern) tower, by left flagstaff channel; photograph; the other channel was not included in the photograph.

d The variant on the other pylon (§ 16) has: "of the best of the terraces, of the choicest of the Lord of the Two Lands," as parallel of this phrase; showing clearly that हनि is properly rendered by "royal domain," and that this "royal domain" was located on the "terraces" of Lebanon, as under Thutmose III. (See my New Chapter, p. 28, where the examples from the Old Kingdom in note b should be omitted.)

e First pylon, right (northern) tower, on the right of the right flagstaff channel; photograph; the left channel was not included in this photograph. I have restored the lost beginnings from the parallel inscription on the other pylon.
erecting for him a colonnade at the double façade of his house, its roof of real electrum.

[He made a monument for his father, Amon-Re, lord of] Thebes; making for [him] great flagstaves of real cedar of the best of the terraces, of the choicest of the Lord of the Two Lands.

17. The stone building in front of the Medinet Habu temple, known as the pavilion, was but the entrance of a great palace, which was considered as part of the temple, for it bore the same name. It extended back to the second court of the temple, and the first pylon was apparently enclosed in its court. This palace served as the king's dwelling, at least during the celebration of great feasts in the Medinet Habu temple, and the doorway connecting the second court with this palace refers to this use, thus:

The king appears like Re in the palace of his august broad-hall, to cause his father, Amon, to appear at his "Feast of the Valley;"

And again:
Ruler, beautiful in coming forth, like Horus at his appearance in heaven at early morning from his august palace which is in the horizon.

Silsileh Inscriptions

18. The official who was taking out sandstone at the quarries of Silsileh, as the temple progressed, has left a record aI read $\theta^2 \theta^3$ or $\lambda^p$, "head," but the photograph is not clear; are the capitals meant?

bFurther dedications of the usual form will be found in Piehl, Inscriptions, I, CLII f., I; CLIII f., M.
cViz., "The-House (\(h^t\))-of-Usermare-Meriamon-in-the-House-of-Amon" (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 167), which is the same as the name of the temple; see above dedications, passim.
dDaressy, Recueil, XX, 82; he thinks, however, that the pavilion was not connected with the palace, enveloping the front of the temple, and referred to in the above inscription. But the name and the location of the pavilion seem to me to exclude this view. The purpose of this building was already noted by Erman (Aegypten, 107, 108).
eChampollion, Notices descriptives, I, 256, 257 = Lepsius, Denkmäler, VI, 23, 8; Piehl, Sphinx, VI, 143-45 (transcription only).
of one of his expeditions thither which he had cut in hieratic on the wall of the quarry. It is especially interesting, because it gives the number of men engaged:

3,000

20. Two other inscriptions were left beside the above, by the same official at the same time:

aSo both Lepsius, Denkmäler, and Champollion, Notices descriptives; Piehl has "year 2" (by misreading the month); but the second inscription (§ 20) corroborates the old publications, and the above reading is unquestionably correct.

bThe determinative is uncertain in Lepsius, Denkmäler, and Champollion, Notices descriptives; Piehl gives the "legs;" if the determinative be the "roll," we should read "command," and supply "to" before the official's name instead of "by."

cThis is the name of the Medinet Habu temple; see dedication inscriptions above.

dLit., "who were before him."

ePiehl has 300; but Lepsius, Denkmäler, shows clearly 500 (Champollion, Notices descriptives, 200, having overlooked three strokes). Lepsius, Denkmäler, is corroborated by the last number, which is in both Lepsius, Denkmäler, and Champollion, Notices descriptives, 500, and impossibly 700 (Piehl), which it would necessarily be, to make a total of 3,000. The numerals are, of course, like those in Papyrus Harris.

fPiehl, 700; but see preceding note.
Second Inscription

¹Year 5, b first month of the third season (ninth month), under the majesty of King Ramses III, c L. P. H., ——— [expedition] ²which the king's-scribe, overseer of the White House — d made, (for) "The-House (�톤) -of-Millions-of-Years-of-King-Usermare-Meriamon,-L.-P.-H.,-in-the-House (pr)-of-Amon."

Third Inscription

HISTORICAL INSCRIPTIONS

21. The walls of this temple, as we have said, form a vast record of the achievements of Ramses III. This record is chiefly devoted to his wars. Had these wars been reported in the sober and intelligible style of Thutmose III's Annals, we should have known much of them which it is now safe to say we shall never know. It is difficult to describe the character of these Medinet Habu inscriptions. Perhaps, under the influence of the Kadesh poem, it has now become impossible to narrate a war or a victory of the Pharaoh in a Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 255 = Lepsius, Denkmäler, VI, 23, No. 6.

b Champollion, Notices descriptives, has 1, having omitted the hook at the top of the stroke given by Lepsius, which converts the sign into 5, as in the first inscription (§ 19). As these inscriptions are together, from the same month and the same reign, and by an official with the same title, for the same building, there can be no doubt that Lepsius is correct.

c Double name in original. There is perhaps no loss before "expedition" at the end of l. 1.

dThe official's name is omitted at the end, and the connection between the temple name and the preceding is wanting.

any other than poetic style. The record must be a poem. This would not be an unmixed misfortune, if the poem were intelligible; but the style is such as to render not merely whole lines, but entire strophes and whole passages, utterly unintelligible. This is due to two facts: first, total lack of order or progress in the narrative; second, the figurative character of the language. The first fault renders the reader's impressions fragmentary and confused in the highest degree. The texts consist almost exclusively of praise of the king and exultation over the conquered foe. The court and priestly flatterers of the king either put all this in the mouths of the Egyptians, or the discomfited enemies are made to express their wonder and terror at the king's valor, mingled with lamentation at their own undoing. All this is mingled in rapid alternation, so that one is often in doubt which party is speaking; and deep in the midst of this confused mixture there may be a few connected phrases stating whether the enemy came by land or water, or where the battle took place, or what were the names of the hostile chiefs. This utter lack of progress or continuity is rendered still more troublesome by the second fault of these texts, viz., their figurative language. Like Arabic poetry, they contain so many epithets of a highly pictorial character as frequently to make even a common word unintelligible. When the text speaks of the "full flame," who could divine that it means the Egyptian fleet; or when it mentions the "wall of metal," who could infer that the Egyptian army is intended? Just as some old Arabic poetry is unintelligible without a native commentator, who stood nearer the author than we do, so, much of these Medinet Habu texts is likely to remain unintelligible, without some obliging

Egyptian familiar with their style, to explain their overdrawn metaphors and metonymies.

22. Fortunately, the temple contains, besides its vast quantity of historical inscriptions, also no less than forty important relief scenes depicting the achievements of the king, in the conventional style common since the days of Seti I. These reliefs are accompanied by the usual explanatory inscriptions, which are commonly couched in such general terms that the total of their historical content is small.

23. The fraction of this great mass of documents which has been published, was copied without any approach to accuracy. Champollion’s publication overleaps whole lines, or transposes two successive lines; Rosellini is next to unreadable, so badly are the signs drawn. Chabas bewailed this condition of things thirty years ago, but it is no better today. Over half of the historical reliefs which the temple contains are unpublished. One of the most pressing needs of Egyptology is an exhaustive publication of this entire temple. I was able to procure large-scale photographs of all of the unpublished scenes and inscriptions. Twelve of these were made for me through the courtesy of Baron von Bissing, by Mr. Arthur Weigall; and to both these gentlemen I would express my sincere thanks.

24. With slight exception, this historical material is distributed chronologically from the rear to the front of the temple, the oldest being in the rear. But in the following translations it is naturally arranged chronologically, irrespective of position in the temple, which will be found in the footnotes. The temple really faces southeast, but in locating scenes and inscriptions we have assumed that it faces east, for the sake of convenience, as is done in Baedeker's guide-book.

I. TREASURY OF MEDINET HABU TEMPLE

25. This temple contains a group of treasure-chambers, five in number, the walls of which bear scenes and inscriptions indicative of the contents of the rooms. These are of some historical importance. The scenes themselves have not yet been published (except the weighing scene), but the accompanying inscriptions are as follows:

26. bUtterance of King Ramses III to his father, Amon-Re, king of gods: "I have built for thee an august treasury in my house in Thebes, which I fill with every real, costly stone, in order to brighten thy beauty therewith, forever.

dUtterance of King Ramses III to his father, Min-Amon: "I bring to thee myrrh for thy temple, a statue kneeling upon the ground, my figure of gold and every costly stone, mounted in Asiatic gold, to make ointment for thy majesty in my house, which is in Thebes. I have put my name in its midst, like the heavens upholding the sun every day. It is an abiding horizon bearing thy name, supplied with provision, forever."

27. bBringing a chest of silver and gold to his father, Amon-Re, king of gods.

fPresentation of native gold to his father, Amon-Re.

fBringing every splendid costly stone to his father.

gUtterance of King Ramses III to his father, Amon-Re, king of gods: "I have gathered for thee monuments of gold and silver — as (my) image upon earth in the midst of thy treasury."

The neighboring reliefs show this statue; on a rectangular base with feet kneels a figure of the king, bearing in his outstretched hands an ointment jar; a similar statue is mentioned in Papyrus Harris, 28, 10, § 268.

28. aUtterance of King Ramses III to his father, Amon-Re, king of gods: “I present to thee monuments for thy temple, of electrum, of the mountains, b and native gold [of] c from the workshop of Ptah, the impost of Retenu (Rtnw) as tribute before thee, in order to supply thy temple; for thy treasury, being products of the choicest of every country. I fill thy house from the tribute of my sword, from my might in every land.”

29. dUtterance of King Ramses III, to his father, Amon-Re, king of gods: “Take thou gold and silver like sand of the shore, I have produced them for thee from the waters and the mountains, that I might present them to thee by the measure, e the regalia of thy majesty everyday. I bring to thee lapis lazuli, malachite and every costly stone in chests, f and g electrum. I have made for thee many sacred eye amulets of every splendid, costly stone.”

Over h each of two cow-form weights: “Gum of God’s-Land.”

On i a heap between two trees: “Gum of Punt.”

I bring to thee silver, gold, copper, royal linen, gums of Punt. I fill thy treasury with every splendid costly stone, to brighten thy beauty therewith, forever and ever.

Over Thoth:
Utterance of Thoth: “I write for thee myriads of ten-thousands, united in a sum of millions, of silver, gold, copper, lapis lazuli, malachite of Reshet (R$^3$-I$^2$-ty), fine gold of Emu (c$^2$ m$^w$), before thy august father, Amon-Re, king of gods, that he may give to thee the jubilees of Re, the years of Atum.”

32. On three heaps:
1. Fine gold of the mountain; 2. Real lapis lazuli.
3. Real malachite.

Utterance of King Ramses III to his father, Amon-Re, king of gods:
“I bring to thee every real costly stone, silver and gold in sacks, I cause thy treasury to overflow, and provisions to flood in thy house.”

33. A pair of balances, with the ape of Thoth at the top. Thoth, who presides over the weighing, says to Amon:

“I come to thee, to see thy beautiful face, bearing every splendid, costly stone, for the hills and mountains pay thee impost of gold and every costly stone.”

The king then says to Amon:

“I come to thee, and I report to thee the statement of gold of the land of the Negro. It is thou, who makest the mountains, every costly stone, in order to brighten thy beauty. I bring them to thee in the accurate balances; I unite them for thee in myriads of millions.”

The king bears a tray heaped with gold, and has before him the words: "Bearing gold to his father, Amon-Re." On the scales is a pile of gold, bearing the words: "Native gold."

34. One of the small rooms in the rear of the temple contains a relief, showing the gods of the South bringing their wealth to the king; they are accompanied by the words:*

Utterance of the gods, the lords of the southern frontier, the gods who reside in the Southland, who bring the mountains with their costly stones, the trees with [their] fruit, [to] King Ramses III: "God's-Land, with every splendid costly stone, native gold of Emu (c m² w), lapis lazuli, — —, malachite of Reshet (R³-s³-t), added together in millions, we bring northward to thee; the dues (hsb) of Negro-land by water, after the northward voyage. All the products of the Southland are in the writings of Thoth; they are for thy house of millions of years, according as thou lovest Thebes."

The enumeration of the tribute of the North, "the sea and the isles" then follows, but is not completely published.

II. FIRST LIBYAN WAR, YEAR 5

35. The materials for this war are extensive, but they are so unsatisfactory that we can only see in vague outlines a repetition of the conditions which led to Merneptah's Libyan war. The Libyans under their king, Themer, have made common cause with the roving sea robbers of the Thekel and the Philistines. Some of the latter joined the land forces of the Libyans; others entered the Nile mouths with their ships. The Libyans had improved the generation of laxity which preceded the rise of Ramses III's reign, to push eastward farther into the Delta, and, as in Merneptah's time, to settle on both banks of the "great river," the Canopic branch of the Nile. They had plundered the towns of the western Delta from Memphis on the south to Kerben (probably in the vicinity of Canopus) on the north. This plundering had been going on for years unremittingly; but the invasion of the Libyan army forced Ramses III to act. He marched against the allies, met them in the western Delta at a town called "Usermare-Meriamon-is-Chastiser-of-Temeh" (§ 52), and completely defeated them, slaying 12,535 men and taking at least 1,000 prisoners. After a great triumph on the field, the captives and spoil were brought to the palace, where the king inspected them from the balcony, and the people rejoiced in their new-found security, as in the days of Merneptah.

The materials are these:

2. Relief Scenes in the Second Court and Outside North Wall, Medinet Habu (§§ 48–58).
3. Papyrus Harris, 76, 11–77, 6 (§ 405).

I. GREAT INSCRIPTION IN THE SECOND COURT (YEAR 5)∗

36. This inscription is the longest in the Medinet Habu temple, filling seventy-five lines. It is also by far the most difficult in this collection of difficult texts. It represents the last extreme of those peculiarities mentioned above (§ 21), ∗Occupying a large portion of the south wall, behind the columns of the southern colonnade in the second court of the Medinet Habu temple; in seventy-five vertical lines, not too well preserved. It was first published by Rosellini (Monumenti Storici, 139–41, but omitted by Champollion) and then by Burton (Excerpta hieroglyphica, 43–45); later by Dümichen (Historiche Inschriften, II, 46); de Rougé (Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 139–47); Brugsch (Thesaurus, 1197–1207), and extracts (including names of chiefs, ll. 47 and 48) by Lepsius (Denkmäler, Text, III, 178). Brugsch states that he used his own copy, and collated Burton, de Rougé, and a copy by Eisenlohr; but he inserts lacunæ at the ends of ll. 15–20, where they do not belong, and other slips show that we have still to await an adequate edition of this text. I collated the various editions for all questionable passages, and was able to use photographs of some portions.

so that whole passages are unintelligible. Nor would they, if translatable, furnish any new facts of importance concerning the war; for almost the entire inscription consists of praise of the king, mingled with exultation over the fallen foe and the lamentations of the conquered. Only here and there appear incidents of the campaign, or references from which its course and character may be inferred. They are chiefly four: the king's triumph as he views from the palace balcony the prisoners and the trophies of the slain (§ 42, ll. 36-41); the names of the hostile chiefs (§ 43, ll. 48 and 49); the brief mention of the northern sea-roving allies (§ 44, ll. 51-54); and the security of the people, even of a woman alone upon the road (§ 47, l. 73). Only portions of which the rendering would have been exceedingly uncertain have been omitted; but the entire text is of such peculiar difficulty that the following attempt at translation as a whole is exceedingly unsatisfactory to the author.\footnote{The entire inscription has been translated only once, viz., by Chabas, in the first edition of his \textit{Etudes sur l'antiquité historique} (which I have not seen), and again in the second edition (228-33), only ll. 17-50. But he had only the entirely inadequate publications of Rosellini and Burton; this fact, and the state of knowledge of the language over thirty years ago, made an understanding of the text and a realization of its difficulties impossible.}

Introduction

37. ¹Year 5 under the majesty of Horus: Mighty Bull, Extending Egypt, Mighty of Sword, Strong-Armed, Slayer of the Tehenu; Wearer of the Double Diadem; ²[Mighty in Strength, like his father, Montu¹], Overthrower of Tehenu in Heaps in their Place; Golden Horus: Valiant, Lord of all Might, Making the Boundary as Far as he Desires Behind his Enemies —— ³his Fear, his Terror is a Shield [over¹] Egypt; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Lord of Day, Youthful and Bright, Shining like the Moon, he hath Repeated [his] Birth ——— [Usermare-Meriamon]; ⁴Son of Re: Ramses (III), Ruler of Heliopolis, first in victory, appearing [in] Egypt, of whom Re has exacted that he return with offerings, whom the divine ennead has caused ——— victory, lord of valor, warrior, having an image like the son of Nut, to make the whole earth like ——— 6King Ramses III, ruler, great in love, lord of offerings, whose image is like Re at early morning.

The King's Power and Goodness

38. His terror ——— 7— of his serpent-crest, established upon the throne of Re as king of the Two Lands. The land from front to rear is relieved, a the chiefs do honor ——— 8gathered together in the lands, in the reign of King Ramses III, the brave and valiant king, who creates his —, when he sees ——— 9raging, 10favorite protector, who has come in Egypt, long-armed, swift-footed, smiting every land; counselor, excellent in plans, skilled in laws, giving ——— 10exultation. His name has penetrated all hearts as far as the limit of the darkness; he reaches his limits, he terrifies the 11fends of the earth, . . . . . . . .

countries 12which they knew not. Their lords come with fearful step to crave the breath of life which is in Egypt from Horus, the mighty Bull, great in kingship, King Ramses III, the great wall 12of Egypt, protecting their limbs. His might is like Set in laying low the Nine Bows; youth, divine at his coming forth, like Harakhte. When he appears he seems like Atum, when he opens his mouth, with 13breath for the people, to sustain alive the Two Lands with his sustenance every day; favorite son, champion of the divine ennead, for whom they overthrow the lands.

Defeat of Amor?

39. 1Goredc is the chief of 2Amor (D  —w ) in [his] bloodd 14his seed is not; all his people are taken captive, carried off, 15spoiled. aLit., “cooled.” bOr possibly: “the isles.”

cThis uncertain adjective 16occurs several times in the texts of Ramses III, each time applied to the king. If this is the case here, it would leave “the chief of Amor” without a verb. I have supposed it to mean “horned,” both possessing horns or gored with them. The paragraph certainly concerns some foreign chief, but the space in which he is abruptly introduced is very small; and the mention of Amor is a mere conjecture, based on the first two letters, the last letter (r?) being lost. Examination of the original would determine the matter in all probability. If Amor is correct, its desolation then refers to the invasion of the sea-peoples, by whom Amor was wasted, as narrated in the long inscription of year 8 (§ 64, l. 17). This fits well the mention of the sea-peoples as allies of the Libyans in the year 5 (below ll. 51 ff.). They had already reached Amor at that time, and some of their vessels had pushed on to Egypt in time to assist the Libyans in the war of the year 5.

dSee Israel passage, III, 604, examples.
Everybody in his land comes with praise that the great sun of Egypt may look upon them, that the sun-disk may turn to them, the Sun coming forth, rising upon the earth, the warmth of Egypt, which is in heaven.

Praise of the People

40. They say: "Exalted is the Sun of our land! We were lost in the land daily the darkness, which King Ramses III has expelled. The lands and countries are stripped, and brought to Egypt as slaves; gifts gathered together for her gods' satiety, provisions, supplies, are a flood in the Two Lands. The multitude rejoices in this land, none is sad, (for) Amon has established his son upon his throne, all the circuit of the sun is united in his grasp; the vanquished of the Asiatics and the Tehenu. Taken are those who were spoiling the condition of Egypt. The land had been exposed in continual extremity, since the (former) kings. They were desolated, the gods as well as all people. There was no hero to seize them when they retreated. Lo, there was a youth like a gryphon like a bull ready for battle — — — — — upon the field. His horses were like hawks. roaring like a lion terrible in rage. The officers (snn) are mighty like Reshep, when they see ten thousands likewise. — — — like Montu. His name is a flame, the terror of him is in the countries. The land of Temeh comes together in one place in Libya, and Meshwesh (M-§ 3-§ 3), .......

The Overthrow of the Enemy

41. Lo, the heart of his majesty is violent with might, mighty [like a] mighty [lion] falling upon the sheep. Equipped is he like a valiant bull, (his) two arms are sharp horns to tear open the mountains, behind aDümichen indicates no lacunæ at the lower ends of ll. 14–20, and the sense confirms this; but Brugsch has inserted lacunæ at the ends of all but l. 14, where the connection is very evident. The photograph shows that these lines are over a door which rises into the inscription at this point. The hieroglyphs extend to the very edge of the door, which would suggest that the door had been cut in after the inscription, but as no hieroglyph is cut through and the connection between lines is good, there is certainly no loss.

bObscure and partially fragmentary epithets of the king.

cSee the same comparison complete in the march to Zahi, year 8 (§ 72).

dName of a foreign country of which only a pyramid (§pd?) at the end is visible.

eAny small cattle.
The gods baffled their plans which they who confront him lay. As for those who shall invade his boundary, his majesty goes forth against them like a flame — in the dry herbage. [They flutter] like wild fowl in the midst of the net, with legs struggling in the basket, made into a roast, laid low, prostrate on the ground. Their loss is heavy, without number. Behold, evil is among them to the height of heaven. Bound are their mighty men upon the place of slaughter, they are made into pyramids upon their ground, by the might of the king, valiant in his limbs, the sole lord, mighty like Montu, King Ramses III.

The King's Triumphal Audience

42. (They) come forth, carried off as captives to Egypt; the hands and foreskins are without number; brought forward as captives, bound, under the balcony. The chiefs of the countries are assembled, beholding their evil plight. The tens are conducted to the king, their arms extended, their praise reaching heaven, with hearts of love toward Amon-Re, the god who accords them the protection of the ruler. The messengers of every land come, their hearts fluttering, and so transported that they (the hearts) are no longer in their bodies. Their faces behold the face of the king like Atum, protecting against the Temeh, in order to perfect the reign of his majesty. When their feet trod Egypt, their leaders feared, and were made as common people in strength. Their names abide through the great name of his majesty. Their leaders fear; their mouths cannot mention the manner of Egypt.

The Discomfiture of the Enemy

43. The land of Temeh is spread out, they flee. The Meshwesh (M.$^{-3}$-w.$^{-2}$-s.$^{-2}$) are hung up in their land, their plant is uprooted, there is not for them a survivor. All their limbs tremble for the terror, which protects against them. They say: "Behold, we are subject to Egypt, its lord has destroyed our soul, forever and ever....

Our feet find not a way to go; we traverse all the lands as their warriors, (but they fight not with us in battle-array.) We kindled the fire for ourselves at our desire, (but) our own fire has taken (us), we cannot quench (it). Their lord is like Sutekh, beloved of Re, [his] roaring is heard — like a gryphon. As for Ded (Dy-dy), Meshken (M r·-y·-yw) and Wermer (W r·-m-r·), 48Themer (T r·-m-r·), and every hostile chief who crossed the border of Egypt from Libya, he hath set fire from front to rear . . . . We come to him; we cry, 'Salām' to him, we kiss the ground (to) his great might — — King Ramses III.'

Defeat of the Northern Countries

44. The northern countries are unquiet in their limbs, even the Peleset (Pw·r·-l·-ly), the Thekel (T r·-k[-r·]), 52who devastate their land. Their soul came, in the last extremity. They were warriors (t-h-r·) upon land, also in the sea. Those who came on [land] — — — AmonaThis line may contain some reference to the Libyans doing mercenary service in the Egyptian army; meaning that these are not the ones who have defeated Libya, but the native Egyptians.

bMeryey is the Libyan king defeated by Merneptah, whose inscriptions mention Ded as his father (III, 579, l. 13). But the other Libyan kings above mentioned are new. They seem to be mentioned in chronological order. But as we know that Meryey was the son of Ded, Meshken is likely to have been the brother of Meryey. Themer was probably the contemporary of Ramses III, and Wermer reigned during the ephemeral kings of Egypt, between Merneptah and Ramses III, but survived into Ramses III's reign. Maspero thinks they are all contemporaries (Struggle of the Nations, 456).

cBrugsch gives Wr as the first sign of this name (evidently following Burton), but he first read "Za" (Geschichte, 597). This first sign is indicated as lost in all the other publications, including Lepsius (Denkmäler, Text, III, 178). Only Chabas (Etudes sur l'antiquité historique, 236) gives The (T r) as the first syllable. But as it is wanting in Rosellini and Burton, whose publications Chabas used (ibid., 227 f.), the reading must be a restoration which has passed from Chabas into the histories without inquiry as to its source, e. g., lastly in Maspero's Struggle of the Nations, 459.

dSee Müller, Asien und Europa, 360, n. 4.

eIn view of the following: "those who entered" (n r· h), we must certainly render here: "those who came" (n r· yy), and not merely "nahend" (n r· yy), as Re was behind them, destroying them; those who entered into the river-mouths\(^a\) were like wild fowl, creeping into the net, made their arms. Their hearts fluttered, (so) transported (that) they were no longer in their bodies. Their leaders were carried off, slain, thrown prostrate. They were made captives — — — 55.

Words of the Defeated Northerners

45. "The only lord is in Egypt, no warrior is (so) accurate in shooting, none escapes him — — — 56 the ends of the Great Circle (Okeanos, \(sn-wr\)), until they fear with one accord. We will beseech peace, coming with trembling step, for fear of him . . . . . . . 57 . . . ."

The King's Valor

46. He is like a bull standing in the field, his eye and his two horns ready and prepared to attack their rear with his head; a valiant warrior — — — 58 roaring; a warrior lord of might, taking captive every land. They come bowing down for fear of him, the blooming youth, valiant like Baal, — — — 59 the king effective in plans, possessed of counsel, not failing, but that which he does takes place instantly, Ramses III. . . . . . 60 . . . ---

Müller has rendered (Asien und Europa, 360). We have in the entire passage, first the approach both on land and water, and then the destruction of both parties on land and water. The passage is referred by Maspero (following Chabas) to the war of the year 8. But it is evident that in an inscription of the year 5 it can only refer to the Libyan war of that year; and that we must conclude that the sea-peoples already assisted the Libyans in this war. This is again rendered evident by the hands cut off as trophies as in the Libyan war of Merneptah. Had there been only Libyans in the battle, we should have had only phalli. Again, when we consider that the sea-peoples were already in the Libyan ranks in Merneptah's day, there is, of course, no reason why they should not be there now. Only the Thekel and the Peleset have not heretofore appeared in the South.

\(^a\) R \(\times\) \(\times\) \(\times\) \(\times\) \(\times\) occurs first in the Eighteenth Dynasty as "river-mouths," where the customs officers and frontier marine police were stationed by Amenhotep III (II, 916). In the war of the year 8 it is used also of "harbor-mouths" (§ 65, l. 20, and elsewhere).

\(^b\) On "itors," see II, 965, l. 19, note; he means the distances attained with his wings would demand millions of years to cover with ordinary means of locomotion.

His form is like Montu, ḫḥ when he goes forth. Every land bows down for him, at the mention of him, the ruler excellent in plan like Osiris, equipping this whole land with — — ṣṭ̄ strong-armed, great in strength in the lands and countries; all that he hath done takes place as (if done by) Thoth.

The King Egypt's Security

47. King Ramses III is kind-hearted toward Egypt, bearing the protection of the land ḫḥ on the height of his backa without trouble; a wall, casting a shadow for the people (rḥy ʾ t). They dwell in his time, with heart relying upon the might of their ḫḥ protection, the ḫḥ of his two arms, saying: “A divine hawk, smiting and seizing!” He has made hosts by his victories, filling the storehouses ṣṭ̄ of the temples with the plunder of his sword, preparing the divine offerings from his excellent things . . . . . . in that Amon, his august father, has given to him the lands, united together under the feet of King Ramses III. Lo, the golden Horus, rich in years, divine water ṣṭ̄ of Re, which came forth from his limbs, august living image of the son of Isis (Horus), who was born adorned with the royal diadem like Set, great in inundations bearing their sustenance for Egypt, ṣṭ̄ so that the people (rḥy ʾ t) and the folk (ḥnmmt ʾ t) are possessed of good things; the sovereign, executing truth for the All-Lord, presenting it every day before him. Egypt and the lands are in peace in his reign, ṣṭ̄ the land is like ḫḥ—3 with untroubled heart. A woman goes about at her will, with her veil upon her head,b her going extending as far as she pleases. The countries come, bowing down to ṣṭ̄ the fame of his majesty, with their tribute and their children upon their backs. South as well as north [come] to him with praise, when they see him like Re at early morning. They — ṣṭ̄ the plans and stipulations of the victorious king, the ruler, effective in plan like the Beautiful-Faced (Ptah), the king, Lord of the Two Lands, lord of might, Ramses III, given life, like Re, forever.

2. RELIEF SCENES IN SECOND COURT AND OUTSIDE NORTH WALL (YEAR 5)\textsuperscript{a}

48. These scenes depict various incidents of the war, from the march to the frontier to the final triumphs, and probably furnish us with more information as to the character of the campaign than the long inscription devoted to it, which we have just studied.

\textit{Scene}\textsuperscript{b}

49. The king in his chariot, accompanied by troops, is marching against Libya. Before him is a chariot bearing the standard of Amon. Beside the king trots his tame lion. The inscriptions are these:

\textit{Over the Amon Standard}

Utterance of Amon-Re, king of gods: "Lo, I am before thee, my son, lord of the Two Lands, Usermare-Meriamon, I give [to thee] all [might and power] among the Nine Bows; terror — — — their chiefs, I will open [for] thee the ways of the land of Temeh. I will trample them before thy horses."

\textit{Over the King}\textsuperscript{c}

The Good God, victorious king, rich in might, like Montu, lovely like Min, strong-armed like the son of Nut, great in strength, mighty in terror, whose roaring courses through the countries, a lion raging when he sees his opponent. None escapes — —. He rejoices among a hundred thousand, a valiant warrior in his own person, he looks upon untold myriads\textsuperscript{d} as one. When he appears upon the battlefield like Baal, his flame consumes the Nine Bows.

\textsuperscript{a}The publications are totally inadequate; they began in the days of Napoleon's expedition (\textit{Description}, II, Pl. 12), and continued until Lepsius' day. Some scenes are still unpublished; for the publications, see note on each scene. I am indebted to Mr. A. H. Gardiner for a number of readings from photographs of the relief inscriptions.

Scene

50. Ramses III, standing in his chariot with drawn bow, charges the fleeing Libyans, who are trampled by his horses. He is supported by mercenary archers and swordsmen, probably Sherden.

Inscription

Live the Good God, Montu, when he goes forth, beautiful upon the steed, charging into hundreds of thousands, mighty in valor, stretching the bow and shooting the arrows whither he will, fighting piercing with sharp horns, overthrowing the Temeh, slain in their places in heaps before his horses, causing that they cease their opposition in their land, whose sword has overthrown their seed by the might of his father, Amon, in all lands together, Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses III.

Scene

52. The king stands in a balcony with his waiting chariot below (behind him); he harangues his nobles, who are grouped before him. Behind them approach five rows of captive Libyans and sea-peoples, each row headed by Egyptian officers and scribes, who throw down in five heaps severed hands and phalli, which the scribes record.

The accompanying inscriptions are these:

Before the King

Utterance of his majesty to the nobles and companions who are by his side: "Behold ye, the many good things, which Amon-Re, king of gods hath done for Pharaoh, his son. He hath carried captive the land of Temeh, Seped, and Meshwesh, who were robbers plundering Egypt every day, and overthrown them beneath my feet. Their plant is uprooted, so that not one survives. They have ceased all lying — —, forever, by the good counsels which his majesty has carried out, in order to cause — to be — —. Rejoicing and joy are yours to the height of heaven. Beside him (below in the relief) was a line of officers, now mostly disappeared. Before him, his sons and the highest officials of the kingdom bring up four lines of captured Libyans, and at the head of the first three, the scribes throw down and count the hands cut off from the fallen Libyans, while at the head of the fourth line they are doing the same with the phalli severed from the slain.

gThe hundreds may be 9; if only 6, then the tens would be 3. As two of these five totals are identical (12,535), and a third is almost certainly the same, it is evident that the number 12,535 is the sum-total of dead; otherwise we should have over 60,000 dead, which is quite impossible.

\section*{III. NORTHERN WAR, YEAR 8}

\textbf{59.} Already in Ramses III's fifth year the tribes of the southern coast of Asia Minor and the maritime peoples of the \textit{Æ}gean had sent some of their advanced galleys to assist the Libyans in their war of that year against Egypt. Or, as in Merneptah's day, the plundering crews of their southernmost advance had incidentally joined the Libyan invasion. These were but the premonitory skirmishing-line of a more serious and more general movement. The peoples involved were the probably Cretan Peleset, a settlement of whom \textsuperscript{a}The short speech of Mut is of no historical consequence.

\textsuperscript{b}See III, 604.
later became the biblical Philistines; the Thekel, who may be the Sikeli, later of Sicily; the Shekelesh, the Denyen or Danaoi, and the Weshwesh (§ 64, l. 18), who are of uncertain origin. Owing to pressure from uncertain sources without, large numbers of these peoples, accompanied by their wives, children, and belongings, in clumsy ox carts, left their homes, and moving eastward along the coast of Asia Minor, penetrated Syria. They were accompanied by a strong fleet also.
In the author’s opinion, this movement was really a "Völkerwanderung," not merely an invasion, with a few families of the chiefs. They were strong enough to hold all northern Syria at their mercy; from Carchemish, through the Syrian Hittite conquests to the coast, as far south as Arvad, and inland as far south as Amor, they plundered the country.
They had a central camp somewhere in Amor.

60. Ramses evidently still held the coast south of Arvad.
Mustering his forces, he dispatched his war fleet to this coast, possibly with his motley army of various mercenaries and Egyptians on board, or in transports thus convoyed.
At some point on the coast he met the enemy; a land and naval action took place. Possibly the two battles were near together. In any case, Ramses, after the land victory, was able to station his archers on the strand and aid in the destruction of the hostile fleet. His victory over both forces seems to have been complete, for we do not hear of any further trouble from this source during the remainder of his reign.

But see III, 570, note.

See III, 306, and Müller, Asien und Europa, 360 ff. Papyrus Harris also adds the Sherden (§ 403), who probably were from Sardinia and associated with the Lycian tribes in common enterprises on the sea. On all these northern peoples, see also the discussion of Hall, Earliest Civilization of Greece, and Annual of the British School at Athens, VIII, 157.

The land battle was certainly not south of Amor; the naval battle was in one of the harbors of the Phoenician coast.
The sources for this war are:
2. The Relief Scenes on the North Wall and in the Second Court (Medinet Habu, §§69–82).
3. Papyrus Harris (§ 403).

I. GREAT INSCRIPTION ON THE SECOND PYLON, YEAR 8

61. Of the long inscriptions in the Medinet Habu temple, this is by far the most clear and intelligible, both in language and arrangement. After the date and the usual encomium of the Pharaoh, which occupies about one-third of the inscription (ll. 1–12), the king is introduced as addressing his court and the people of the land, in a speech very similar to that which concludes Papyrus Harris (Pis. 75–79). After reverting to Amon’s choice of him for the throne, with which the Pharaohs so often introduce their addresses, he narrates the northern invasion of Syria (§ 64, ll. 16–18), his preparations to repel it (§ 65, ll. 18–23), and then, in highly figurative language, briefly describes the overthrow of the invaders by land and sea (§ 66, ll. 23–26). He closes with a song of triumph as long as the account of the war, occupying one-third of the inscription ( §§67, 68, ll. 26–38). It is therefore only the middle third of the inscription ( §§63–66, ll. 13–26) which contains narrative of historical importance.

a Occupying the entire front of the north tower of the second pylon in the Medinet Habu temple. It is published entire only in Greene, Fouilles exécutées à Thèbes dans l’année 1855 (Paris, 1855), PIs. I–III. Champollion noted and copied the parts containing foreign names (Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 348, giving date incorrectly as year 9); similar fragments also by Lepsius (Denkmäler, Text, III, 175, parts of ll. 1, 2, 17, 18, 20, 24, and 35); the important passage, ll. 16 and 17, also by Chabas (Etudes sur l’antiquité historique, 2d ed., 260 ff., from a photograph); finally, ll. 16–25, by Brugsch (Thesaurus, 1207–10). Not much can be said for the accuracy of any of these texts. I collated Greene exhaustively with a series of large-scale photographs, which brought out scores of new signs and many new words; Brugsch was also useful, but a careful publication is very much needed.
Introduction; Praise of Ramses

62. Year 8, under the majesty of Horus: mighty Bull, valiant Lion, strong-armed, lord of might, capturing the Asiatics; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Mighty in Strength, like his father, Montu, destroying the Nine Bows, driving (them) from their land; Hawk, divine at his birth, excellent and favorite egg of Harakhte, sovereign, excellent heir of the gods, fashioning their images on earth, doubling their offerings; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, Ramses (III), Ruler of Heliopolis; king, lord of valor, extending (his) two arms, and taking away the breath from the countries by the heat of his limbs, great in the power of Montu, — the fray like Re, daily valiant upon (his) horse, fighting hand to hand upon his feet, warrior like the shooting-stars in heaven, King Ramses III; charging into the thick of the fray like turning back the Asiatics, fighting in the territory of rebels who know not Egypt, who tell how they have heard of his might, who come with praise, trembling in all their limbs of the Asiatics. His form and his limbs are straight, the equal of Baal, mighty in the multitude, without his like. He smites millions, alone by himself; all lands are despised and contemptible before him, appearing. They come — look upon Egypt, prostrate, bowing down before him. They say every day: “Montu is in his great form, which is in Egypt among you, bearing his mighty sword. Let us all come, that we may make for him him in his grasp, the King Ramses III.” Beautiful is the appearance of the king, like the son of Isis the defender, firstborn son of Re-Atum, wearing the white crown, wearing the red crown, beautiful of face, wearing the double plume like Tatenen. His loveliness — in the early morning, beautiful, sitting upon the throne like Atum, when he has assumed the regalia of Horus and Set; Nekhbet and Buto, the serpent-crown of the South and the serpent-crown of the North, they take their place upon his head. His two hands grasp the crook-staff and hold the scourge, — conscious of strength — among the Nine Bows. Plentiful are fowl and provision in his reign, like his father, the Beautiful-Faced (Ptah), Nun, great in love as king, like Shu, son of Re. When he appears, there is rejoicing over him, like Aton; strong and valiant, mustering the lands at [his] desire, — like Montu, creating them like Ptah; ready and skilled in law, there is none like him; like Re when he took the land as a kingdom, King Ramses III, — numerous in monuments, great in wonderful works, making festive the temples, — the son of Re, — who came forth from his limbs, — firstborn of the gods. He was appointed as a youth to be king of the Two Lands, to be ruler of every circuit of Aton, a shield protecting Egypt in his time. They sit under the shadow of his might, the strong one — victorious hand laid upon their head; King Ramses III, the king himself, he saith:

Ramses' Speech; His Accession

63. "Hearken to me all the land, gathered in the court, the king's-children, the butlers, living, the youth, all the young men who are in this land. Give your attention to my utterance, that ye may know my plans for sustaining you alive, that ye may learn of the might of my august father, Amon-Kamephis, creator of my beauty. His great might — victorious against every fallen foe, beneath my feet. He decrees to me victory, and his hand is with me, so that every invader of my boundary is slain in my grasp; his chosen one whom he found among hundreds of thousands, who was established upon his throne for safety when there was not a single man among them to rescue from the Nine Bows. I surrounded her, I established her by my valiant might. When I arose like the sun as king over Egypt, I protected her, I expelled for her the Nine Bows."

Northern Invasion of Syria

64. "The countries, the Northerners in their isles were disturbed, taken away in the fray — at one time. Not one stood before their hands, from Kheta, Kode, Carchemish, Arvad, Alasa, they were wasted. They set up a camp in one place in Amor. They desolated his

Ramses’ Preparations

65. “Now, it happened through\(^f\) this god, the lord of gods, \(^i\) that I was prepared and armed\(^g\) to trap\(^i\) them like wild fowl. He furnished my strength and caused my plans to prosper. I went forth, directing these marvelous things. I equipped my frontier in Zahi, prepared before them. \(^a\)The meaning of this important phrase, “forward” (\(m \ hry\)), with a verb of going, is established among others by the passage in the Kadesh battle (III, 308: Poem, l. 12), and Mernephta’s Hymn of Victory (III, 609, l. 5); but the idiom is not frequent; see also Griffith, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archeology, 19, 298. “To” may be rendered “toward” or “against.”

Defeat of the Enemy

66. "Those who reached my boundary, their seed is not; their heart and their soul are finished forever and ever. As for those who had assembled before them on the sea, the full flame was in their front, before the harbor-mouths, and a wall of metal upon the shore surrounded them. They were dragged, overturned, and laid low upon the beach; slain and made heaps from stern to bow of their galleys, while all their things were cast upon the water. (Thus) I turned back the waters to remember Egypt; when they mention my name in their land, may it consume them, while I sit upon the throne of Harakhte, and the serpent-diadem (wr’t-hk’s w) is fixed upon my head, like Re. I permit not the countries to see the boundaries of Egypt to among them. As for the Nine Bows, I have taken away their land and their boundaries; they are added to mine. Their chiefs and their people (come) to me with praise. I carried out the plans of the All-Lord, the august, divine father, lord of the gods."

Ramses' Song of Triumph

67. "Rejoice ye, O Egypt, to the height of heaven, for I am ruler of the South and North upon the throne of Atum. The gods have appointed me to be king over Egypt, to be victor, to expel them for her from the countries; they decreed to me the kingdom while I was a child, and my reign is full of plenty — — — Strength has been given to me, because of my benefactions to the gods and goddesses, from a heart of love. I have expelled your mourning, which was in your heart, and I have made you to dwell in peace. I have covered Egypt, I have protected her by my valiant might, since aThe "full flame" is the Egyptian fleet in the harbor, and the "wall of metal" is the Egyptian infantry ashore, as shown in the relief (§ 74). These highly figurative phrases, otherwise unintelligible, are rendered quite certain by the relief.

bLit., "from tail to head," a phrase which occurs also where ships are not concerned (§ 90, year 11, l. 18). Hence we should perhaps put a full pause here and render thus: ". . . . . . made heaps from tail to head. As for their galleys, all their things, etc."

cOr: "for a remembrance of Egypt," meaning that they (the foe) may remember Egypt.

dOr: "the thought consumes."

Their hands are for me the shield of my body, to 38 ward off evil and misfortune from 3 my limbs; the king, ruler of the Nine Bows, Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses III, given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever and ever."

2. RELIEF SCENES OUTSIDE NORTH WALL AND IN SECOND COURT, YEAR 8

69. These scenes depict the war against the invading sea-rovers of Asia Minor with unusual interest. We see the equipment of the troops, the march to Syria, even possibly a lion 3 hunt on the march, the great battle, both on land and sea, furnishing the earliest known representation of a naval battle, and the final triumphs.

a Lit., "have become ashes" (ssf), used of a roast fowl.
b Lit., "that are in" (!), meaning "that might be in, etc."
c See § 74, note.
Scene

70. Ramses III stands in a balcony, with two sunshade-bearers behind him. Before him are the standard-bearers of the army, who kneel in salute, followed by a trumpeter. Beside these appear lines of the new recruits levied for the coming war, to whom the officers are distributing bows and quivers of arrows. Spears, quivers, bows, and swords lie piled up beside them.

71. The inscriptions are these:

Behind the King

All the gods are the protection of his limbs, to give to him might against every country.

Before the King

——— king; he saith — — to the princes, every leader of the infantry and chariotry who are before his majesty: "Bring out the weapons ———. Let the archers march to destroy the enemies, who know not Egypt, with might."

Over the Officials

Utterance of the princes, companions, and leaders of the infantry and chariotry: "Thou art the king who shinest upon Egypt. When [thou] risest, the Two Lands live. Great is thy might in the midst of the Nine Bows. Thy roaring is as far as the circuit of the sun. The shadow of thy sword is over thy army. They march, filled with thy might. Thy heart is stout, (for) thy excellent plans are established. Amon-Re appears, leading thy way. He lays low for thee every land beneath thy feet; [thy] heart is glad — forever. Thou art the protection which comes forth without delay. The heart of the Temeh is [dis]turbed, b the Peleset (Pw-[r']-s ² -t) are hung up, f——f in their towns, by the might of thy father, Amon, who has decreed to thee ———."
Over Officers by the Weapons

[Give] the weapons to the infantry, the chariots and to the archers.

Over Officers Distributing Weapons

Take ye the weapons of King Ramses III.

Over Soldiers Receiving Weapons

The infantry and chariots who are receiving weapons.

Scene

72. Ramses III in his chariot, followed by two sunshade-bearers, and accompanied by Egyptian and Sherden infantry, departs for Zahi. The inscriptions are these:

Over the King

The king, rich in might, at his going forth to the North, great in fear, dread of the Asiatics (St'ty), sole lord, skilled in hand, conscious of his might, like Baal, valiant in strength, ready for battle against the Asiatics (cd mw), marching afar in his advance, confident, —, smiting tens of thousands in heaps in the space of an hour. He overthrows the combatants like fire, causing all those who confront him to become ashes. They are terrified at (the mention of) his name, while he is (yet) afar off, like the heat of the sun over the two (Nile) shores; a wall casting a shadow for Egypt. They dwell confident in the might of his strength, King Ramses III.

Over Horses

Great first span of his majesty (named): "Amon-He-Giveth-the-Sword."

This and the following inscription have been omitted by Champollion, and Rosellini is very fragmentary. Still another address (below) among the officers has been omitted by Champollion, and is too fragmentary in Rosellini to be read.

Behind King and over Sherden

His majesty marches out in victorious might, to destroy the rebellious countries. His majesty marches out for Zahi, like the form of Montu, to crush every country that has transgressed his boundary. His infantry are like bulls, ready for battle upon the field. [His] horses are like hawks in the midst of the fowl before him. The Nine Bows are under (his) power. Amon, his august father, is for him a shield, King — —, Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses III.

Scene

73. Ramses III in his chariot, with drawn bow, charges into the discomfited northern allies, chiefly Peleset, as shown by their high feathered head-dress. Their chariots are manned by two warriors armed with shield and spear, and a driver. On foot they fight by fours, each man with two spears and a shield. The native Egyptian troops and their Sherden auxiliaries are mingled in the thick of the fight, slaying the Northerners on every hand, and penetrating to the heavy two-wheeled ox carts in which are the enemy’s wives, children, and supplies.

The inscriptions are these:

Over the Battle

——— [at] the sight of him, as when Set is enraged, overthrowing the enemy before the celestial barque (mskt’ t), trampling the lands and countries prostrate, crushed [—] before his horses. His heat consumes [them] like fire, desolating their gardens — —.

Over King’s Horses

whose native bowmen are disabling the enemy with a severe archery discharge at long range, before the heavy swords and spears of the latter can be brought into play at close quarters. When the archery has nearly emptied the enemy’s vessels, the Egyptians close in with sword and shield, and in the resulting mêlée one of the northern ships has capsized. In three of the Egyptian vessels are pinioned prisoners taken from the enemy, while those who swim ashore are seized and bound by the waiting Egyptian archers. The latter, led by the king, themselves augment the volleys of the Egyptian archers in the warships, and render still more disastrous the complete destruction of the northern fleet. Behind the king are his chariot and waiting attendants.

75. The inscriptions are as follows:

By the King

The Good God, Montu over Egypt, great in might, like Baal in the countries, mighty in strength, far-reaching in courage (lit., heart), strong-horned, terrible in his might, a — wall, covering Egypt, so that every one coming shall not\(^a\) see it, King Ramses III.

Over the Chariot

Lo, the northern countries, which are in their isles, are restless in their limbs; they infest the ways\(^b\) of the harbor-mouths. Capsized and perishing in their places, their hearts are taken, their souls fly away, and their weapons are cast out upon the sea. His arrows pierce whomsoever he will among them, and he who is hit falls into the water. His majesty is like an enraged lion, tearing him that confronts him with his hands (sic!), fighting at close quarters on his right, valiant on his left, like Set; destroying the foe, like Amon-Re. He has laid low the lands, he has crushed every land beneath his feet, the king of Upper and Lower Egypt, the Lord of the Two Lands, Usermare-Meriamon.

Scene

76. The king, attended by sunshade- and fan-bearers, stands in a balcony. Behind him waits the royal chariot, with numerous attendants and soldiers. A castle is depicted over the chariot. Before the king, the two viziers and other officers of high rank present to him Peleset prisoners. Other officials superintend the counting of the hands severed from the fallen of the enemy, the numbers being recorded by four scribes.

77. The inscriptions are these:

Utterance of his majesty to the king's-children, the princes, the king's-butlers, and the charioteers: "Behold ye, the great might of my father, Amon-Re. Utterance of Amon-Re, lord of heaven, ruler of gods: “Come thou with joy, slay thou the Nine Bows, lay low every opponent. Thou hast cast down the hearts of the Asiatics, thou takest the breath from their nostrils, — — — by my designs.”

Before the King

Utterance of King Ramses III before his father, Amon-Re, king of gods: “I went forth, that I might take captive the Nine Bows and slay all lands. IV. SECOND LIBYAN WAR

83. The disastrous defeat of the year 5 had doubtless too seriously weakened the Libyans for them again to attempt the invasion of Egypt during the reign of Ramses III. But in the year 11 they were themselves invaded by the Meshwesh, a related tribe living on their west, and the Meshwesh chieftains, Keper and Meshesher, father and son, laid waste the Libyan country. The Libyans were then forced to join the Meshwesh in an invasion of Egypt. The allies pushed eastward as far as the canal of Heliopolis, called the "Water of Re," doubtless at some point near its departure from the Nile. Here, at a place called Hatsho ($h\cdot t-S\cdot t$), in the early part of the twelfth month of his eleventh year, Ramses defeated them in a disastrous battle, in which Keper was captured and his son Meshesher killed. Ramses pursued the routed enemy over eleven miles

a The name of the herd of Amon in Papyrus Harris, 10, 8 (§ 224), shows that the battle was fought near this canal.

b If the terminus of this eleven miles is the margin of the Libyan desert, the point on that margin must be well south in the narrow part of the Delta; otherwise it would be more than eleven miles from the canal of Heliopolis to the Libyan westward as far as his own town, on a rise of ground called "The-Town-of-Usermare-Meriamon-Which-is-upon-the-Mount*a-of-the-Horns-of-the-Earth." He slew 2,175 men, and took 2,052 prisoners, of whom 558 were women and girls; among these were the survivors of the household of the hostile chief. Returning, flushed with victory, Ramses indulged in the usual triumphal celebrations. The prisoners were distributed throughout the country, and nearly a thousand of the Meshwesh were made herdmen in charge of a herd of Amon, named after this victory (Harris, 10, 8, § 224).

84. These wars, while they checked the aggressiveness of the tribes\textsuperscript{b} on the west of the Delta during the remainder of reign of Ramses III, could only temporarily interrupt the tide of immigration into the Delta from the west. Still Ramses III could now style himself in his titulary: "Protector of Egypt, guardian of the countries, conqueror of Meshwesh, spoiler of the land of Temeh."\textsuperscript{c}

I. GREAT INSCRIPTION ON THE FIRST PYLON

The fifty long lines of this document, owing to their bad state of preservation, the lack of clear arrangement in the content, and that highly figurative style, extreme in this document even for Medinet Habu, are hardly less difficult than the long inscription of the year 5. Whole lines are so fragmentary that it would have served no practical purpose to introduce their mutilated words and phrases here; they have therefore been omitted wherever necessary, but the omission is always indicated. Under these circumstances the progress of the narrative can be but vaguely discerned. At the beginning it is fortunately more clear. The alliance, undoubtedly between the Meshwesh and the Tehenu of Libya (§86, ll. 1 and 2), although mentioned before the invasion of the Tehenu by the Meshwesh (§87, l. 2), of course preceded that invasion, which issued in the alliance. Then follow, in natural order, the invasion of Egypt by the allies (§88, ll. 3–5), the march of Ramses III (§89, ll. 6, 7), and the battle (§90, ll. 7–20). This last, as usual, is chiefly a song of praise to the Pharaoh's valor, which is brought out by depicting the ruin of Meshesher, the Meshwesh chief with his chiefs, his family, and his host. This leads to a long triumphal description of the discomfiture of the defeated (§§91, 92, ll. 20–41); and the document then concludes with a speech by the Pharaoh, glorifying himself in the conventional phrases.

*aOn the back of the southern tower of the first pylon facing the first court, in 50 vertical lines over the battle scene (§101). There are long and frequent lacunae. It was published by Dümichen (Historische Inschriften, I, 20–25); partially by de Rouge (Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 111–113, ll. 19–30, lower ends wanting; wrongly attached to another inscription); and extracts by Lepsius (Denkmäler, Text, III, 174). A photograph shows that Dümichen's text is excessively incorrect; but unfortunately my photograph shows only the lower ends of a few lines.
The Alliance

86. "The foe" had allied themselves against Egypt, the god permitting that they should lead on to mount their horses, (but) mighty was the valor of him who is the sole lord, and his talons made ready like a trap at their arrival, when they came with restless limbs to lay themselves like mice under his arms, the king, Ramses III.

Invasion of Tehenu

87. As for the (chief of) Meshwesh, since he appeared, he went to one place, his land with him, and invaded the Tehenu, who were made ashes, spoiled and desolated were their cities, their seed was not.

Invasion of Egypt

88. They disregarded the beauty of this god who slays the invader of Egypt, saying: "We will settle in Egypt." So spake they with one accord, and they continually entered the boundaries of Egypt. Then was prepared for them death of the mighty god, who brightens the heaven more than the sun, with their hands before him. They were numerous. Amon was his protection, his hand was with him, to confound their faces, to destroy them.

March of the Pharaoh

89. King Ramses III; his majesty went forth in — — — his heart confident in his father, the lord of gods. He was seized herds of small cattle; his infantry and chariotry bearers of victory; the mighty men whom he trained valiant warriors. He was a strong wall, firm in — — — King Ramses III.

---
aSome such words must be lost in the small lacuna (see Brugsch, Hieroglyphisch-demotisches Wörterbuch, Supplement, 568).
bLit., "showing restlessness in their limbs;" the phrase is several times used of the northern peoples also, in the Medinet Habu inscriptions.
cThat this is an invasion of Libya by the Meshwesh is unnoticed in any of the histories. It seems to have been noticed by Spiegelberg (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 34, 23, [65]), though he draws no historical conclusions.
dThe phrase below, "his land with him," would indicate that the chief of the Meshwesh is designated here. He gathered all his people (called "land") in one place.
eLit., "when slaying, etc."
fLit., "Death was put round about for them," or: "death surrounded them."
The Battle

2. POEM ON THE SECOND LIBYAN WARC

93. Over two-thirds of the poem are taken up by the date, and the laudation of the Pharaoh appended to it. The narrative then begins with the invasion of Egypt (§ 95, ll. 23, 24), followed by Ramses' attack (§ 96, ll. 24–27), the capture of Keper, the father of the Meshwesh chief (§ 97, ll. 27–30), the defeat of the enemy (§ 98, ll. 30–32); and the poem concludes with Ramses' victorious return (§ 99, ll. 33, 34).

Date

94. 'Year 11, second month of the second season (sixth month), ship; Wearer of the Double Diadem, [Great in Jubilees, like Ptah]; Golden Horus: Rich in Years, like Atum, Sovereign, Protector of Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses (III), Ruler of Heliopolis. . . . . . . e e The fivefold titulary is followed by seventeen lines of which only fragments have survived. They contained only a long succession of the conventional laudatory epithets applied to the king, constituting merely an expansion of the titulary.

References to the defeat of the enemy begin in l. 19, introducing the poetic account of the invasion.
Conclusion of Introductory Triumph

The flame ——— their bones, boiling and scorching in their limbs. They tread the land like those who come into the trap; slain are their heroes on the spot they tread, and their speech is taken away forever. They are overthrown at one time, seized upon are their leaders who were before them. They are bound like fowl before the hawk whose every step is concealed in the midst of the thicket, sitting in — —. They are laid low, doing obeisance.

The Invasion

95. The hostile foe had taken counsel again, to spend their lives in the confines of Egypt, that they might take the hills and plains as their (own) districts. The foe set their faces toward Egypt, coming on foot themselves to —, which is in the fire of the lowlands with its mighty heat.

Ramses' Attack

96. The heart of his majesty was wroth like Baal in heaven, all his limbs were endowed with strength and might. He betook himself — a goodly charge, to fight hand to hand multitudes on his right hand and on his left, meeting their very selves, advancing like an arrow against them, to slay them. His — strength was mighty like his father, Amon.

Capture of Hostile Chief

97. Keper (K' -pw-r') came to salâm, like —; he laid down his arms, together with his soldiers. He cried to heaven, to beseech his son; his feet and his hands were paralyzed, he stood still in his place, aThe king is the hawk; the picture is that of the fowler sitting behind a screen, or in the bushes, waiting to pull together the open net, as often seen in tomb reliefs. But the introduction of the hawk mixes the figures.

while the god, a who knew his reins, (even) his majesty, fell upon their heads like a mountain of granite.

Defeat of Enemy

98. They were scattered, overturned, brought to the ground; their blood was like a flood, their bodies crushed on the spot, trampled ———. The army was slain to take them, slaying those whom his arms had taken, bound like fowl, laid low upon the under the feet of his majesty. He was like Montu the victorious, with his feet upon his head. His leaders are before him, slain in his grasp.

Victorious Return

99. Happy are his counsels, his designs have come to pass. He returns to his palace, his heart gratified. He is like a plundering lion, terrifying the goats, in his coat of mail, King Ramses III. As for Egypt, their hearts rejoice at seeing his victories; they acclaim with one accord over the flight ———.

3. RELIEF SCENES ON FIRST PYLON AND OUTSIDE NORTH WALL

100. These scenes are of the conventional order, but furnish some facts that are new, regarding the campaign. Some of the accompanying inscriptions also are of the greatest importance; e.g., the short line over the battle scene, giving the limits of the pursuit (§102). The long inscription over the same scene (§§103, 104) is almost exclusively laudation of the Pharaoh for his prowess, but mentions

a Meaning the Pharaoh.

b Meaning doubtless Keper and his son; the latter is mentioned (§90, l. 11), and his name given as Meshesher. Our narrative describes the capture of his old father, who afterward appears in the list of captives as "chief of the Meshwesh, man," but without name appended (§111). In the inscription belonging to the battle the son is said to have been killed (§90, ll. 11, 12), and the father driven pinioned before the Pharaoh's horses. He is depicted so pinioned in the line of foreign chiefs on the pavilion (§114, No. 6).

c De Rouge's copy here inserts the words: "in their place."

d The head of the conquered foe, perhaps the Libyan chief.

f Also one relief from the front of the pavilion (§114).
the capture of Keper and adds the important fact that his son (Meshesher) was slain (II, 11, 12). The closing section (§ 105, l. 24) also furnishes the date of the battle, between the tenth and twentieth of the twelfth month in the year II. The date of the Poem (§§ 93–99) is some six months later. The final triumph (§§ 110, 111) furnishes the exact numbers of captured and slain.

Scene

101. In the conventional manner the king is shown charging the enemy in his chariot, in which he stands with drawn bow. Two lines of Egyptian chariots accompany him, with occasional bodies of infantry; and the enemy, driven before them, or falling pierced by the king's arrows, are scattered in the wildest confusion, as the king drives over the fallen.

102. The inscriptions are these:

Over the Charge

[The pursuit] from Hatshod (H't-f c. t) to the town of Usermare-aFirst pylon, inside, southern tower; unpublished; I had a photograph by Schroeder & Cie., Zürich.

bFragments of the name of the king's steeds may be discerned over the horses, but large pieces have fallen off, carrying it nearly all away.

cSome such words must have begun this title of the charge; but some six or eight words have really been lost, for some early vandal has cut out a large rectangle here, carrying away a third of this little inscription. This important line was overlooked by Dümichen in his first publication; but appeared in his Photographische Resultate (Pl. 26), too small to be read. It was used by Brugsch in his Geographie (35, 36), where he misunderstood the portion he published (Pl. IV, No. 242). He then published it entire in the Wörterbuch (Supplement, 164), and in Aegyptologie (472); again by Levy, Recueil, 15, 171.

dThis town, the name of which means "House of Sand," is depicted on the north wall (§ 107). It was a stronghold on the western road, 8 iters from the edge of the plateau. The name is misread by Brugsch as H't-f c. t; but it is clearly H't-f c. t in § 107, and I have verified the reading on both walls carefully in the photographs. It must have been near Perire, where Merneptah's pursuit of the Libyans began (III, 579, 600), if not identical with it. There is a H't-f c. t mentioned on a late stela at Coptos (Petrie, Coptos, XXII). See also Daressy, Recueil, 19, 19.

Over Battle

103. Horus, strong bull, mighty-armed, strong-armed, lord of terror in the lands and countries, desolating the Temeh and Meshwesh, who are made heaps, crushed, destroyed before [his horses]. Live the Good God, son of Amon, brave, valiant, like Montu, residing in Thebes, great ruler, by whose name one adjures, beautiful upon the steed, brave in the fray, strong-horned among multitudes, experienced in charging among them like one rejoicing in heart, hero slaying his assailing enemies, seizing the aggressor, confronting the invader of his boundary, great in fame in the land of Meshwesh, great in terror, lord of might, destroying the name of the Asiatic lands, sending his fire as a flame into their limbs, like Re, when he rages, in order to extend the confines of Egypt, by the great victories of his sword, despising a million, holding in contempt two millions, firm-hearted, charging into hundred-thousands, the youthful Bull, mighty in slaughter, like Set when he is enraged, the valiant warrior, achieving with his two arms, planning in heart, like Shu, son of Re, great in victory among the lands and countries, planting terror in the heart of the Meshwesh, their people and their heirs upon the earth have vanished, their — has perished forever, the countries — their soul —, they mention his every name in dread, King

a Also the limit of Merneptah's pursuit of the Libyans (III, 600, ll. 1 and 9), q. v. Ramses III otherwise uses this word for the far south, the commoner application. At Karnak he applies it as a gentilic parallel with the people of Upper Nubia (Annales, IV, 5, l. 2). His new town or fortified station, not mentioned in the first Libyan war, was doubtless founded at the close of that war as a safeguard against Libyan aggression. In Papyrus Harris (51, a, 5) it is again mentioned and shown to be on the "western canal," perhaps "The Water of Re" of 10, 8, and 62a, 2.

b This is, of course, parallel with the pursuit measured in iters by Thutmose III (II, 479, l. 18). On the length of the iter, see II, 965, note, and Levy, Recueil, 15, 161–171.

c This inscription has been published by Dümichen (Historische Inschriften, I, 18, 19, and Photographische Resultate, 26), and de Rouge (Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 114–17); see also Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 173.

d This line is longer than the rest, and the lower end was covered in de Rouge's day. His publication therefore omits the end from here on, but makes no note of the loss.

e Lit., "are not." This phrase is thus parallel with the much-discussed phrase applied to Israel: "his seed is not." (III, 604.)
of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, Useramernakhte-meriamon, victorious king, conscious of his might, ruler treading repelling the Nine Bows, taking captive the Meshwesh, who are made heaps; their chief is fettered before his (Pharaoh's) horses, his son, his wife, his family are slain, their children and their stuff upon their backs while coming, subjecting themselves to his valor; like a bull with ready horn, he thrusts, becoming that which his father, Amon-Re grants him, destroying King Ramses III, ruler, giving breath to Egypt, so that they sit under the shadow of his might, beautiful when appearing upon the throne of Atum; his [form] is like Re over the shadows, great in might, the rampart of this land, it acclaims and it jubilates his valor.

Ramses III has dismounted from his chariot and binds Libyan captives; by his waiting chariot are his officers and bodyguard.

King Ramses III, enthroned, with two sunshade-bearers behind him, addresses a prince of rank and his two viziers, the court and leaders of the army, while two lines of captive Meshwesh, preceded by the collected hands severed from the slain, are presented to him. Over the whole is the long inscription of fifty lines translated above (§§ 103-5). The other inscriptions are these:

Before the King

Utterance of his majesty to the hereditary prince, and the two viziers: "Behold ye, the many good things which Amon-Re, king of gods, has done for Pharaoh, L. P. H., his child, [his] dues, his possessions, his cattle, the plunder which Egypt carried away, slaying — — — — —."

Over the Viziers

Utterance of the hereditary prince and the two viziers who are in the presence of his majesty, praising this Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Usermare-Meriamon (Ramses III): "Thou art Re, shining like him. V. THE SYRIAN WAR

115. The materials for this war are solely relief scenes, which are too meager to afford us more than a hint of its extent or character. The invasion from Asia Minor had broken the strength of the North-Syrian peoples. Ramses III therefore improved the opportunity to invade them. The reliefs show him storming no less than five strong cities. One of them is called "the city of Amor," with perhaps the name of the city lost at the end; two others are defended by Hittites; a fourth is surrounded by water, and is, therefore, thought to be Kadesh; the fifth stands on high ground, but offers no other characteristic by which it might be identified.

116. It is clear that Ramses III pushed down the Orontes as far as the Hittite frontier, and Shabtuna just south of Kadesh is mentioned in his geographical list (§ 131). But he apparently made no permanent conquests, and the campaign was evidently little more than a plundering expedition, though it may have been necessary for the preservation of the Pharaoh's Syrian possessions. The question of the date of this campaign will be found discussed in §§ 132, 133.

117. The king assaults a Syrian fortress on foot; he has left his chariot, and shoots with the bow as he advances; before him are his bodyguard and Sherden mercenaries. The fortress rises in four successive battlements to a lofty citadel or tower in the middle, from which waves a triangular banner. Here stands the chief and his companions. The walls are manned with bearded Semites, one of whom offers incense to Ramses from the lowest battlement.

assaulting a fortified city surrounded by water, evidently a moat. The scaling-ladders are up, and while some of the assaulting party attack the gate with axes, others have climbed the ladders, gained a footing on the ramparts, and are slaying the defenders. From the top of the wall an Egyptian trumpeter sounds the victory.\(^a\)

Scene\(^b\)

119. The king, having left his chariot, charges the Syrian enemy on foot, spear in hand. Behind him follow the chariots and heavy infantry. The enemy are defending a walled city, which stands upon a hill. The short inscription (mutilated and very incorrectly published) contains the usual epithets of the king. It refers to enemy as "Asiatics" (\(St'tyw\)).

Scene\(^c\)

120. The king in his chariot, with drawn bow, storms two fortresses. Behind him are his bodyguard and adjutants. The defenders of the strongholds, who fall in numbers before his attack, are Hittites. The scene, therefore, commemorates the capture of at least two Hittite walled towns in Syria. The name of one of the strongholds is given as "Ereth" (\(^2\)-\(r\')-\(t\')).\(^d\) The inscription over the king contains only the customary epithets extolling the king's valor. The name of the chariot horses is recorded as "Victory-in-Thebes."

\(^a\) The two short inscriptions contain the usual epithets of the king, but they are excessively incorrect as published, and also fragmentary.

Scene

121. The king, standing alone, receives three lines of Syrian (Semitic) prisoners, each headed by an Egyptian officer. The only inscription, that before the king, reads:

The king himself, he said to the hereditary prince, king's-scribe, commander in chief of the army, king's-son — — : "Collect the captives whom the valor of Pharaoh, L. P. H., has taken, and place them [in] the offices in the house (pr) of Amon-Re, king of gods; (for) it was his hand which captured them."

Scene

122. Riding in his chariot, with his tame lion trotting beside the horses, Ramses III drives before him two lines of Syrian (Semitic) captives. The inscriptions are these:

Over King

Good God, beautiful in his appearance, like Re, ———, coming in triumph — — —. His valor is mighty, he hath taken captive the lands of the Asiatics (St' tyw)... .

Over Captives

Utterance of the vanquished of every country who are before his majesty: "Breath from thee! O lord of Egypt, Sun of the Nine Bows! Thy father, Amon, hath put us beneath thy feet forever, that we may see and breathe the breath of life; that we may hail (brk·n) his temple. Thou art our lord forever, like thy father, Amon. Scene

123. "Triumphal return of the king in his chariot, followed by two sunshade-bearers and his bodyguard; he drives before him three rows of prisoners—Libyans, Syrians, Peleset, etc.—whom he holds by cords, and is received by the rejoicing Egyptian grandees." The inscription over the king refers to "the chiefs of the countries pinioned before him," but otherwise contains only the usual epithets. The horses are called: "Great first span of his majesty (called): 'Repulser-of-the-Nine-Bows,' of the great stable of Usermare-Meriamon (Ramses III)."

Inscriptions over Grandees

Utterance of the —, the nobles, and the [lead]ers: "[Come] in peace, victorious king, Horus, rich in years. Thou hast seized the lands, the Nine Bows are fettered before thy horses, for thy father, Amon, hath assigned to thee [all lands] beneath thy feet."

Scene

The inscriptions are these:

Over the Nobles

Utterance of the king's-children, nobles, and leaders in praising this Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Ramses III: "Thou art like Re when he [riseth], and thy dawning is like him at early morning. Mighty art thou, valiant in overthrowing the Nine Bows. The heart of Egypt is happy in possession of —. The might of Montu is diffused in thy limbs. . . . . . .”

Scene

125. Ramses III leads two lines of Syrian (Semitic) captives; before him is an array of elaborate metallic vessels. He presents all to Amon, seated, with Khonsu standing behind him in a chapel.

The inscriptions with the gods are as usual and contain no reference to the character of the captives. The king's speech alludes to the war thus: "I took captive the peasant-serfs of —;” but the name of the land is lost. The captives are designated as "The chiefs of every country who are in the grasp of his majesty."

Scene

Over Amon

Utterance of Amon, lord of Thebes, to his son, Lord of the Two Lands, Usermare-Meriamon: "Come thou in peace, O Good God, lord of might, captor of the Nine Bows, at thy return having crushed the countries. Thou hast slain their chiefs, who were beginning to trespass thy boundaries, they fell by thy blade. The countries that knew not Egypt come to thee, (with) their tribute upon their backs, from the victories which I have decreed to thee forever."

Before the King

The king himself, presenting the tribute to Amon from the great chiefs of every country, being: silver, gold, lapis lazuli, malachite, all (kinds of) costly stones without limit, from the booty which his majesty carried off, from that which his valiant sword captured; placed before (his) august father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, according as he gave to [him] all valor.

Over the Chiefs

127. Utterance of the wretched chief of Amor (3-m-r3), and the wretched, vanquished chief of Libya: "Breath! O Good ruler, strong-armed, great in might. Thou art verily the son of Amon, thy form is like him. He has assigned to thee every land, together overthrown beneath thy feet. Thou art like the sun, when he rises; men live at thy appearance. Give to us the breath, which thou givest, that we may haila thy double serpent-diadem, that we may speak of thy might to our sons' sons. They are brought low through the fear of thee, of which we tell them; O thou Sun over Egypt, like the one which is in heaven, King Ramses III."

131. The geographical names borne by the captives (who are alternately Semite and Hittite in features)\(^{a}\) are largely taken from the list of Ramses II at Karnak. In the portions not so borrowed\(^{d}\) such a name as Shabtuna (\(S^{2} \text{-bw-dw-n}^{3}\), No. 75)\(^{e}\) indicates the Amorite valley, as we should expect.\(^{f}\) The insertion of such names as Carchemish, Mitanni, and Arrapachitis\(^{g}\) shows clearly the decorative character of the list. The most interesting name is Levi-El (\(R^{3} \text{-wy-}^{3} \text{-r}^{3}\)), which is parallel with Jacob-El and Joseph-El, which Daressy would identify with Shiloh.\(^{h}\)

BLESSING OF PTAH

132. This document is the pendant of the one of the year 11 (§§ 93–99). It is dated in the year 12, and the presence of the date would indicate that it records some specific occurrence; but it is difficult to determine what this occurrence was from our inscription, as it is copied from that of Ramses II at Abu Simbel (III, 394–414).

133. This brings up the whole question of the date of the Amorite war. The arrangement of the records in the Medinet Habu temple in chronological order from rear to front is so evident that the location of those reporting the Amorite war is of the first importance. We find them all (with one exception) on walls in front of—that is, later than—the second pylon (bearing records of the year 8), and among records of the Libyan war of the year 11. Had the Amorite campaign immediately followed the defeat of the sea-peoples in the year 8, it is certain that the very full records of that year would have contained some reference to it. But the long row of scenes depicting the campaign of the year 8 (outside north wall) contains nothing from the Amorite war, and the arrangement of the whole wall clearly indicates that the Amorite war is at least as late as the year 11. But as the second Libyan war occurred in that year, the Amorite war would have probably been later. We have to remember, bThe reliefs begin at the rear with three scenes from the war of year 5; proceed toward the front with seven scenes from the war of year 8; and conclude at the front with a group of scenes from the Libyan war of year 11, and the Amorite war.

however, that on the treasury in the rear of the temple interior (that is, the oldest portion of the building) there is a relief (§§ 126, 127) showing the king of Amor as a captive. But he is here in company with a Libyan king, and as we cannot suppose that the Amorite war occurred as early as the year 5 (first Libyan war), it is evident that this Libyan king was taken in the Libyan war of year 11, when Ramses III actually did capture a Libyan king (§ 97), whereas no such capture is mentioned in the records of the year 5. Thus this relief on the treasury again connects the Amorite war with the Libyan war of year 11. They must thus have occurred close together, from the testimony of the reliefs.

134. Returning now to our monument, copied, as we have stated, from an Abu Simbel stela of Ramses II, we find that the slight changes in it, necessary to suit the times of Ramses III, are not in favor of the above conclusion. Especially is this true in one case, where Ramses II's stela refers to the Hittites thus, (Ptah speaks): "I have made for thee the land of Kheta into subjects of thy palace" (III, 410). Here Ramses III's redactor has changed "Kheta" into "every land;" although, according to the reliefs and the lists, Ramses III must have fought the Hittites. The relief at the top of our stela contains a list of names of three African and ten Syrian towns, accompanying thirteen Asiatic (sic!) prisoners, and Müller\(^a\) refers the latter without hesitation to the Amorite war. The presence of the African names with Asiatic figures would lead one to suspect this list to be nothing more than decorative. Against this stela one must now weigh the evidence of the reliefs, which seems to me conclusive for dating the Amorite war in or shortly after the year 11. This conclusion is thus reached rather in spite of than because of our stela.

\(^a\)Müller, Asien und Europa, 394 ("S. 227").
All changes in the version of Ramses II have been indicated in the footnotes to the translation of the Abu Simbel stela (III, 594–414), which may therefore serve in place of a repetition of the document here.

The relief at the top shows Ramses III, "smiting the chiefs of all countries" in the presence of Ptah-Tatenen, who presents to him a sword, and leads up thirteen Asiatic captives, represented in the conventional form with ovals, the first three of which contain the names of African places.

VI. THE NUBIAN WAR

The materials for this war, like those of the Amorite war, are solely relief scenes. These permit no definite conclusions regarding it. Nubia had now been so thoroughly Egyptianized that Ramses III's war or wars there were doubtless confined to quelling unimportant insurrections on the extreme southern frontier, or to expeditions against the outlying tribes on the east of Nubia.

Besides the material below, see also the Nubian chiefs represented with the Meshwesh chief captured in the year 11, on the pavilion (§114). There are also unpublished scenes from this war on the rear (west) side of the temple (Baedeker's Egypt, 1902, 302).

SLAVING OF PRISONERS BEFORE AMON-RE*

This relief shows Ramses III "slaying the chiefs of all countries" in the presence of Amon-Re, who extends to him a sword at the same time leading to him a list of 124 captives, depicted in the usual form, each with an oval con-

*Relief scene on the façade of the Medinet Habu temple, right (northern) tower, front, first pylon; published by Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 725–28 (list partially); Dümichen (Historische Inschriften, I, 16–18, without king's figure, the victims and accompanying inscriptions) and Rouge (Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 109, 110, with same omissions and without list). Rouge has incorrectly appended to the long inscription in this scene twelve lines, from the back of the same pylon-tower, belonging to the war of the eleventh year, ll. 19–30; Dümichen taining the name of each place or country symbolized.\(^a\)

Over the god is a poetic inscription of eighteen lines, taken from the similar scene among the Karnak reliefs (III, 116) of Seti I, who appropriated it from the Building Inscription of Amenhotep III (II, 891, 892). It had meantime been expanded by Seti I (III, 113–18); his version was now slightly elaborated by Ramses III.\(^b\) His additions, however, contain nothing of historical importance. Under the god's arm is an inscription, which has now become stereotyped in this position. Each strophe begins: "I cause them to see thy majesty, etc.;" and the whole is taken from Thutmose III's Hymn of Victory (II, 658 ff.), following the example of Seti I and Ramses II.

138. The list of 124 geographical names is largely a compilation from the lists of Thutmose III, and other earlier sources, and therefore of little historical importance, save in restoring the earlier lists where they are fragmentary. They are chiefly African countries;\(^c\) but some names repeated on the other pylon (§131) are evidently Asiatic.\(^d\)

\(^{a}\)An unpublished scene on the left (south) tower of the pavilion shows the king "presenting two rows of captives before Amon" (Baedeker's Egypt, 1902, 298). The lower row are Libyans, but, according to the inscriptions (Champollion, Notices descriptives, I, 722 ff.), they also include Nubians, for the king says: "Thou givest to me the land of Kush." Otherwise the inscriptions contain nothing of historical importance.

\(^{b}\)The beginning of the same inscription is used again by Ramses III accompanying a duplicate of this scene in the great Karnak temple (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 207, d). The geographical list, however, is limited to fifteen names, chiefly the Nine Bows.

\(^{c}\)The arrangement in Karnak places the southern countries on the southern pylon-tower; but this arrangement was not retained by Ramses III, who places this African list on the northern pylon-tower.

\(^{d}\)The inscription over the god says: "I cause to come to thee the chiefs of the southern countries, with their tribute and their children upon their backs, every good product of their country." This would indicate that the list should be African; but see the further content of the poem (III, 116).
MEDINET HABU TEMPLE CALENDAR

139. This, the most elaborate temple calendar which has survived from the pre-Ptolemaic age, contains a number of historic data of the greatest interest. It begins with a long speech by Ramses III, addressed to Amon. The king offers the usual praise to the god, and continues with an enumeration of his own good works for him in Thebes. These are in general those which we have more in detail in Papyrus Harris. In mentioning the feasts it is evident that the Medinet Habu temple was their center rather than Karnak. Of the property of the Medinet Habu temple, the king says to Amon:

140. I have put its possessions into writing, that I might inclose them in thy grasp. I made for thee thy property lists, that they might be forever and [ever] in thy name. I offered to thee the Two Lands as thy portion, according as thou gavest them to me since I was born.

141. This is followed by matters of historical importance:

I built strongholds (ḫn·w) in thy name in Egypt and [all] lands, likewise the land of Asia. I taxed them for their impost every year, every town by its name, gathered together, bearing their tribute, to bring them [to] thy ka, O lord of gods. I made these things by my might, from that which my ka created, from my captures in the land of the Negroes, and in the land of Zahi (D²-hy). There was naught therein for any (other) god, but I gave them to thy ka, that thou mightest be satisfied therewith, for thou art my divine father, heir of eternity, traversing everlastingness as lord of gods. Set me in thy heart at all times, let the land abide like Thebes, thine accustomed house. Let thy provision be brought into its midst and all plenty into the chapel, multiplying its children, that they may be prophets and divine fathers for thee, to call thee for thy food, to praise thee;

others for the administration of the work, in order to supply all daily offerings. I have collected for the herds of all small cattle, fields, domains of high land gardens of wild fowl descending into the pool; in order to make festive thy oblations, with plenty... I — all — the captivity of my sword. Every land overflowed gold, silver, and the possessions of all lands went into it, that my house might be for thee an august sanctuary, with thy majesty in the midst thereof — forever.

The king’s speech then concludes with further praise and prayer.

142. Following this inscription is the act of establishment of the festal offerings of the temple. It begins:

Year 12, first month of the third season (ninth month) [twenty-sixth day, the day] of the king’s [coronation] upon the Horus-throne, when he received the regalia of his father, Re.

143. The new calendar of feasts was thus introduced on the anniversary of the king’s coronation in his twelfth year at the completion of the temple of Medinet Habu and the termination of his wars. The act mentions several new feasts founded by Ramses III, to one of which are appended the words:

Which Ramses III founded for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods, from the [victories] which the might of Pharaoh won, among the fallen of — in the year —, third month of the third season (eleventh month) [day] —.

144. Now follows the great calendar enumerating all the old and new annual feasts of Amon, and to each feast is attached a list of the various offerings to be presented at that feast. These are so elaborate and extensive that they cover a large part of the southern wall of the temple. The particular treasury or source of income from which each offering or group of offerings shall be taken is also indicated. It begins with the daily offerings for each of the 365 days, followed by the eight "feasts of heaven," which were at monthly, half-monthly, or shorter intervals. This introduces the chief section of the calendar, the portion which treats of the annual feasts. As of prime importance to the king, the feast of his coronation on the twenty-sixth of Pakhons (ninth month) heads the list. It lasted one day, but was later lengthened by the king to no less than twenty days. All the other annual feasts which now follow are in proper chronological order, beginning with the rising of Sirius on New Year's Day, and proceeding with the other three traditional feasts of the first month. On the nineteenth of the second month (Paophi) began the next feast, that of Opet, the greatest in the Theban calendar. It continued under Ramses III till the twelfth of the third month, a total of twenty-four days. The list is preserved only as far as the seventeenth or eighteenth of the fifth month, but, besides the above, it contains seventeen more annual feast days, making in all no less than forty-five annual feast days during the first 138 days of the year; that is, almost one annual feast every three days, or more than 120 in the year, at the same rate. This is not including the minor "feasts of heaven" which were connected with each month.

145. Among the names of the new feasts there is one of historical importance in the fifth month (the day is not given), called: "Slaying-of-the-Meshwesh."b

The lists of objects offered are precisely those enumerated in Papyrus Harris, and an exhaustive comparison would throw much light on the lists in the papyrus.

ACT OF ENDOWMENT OF THE TEMPLES OF KHNUMc

146. To Sethe's arguments that this document was issued by Ramses III, may be added the remark of de Rougé that the neighboring fragment, d containing the name of Ramses III, is of the same style. Sethe has showne that the "field," regularly referred to is the "dodekaschoinos," the field of twelve schoinoi belonging to Khnum, which extended from Assuan to Takompso. f This land is by this document of aThe rate for the remainder of the year is not likely to have decreased much, for Ramses III later prolonged the feast of his coronation to twenty days; it fell in the ninth month.

I have mostly followed Sethe in the above translation, with some few additions from Rouge's copy, which was not used by Sethe.

dThis fragment bearing the name of Ramses III (Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 258), records his command "to cleanse all the temples of the South from all abomination . . . . to inspect the treasuries and granaries, to protect the people and herds, to double ————, to bring in truth and to banish falsehood, to cause lying to be an abomination; to build ————."

eSethe, Untersuchungen, II, 28.

fAccording to an inscription in Maharraka, found by Sethe in one of Lepsius' notebooks, Takompso must be at least as far south as the former town, so that Sethe's ably defended thesis confining the dodekaschoinos to the cataract between Assuan and Philæ is thus disproved for the Greco-Roman age at least, and probably also for the earlier time. See Sethe, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 41, 60, 62.
Ramses III conveyed for all time to Khnum. That this was a new gift the late copy of Zoser's donation of the same land shows to be impossible. Hence we here see Ramses III confirming an old possession of the god, which confirmation he, of course, viewed as a gift, precisely as we find him doing in Papyrus Harris (§ 222). The enactments of the document, making the land given, as well as its inhabitants and products, free from taxation by the crown, or any government requisition by the vizier, are most important. They confirm the statements in Genesis (47:21–26) that the priests were not taxed.

PAPYRUS HARRIS

151. The invaluable treasure of facts and statistics preserved to us in this remarkable document has, with the exception of one section at the end, never been exhaustively studied until recently. The closing section, which is a short historical account of Ramses III's reign, has received much a Temple income.

b Found by the natives at Thebes in 1855. It lay with four other rolls in a hole in the floor of a common cliff-tomb near Der el-Medineh, beneath a pile of mummies which filled the tomb. Together with some twenty other rolls, found by the Arabs at the same time, it was offered for sale to Mr. A. C. Harris, of Alexandria, who purchased it; hence its name. The other papyri, not purchased by him, seem to have belonged to the series of court records containing the prosecution of tomb-robbers under Ramses IX. Papyrus Harris is now in the British Museum, where it was admirably published by Birch, Facsimile of an Egyptian Hieratic Papyrus of the Reign of Ramses III, now in the British Museum (London, 1876). It is practically in a perfect state of preservation, there being only a small piece of three lines torn out of Pl. 1. The Dictionnaire du Papyrus Harris (Vienna, 1882), by Piehl, is invaluable as a concordance, to which I express my general obligation here.

[Since finishing my study of the Papyrus Harris, I have received Professor Erman's admirable essay, "Zur Erklärung des Papyrus Harris" (Sitzungsberichte der Königlichen Preussischen Akademie, der Wissenschaft, 1903, XXI, 456-74). Additional observations drawn from his study are severally acknowledged in the notes.]
attention, but the apparently uninteresting gifts and lists, which occupy 95 per cent. of the space in the document, have never, until recently, been carefully examined for historical purposes.\(^a\) The following discussion and translation are not offered as an exhaustive monograph on the papyrus; they purpose no more than to enable the reader to employ the invaluable data furnished by the document, for historical purposes. The numerous metrological, botanical, and archaeological questions\(^b\) suggested by the lists do not fall within our province in the present treatise, and no attempt has been made to settle them.

\textbf{152.} This remarkable manuscript is the largest papyrus extant, being no less than 133 feet long, and containing 117 columns,\(^c\) usually of twelve or thirteen lines. Written in a magnificent hand, it is the most sumptuous manuscript left us by ancient Egypt. The content of the document is not less remarkable than its external form. It is a detailed statement of Ramses III's benefactions to gods and men during his entire reign of over thirty-one years. It was compiled at his death by his son, to be placed in the king's tomb, and is distinctly mortuary in its character and pur-

\(^b\)For the metrology involved in the historical discussion, I have followed Griffith. For the reader's convenience, I append the following equivalents:

- 1 deben = about 1,404 grains, or 2.925 troy ounces.
- 1 kidet = about 140.4 grains (\(\frac{1}{5}\) of a deben).
- 1 sixteen fold heket = about 2.10 to 2.16 imp. bushels.
- 1 heket = about 292 to 300 cubic inches (1 bushel = about 7.39 to 7.59 heket).
- 1 hin = about 29.2 to 30 cubic inches.
- 1 stat = about \(\frac{2}{3}\) of an acre.

But most of the units of measure employed are unknown, and I have simply transliterated. Where I have translated botanical names, I have been dependent for the most part upon Loret's very useful investigations; but in cases of doubt I have usually transliterated the term without comment. As to the metals involved, this papyrus uses \(hmb\) for both bronze and copper, and unless the alloy is indicated, I have regularly rendered copper (see 14\(a\), note).

\(^c\)Published in seventy-nine plates.
pose. It was intended to secure to the departed Pharaoh the favor of all the gods in the hereafter, by showing them his numerous benefactions in all their temples, and his great deeds among men. Prayers for the king's well-being in the world beyond continually appeal to these good works as ground for the favor of the gods, on whose good-will the king's happiness after death depends. Ramses IV, the son to whom the document clearly owes its preparation, does not forget to put into his deceased father's mouth long prayers in his own (the son's) behalf, entreatng for him from the gods, whose companion the departed king now is, a long and prosperous reign. So prominent are these prayers for Ramses IV that they must also have formed a strong motive for the preparation of the document by him.

153. The document is dated on the day of the king's death, as will be evident from the following considerations: The long lists of gifts cover thirty-one years; all annual traditional feasts of all the temples recorded were celebrated thirty-one times. It is thus evident that Ramses III died so early in the year 32 that the small fraction of gifts presented during the beginning of that year were not considered; nor did the king survive long enough in the year 32 to celebrate any of its feasts. To this last observation there is one exception: a certain feast founded by Ramses III himself was celebrated in the year 32. It began on the a In precisely the same way the deceased Seti I prays for his son, Ramses II (III, 280); and we find the latter petitioning his deceased father to pray to the gods, whose companion he (the father) now is, for his (the son's) welfare (III, 279).

b This was long ago recognized by Birch (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1872, 119 ff.), although his data, as he took them from the papyrus, were seriously in error. But, this conclusion of Birch has since been entirely overlooked, and it has been generally held that the papyrus was written and dated some time before the king's death, although it over and over again, with all the euphemisms known to the Egyptians, states that he was already dead. [Later: See also Erman on this point (op. cit.).]
twenty-sixth of Pakhons, and lasted twenty days. This feast must therefore have fallen early in the year 32, and the king lived at least twenty days of that year. Now, in Ramses III's calendar of feasts at Medinet Habu the feast of the anniversary of his coronation is recorded as beginning on the twenty-sixth of Pakhonsa (ninth month), so that the twenty-day feast in our papyrus is the celebration of the coronation anniversary; its first day, the twenty-sixth of Pakhons, is the first day of each year of the reign. This feast, which began the year 32, the old king celebrated in that year; but no more. When the Feast of the Nile-god,b which fell just ninety-five days after the close of the Feast of Coronation, was celebrated, the Pharaoh had been gathered to his fathers, for the papyrus records this feast no later than the year 31. We have thus fixed the date of the king's death within ninety-five days, and the papyrus is dated on the sixth of Epiphi, which falls within that period.

154. When, furthermore, we remember that the papyrus continually represents the king as stating that he is deceased, it is evident that the date at the head of the document is that of the king's death, the last date which could be recorded in his reign. The papyrus thus furnishes us the exact length of his reign, thirty-one years and forty days, or more exactly, forty-one days, if we include the day of his death.c

bThe date of this feast is not given in the papyrus, but is to be found on Ramses III's stela at Silsileh (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 218, d, l. 15).

cThat Ramses III ruled in round numbers thirty-one years is also shown by the Papyrus Mallet (Recueil, I, Pl. I, ll. 2, 3), which contains a statement of payments made "from year 31 to year 3, making 4 years." Had Ramses III ruled far into year 32, the above limits would have included more than four years; but the scribe ignores the forty days of year 32. There is no coregency with Ramses IV here (Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 480); and the dates as they stand are clear proof that there was never any coregency at all. Still less is there a shadow of proof that the coregency lasted four years (Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 481), making Ramses III reign thirty-six years. The document on which this
155. The document was evidently put together as rapidly as possible after the king's death, and the sections furnished by the three main temples—Thebes, Heliopolis, and Memphis—were written by three different scribes, as the varying hand and orthography clearly show. The Theban scribe wrote also the general introduction, but a fourth scribe had to do with the records from the smaller temples, while a fifth furnished the concluding or historical section. One of these scribes was perhaps also the artist of the three vignettes. The haste with which the document was compiled is evident both from the fact that some of the greatest of the minor temples are entirely omitted, and from the numerous errors in the footings of the lists, as well as some glaring omissions. It is evident, also, that the scribes at Heliopolis and Memphis were unable to render as full reports as that of the Theban scribe; doubtless owing to the shorter time allowed them because of the delay involved in the journey from Thebes with their instructions, and the return thither with the finished report, before the day of the king's funeral. The entire omission of many of the more important smaller temples is probably to be accounted for in the same way; their reports failed to arrive in time.

156. The material in the great papyrus is, in the main, very systematically arranged. To the three great gods of Egypt—Amon of Thebes, Re of Heliopolis, and Ptah of Memphis—the major portion of the space is naturally devoted. Besides these three great sections is another, of last conclusion is based contains an encomium of the reign of Ramses V, copied by a scribe in the year 4. Its attribution to Ramses IV (ibid., 481) is an oversight, for it was formerly correctly assigned by Maspero to Ramses V (Monies royales, 664).

aSee Erman (Sitzungsberichte der Königlichen Preussischen Akademie, 1903, XXI, 459–62) for a table of these differences.

bThis will not, however, explain the absence of such temples as Erment and Dendera, which were but a few miles away from Thebes.
general scope, devoted to the other temples, followed by a summary of all the temples of Egypt, and a concluding historical section, reciting the king's great deeds in war, commerce, and the like.

157. The following table will render this arrangement clear:

I. Introduction (1; §§182, 183).
II. Theban Section (2-23; §§184-246).
III. Heliopolitan Section (24-42; §§247-304).
IV. Memphite Section (43-56; §§305-51).
V. General Section (57-666; §§352-82) (small temples).
VI. Summary (67-74; §§383-96).
VII. Historical Section (75-79; §§397-412).

Each of these sections, except the first and last, is arranged on the same general plan. At the beginning of each of the sections II, III, and IV is a vignette, showing the king worshiping the gods to whom the following section is devoted. The text of each section is then introduced by a prayer, which merges into a recital of the king's buildings and other benefactions for the god, concluding with an appeal to him, calling attention to the following lists. These lists contain six different classes of material: (1) the god's estate; (2) his income; (3) the king's new gifts to him; (4) grain for the old feasts; (5) offerings for new feasts founded by him; and (6) offerings to the Nile-god.

158. The statement that the first class of material constitutes the god's estate will need some demonstration. It is clear that the papyrus enumerates old income of the god merely confirmed to him by Ramses III, in the offerings of grain for the old annual feasts like that of Southern Opet at Thebes (16b, 13-15); for these are not only separated by a rubric from the new feasts founded by Ramses III (e. g., 17a–21b), but they refer distinctly to "that (income) which was before" (16b, 14), which is included in them. If this be true, we may expect to find old possessions of the god elsewhere in the lists. Thus among the king's gifts we find the statement that he "made" for Amon the great vineyard called "Kanekeme" (8, 5). Had we no other information regarding this vineyard, we must have supposed that it was a new possession of Amon, equipped and given him by Ramses III. But we know that it was in existence long before Ramses III's time, and in possession of Ramses II's mortuary temple, the Ramesseum, also a temple of Amon at Thebes. We thus see that Ramses III enumerates as his own gifts, property long in the possession of the god before Ramses III was born, evidently viewing his confirmation of it to the god as the conveyance of a gift. To us it is indifferent whether such confirmation really did constitute a gift; it is enough for us to know that all property so confirmed was an old possession belonging to the earlier estate of the god. With this fact in mind, let us see if such property as enumerated can be distinguished from the new donations actually given by Ramses III.

159. The first list in each of the Theban, Heliopolitan, and Memphite sections is headed thus:

List of things, cattle, gardens, lands, galleys, workshops, and towns, which Pharaoh gave to the house (pr, estate) of the god X, as property forever and ever (10, 1 ff.; 31, 1 ff.; 51a, 1 ff.; 61a, 1 ff.).

160. The second section of the lists is clearly the god's annual income or a part of it; it is headed each time thus:

a See 8, 5, and note.
b He does the same in his Elephantine act of endowment (§§ 146–50).
c So Thebes; the rest use Ramses III's name. d The scribe has omitted the heading by mistake in the general section.
e So the summary; the others give the various temples, etc., by name.
Things exacted, impost of the people and all the serf-laborers of the houses, temples, and estates which he gave to them as their yearly dues (12a, 1 ff.; 32a, 7 ff.; 51b, 3 ff.; 68b, 4 ff.).

Yet it is stated that Ramses III "gave" this income to the gods, although it is evident that it is income which they must long before have enjoyed.

161. The third section of the lists is five times so headed:

Gold, silver, etc., which Ramses III gave as gifts of the king, in order to provision the house of the god X, from the year 1 to the year 31.

162. We see that these "gifts" are distributed through thirty-one years, while the "property" of the first heading is, as far as the heading is concerned, each time merely once given, and is never called "gifts of the king." On looking at the lists themselves, under the first and third headings, we find, for example at Heliopolis, lands under both; while at Thebes we find cattle under both. Why were these not put together? Evidently because some of the land was former "property" of the god, while the rest was a "gift of the king." Now, the estate of the god, as Erman has noticed, is of course given as it was found at the king's death, using the names then in vogue; hence we find the keepers of a herd named after Ramses III's victory over the Meshwesh (10, 8) included in the estate. Evidently the 971 Meshwesh slaves who kept this herd were a gift of Ramses III, and other gifts of his, not discernible because not accidentally so distinguished, are thus, of course, included in the estate. This made no difference to Ramses a Long series of portable property.

b The summary has for this phrase, "while he was king upon earth."

c The word employed (ymy-pr) is the usual term, both for the document by which property is conveyed by mortmain, and for such property itself. The term is therefore of itself sufficient to determine the character of the property to which it is applied.
III, while claiming, as he did, to have given the whole estate to the god.

163. The important point for us is, that we have here an inventory of the whole estate, and that we can now determine from the great papyrus the total wealth held by the three great temples of Egypt—an economic datum till recently unknown in the study of ancient Egypt or of any other oriental country of the time. If we thus leave the total amount of Ramses III's new gifts somewhat uncertain, such uncertainty is of little importance, for it is evident in any case that the bulk of his alleged donations to the gods were old and traditional possessions, for a large share of which the priesthoods were doubtless indebted to the Eighteenth Dynasty.a

164. The classification of the property of the temples in the document is shown in the appended table (p. 96).

165. We can now proceed to determine what proportion of the wealth of the country was in possession of the temples of the land. To do this, we must compile a condensed summary of their property, taking first the temple estates (see table, p. 97).

166. With these data we can safely deal only in the case of people and land. The cattle are lumped together without showing what proportion of sheep, goats, etc., the numbers contain. We do not know the size of the gardens and groves, or towns; nor the size and value of the ships and workshops. But with the people belonging to the temples, and the lands, we can operate with tolerable precision, as compared with our former total lack of data. The population of Egypt up to within the last five or six years was reckoned at toward six millions, but the latest census places aFor example, Amon owns but nine Syrian towns, and we know that Thutmose III alone gave Amon three Syrian towns (II, 557).

it above nine millions. It is much to be doubted whether in its ancient state the land could support as large a population as modern improved conditions have produced. Granting this, we see that one person in about eighty-five of the population was temple property; or, accepting the lower figure for the ancient population (Diodorus gives six million as the population in Roman times), one person in about fifty-five. But, remembering that the list of smaller temples is incomplete, we may say that one person in from fifty to eighty of the population belonged to the temples. In no case were more than 2 per cent. of the people temple property.

167. Turning to the consideration of the land, we find the temples in possession of a total of 1,070,419 stat, or about 722,533 acres. The archives of modern Egypt contain a registration of about five millions of acres,\(^a\) whence it will be seen that the temples owned nearly one-seventh, or over 14\(\frac{1}{2}\) per cent., of the land. Including the smaller temples\(^b\) omitted by the papyrus, probably over 15 per cent. of the land belonged to the religious foundations. This was distributed as follows:

\(^b\) The scribe does not itemize the land by temples (62a, 8), but as he does not include Khnum of Elephantine among the list of temple-slaves, he may be omitting the entire dodekaschoinos, which we know was the property of Khnum under Ramses III (§§ 146–50).

169. The above table shows the total income for thirty-one years, so that all numbers must be divided by thirty-one to obtain the annual income. Egypt’s wealth has from the most ancient times consisted chiefly of grain and cattle, but especially the former. Yet of cattle the annual income of all temples was less than thirty-two head a year, and so great a temple as Memphis is charged with only half a beef each year. There is no gold in the income of either Heliopolis or Memphis, nor in that of the latter any incense, honey, oil, or flax. Other items are so small that it is impossible to believe that these lists contain the total income of any temple. The numbers would indicate that this entire list may be the income exclusively from Ramses III’s new endowments. Having already credited himself with giving the hereditary estate of each temple, when he comes to the income, he probably omits the annual receipts from the hereditary estate, which formed an old and standing income, and lists only the income from his own new endowments.

170. This income is annually as follows:

aErman has also expressed his doubt as to the possibility that this list represents the entire income of the temple (op. cit., 471), but thinks them possibly "nur nebensächliche Steuern."

171. The political significance of these lists largely attaches to the question of Amon’s share in them. The estate of the god embraced over 10 per cent. of the lands of Egypt, and at most about \(\frac{1}{2}\) per cent. of the population, or perhaps even a little less than 1 per cent. This meant a fortune in land of over five times that of Heliopolis, and over nine times that of Memphis, while in people the disproportion was still greater. That this disproportion was due solely to Ramses III is impossible. If we are correct in concluding that the above income was derived from Ramses III’s new endowments, there is nothing in these figures which would indicate that Amon’s vast wealth was due to Ramses III alone. Amon’s annual income in gold, of which the other temples received none, is something less than 26,000 grains. Of other items Amon received roughly: 17 times as much silver; 21 times as much copper; 3 times as many garments; 2 times as much incense, honey, and oil; 9 times as much shedeh and wine; \(\frac{1}{3}\) times as much grain; 10 times as much flax; 8 times as many waterfowl; 7 times as many cattle; about the same number of geese; 10 times as many ships; as all the other temples combined. This disproportion, if maintained through the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Dynasties, would account for the enormous wealth of Amon; but that wealth was not the result of the donations of one reign.

172. At this point we must examine the list explicitly stated to contain Ramses III’s gifts to the temples.

bIt is to be supposed that the old fortune of Amon, if confiscated or depleted by Amenhotep IV, was restored by Harmhab.

*All conversions are in lbs. troy except copper and bronze, which are avoirdupois. bSixteenfold heket.
173. This list shows immensely more gold, silver, copper, garments, cattle, grain, and land given to the other temples than to Amon, while it is only in a few less valuable commodities that Amon is in the lead. Even including Amon's income with the above gifts, Heliopolis was yearly receiving twice as much gold as Thebes from all sources. Amon's superiority is, however, in the aggregate decidedly maintained, as a combination of the income and the gifts shows. It is evident also that, while the gifts of land to other temples have been enumerated in this list, the lands given to Amon are not included here, but are counted in Amon's estate, as it was also clear from the names of the herds that the cattle given Amon were to some extent included in the estate. In using the list of gifts, therefore, it must not be forgotten that in the items of land and cattle it is incomplete, and that it is impossible to determine exactly the extent of Ramses III's gifts in these two forms of property. But, judging from those gifts of which we are able to determine the amount, the wealth of Amon in Ramses III's day, was not due to his donations, nor can we aver that the fortune of Amon of necessity constituted such a menace to the state as alone to threaten its overthrow—a conclusion now current, and everywhere accepted.

174. An important question suggested by these lists is the relation of income and expenditure. The following tables indicate the total income of three great temples in grain:

GRAIN FOR OLD FEASTS DURING THIRTY-ONE YEARS

175. From these figures it will be seen how far the income of Ramses III was from furnishing enough grain for the old feasts. They must have been drawn from the old income, which, in view of the vast extent of the temple lands, was greatly in excess of these amounts contributed to the offerings. Erman suggests that the surplus was used in building Ramses III's temples, like that at Medinet Habu, Karnak, and other places. But the question arises whether it was not consumed in the maintenance of the other temples of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Dynasties. We know that some of the Eighteenth Dynasty Theban temples, like that of Amenhotep III behind the Memnon colossi, had already perished at the vandal hands of the Nineteenth Dynasty kings. We can understand, too, how the mortuary temples, which were so largely the personal sanctuaries of earlier Pharaohs, might be desecrated. Yet, if their offerings were in some cases maintained, Ramses III would have been likely to include them in the totals given in the papyrus, without any remark as to their employment; for he does not itemize by temples the grain and other offerings given for the feasts.

^a Only during the last seventeen years of the reign.
^b Only during the last three years of the reign.

176. This brings up the question: What Theban temples are known to the papyrus as sharing in Amon’s income and Ramses III’s bounty? They are referred to in three different places: the narrative of buildings and good works (§§ 189–214), the list of people (§§ 223, 224), and the income (§ 227); and they include six different temples:

177. From this it is evident that the income and the people of the great Karnak temple must be included elsewhere. When we notice that the Medinet Habu temple is credited with 62,626 people (10, 3), or three-fourths of all the people belonging to Amon, it is evident where the people belonging to the Karnak temple are to be found. Again, when we see that the people attached to the Khonsu-temple aThe Luxor temple is omitted, and yet Ramses III built a chapel on the river side of this temple. The lower part of a sandstone stela (Recueil, 16, 55, 56), used in antiquity to prop a falling statue of Ramses II at Luxor, contains a record of building by Ramses III in the same temple: “Ramses III, doubling offerings in Luxor...... maker of monuments, profitable to him that begat him...... building a house in Luxor on the right of his august father, Amon-Re...... It is like the horizon of heaven, made of fine sandstone; it shall endure as long as heaven endures, a place for the promenade of the lord of gods at his beautiful feast of Opet....... He made (it) as [his] monument for his father, Amon-Re, presider over his Yp’t; making for him a great and august chapel of the front, of marvelous great blocks.” The omission of this building in the Theban section is another evidence of the hastiness with which the document was prepared, and the resulting incompleteness.

are also included somewhere else, we are led to conclude that the fortunes of the different Amon-temples are not always kept apart by the papyrus; in other words, the fortunes of all might be comprehended under one head as the estate of Amon.

178. Indeed, this common estate is unequivocally mentioned, for we find the five herds belonging to the five temples of No. 3 spoken of as "the five herds made for this house" (12a, 3, 4). "This house," therefore, comprised the property of five different temples, and beyond doubt designates the estate of Amon, irrespective of the different temples among which it was divided. That other temples besides the five of No. 3 above may be included under one head is indicated by a record of restoration in the small Eighteenth Dynasty temple by Ramses III, which reads thus:

180. This small Medinet Habu temple is nowhere mentioned in the inscriptions; yet it was clearly restored and maintained by Ramses III, and is here included in the precincts of Ramses III's great temple, which stood beside it. Its people were, of course, also included in the 62,626 people of the great temple. Clearly, Ramses III made d The name of Ramses III's Medinet Habu temple; see building inscriptions (§§ 1–20), where a shorter form is also in use.

his temple of Medinet Habu the administrative head of Amon's estate, and counted as belonging to it the property of the Karnak temple, that of the small Medinet Habu temple, and doubtless of others also, like that of Mut, who is mentioned in the headings, but whose fortune is nowhere listed. This fact once established for Thebes, the same may be true of Heliopolis and Memphis; and the vast income of these great sanctuaries, which we may compute from the temple lands, may have been distributed among far more temples than those mentioned in the papyrus. This distribution of income we cannot control (even if it were all counted in each case as income of the chief sanctuary alone), because the income lists evidently contain only a part of the income, as we have already shown; and the outgo covers only the maintenance of feasts, not the support of the great army of priests and officials.

This discussion of the lists might be carried much farther, but doubtless the subject is above sufficiently introduced to make the importance and proper significance of the lists evident.

The historical section at the end furnishes a valuable supplement to the records of Ramses III's wars in his Medinet Habu temple. It is especially instructive, despite its obscurity, in its account of the anarchy preceding the rise of Ramses III's father. This paragraph, with its description of civil war and famine, reads like a chapter from the rule of the Mamlukes in Egypt. The section further furnishes accounts of an Edomite war, a new well in the Ayan desert, expeditions to Punt and the Sinaitic Peninsula,

Certain things consumed by the priests are included in the great Medinet Habu Calendar, but only during feasts, like that of Opet, to the offerings of which is appended a list of the grain, beer, oil, etc., consumed by the priests during the twenty-four days of the feast. Such expenses may therefore be included in the lists of festal offerings in our papyrus, and evidently are so, e.g., in § 238, Pl. 17b.
besides new details regarding the wars already known to us from the Medinet Habu temple. It finally closes with a brief statement of Ramses III's philanthropic measures for his whole realm, followed by a prayer for the prosperity of his son, whom all are exhorted to obey.

I. INTRODUCTION

Pl. 1. Date and Introduction

182. 1Year 32, third month of the third season (eleventh month), sixth day; a under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H.; Son of Re: Ramses (III), Ruler of Heliopolis, L. P. H., beloved of all gods and goddesses; 2king, shining in the White Crown like Osiris; ruler, brightening the Nether World b like Atum; 3ruler of 4— of the great house in the midst of the cemetery, traversing eternity forever as king of the Nether World; King of Upper and Lower Egypt; Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re: Ramses (III), Ruler of Heliopolis, L. P. H., the Great God.

Content and Purpose of the Document

183. 5He tells, in praise, adoration, and laudation, the many benefactions and mighty deeds, which he did as king and as ruler on earth, for:

Gods of Thebes c

1. The house (pr) of his august father, Amon-Re, king of gods, 4Mut, Khonsu, and all the gods of Thebes;

Gods of Heliopolis

2. The house (pr) of his august father, Atum, lord of the Two Lands of Heliopolis; Re-Harakhte; Saosis (Yws- c2 -st), mistress of Hotepet and all the gods of Heliopolis; aAll words in spaced type are in red in the original.

bBecause he is dead, as this and the following phrases show.

cThe following five paragraphs are the heads of the five great sections of the papyrus, II, III, IV, V (VI, a summary, is not noted), and VII.
3. The house of his august father, ḫPtah, the great, South-of-His-Wall, lord of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands;"*a Sekhmet, the great, beloved of Ptah; Nefertem, defender of the Two Lands and all the gods of Memphis;

_All Gods_

4. The august fathers, all the gods and goddesses of South and North;

_Men_

5. As well as the good benefactions [which he did for] the people of the land of Egypt and every land, to unite themb all together; *c in order to inform the fathers, all the gods and goddesses of South and North, and all [foreigners],c all citizens, all ('common') folk, and all people, of the numerous benefactions and many mighty deeds, which he did upon earth as great ruler of Egypt.d

II. THEBAN SECTION

I. INTRODUCTORY VIGNETTE

_Pl. 2. Vignette_

184. Ramses III stands praying before Amon-Re, Mut, and Khonsu. The accompanying notes are:

_Over Amon_

Amon-Re, king of gods, lord of heaven, ruler of Thebes.

*aName of a sacred district in Memphis in which the chief Ptah-temple stood.

bViz., his benefactions, etc., that is, to make a list of them, as contained in this document.

cThis list is almost a repetition of that in 78, 13; hence it probably began, as that does, with foreigners. The whole list would then be: [ḫwy], ḫt, rhyt, hnmmt, and differs from 78, 13, only in the order of ḫt and rhyt, which are there reversed. The exact meaning and relations of these different terms are unknown except of the first, and the above renderings are purely arbitrary. We only know that they are all commonly used, with no obvious distinctions in meaning, for the people of Egypt.

dThis long sentence may be epitomized thus: In the year 32, etc., of Ramses III, deceased (ll. 1, 2), he tells the benefactions and mighty deeds which he did while king for the gods of Thebes, Heliopolis, Memphis, and of South and North, as well as for all men, in order to inform gods and men of these deeds (ll. 3-6). It will be seen that this introduction epitomizes the content of the entire papyrus.
Over Mut

Mut, the great, mistress of Ishru.

Over Khonsu

Khonsu in Thebes, beautiful rest.

Before the King

I tell the prayers, praises, adorations, laudations, mighty deeds and benefactions which I did for thee, in thy presence, O lord of gods.

2. PRAYER TO AMON,\(^a\) AND RECITAL OF THE KING'S BENEFACIONS

Pl. 3. Introduction

185. \(^1\)Praises, prayers, brave deeds and benefactions which he did for the house (\(pr\)) of his august father, Amon-Re, king of gods; Mut, Khonsu, and all the gods of Thebes.

Prayer of Ramses III

186. \(^2\)Said King Ramses III, L. P. H., the Great God, in praising this god, his august father, Amon-Re, king of gods, the primordial, who was at first, \(^3\)the divine god, the self-begetter, who sustains the arm and exalts the etef-crown, maker of what is, creator of what exists, hiding himself from men and gods:

His Decease

187. Give to me thy ears, O lord of gods; \(^4\)hear my prayers which I make to thee. Lo, I come to thee, to Thebes, thy mysterious city. Thou art divine among the gods who are in thy image. Thou hast gone to rest in "Lord-of-Life,"\(^b\) thy glorious seat, \(^5\)before the august front of thy court;\(^c\) (so) I have mingled with the gods, the lords of the nether world, like my father, Osiris, lord of Tazoser. Let my soul (\(b^{2}\)) be like the souls of the gods who rest at thy side \(^6\)in the eternal

---

\(^a\)Although all three of the great gods of Thebes are mentioned in the introduction, the following prayer is really addressed to Amon only. In the other two sections (Heliopolis and Memphis) the same is true; that is, the prayer is actually addressed to the great god, although the other gods are mentioned in the beginning.

horizon. Give breath for my nostrils and water for my soul (b$). Let me eat the oblations, the provisions of thy divine offerings. Make my majesty to be noble, abiding in thy presence like the great gods, the lords of the nether world. May I go in and go out in thy presence as they do. Command thou that my fame be like theirs against my enemies; establish my offerings presented to my $ka, abiding daily unto eternity.

Retrospect

188. I was king upon earth, ruler of the living; thou settest the crown upon my head, as thou didst; I was inducted in peace into the august palace; I sat upon thy throne with joy of heart. Thou it was, who didst establish me upon the throne of my father, as thou didst for Horus on the throne of Osiris. I did not oppress, I did not deprive another of his throne. I did not transgress thy command, which was before me. Thou gavest peace and contentment of heart among my people ($hnmm$t), and every land was in adoration before me. I know of the excellent things which thou didst as king, and I multiplied for thee many benefactions and mighty deeds.

Pl. 4. Medinet Habu Temple

189. I made for thee an august house of millions of years, abiding upon the mountain of "Lord-of-Life," before thee, built of sandstone, gritstone, and black granite; the doors of electrum and copper in beaten work. Its towers were of stone, towering to heaven, adorned and carved with the graver's tool, in the great name of thy majesty. I aI am not sure that this is correct. The difficulty is one of interpretation. He may merely mean: "I did not oppress, I did not plunder another in his place;" as the word "throne" may equally well mean "seat, place," as commonly. The above rendering, however, connects logically with the preceding. "Oppress" (כ$ -ג$ -ק) is Hebrew, $תנ$.

cA general name for the west, which was localized at Medinet Habu; it is opposite Karnak, Amon's great temple, hence "before thee." An inscription in the temple itself places it on the same mountain; Amon speaks of "the great house of Atum, established before me forever, upon the mountain of 'Lord-of-Life'" (Cham-pollion, Notices descriptives, I, 736). On the later name, see Maspero, Struggle of the Nations, 507, n. 3.

built a wall around it, established with labor, having ramps and towers of sandstone. A lake before it, flooded with Nun, planted with trees and vegetation like the Delta.

Temple Endowment and Equipment

190. I filled its treasury with the products of the lands of Egypt: gold, silver, every costly stone by the hundred-thousand. Its granary was overflowing with barley and wheat; (its) lands, its herds, their multitudes were like the sand of the shore. I taxed for it the Southland as well as the Northland. Nubia and Zahi came to it, bearing their impost. It was filled with captives, which thou gavest to me among the Nine Bows, (and with) classes which I trained by the ten-thousand. I fashioned thy great statue resting in its midst; "Amon-Endowed-with-Eternity" was its august name; it was adorned with real costly stone like the horizon. When it appeared, there was rejoicing to see it. I made for it table-vessels, of fine gold; others of silver and copper, without number. I multiplied the divine offerings presented before thee, of bread, wine, beer, and fat geese; numerous oxen, bullocks, calves, cows, white oryxes, and gazelles offered in his slaughter yard.

Accessory Monuments

191. I dragged great monuments like mountains of alabaster and hus stone, sculptured with labor, and resting on the right and the left of its portal, carved with the great name of thy majesty forever;

a These words (אאאא) occur five times together in this papyrus, each time as the accessories of an inclosure wall. The first is the Hebrew שִׁתָּה, and hence here an ascent or ramp; see Bondi, Lehnwörter, 36, 37. The second is perhaps a Hebrew אֶשֶּׁר, as Bondi suggests (ibid., 88), and means inclosed towers or strong closures of the gates and windows.

\(^c \) This is the palace connected with the Medinet Habu temple, of which the so-called "pavilion" formed the monumental entrance. The "pavilion" being of stone, has survived, but the bulk of the building, being of sun-dried brick, has perished. It ran at least as far back on the south side of the temple as the middle of the first court, with which its balcony was connected by a stairway still partially surviving. See Daressy (Recueil, XX, 81–83), who separates the pavilion from the building at its rear, to which the stairway belongs; but it is evident that the pavilion, the temple, and connected buildings formed one whole, designated by the same name; for the pavilion and the temple bear the same name (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, II, 167): "The (h.t)-House-of-Useramern-in-the-House-of-Amon."

\(^d \) This "it" (feminine in Egyptian) refers to the temple (fem.), and not to the palace (masc.).

Small Karnak Temple

195. I made for thee a mysterious horizon in thy city of Thebes over against thy forecourt, O lord of gods, (named): "House (pr)-of-Ramesses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-L.-P.-H.,-in-the-House-of-Amon," abiding like the heavens bearing the sun. I built it, I laid it in sandstone, having great doors of fine gold. I filled its treasury with the things which my hands carried off, to bring them before thee every day.

Southern Karnak Temple

aUsed here by metonymy as often for sanctuary as a whole. This small temple is in front of the great Amon-temple of Karnak, and the later Bubastite extension inclosed it partially within the said temple. It is identified by Ramses III with the great Karnak temple, and bore the same name given above, as is shown by the following inscriptions in the first court of the small Karnak temple (Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 12–14; Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, 57, 1; Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 207, c): "(Ramses III). He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods; making for him the 'House (pr)-of-Ramesses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis-in-the-House-of-Amon,' anew of fine white sandstone, established as an eternal work, wherein Amon appears, to give a multitude — — [10] King Ramses III." On the other side of the court it reads: "Ramses III, maker of the monument, establishing (it) for him that formed him, in the great and splendid seat, on the divine ground before Karnak, illuminating Thebes wherein Amon rests, his heart glad, and his great divine ennead follows him, rejoicing to see the beautiful pure monument of King Ramses III, beloved of Khonsu-Neferhotep." The great Karnak temple bore the same name as this small temple, as is seen by comparing 5, 7 and 6, 3 with above inscriptions in the small temple. The latter was already finished in his sixteenth year, as new offerings are recorded on the wall as founded in Pauni of that year (Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, I, Pl. 40; Champollion, Monuments descriptives, II, 15, 16).

bLit., "made festive."

cSouthern Opet is usually the name for Luxor, but the temple was counted as in Karnak (Yp’t-ys-wd), as its name shows. It stood, however, on the south of the great temple, by the temple of Mut, and hence could be spoken of as in Southern Opet.
 Works in Great Karnak Temple

197. I again established thy monuments in "Victorious Thebes," the place of thy heart's rest, beside thy face (named): "House (pr)-of-Usermare-Meriamon-in-the-House-of-Amon," like the shrine of the All-Lord; built of stone, like a marvel established as an eternal work; the doorways upon them were of granite, doors and doorposts of gold. I supplied it with classes which I trained, bearing offerings by the hundred-thousand.

Monolithic Shrine

198. I made for thee a mysterious shrine in one block of fine granite; the doors upon it were of copper in hammered work, engraved with thy divine name. Thy great image rested in it, like Re in his horizon, established upon his throne unto eternity in thy great and august court.

Cultus Utensils

199. I made for thee a great sacrificial tablet of silver in hammered work, mounted with fine gold, the inlay-figures being of Ketem-gold, bearing statues of the king, L. P. H., of gold in hammered work, an offering-tablet bearing thy divine offerings, offered before thee.

Pl. 6

I made for thee a great vase-stand, for thy forecourt, mounted with fine gold, with inlay of stone; its vases were of gold, containing wine and beer, in order to present them before thee every morning.

---

aThis temple is not said to have been built by him, but "beautified" (smnh, or "established"), which indicates embellishment. As to the name of the great Karnak temple under Ramses III, it must have contained his name, as above. The word "built" (in l. 8) is not finite, but a participle referring to the temple or the embellishments added. The work is also referred to (l. 8) as "them," showing clearly that accessory monuments of some sort are meant. Moreover, the following works are for the Karnak temple, as is shown by 6, 3. Ramses III, however, did some building, though not extensively, in the great Karnak temple.

bA name for the east side, or a part of the east side of Thebes, probably Karnak (see II, 329).

cCf. Inscription of Ineni, l. 1 (II, 45; Recueil, XII, 106).

dThe Hebrew דָּגָן, "gold;" see Dümichen, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1872, 44 f.

eThe gift of a similar stand is recorded in the Khonsu-temple, thus: "I made a great vase-stand of gold for thy oblations" (from a photograph by Borchardt).
Feast of the Appearance

200. *I made for thee a storehouse for the "Feast of the Appearance," with male and female slaves. I supplied them with bread, beer, oxen, fowl, wine, incense, fruit, vegetables, flowers, pure offerings before thee every day, being an increase of the daily offering which was before.

Ornaments of Cultus Statue, Etc.

201. I made for thee a splendid amulet of gold, with inlay; great collars and tassels of Ketem-gold complete, to bind them to thy body, every time thou appearest in thy great and splendid seat in Karnak.

I made for thee a statue of the king, of gold, in hammered work, resting in the place which he knows, in thy august shrine.

Record Tablets

202. I made for thee great tablets of gold, in beaten work, engraved with the great name of thy majesty, bearing my prayers. I made for thee other tablets of silver, in beaten work, engraved with the great name of thy majesty, with the decrees of the house. *I made for thee other tablets of copper in beaten work, of a mixture of six

*dThis word (c nw) is different from the one (c wd) used in the two preceding cases, and was larger. It was upon a c nw that Ramses II's treaty of peace with the Hittites was engraved. The golden tablets are not mentioned in the lists later on, but the silver tablets are mentioned (13b, 13, 14), and their weights given, showing that an c wd weighed about 19½ deben, while an c nw was over 143½ deben.

(parts), of the color of gold, engraved and carved with the graver's tool with the great name of thy majesty, with the house-regulations of the temples; likewise the many praises and adorations which I made for thy name. Thy heart was glad at hearing them, O lord of gods.

_Cultus Sieve_

203. I made for thee a great vase of pure silver, its rim of gold, engraved with thy name. A sieve was upon it of beaten work, of pure silver, a great sifting-vessel of silver, having a sieve and feet.

_Golden Statues_

204. I wrought upon the portable images of Mut and Khonsu, fashioned and made anew in the gold-houses, made of fine gold in thick overlay, with inlay of every costly stone which Ptah made, having collars before and behind, and tassels of Ketem-gold. They rest with heart satisfied at the mighty deeds which I did for them.

_Pl. 7. Stele_

205. I made for thee great stelae for thy portal, overlaid with fine gold, with inlay-figures of Ketem-gold; large bases were under them, overlaid with silver, bearing inlay-figures in gold, to the pavement line.

_Grain_

206. I gave to thee ten ten-thousands of measures of grain, to provision thy divine offerings of every day, to convey them to Thebes every year, in order to multiply thy granaries with barley and wheat.

_Foreign Revenues_

207. I brought to thee the captives of the Nine Bows, the gifts of the lands and countries for thy court. I made the road to Thebes like a foot to lead before thee, bearing much provision.

*bThe weight of these sieve-vases, etc., is given in 13b, 6–8 (§ 231).

cLit., "row them."

eB 3 3 3 = a Semitic Taw, with the connected idea of kneeling in homage (Bondi, Lehnewörter, 41, 42).

f"Lead" lacks an object, and the whole passage is obscure.
Periodic Offerings

208. I founded for thee oblations at the feasts of the beginnings of the seasons, to make offering before thee at thy every appearance. They were supplied with bread, beer, oxen, fowl, wine, incense, and fruit without number. They were levied anew upon the princes and inspectors as an increase of all the benefactions which I did for thy ka.

Sacred Barge

209. I hewed for thee thy august ship "Userhet" of 130 cubits (length) upon the river, of great cedars of the (royal) domain, of remarkable size, overlaid with fine gold to the water line, like the barge of the Sun, when he comes from the east, and everyone lives at the sight of him. A great shrine was in the midst of it, of fine gold, with inlay of every costly stone like a palace; rams' heads of gold from front to rear, fitted with uraeus-serpents wearing etef-crowns.

Products of Punt

210. I led to thee Punt with myrrh, in order to encircle thy house every morning, I planted incense sycamores in thy court; they had not seen (it) before since the time of the god.

Mediterranean Fleet

211. I made for thee transports, galleys, and barges, with archers equipped with their arms, upon the sea. I gave to them captains of archers and captains of galleys, manned with numerous crews, without number, in order to transport the products of the land of Zahi (D - h) and the countries of the ends of the earth to thy great treasuries in "Victorious Thebes."c

Cattle and Fowl

212. I made for thee herds in the South and North containing large cattle, fowl, and small cattle by the hundred-thousand, having overseers of cattle, scribes, overseers of the horns, a inspectors, and numerous shepherds in charge b of them; having cattle-fodder; in order to offer them to thy ka at all thy feasts, that thy heart may be satisfied with them, O ruler of gods.

Vineyards, Trees, Etc.

213. I made for thee wine-gardens in the Southern Oasis, and the Northern Oasis likewise without number; others in the South with numerous lists; they were multiplied in the Northland by the hundred-thousand. I manned them with gardeners from the captives of the countries; having lakes of my digging, supplied with lotus flowers, and with shedeh (sdx) c and wine like drawing water, d in order to present them before thee in “Victorious Thebes.” I planted thy city, Thebes, with trees, vegetations, isi-plants, and menhet flowers for thy nostrils.

Khonsu-Temple

214. I built a house e for thy son, Khonsu in Thebes, of good sandstone, red gritstone, and black stone (granite). I overlaid its doorposts and doors with gold, (with) inlay-figures of electrum, like the Pl. 8 horizon of heaven. I worked upon thy f statues in the gold-houses, with every splendid costly stone which my hands brought.

But Brugsch does not give the name of the king, and the dedication may belong to Ramses IV, who also built in this hall.

Its Vineyard and Olive Garden

216. I made for it Kanekeme, e inundated like the Two Lands, in the great olive-lands; bearing vines; surrounded by a wall around them by the iter; f planted with great trees in all their many paths, wherein was oil more than the sand of the shore; in order to bring them to thy ka, to "Victorious Thebes;" wine like drawing water without measure, to present them before thee as a daily offering. g I built for thee thy temple in the midst of its ground, h established with labor, excellent in stone of Ayan ( c "yn? ). e Name of an important vineyard of Amon in the Delta; it existed in the days of Ramses II, from whose cellars at the Ramesseum many sherds from broken wine-jars have been found, bearing the name of this vineyard (Wiedemann, Zeit-schrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1883, 33 ff.; Spiegelberg, Ostraca, pls. XIX-XXXIV).

heaven, its herds were multiplied more than the sand; cattle yards, offered to his ka, (as) divine offerings daily, full and pure before him; fattening-houses containing fat geese; poultry yards containing wild fowl; gardens with wine, provided with their fruit, vegetables and all kinds of flowers.

Temple in Nubia

Pl. 9. Temple in Zahi

219. I built for thee a mysterious house in the land of Zahi (D^3-h^3), like the horizon of heaven which is in the sky, (named): "The-House-(h^t)-of-Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-L.-P.-H.,-in-Pekanan," as the property of thy name. I fashioned thy great statue resting in the midst of it (named): "Amon-of-Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-L.-P.-H." The Asiatics of Retenu (Rtnw) came to it, bearing their tribute before it, for it was divine.

Miscellaneous

220. I brought the earth, united for thee, bearing their imposts, to convey them to Thebes, thy mysterious city. I made for thee statues in the districts of Egypt; they were for thee (land?) the gods who preserve this land. I built for them temples, gardens containing their groves, lands, small cattle, large cattle, many slaves; they are thine forever, thine eye is upon them, thou art their protector unto eternity. I wrought upon thy great and grand statues which are in their districts in the lands of Egypt. I restored their temples which were in ruin. I multiplied the divine offerings presented to their ka's as an increase of the daily offerings which were formerly.

Lists

221. See, I have listed all that I did before thee, O my august, divine father, lord of gods, that men and gods may know of my benefactions, which I did for thee in might, while I was upon earth.

a. From here to the end of the section the enumeration is simply a list without syntactical connection with the preceding.

Southern Karnak Temple

aThe list now follows, and the first series of items is a statement of the numbers of people ("heads") attached to the various temples, to herds, etc. This list of people runs to 11, 4.

bThis name of the Medinet Habu temple is often found in the temple itself. Its full form there is: "House-of-Usermare-Meriamon-Possessed-of-Eternity-in-the-House-of-Amon-on-the-West-of-Thebes" (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 173); but "on-the-West-of-Thebes" is sometimes omitted (ibid., 179 and 185), as well as "Possessed-of-Eternity" (ibid., 182, 183, 184, 185).
Five Herds of the Theban Temples

aThe following five herds, as the names show, belonged one to each of the preceding four temples, and the Khonsu-temple, as is shown by 12a, 1-4, where they follow these five temples in a group.

bThis herd still existed under Ramses IV; see Hammamat Inscription, l. 14 (§ 466).

cThese are not "heads" of cattle, but the people in charge of the herd.

dThis canal on which Ramses III defeated the Meshwesh in the year 11, can only have been in the western Delta. That it was so located is shown by its occurrence in a list of Delta localities just after Busiris, "the western river, the great river (Canopic branch), the 'Water of Re'" (Golénischeff Papyrus, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 40, 105). It is called the "western canal" in § 340 (see also § 370). It was the canal passing out of the Fayûm northward as the continuation of the Bahr Yusuf. It is mentioned in Saitic times on a stela in Berlin (No. 15393), recording the gift of a building by Apries (seventeenth year), located "on the west of the canal named 'North,' which is between the highlands and Memphis." In Ptolemaic times it connected Heracleopolis with Alexandria (see § 831, note).

eThe rest of the name is uncertain; possibly: "Made: (=called) 'the-People-Are-a-Great-Nile(?).""

c It is difficult to determine the exact nature of these statues; they appear here in the god’s estate; the materials of which they were made (?) appear independently following the king’s gifts (21b, 11-16); and finally in the general summary (68a, 3-688, 3) they are again included in the sacred estates. Erman suggests votive statues of the god donated by the king’s subjects.

6. GRAIN FOR THE OLD FEASTS

236. 13 Clean grain for the divine offerings of the feasts of heaven, a and the feasts of the first of the seasons, which King Usermare-Meriamon L. P. H., the Great God, founded for 14 his father, Amon-Re, king of gods, Mut, Khonsu, and all the gods of Thebes, as an increase of the divine offerings, b as an increase of the daily offerings, b in order to multiply that which was before, 15 from the year 1 to the year 31, making 31 years: 2,981,674 c 16-fold heket.

a The offerings for these and the following feasts of 6 and 7 are recorded likewise in the Great Calendar of Medinet Habu (§§ 139-45), from which the scribe could copy them, though with some changes. Thus for twenty-one years the Coronation feast was only one day long, as shown in the calendar (made in year 12), but in year 22 it was made 20 days long. Similarly in year 12 the calendar gives the Feast of Opet as 24 days long, but our papyrus treats it as 27 days long for 31 years! The scribe evidently reckoned with these changes, for his numbers are even multiples of 31, as so commonly with the other temples.

c This amounts to 6,360,908 bushels, or 205,190 bushels annually.

¹This is the coronation day of Ramses III, the twenty-sixth of Pakhons, being so recorded in the festival calendar on the south wall of the Medinet Habu temple (Greene, Fouillesy Pl. IV, ll. 9 and 10, twice): "The first month of the third season, day 26, the day of the royal coronation (h s t n y) of King Ramses III." (See also § 153.) This feast was at first only one day long, but in the year 22 it was made twenty days long.

²As this feast fell within the 40 days during which Ramses III survived in his thirty-second year, it was, therefore, celebrated in that year also; but none of the old feasts, as he did not survive to celebrate them in the thirty-second year.

³This feast was not 27 days long, throughout the reign, but only 24 at first (see Breasted, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 37, 126, where this passage in Harris was not yet noted). Under Thutmose III it lasted only 11 days (ibid.); it was an old feast, but because Ramses III lengthened it he includes it among feasts founded by himself. As he lengthened it from 24 to 27 days, it is not likely that the lengthening from 11 to 24 days was also due to him. If lengthened further in later times, it was prolonged at the end, for in the Twenty-first Dynasty it still began on the nineteenth. (Inscriptions historiques de Pinodjem, l. 13, below.)

⁴The numeral must refer to the separate pieces.

\(^a\) Connected by Bondi (\(Lehnwörter\), 62 and 86), with \(חניך\), "pan."

\(^b\) Or: "baskets" or "vessels."

\(^c\) These phrases evidently apply only to the loaves, in any case "for eating" occurs often with loaves alone; see 17b, l. 8, and the lists in Spiegelberg's "Ge- schäftsjournal" (\(Recueil\), 17, 143 f.).

\(^d\) Probably these terms indicate that these things were eaten at the feast. Thus in l. 3, each vessel or vase of food was eaten by a noble; the more plentiful supplies that follow were then eaten by the people.

\(^e\) See Piehl, \(Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache\), 1886, 80 ff.

\(^f\) The real total is 2,806,407, not counting 25,710 "measures," etc. (17a, 14-17b, 4). Even including the fine bread of 17a, ll. 7-10, which make 4,051 loaves, the scribe is still nearly 34,000 in excess of the real sum. The difference must lie in the "measures," etc. (17a, 14-17b, 4).

246. ¹How happy is he who depends upon thee! O god, Amon, Bull of his mother, ruler of Thebes. Grant thou that I may arrive in safety, landing in peace, ²and resting in Tazoser like the gods. May I mingle with the excellent souls of Manu, who see thy radiance at early morning. ³Hear my petition! O my father, my lord, I am alone among the gods who are at thy side. Crown my son as king upon the throne of Atum, establish him ⁴as mighty Bull, lord, L. P. H., of the two shores, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Setepnamon, L. P. H.: Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses (IV)-Hekma-Meriamon, L. P. H., emanation ⁵that came forth from thy limbs. Thou art the one who didst designate him to be king, while he was a youth. Appoint thou him to be ruler, L. P. H., of the Two Lands over the people. Give to him a reign of millions of years, ⁶his every limb being whole, in prosperity and health. Place thy crown upon his head, seated on thy throne; and may the serpent-goddess ⁷alight upon his brows. Make him divine ⁸more than any king, and great like thy reverence, as lord of the Nine Bows. Make his body to flourish and be youthful daily, while thou art a shield behind him ⁹for every day. Put his sword and his war-mace over the heads of the Bedwin (St tyw); may they fall down in fear of him like Baal. Extend for him the boundaries as far as he desires; ⁹may the lands and countries fear in terror of him. Grant for him that Egypt may rejoice,

¹This numbering does not conform with the scheme in the Heliopolitan section, where No. 8 is devoted to the offerings to the Nile-god, which were not given at Thebes. This is another evidence of the late origin of Theban power. The official offerings of the king to the Nile became a fixed custom in the days when Heliopolis was the seat of power and Thebes was an obscure village of Upper Egypt. The offerings to the Nile-god at Memphis were not old, but were founded by Ramses III in his twenty-ninth year.

for thy ka, forever and ever. The things that thou ordainest, they come to pass, abiding and established; the things that thou sayest, they endure like gritstone. Thou didst adjudge to me a reign of 200 years; establish them for my son who is (still) upon earth; make his life longer than (that of) any king, in order to repay the benefactions which I have done for thy ka. Let him be king by reason of thy command; even thine, who crownest him; let him not reverse that which thou hast done, O lord of gods. III. HELIOPOLITAN SECTION

1. INTRODUCTORY VIGNETTE

Pl. 24. Vignette

247. Ramses III stands praying before Harakhte, Atum, Saosis, and Hathor. The accompanying notes are:

Over Harakhte

Harakhte, great god, lord of heaven.

Over Atum

Atum, lord of the Two Lands of Heliopolis.

---

*a*This must refer to some priestly oracle, attributed to Amon, in which he had promised Ramses III a reign of 200 years. The deceased king prays for the fulfilment of this promise to his son.
Over Saosis
Saosis, mistress of Heliopolis.

Over Hathor
Hathor, mistress of Hetep (Htp).

Before the King
I tell the prayers, praises, adorations, and laudations, mighty deeds, benefactions, which I did for thee, in thy presence, O great prince.

2. PRAYER TO RE AND RECITAL OF THE KING'S BENEFACIONS

Pl. 25. Introduction

248. The prayers, praises, laudations, mighty deeds, and benefactions which King Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H., the Great God, did for his father, Atum, lord of the Two Lands of Heliopolis, Re-Harakhte, Saosis, the mistress of Hetep (Hathor), and all the gods of Heliopolis.

Prayer

249. Said the King Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H., the Great God, in praising his father, this august god, Atum, lord of the Two Lands of Heliopolis, Re-Harakhte:

Praise to thee, Re-Atum, All-lord, creator of that which is, rising in heaven, illuminating this land with his rays. The hidden ones, dwelling in the West, turn their faces to thee; they rejoice to behold thy beauty. All people jubilate at the sight of thee. Thou it is who madest heaven and earth; and thou didst appoint me to be king over the Two Lands, and Ruler, L. P. H., on thy great throne. Thou didst assign to me all the lands as far as the circuit of the sun. They feared, and fell down to my name, as they do to thy name. I was diligent in pursuit of benefactions and numerous great deeds for thy house kings. I made great designs for thy temple; I caused them to rest in the shrines of thy temple; I made the regulations for the priests in the house of Re. I made him more divine than formerly, I cleansed Heliopolis for his divine ennead. I built his temples, which were gone to ruin, I fashioned their gods in their mysterious forms of gold, silver, and every costly stone, as everlasting works.

Sanctuary in the Heliopolis Temple

251. I made for thee an august house in the midst of thy temple, like the heavens, abiding and bearing the sun, before thee, founded with gritstone, laid with limestone, established with good work, enduring in thy name. It is the great and mysterious horizon of Har-akhte, the “Great Seat” is of gold, the double doors of Ketem-gold, while thy mother rests in the midst of it, rejoicing and satisfied at seeing it. I equipped it with the classes which I trained, personal property, lands, and herds without number.

Colossi in the Heliopolis Temple

252. I made for thee great monuments in the house of Re, of gritstone, which Atum shaped into great images, sculptured with toil, dragged up, and resting in their places forever and ever, in thy great, august and lovely forecourt, carved with thy divine name like the heavens.

Amulets for the Statue of Re

253. I made for thee august amulets of fine gold, with inlay of real lapis lazuli and real malachite. I attached them to thy body in the great house of thy protection and thy magnificence, in thy splendid seat, that they might protect the august limbs as amulets for thy great, grand and lovely form.

aThe word (rhr.) is plural, as shown by the possessive article; it must indicate divine statues, and literally translated means “that which he knows,” perhaps an esoteric priestly term for statue. Compare a similar expression in 29, 4.

b“Classes” (dbt), a word later meaning “generations,” and here referring to the successive “classes” into which the youth were divided as they became of age liable to conscription for enforced service. See 76, 5, note, § 402.
Granite Shrine

254. I made for thee a mysterious shrine of granite, wherein Atum and Tafnut rest. The double doors upon it were of copper, mounted with gold, engraved with the great name of thy majesty, forever and ever.

Stelae with Temple Regulations

255. I made for thee great decrees for the administration of thy temple, recorded in the hall of writings of Egypt; stelae were made, with outlined figures, carved with the graver's tool, abiding for thee forever, nor is there destruction for them.

Temple Balances

256. I made for thee splendid balances of electrum; the like of which had not been made since the time of the god. Thoth sat upon it as guardian of the balances, being a great and august ape of gold in beaten work. Thou weighest therein before thee, O my father, Re, when thou measurest of gold and silver by the hundred-thousands, brought as tribute before thee from their coffers, and given to thy august treasury in the house of Atum. I founded for it daily divine offerings, in order to supply its altar at early morning.

Pl. 27

Storehouses for Feasts

257. I made for thee a storehouse for the "Feast of the Appearance," being built upon pure ground, on the land of Heliopolis, divine in workmanship. I filled it with beautiful slaves of the choicest, and clean grain by the ten-thousand, in order to supply them.

Storehouse for Temple Income

258. I made for thee a pure storehouse containing divine offerings more than were before me, since (former) kings. I equipped it with everything, it suffered no lack; in order to supply thy offerings at early morning.

*The decrees were drawn with the pen upon stone stelae, and then cut into the stone.

Special Oblation-Storehouse

259. I made an oblation-storehouse for thy forecourt, filled with divine offerings, and plentiful food, and containing great oblations of gold and silver, in order to offer them to thy ka, O lord of gods. I equipped them, I completed them with barley and wheat, filled with the spoil which I carried away from the Nine Bows. They were for thy ka, O sole lord, maker of heaven and earth, that the feasts of the first of the seasons might be doubled before thee.

Cattle and Poultry Yards

260. I made thee cattle yards, equipped, containing bulls, and bullocks; fattening-houses anew, containing fat geese.

Cleansing of Sacred Lakes

261. I cleansed the sacred lakes of thy house, I removed all the filth that was in them, which had been the fashion of them formerly since the earth began. Thy divine ennead was satisfied in heart and rejoiced over them.

Vineyards and Shedeh Gardens

262. I gave shedeh and wine as daily offerings, in order to present the land of Heliopolis in thy splendid and mysterious seat; groves, and verdure, with their plants anew. The lords of the land of life are satisfied therewith. I made for thee great gardens, equipped, containing their groves, bearing shedeh and wine in the great house of Atum; and the divine ennead of Heliopolis rejoice in feasts to satisfy thy beauty daily.

Olive-Lands

263. I made for thee olive-lands in thy city of Heliopolis, I equipped them with gardeners and numerous people, to make pure oil, the best of Egypt, in order to light the flame in thy august house.

---

a Text has "goddesses" (ntr'y't), which would read "lakes of the goddesses of thy house," which is probably an error for (ntr'y) "sacred, divine."

b Lit., "send up."
Groves and Flower Gardens

264. 11I made for thee groves and arbors, a containing date trees; lakes supplied with lotus flowers, papyrus flowers, isi flowers, the flowers of every land, dedmet flowers, myrrh, and sweet and fragrant woods for thy beautiful face.

New Temple Domains

265. 12I made for thee domains anew, with pure barley; I doubled their lands which had been waste, in order to double the divine offerings in numerous lists, for thy great, august and lovely name. 13I made for thee numerous lands in the New Isles, in the southern and northern districts, by the ten-thousand. There were made for them stelae b engraved with thy name, abiding for thee, bearing decrees forever.

14I made for thee a poultry yard c containing wild fowl; I conducted d the pools to thy city, Heliopolis, in order to present them to thy ka, O my father, conducted to thee and to thy divine ennead which follows thee.

Officials, Servants, and Slaves

266. 3I appointed for thee archers and collectors of honey, bearing incense to deliver e their yearly impost into thy august treasury. 4I appointed for thee hunting archers to capture white oryxes, in order to offer them to thy ka at all thy feasts. 5I made for thee boatmen and tax-officials (m-$\mathbf{3}^2$-bwy) f of the people, whom I created to collect the impost of the Two Lands, the taxes and the exactions, in order to transport them to thy treasury in the house of Re, in order to double thy divine offerings more than a million times. 6I appointed slaves as watchmen of thy harbor, in order to watch the harbor of the Heliopolitan canal in thy splendid place. 7I made door-keepers of the slaves, manned with people, in order to watch and protect thy court. I made slaves as watchmen of the canal-administration, and the watchmen of the pure barley, for thee likewise.

Granaries Restored

267. I made for thee granaries filled with grain, which had begun to fall to waste, and they became millions.

Golden Statues

268. I made for thee statues of gold in beaten work, kneeling upon the ground before thee, bearing divine offerings. I made others likewise, of pure silver, in order to satisfy thy two serpent-goddesses at every time.

Vessels of the Temple Cult

269. I made a great vase-stand in thy forecourt, bearing vases of gold and silver, containing shedeh, supplied with divine offerings in numerous lists, in order to offer to thy ka, O great prince. I made for thee table-vessels without number, of silver and gold with inlay, engraved with thy name; a censer, nemset (nms·t)-vases, great denya (dny)-vases, enkhy (ή nhy)-vases, hesy (hsywt)-vases, and numerous bowls (ή wy), in order to convey them into thy presence with libations of wine; thy divine ennead was satisfied in heart and rejoiced over them.

Pl. 29. Temple-Ships

270. I made for thee transports, and galleys manned with people, in order to transport the products of God's-Land to thy treasury and thy storehouse.

Restoration of Horus-Chapel and its Grove

271. I restored the "House-of-Horus-Presider-over-Temples;" I built his walls, which were in ruins. I made to grow the august grove, which was in its midst; I planted it with papyrus in the midst of the Delta marshes, (though) it had begun to decay formerly.

aSuch a statue is depicted in the Medinet Habu treasury (Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 30), and described in § 26, note.

bLit., "to rest."
148  TWENTIETH DYNASTY: RAMSES III

Temple Grove

272. I made to grow the pure grove of thy temple, I put it in its accustomed condition when it had gone to waste; I equipped it with gardeners to cultivate it, to make libations of shedeh in the "Place-Which-He-Knows."a

I made for thee great festival oblations for thy court, as an increase of that which was done formerly since (former) kings, supplied with bulls, bullocks, mountain cattle,b oil, incense, honey, "shedeh, wine, gold, silver, royal linen, numerous garments, plants, and all flowers for thy beautiful face.

Offerings in Hapi Temple

273. I made for thee great festival oblations in the house of Hapi, and all the gods of Khareha (Hr. h) were in festivity.

Temple of Re North of Heliopolis

Temple Herds

275. I made for thee a herd (called): "Doer-of-Benefactions," supplied with plentiful cattle without number, in order to present them to thy ka at all thy feasts. I doubled those who belonged to them in classes,d belonging to thy name. I made for thee another herd for thy august house, in order to supply thy temple with plentiful provisions (called): "Herd-of-Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-L.-P.-H.,-Doubling-Offerings-in-the-House-of-Re." I filled it with cattle, and herdmen likewise. They shall not pass away, forever, belonging to thy ka.

aA name for the place of the cultus. See also p. 143, n. a. bSmall cattle, goats, and the like.
cThis is probably the beautiful incrusted temple at Tell-el-Yehudiyyeh.
dSee 26, 2, note.
Restorations

276. "I made thee works, with workmen, builders, and stoncutters, in order to fashion thy house, in order to restore thy house.

Temple of Re

Pl. 30. New Saosis Temple

278. I made for thee an august house, west of the Heliopolitan canal, for thy mother, Saosis (Wus-3-s), mistress of Heliopolis.

Settlement of Foreign Captives

279. I made for thee a pure settlement of numerous classes; whose sons I brought into thy house (called): "Taking-of-the-Foreigners."

Sacred Bulls

30. I raised the black cattle and great bulls, purified from every evil in their fields.

Barge of Saosis

40. I hewed a large barge for thy great daughter, Saosis, mistress of Hetep (called): "Sep-in-Heliopolis;" of cedars of the best of the royal domain, which were covered with gold like the barge of millions of years.

Lists

279. Behold, the list of them is before thee, O my father, my lord, in order to inform thy divine ennead of my benefactions.

a This is evidently the chief temple at Heliopolis, to which Ramses III could have done no more than make some additions or restorations. It is probably the second in the list, 31, 4; as the first (31, 3) is called a H.t, and this temple is a Pr.

b See 26, 2, note.

c See Spiegelberg, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1891, 81, 82.

6. GRAIN FOR THE OLD FEASTS

The Old Feasts

289. Cleaning grain of the divine offerings, of the feasts of heaven and the feasts of the beginnings of the seasons, which King Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H., the Great God, founded for his august father, Atum, lord of the Two Lands of Heliopolis, Re-Harakhte, being an increase of the divine offerings, and an increase of the daily offerings, in order to double that which was before me, L. P. H., from the year 1 to the year 31, making 31 years: 16-fold heket, 1,097,624.

7. OFFERINGS FOR NEW FEASTS FOUNDED BY RAMSES III

290. Oblations of the festival offerings which King Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H., the Great God, founded for this house, as an increase of the festival offerings of former time, year by year, from the year 9 to the year 31, making 23 years:

The semiannual feast of the Nile-god at Silsileh and recorded the fact, together with a fine hymn to the god, on the rocks at Silsileh (Stern, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1873, 129–35). These were renewed by Mernepthah, and again by Ramses III, both of whom had duplicates of Ramses II's stela carved beside it. The "Books" were thrown into the stream, and doubtless also the offerings themselves, of which the "Books" contained the lists. Ramses III's stela is dated in Phamenoth of the sixth year, and, like Ramses II, he celebrated the two feasts on the fifteenth of Thoth and the fifteenth of Epiphi (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 218, d, l. 15).

I am unable to explain this addition: "making 31 years," unless it is a dittography from the end of the l. 4. Evidently the 43 years is a total of annual offerings obtained by adding 31 years of old offerings and 17 years of Ramses' newly founded offerings, for the 272 books of l. 6 are exactly divisible by 17 (sixteen times). Hence the list beginning l. 6 refers to the 17 years of Ramses' new foundation, as all such lists in this papyrus refer to his new foundations, e. g., 34b, 10 ff. The items of the list following (37b, 7, to 41b, 6) are almost all even multiples of 17.

The scribe has omitted the number of hins which these jars make.

receive offerings, which come forth before thee; that I may smell incense and myrrh like thy divine ennead. Grant that thy radiance may bathe my head daily; that my soul may live, that he may behold thee at early morning. Do thou the desire of my heart, O august father, for I was a benefactor of thy ka, while I was upon earth. Hear my petition, do that which I say, which gods as well as men announce to thee. Establish my son to be king, as lord of the Two Regions, that he may rule the Two Lands, like thee, as sovereign, L. P. H., in Egypt: Usermare-Setepnamon, L. P. H., whom thou hast chosen for thyself, to be heir, to magnify thy name. Set the white crown and the divine double crown upon his head, like as thou wert crowned upon earth, as Horus, wearer of the double diadem. Make sound his every limb, make to flourish his bones and his eyes, flourishing in beholding the love of millions. Make his duration upon earth like the Pole Star; ready, like a mighty Bull, seizing the Two Lands. Give to him the Nine Bows, united under his two feet, saluting his name, while his sword is over them. Thou art the one who createdst him, when he was a child; thou didst appoint him to be hereditary prince upon the double throne of Keb; thou didst say: "Let him become king upon the throne of him who begat him." The things which thou ordainest, they come to pass, abiding, and established. Give to him a great and prolonged reign, and jubilees great and mighty, like Tatenen; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Setepnamon, L. P. H.; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses (IV)-Hekma-Meriamon, L. P. H.

Before the King
I tell the prayers, praises, adorations, laudations, mighty deeds, and benefactions, which I did for thee in thy presence, O Resi-inebef.a

2. PRAYER TO PTAH AND RECITAL OF THE KING’S BENEFICATIONS

Pl. 44. Introduction

306. The prayers, praises, adorations, laudations, mighty deeds and benefactions, which King Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H., the Great God, did for his father, Ptah, the great, "South-of-His-Wall," lord of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands;" Sekhmet, the great, beloved of Ptah; Nefertem, protector of the Two Lands; and all the gods of Memphis.

Prayer of Ramses III

307. Said King Usermare-Meriamon, the Great God, to his father, this august god, Ptah, the great, "South-of-His-Wall," lord of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands," Tatenen, father of the gods, lofty-plumed, ready-horned, beautiful-faced, upon the great throne:

Praise of Ptah

308. "Hail to thee! Great art thou, revered art thou, O Tatenen, father of the gods, great god of the first time, former of men, maker of gods, beginning that became the first primeval being, after whom happened all that came to pass, who made heaven after the conception of his mind, who suspended it by the elevation of the atmosphere,c bOr: "by."

cšwt. It has the determinative of "heaven" (Piehl gives "ciel"), but the context demands "air or atmosphere," and I render it so, by connecting it with šw, the air-god, who according to the myth crept between heaven and earth, separated them, and lifted the heavens.
who founded the earth by that which he himself did, who surrounded it with Nun, a and the sea; who made the nether world, who satisfied the dead, and caused the sun to come to prosper them, 6as ruler of eternity, lord of everlastingness; lord of life, who fills the throat and gives breath to every nostril; who preserves alive all men by his sustenance. Lifetime, destiny and bringing up are under his authority, men live by that which comes out of his mouth; maker of 7offerings for all the gods, in his form as Nun, the great; lord of eternity, everlastingness is under his authority; breath of life for all people; leading the king to his great throne in his name: King of the Two Lands. I am thy son whom thou hast installed as king 8in the place of my father in peace. I follow thee, thy plans are before me.

The King's Decease

309. Thou didst multiply good things for me, while I was upon earth, thou hast led me to rest by thy side in the western heavens like all the mysterious gods of the Nether World, and I am associated 9with thy divine ennead in thy mysterious seat, like Apis, thy august son, who is by thy side. Grant that I may eat foodb of thy divine offerings, of bread, incense, beer, shedeh, and wine. Grant that 1I may live again in Tazoser, seeing thee every day like thy divine ennead.

The King's Benefactions

310. While I was ruler, L. P. H., upon earth as lord of Egypt, did I not incline my heart mightily to thee, 2in order to seek all benefactions for thy august house, in order to present them before thee in thy city of Memphis?

New Ptah-Temple

A mortuary temple of Ramses III at Memphis called: "House-of-Ramses,-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-of-the-Temple-of-Memphis," in Ptolemaic times (British Museum Stela, Young, Hieroglyphics, 77, 78; Brugsch, Thesaurus, 908; the same temple on Berlin sarcophagus, No. 18, ibid., 910). Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-L.-P.-H.,-in-the-House-of-Ptah," in the "great and mysterious court of "Him-Who-is-South-of-His-Wall," a founded in granite, laid in limestone. Its great doorposts bore lintels of Elephantine granite; the doors upon it were of copper in a mixture of six (parts). The great doorways were of gold, with inlay of stone; the bolts of black copper, overlaid with gold, bearing figures of Ketem-gold, with gold in inlay. Its monuments were sculptured and established with labor. Its towers were of stone, approaching heaven. Its "Great Seat" was enlarged like a "Great House," having a door of gold like the double doors of heaven.

Divine Image

312. I wrought upon thy image, resting in its shrine, in gold, silver, and real, costly stone, established with labor.

Endowment

313. I equipped it with serf-laborers in numerous lists, having lands and herds in South and North.

Pl. 46

Its storehouses were overflowing with numerous possessions, naval archers, collectors of honey, delivering incense and delivering silver, merchants without number, deliveries of clean grain by the ten-thousand; numerous gardens, plentiful in shede and wine; cattle yards, bulls, bullocks, and fattening-houses; the products of Egypt, God's-Land, Syria and Kush. I made them more numerous than the sand, in its august storehouse, the magazine containing divine offerings, supplied with food, without lack in any of its places. They were for thy ka, O sole lord, maker of what is, Ptah, "South-of-His-Wall," ruler of eternity. I gave to thee 20,000 16-fold heket of grain, to convey them to thy house each year, in order to provision thy temple with divine offerings, in addition to the daily offerings which were before me.

Older Ptah-Temple

314. I restored the house of Ptah, thy great seat, I caused it to be like the horizon, wherein Re is. I filled its storehouses with numerous possessions. I loaded its granaries with barley and spelt.

Cultus Image and its Portable Shrine

315. I made a design for thy processional image, in the gold-house anew, of thy temple, wrought of gold, native silver, real lapis lazuli, malachite, and every splendid costly stone. I made its august shrine like the horizon of heaven, in thy barque in the midst of it, resting upon it. I set up its great poles, overlaid with fine gold, engraved with thy name. When thou appearest with glad heart in Ineb-Sebek (Ynb-Sbk) in thy great and mysterious form of "Him-Who-is-South-of-His-Wall (Ptah)," thou fillest thy city of Memphis with the radiance of thy limbs, and the people rejoice to see thy beauty.

Restoration of Hatkeptah

316. I cleansed Hatkeptah, thy splendid seat; I built its temples, which had gone to ruin; I fashioned its gods in their august forms, of gold, silver, every costly stone in the gold-houses.

Silver Tablets

317. I made for thee great tablets of silver in hammered work, engraved and carved with the graver’s tool, in the great name of thy majesty, with the adorations and prayers which I offered before thee, and bearing the decrees for the administration of thy house forever.

---
aAdjective, referring to the image.
bThe shrine stood in the center of the model of a Nile boat, and the whole was borne on poles, supported on the shoulders of the priests.
cLit., "Wall-of-Sebek," a sanctuary in Memphis, whence the god is carried in the shrine, amid rejoicing multitudes.
dLit., "House-of-the-Ka-of-Ptah," an ancient name of the Ptah-temple of Memphis, frequently also applied to the city itself.
Bronze Tablets

318. 4I made for thee two tablets of a mixture of six (parts²), a being of the color of fine mountain gold, engraved and adorned with thy name, carved with the graver's tool, with the excellent praises which I offered to thy ka.

Amulets

319. 5I made for thee august amulets for thy body, of fine Ketem-gold, and of silver, in beaten work, in raised work with inlay of real lapis lazuli, in order to put them upon thy limbs in thy "Great Seat," and all the gods of the house of Ptah were contented therewith.

Monolithic Shrine

320. I made for thee a mysterious shrine of Elephantine granite, established with work forever, of a single block, having double doors of bronze, of a mixture of six (parts¹), a engraved with thy august name, forever. 7Ptah, Sekhmet, and Nefertem rest in it, while statues b of the king are by their side, to present offerings before them. I founded for them divine offerings presented before them, enduring for thee forever, before thy beautiful face.

Temple Regulations

321. 8I made for thee great decrees with secret words, recorded in the hall of writings of Egypt, made into stelae of stone engraved with the graver's tool, for the administration of thy august house, forever; and the administration of thy pure settlement of women. I brought their children who were forsaken, being people of the serf-laborers, (fin¹) the hands of others. I put them for thee into the offices in the house of Ptah, and there were made for them decrees forever.

Storehouses for the Feasts

322. 10I made for thee storehouses for the "Feasts of the Appearance" in thy divine house. They were built upon the (temple) soil, and established with labor. I filled them with slaves whom I had carried off as captives, to serve for thy divine offerings, full and pure, in order to provision the house of Ptah with food and provisions, in order to double that which was before thee, O Resi-inbef (Ptah); and thy divine ennead was glad of heart, and rejoiced over them.

Pl. 48. Cattle and Poultry Yards

323. I made for thee cattle yards, filled with bulls and bullocks; fattening-houses likewise, containing fat geese; poultry yards of the exactions containing wild fowl, in order to offer to thy ka every day.

Collectors

324. I made for thee archers and collectors of honey, delivering incense; I established for them tax-officials (m$ k bwy) to conduct them and to collect their annual impost for thy august storehouse, in order to fill the magazines of thy house with numerous possessions, in order to double thy divine offerings, for presentation to thy ka.

Granaries

325. I made for thee granaries filled with barley and spelt, containing many grain-heaps, towering to heaven, in order to provision thy temple every day, before thy lovely face, O maker of heaven and earth.

Statues of the King

326. I made for thee statues of the king, L. P. H., of gold in beaten work; others of pure silver in beaten work likewise, kneeling upon the ground before thee, a bearing a vase and an offering-tablet, containing divine offerings of bread and beer, in order to offer them before thee every day.

Cultus Implements

327. I made for thee a great vase-stand for thy court, overlaid with fine gold, with labor; its vases were of gold and silver, carved with thy name, supplied with divine offerings and with every good thing, in order to offer (them) before thee at early morning.

Red Sea and Mediterranean Ships

328. I made for thee transports and galleys b in the midst of the sea, manned with galley-crews in numerous lists, in order to transport the products of God's-Land, and the impost of the land of Zahi (D 3 -h 3 ) to thy great storehouses in thy city of Memphis.

Festival Oblations

329. "I made for thee great festival oblations as new foundations, in order to offer (them) to thy ka at each of thy appearances. They were supplied with bread, beer, oxen, fowl, incense, fruit, vegetables, shedeh, wine, royal linen, plentiful mek-linen, fine southern linen, oil, incense, honey, dried myrrh, every good aromatic wood, sweet in fragrance, before thy lovely face, O lord of gods.

Feast of the "First-of-the-Flood"

330. "I made for thee a great festival oblation of the "First-of-the-Flood" for thy great, august and lovely name, Ptah-Nun, the great, father of the gods. They were supplied with food like water in thy great and august court of Ineb-Sebek, for all thy images, and the gods of the deeps. They were paid dues and from the storehouses, magazines, granaries, cattle yards, and poultry yards each year, in order to satisfy the great council of Nun, so that they are satisfied and rejoicing in the feast at the sight of them.

Sacred Barge

331. "I hewed thy august barge, O lord of eternity, of 130 cubits length upon the river; of great new cedars, of the best of the royal domain. Its "Great House" was of gold, and of real costly stones, as far as the water; and of gold on each side of it. Its bow bore a pair of hawks of fine gold, with inlay of every costly stone, more beautiful in work than the evening-barque. The stern was of fine gold, its two steering-oars wrought in fine gold. Ptah, the beautiful of face, South-of-His-Wall, appeared, in order to rest in its "Great House," like the horizon-god, while his heart was satisfied and glad at the sight of it, making his beautiful voyage upon the flood, to his daughter, the mistress of the sycamore (Hathor), on the south of Memphis. The people rejoice at the sight of him, and there is jubilee before him to his august house.

Sacred Cattle

332. I protected the sacred cattle of Apis, male and female, which had been neglected in the herds of every house. I made them all more divine than their sacred cattle. I extended their boundaries to their accustomed places, which others had taken from them for fields. Their landmarks were set up, engraved with thy name; and there were made for them decrees for administering them on earth.

Supplies of Incense

333. I brought to thee plentiful tribute of myrrh, in order to go around thy temple with the fragrance of Punt for thy august nostrils at early morning. I planted incense and myrrh-sycamores in thy great and august court in Ineb-Sebek, being those which my hands brought from the country of God's-Land, in order to satisfy thy two serpent-goddesses every morning.

Cultus Vessels

334. I made for thee table-vessels for thy "Great Seat," being censers, vases (nms't), altar-vessels bearing gen (gn)-vases, heset (hsyw't)-vases, ekhu (hw)-vessels, enkhi (nhy'-w')-vases, and great altar-vessels for oblations, bearing divine offerings. They were of fine gold and silver, in beaten work, with inlay of every costly stone without number, in order to present them to thy ka every day, O Ptah, father of gods, former of men.

First Jubilee

335. I celebrated for thee the first jubilee (hb-s[d]) of my reign, as a very great feast of Tatenen. I doubled for thee that which was done in the midst of the court, and there was offered to thee a festival offering, consisting of numerous oblations of bread, wine, beer, shedeh, vegetables, bulls, bullocks, calves by the hundred-thousand, cows by which were before in ruins, since the (former) kings. I wrought upon thy divine ennead, the lords of the jubilee (ḥb-st), in gold, silver, and costly stones, as formerly. I made for them clothing of royal linen and mek-linen; I mixed for them ointment for their serpent-crests. I founded divine offerings, offered to their ka's, abiding as daily offerings for their ka's forever.

Lists

336. Behold, I have, listed the benefactions which I did before thee, O Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, lord of the White Wall (Memphis), that the gods of the house of Ptah may know of my benefactions.

8. CONCLUDING PRAYER OF RAMSES III

Pl. 56b

351. 1Give to me thy eyes and thy ears, O lord, Ptah, father of fathers, former of the gods; and hear 2my plea, which I make before thee. I am thy beloved son, great in benefactions. Install 3my son to be king, establish him upon thy throne as ruler of every land over the people, Usermare-Setepnamon, L. P. H., the child 4who came forth from thy limbs. Grant that he may be crowned upon earth like the son of Isis (Horus), when he took the etef-crown, bearing the r—. Grant 5that he may rest upon thy throne as king of the Two Lands, as Horus, the mighty Bull, beloved of Mat. Give to him my kingdom 6according as thou makest his life happy upon earth, possessed of joy. Make his sword victorious, while the lands and countries fall 7beneath his feet forever. Let him take possession of Egypt as ruler, L. P. H., of the Two Lands; let him be divine 8before thee, possessed of thy favor. Extend for him the boundaries of the Nine Bows; let them come because of his might, that they may do obeisance to him. 9Give satisfying life, united with his limbs, and health for his members at every season, 10King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands; Usermare-Setepnamon, L. P. H., Son of Re, Lord of Diadems; Ramses (IV)-Hekma-Meriamon, L. P. H.

V. GENERAL SECTION

(SMALL TEMPLES)

I. PRAYER TO THE GODS AND RECITAL OF THE KING'S BENEFACIONS

Pl. 57. Introduction

352. 1The praises, prayers, adorations, laudations, mighty deeds, and numerous benefactions, which King Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H., the Great God, did for his fathers (sic!), all the gods and goddesses of South and North.

Prayer of Ramses III

353. 2Said King Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H., the Great God, in praising and magnifying all the gods of South and North:

Praise of the Gods

3Hail to you, gods and goddesses, lords of heaven, earth, and the Nether World, great of foot in the barque of millions of years, by the side of your\(^a\) father, Re. His heart is satisfied when he sees their beauty, in order to make prosperous the land of Egypt, bringing a Nile that overflows from their mouth, \(^4\)leading it from their mouth, that the lords of eternity and everlastingness may eat. Under their charge is the breath of life, and the term of life is (under) their seal, which their father made, on coming forth from their mouth. He rejoices, and flourishes at the sight of them, the great in heaven, the mighty \(^5\)in earth, giving breath to nostrils that were stopped up. I am your son whom your hands created, whom ye crowned as ruler, L. P. H., of every land. Ye wrought for me good things upon earth, that I might assume my office in peace.

Benefactions to the Gods

354. Was not my heart constant in seeking out mighty benefactions, \(^6\)for your temples? I equipped them with great decrees, recorded in every hall of writings; with their people, their lands, their herds; with their galleys and ships upon the Nile. I restored their \(^7\)temples which formerly were in ruin. I founded for you divine offerings, as an increase of that which was before you. I wrought for you in the gold-houses, in gold, silver, lapis lazuli, and malachite. I made plans for your storehouses. I completed them with numerous possessions. \(^8\)I filled your granaries with barley and spelt, in heaps. I built for you houses and temples, carved with your name forever. I provided their serf-laborers, I filled them with numerous people. I did not take people as a tithe, \(^9\)from the temples of any gods, since those kings;\(^b\) doing it in order to appoint them to the infantry and chariots. I made edicts for administering them upon earth, for the kings who shall be after me. I presented to you oblations before you, \(^10\)supplied with every good thing. I made for you storehouses for the "Feast of the Appearance;" I filled them with plentiful food. I made for you table-vessels of gold, silver, and copper by the hundred-thousand. I hewed your barges upon the Nile, \(^11\)bearing a "Great House,"\(^c\) overlaid with gold.

\(^a\)Original has "their," as usual in such constructions in Egyptian.

\(^b\)He means that he did not levy upon the people presented to the temples by former kings, in order to secure troops.

\(^c\)Shrine.
Temple of Onouris at Thinis

355. I made an august [house]a of stone of Ayan (‘yn²) in the house of my father, Onouris-Shu, son of Re (called): "The-House (ḥ.t)-of-Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-L.-P.-H.,-the-Judge-in-the-House-of-Onouris." I filled it with people and slaves of the choicest. Its storehouse contained plentiful possessions; the granaries contained grain. I founded for it daily divine offerings, in order to offer them to thy ka, O Shu, son of Re. I surrounded the house (pr) of Onouris with a wall, built with 20 ‘courses’ in the ground foundation, and a height of 30 cubits; having ‘ramps,’ ‘towers,’b and battlements on its every side. Its doorposts and lintels were of stone of Ayan (‘yn²), bearing doors of cedar mounted with copper, excludingc the Asiatics and Tehenu who transgressed their limits of old.

Pl. 58. Temple of Thoth at Hermopolis

356. I did numerous benefactions in Hesret (Hṣr²) for my father Thoth, dwelling in Hermopolis. I built for him a house anew in his court; it was a mysterious chapel for the All-Lord. I made for him another house as a dwelling-house; it was the horizon of heaven before him. When he appeared, he was contented in heart, to rest in them; he rejoiced and was glad to see them. I supplied them with food and provisions, containing the products of every land; numerous slaves whom I brought into the offices over them. I doubled the divine offerings presented before him from the storehouse of the "Feast of the Appearance," containing provisions. I made for him festal offerings, and oblations of the feasts of the first of the seasons, in order to satisfy his two serpent-goddesses at every season. I surrounded the house of Thoth with a wall, built with twenty ‘courses’ in the ground foundation, and a height of 30 cubits, having ramps, ‘towers’b and battlements on its every side. Its doorposts and lintels were of stone of Ayan (‘yn²), bearing doors of cedar, mounted with copper, in order to exclude the Asiatics and Tehenu, who trod their limits from of old.

Temple of Osiris at Abydos

357. 7I restored Abydos, the district of Osiris, by benefactions in Tower. I built my house of stone in the midst of his temple, like Atum's great house of heaven. I settled it with people bearing numerous offices, rich and poor of all that exist. I made for it divine offerings, the gifts of its altar, O my father, Osiris, lord of Tazoser. I made for him a statue of the king, L. P. H., presenting monuments and table vessels likewise, of gold and silver. I surrounded the house of Osiris and Harsiese with a great wall, towering like a mountain of gritstone, with ramps and towers; bearing battlements, and having doorposts of stone and doors of cedar. I hewed a great barge for Osiris, like the evening-barque which bears the sun.

Temple of Upwawet at Siut

358. 12I restored the walls in the house of my father, Upwawet, of the South, lord of Siut (S. yw'). I built my house therein, of stone of Ayan (c ym'), inscribed and engraved with the graver's tool in his august name. I completed it with the good things of every land. I assigned to it serf-laborers in numerous lists. I made for it a storehouse anew containing divine offerings, in order to present them to his ka daily. I hewed for him a great barge of the "First-of-the-River," like the morning-barque of Re which is in heaven. I walled about his house with a wall, established with labor, with twenty courses in the ground foundation, and with a height of 30 cubits; having ramps, towers and battlements in its whole circumference; great doorposts of stone, and doors of cedar, fitted with mountings (of bronze) of a mixture of six (parts), engraved with the great name of thy majesty, forever.

name, built with excellent work, forever. "House-of-Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-L.-P.-H.,-in-the-House-of-Sutekh-of-Ombos," was its great name. I equipped it with slaves, the captives and people, whom I created. I made for him herds in the North, in order to present them to his ka as a daily offering. I made for him divine offerings anew, being an increase of the daily offerings which were before him. I gave to him lands, high and low, and islands, in the South and North, bearing barley and spelt. His treasury was supplied with the things which my hands brought, in order to double the feasts before him every day.

Temple of Horus at Athribis

360. I did numerous benefactions among the great sacred cattle before my father, Harkhentikhet. I restored the walls of his temple, built and made anew, smoothed and polished. The divine offerings were doubled for him as daily offerings before his lovely face every morning. I brought for him tribute of male and female slaves, silver, gold, royal linen, fine southern linen, oil, incense, honey, bulls, and bullocks. I made for him a herd with numerous cattle, in order to present (them) to his ka, the great prince. I arranged the administration of his august house on water and land; it was made into great decrees in his name, forever. I set the prophets and inspectors of his house over them, to administer its serf-laborers, and to offer to his house.

Deposition of the Rebellious Vizier in Athribis

361. I cast out the vizier who had entered into their midst, I took away all his people who were with him. I made it like the great temples in this land, protected and defended, forever and ever. I brought

Temple of Sutekh in the Residence City

362. 2 I made a great temple, enlarged with labor, in the house of "Sutekh-of-Ramses (II)-Meriamon,-L.-P.-H.," built, laid, smoothed, and inscribed with designs; having doorposts of stone, and doors of cedar. "House-of-Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis,-L.-P.-H.,-in-the-House-of-Sutekh," its name was called forever. I assigned to it serf-laborers of the people whom I created, male and female slaves whom I carried off as captives of my sword. I made for him divine offerings, full and pure, in order to offer them to his ka every day. I filled his treasury with possessions without number, with granaries of grain by the ten-thousand, herds with cattle like the sand, in order to offer them to thy ka, O thou great in might.

Good Works for All Gods and Goddesses

363. 6 I did mighty deeds and benefactions, a numerous multitude, for the gods and goddesses of South and North. I wrought upon their images in the gold-houses, I built that which had fallen to ruin in their temples. I made houses and temples in their courts; I planted for them groves; I dug for them lakes; I founded for them divine offerings of barley and wheat, wine, incense, fruit, cattle, and fowl. I built the "Shadows of Re" for their districts, abiding, with divine offerings for every day. I made great decrees for the administration of their temples, recorded in the hall of writings forever. 10 Behold, the list is before you, O gods and goddesses, that ye may know of the benefactions which I did for your ka's.

d That the following three items belong to the income will be seen by comparing the other lists, e. g., 32b, 7-9. Furthermore, they are in the proper place between the estate and the royal gifts; but the scribe has given them neither title nor rubric; and he has recorded no gold, silver, etc., which we find in the other sections (e. g., 32a, 7-32b). Erman (op. cit., 465) is certainly correct in inferring that the scribe’s memoranda were too incomplete for him to insert here the usual rubric, as, e. g., 32a, 7.

5. CONCLUDING PRAYER OF RAMSES III

Pl. 66b

382. Hear ye, O great divine ennead, ye gods and goddesses! Put in your hearts the benefactions which I did, while I was king upon earth as ruler of the living; grant that I may be divine like one of the divine ennead, that I may go in and out among you in Tazoser, that I may proceed, while I am with you, before Re, that I may behold the radiance of his disk every morning. Grant that I may breathe the air like you, that I may receive bread upon the offerings before Osiris. Let my heart be glad, hear that which I say, establish my son as king on the throne of Horus, he being ruler, L. P. H., on the earth as Lord of the Two Lands, set the diadem upon his head like the All-Lord, join to him the uraeus like Atum. Let him celebrate jubilees like Tatenen, having a reign as long as the Beautiful-Faced (Ptah). May his sword be victorious against all lands, may they come for fear of him, bearing their tribute. Put the love of him in the hearts of the people, may the whole land acclaim over him at the sight of him, may Egypt rejoice over him with jubilation, united under his feet, forever; (even) the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands; Usermare-Setepnamon, L. P. H., Son of Re, Lord of Diadems, like Amon: Ramses (IV)-Hekma-Meriamon, L. P. H.

VI. SUMMARY

I. TOTAL OF THE GODS' ESTATES

Pl. 67

383. List of the things of the gods and men: gold, silver, real lapis lazuli, real malachite, all real, costly stones, cattle, gardens, lands, galleys, workshops, towns, festal offerings, oblations, "Books of the Nile-God," and all the things, which King Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H., the Great God, did for his august father, Amon-Re, king of gods; Atum, lord of the Two Lands of Heliopolis, Re-Harakhte; Ptah, the great, "South-of-His-Wall," lord of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands," and all the gods and goddesses of South and North; while he was king upon earth:

384. The processional images, statues, and figures of Amon-Re, king of gods: being 2,756 gods:

6 heads 113,433

Various cattle 490,386
Lands: stat 1,071,780
Gardens and groves 514
Transports and galleys 88

Pl. 68a

1 Towns of Egypt 160
2 Towns of Syria 9
Total 169

385. The amount belonging to the 2,756 statues and figures:

4 Fine gold 7,205 deben, 1 kidet
5 Silver 11,047 " 1 " 6 Total, gold and silver 18,252 " 1 " a The portion referring to men is the narrative in Pls. 75-79, q. v.

b The scribe has here incorrectly inserted some of the income in this heading, but he has properly not included any of such items in the list following.
c The scribe has here inserted one of the minor items from the Amon-temple, where he should have given a general head, as the number following is the total of all people held by all the temples recorded in the papyrus. His total should be 108,338, not correcting earlier errors.
d For the correct numbers in the summary, see the table on p. 97.
e These all belonged to Amon, and are given (11, 11), as also in Kush.
f See 21b, 11, note, and 11, 1-3.
7 Real lapis lazuli  47 deben, 6 kidet
8 Black copper        10,001  "  8  "
9 Copper in vessels and scraps  97,148  "  3  " 10 Lead               4,896  "
11 Tin                95  "

Pl. 68b

1 Various costly stones f—1a  18,168 [deben],b  1 kidet
2 Cedar: various logs          328
3 Persea: various logs         4,415

2. TOTAL OF THE GODS' INCOMES

386. Things exacted, impost of the people and all the serf-laborers of the houses, temples, and estates, which he gave to them as their yearly dues:

Fine mountain gold and gold of two times in vessels, ornaments, and scraps  2,289 deben, 4½ kidet c
7 Silver [in] vessels and scraps  14,050  "  ½  "

8 Total, silver and gold in vessels, ornaments, and scraps  16,339  "  6½  "

9 Gold combined with costly stones: collars, tassels, and cords
10 Silver overlaid with gold: sacred eye amulet of Thoth
11 Copper: deben

387. Royal linen, mek-linen, fine southern linen, southern linen, colored linen: various garments

4,575

b Omitted by the scribe, or else he has incorrectly inserted yp ṭ for ḏbn.

c The only temple with gold in the income was Thebes, which received yearly 560 deben, 6½ kidet. Hence this total is incorrect by over 1,700 deben. As a mistake in addition is impossible where only one item is concerned, the scribe has added items which do not belong here in the income. Adding the 1,719 deben, 8½ kidet, from the king's gifts to the small temples (62b, 5), we obtain the scribe's total of gold here. Hence he has incorrectly inserted here in the income the gold and silver of the king's gifts to small temples. So also ll. 9 and 10, which are taken from 62b, 9–11. The copper is correct.
1. Yarn: deben 3,795
2. Incense, honey, oil: full jars (3 cc) 1,529
3. Shedeh and wine: various jars (3 cc) 28,080
4. Silver in things of the impost of the people 4,208 deben, 7\frac{1}{2} kidet
5. Clean grain of the impost of the peasants: 16-fold heket 460,900
6. Vegetables: bundles 32,750
7. Flax: bales 71,000
8. Water-fowl of the impost of the fowlers and fishermen 426,995
9. Bulls, bullocks of the bulls, heifers, calves, cows, cattle of r—1 cattle of r—1 of the herd: (cattle) of Egypt 961
10. Bulls, bullocks of the bulls, oxen, heifers, calves, and cows of the impost of the lands of Syria 19

Total 980

11. Live geese of the exactions 1,920
12. Cedar: tow-boats and ferry-boats 12
13. Acacia: tow-boats, canal-boats, boats for the transportation of cattle, warships, and kara (k^5-r^2)-boats 78

Pl. 70a

1. Total, cedar and acacia: boats 90
2. Products of Egypt, products of God's-Land, products of Syria, Kush and the Oasis, for the divine offerings in numerous lists.

3. TOTAL OF THE KING'S GIFTS TO ALL GODS

388. 3. Gold, silver, real lapis lazuli, real malachite, all real, costly stones, copper, garments of royal linen, mek-linen, fine southern linen, southern linen, garments of colored linen, jars, fowl, and everything which he gave to them, as gifts of the king, L. P. H.; festal offerings, oblations, and "Books of the Nile-God," while he was king upon earth:

\footnotesize

a. See 12b, 11.

b. This section includes also the offerings, as the scribe was unable to separate them. The totals contain the most incredible errors in addition, which can be controlled for the most important items by comparing with table of the king's gifts, § 172.

c. This means the wine, oil, incense, etc., which were put into jars.

VII. HISTORICAL SECTION

Pl. 75. Introduction

397. \(^{1}\)Said King Usermare-Meriamon (Ramses III), L. P. H., the Great God, to the princes, and leaders of the land, the infantry and chariotry, the Sherden (\(S\ ;r\ ;d\ ;n\);), the numerous archers, \(^{2}\) and all the citizens\(^{a}\) of the land of Egypt:

Former Anarchy

398. Hear ye,\(^{b}\) that I may inform you of my benefactions which I did while I was king of the people (\(rhy\';l\)). The land of \(^{3}\) Egypt was \(^{6}\)overthrown\(^{c}\) from without\(^{1}\), and every man was (\(thrown\)^{1} out) of his right; they had no chief mouth (\(r\ ;hr\)) for many years formerly until other times. The land of Egypt was \(^{4}\)in the hands of chiefs\(^{d}\) and of \(^{a}\)(\(\;nh\ ;w\)). These are the same as the \(\;nh\ ;w of the army\)," e. g., already in the Middle Kingdom (I, 681), and in the Eighteenth Dynasty, especially in the Decree of Harmhab (III, 45–67).

\(^{b}\)Text has \(\;we\), which is, of course, an error.

\(^{c}\)\(\;r\ ;d\ ;n\); on the meaning "banish," see Brugsch, Oase, 85; same usage in Recueil, XVII, 147, ll. 13, 14?

\(^{d}\)The hieratic sign is that for "chief" (\(wr\)), not "prince" (\(sr\)), which occurs quite differently written in l. 1 of this same plate.
rulers of towns; one slew his neighbor, great and small. Other times having come after it, with empty years, Yarsu, a certain Syrian (Ḥ3-rw) was with them as chief. He set the whole land tributary before him together; he united his companions and plundered their possessions. They made the gods like men, and no offerings were presented in the temples.

Rule of Setnakht

399. But when the gods inclined themselves to peace, to set the land (³in³) its right according to its accustomed manner, they established their son, who came forth from their limbs, to be Ruler, L. P. H., of every land, upon their great throne, (even) Userkhare-Setepnere-Meriamon, L. P. H., Son of Re, Setnakht-Mererre-Meriamon, L. P. H. He was Khepri-Set, when he is enraged; he set in order the entire land, which had been rebellious; he slew the rebels who were in the land of Egypt; he cleansed the great throne of Egypt; he was Ruler, L. P. H., of the Two Lands, on the throne of Atum. He gave ready faces, which had been turned away. Every man knew his brother who had been walled in.

a The words (yr-sw), read as a proper name, of which Arisu or Arsu have become current forms, means “made himself.” Hence Spiegelberg has proposed to render them so, explaining the foreign determinative which follows them by supposing that the name of the Syrian, to whom the determinative belongs, has fallen out. We should then render: “X, a certain Syrian with them, made himself chief.” The preposition before “chief” fits this rendering well (see Spiegelberg, Orientalistische Litteraturzeitung, II, 263-65).

mander (šn) of the whole land united in one. He went to rest in his horizon, like the gods; there was done for him that which was done for Osiris; he was rowed in his king’s-barge upon the river, and rested in his eternal house west of Thebes.

Accession of Ramses III

401. Then my father, Amon-Re, lord of gods, Re-Atum, and Ptah, beautiful of face, crowned me as Lord of the Two Lands on the throne of him who begat me; I received the office of my father with joy; the land rested and rejoiced in possession of peace, being joyful at seeing me as ruler, L. P. H., of the Two Lands, like Horus when he was called to rule the Two Lands on the throne of Osiris. I was crowned with the etef-crown bearing the uraeus; I assumed the double-plumed diadem, like Tatenen. I sat upon the throne (tnt₂·t) of Harakhte. I was clad in the regalia, like Atum.

Internal Organization

402. I made Egypt into many classes, consisting of: butlers of the palace, great princes, numerous infantry, and chariotry, by the hundred-thousand; Sherden (Šr²-d₂-n₂), and Kehek (Khk), without number; attendants by the ten-thousand; and serf-laborers of Egypt.

It had already been appropriated by Seti II, who finally had not used it. Setnakht took it, and enlarged it for his purpose (Lépísius, Denkmäler, III, 209-14; Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, III, 137 ff.). He had been unable to finish his own tomb (No. 11, Baedeker’s Egypt, 268), which was then taken over and completed by his son, Ramses III.

War with Northern Asiatics

403. I extended all the boundaries of Egypt; I overthrew those who invaded them from a their lands. I slew the Denyen (D³-yw-n³) in b their isles, the Thekel (T³-r⁻) and the Peleset (Pw-r³-s³-ly) were made ashes. The Sherden and the Weshesh (W²-²-²) of the sea, c they were made as those that exist not, taken captive at one time, brought as captives to Egypt, like the sand of the shore. I settled them in strongholds, bound in my name. Numerous d were their classes like hundred-thousands. I taxed them all, in clothing and grain from the storehouses and granaries each year.

Edomite War

404. I destroyed the people of Seir (S³-c²-r⁻), of the tribes of the Shasu (S³-sw); c I plundered their tents of their people, their possessions, their cattle likewise, without number. They were pinioned and brought as captive, as tribute of Egypt. I gave them to the gods, as slaves into their houses.

Libyan Wars d

405. Behold, I will inform you of other things, done in Egypt since my reign. The Libyans e and the Meshwesh (M-³-²-²) were dwelling f in Egypt, having plundered the cities of the western shore, g from Memphis to Kerben (K²-r⁻-b²-n³). They had reached

Punt Expedition

407. I hewed great galleys with barges before them, manned with numerous crews, and attendants in great number; their captains of marines were with them, with inspectors and petty officers, to command them. They were laden with the products of Egypt without number, being in every number like ten-thousands. They were sent forth into the great sea of the inverted water, they arrived at the countries of Punt, no mishap overtook them, safe and bearing terror. The galleys and the barges were laden with the products of God's-Land, consisting of all the strange marvels of their country: plentiful myrrh of Punt, laden by ten-thousands, without number. Their chief's children of God's-Land went before their tribute advancing to Egypt. They arrived in safety at the highland of Coptos; they landed in safety, bearing the things which they brought. They were loaded, on the land-journey, upon asses and upon men; and loaded into vessels upon the Nile, (at) the haven of Coptos. They were sent forward down-stream and arrived amid festivity, and brought (some) of the tribute into the (royal) presence like marvels. Their chief's c "The inverted water" is the Euphrates (see Tombos Stela, l. 13, II, 73); hence "the great sea of the inverted water" is the Indian Ocean, of which the Persian Gulf (into which the Euphrates flows) is a part. The Egyptians doubtless counted the Red Sea as a part of this "great sea of the inverted water," for the antique maps even far down into Arab times show the vaguest knowledge of the proper relations of these waters. It is possible to infer from this passage that Punt extended beyond the straits of Bab el-Mendeb.

children were in adoration before me, kissing the earth, prostrate before me. I gave them to all the gods of this land, to satisfy the two serpentine goddesses every morning.

Expedition to Atika

408. I sent forth my messengers to the country of the Atika (\textit{\textit{ty-ka}}), to the great copper mines which are in this place. Their galleys carried them; others on the land-journey were upon their asses. It has not been heard before, since kings reign. Their mines were found abounding in copper; it was loaded by ten-thousands into their galleys. They were sent forward to Egypt, and arrived safely. It was carried and made into a heap under the balcony, in many bars of copper, like hundred-thousands, being of the color of gold of three times. I allowed all the people to see them, like wonders.

Sinai Expedition

409. I sent forth butlers and officials to the malachite-country, to my mother, Hathor, mistress of the malachite. There were brought for her silver, gold, royal linen, mek-linen, and many things into her presence, like the sand. There were brought for me wonders of real malachite in numerous sacks, brought forward into my presence. They had not been seen before, since kings reign.

Ramses III's Good Works at Home

410. I planted the whole land with trees and verdure, and I made the people dwell in their shade. I made the woman of Egypt to go to the place she desired, (for) no stranger nor any one upon the road molested her. I made the infantry and chariotry to dwell (at home) in my time; the Sherden (Š Ṣ -r -d -n Ṣ) and Kehek (Khk) were in their towns, lying the length of their backs; they had no fear, (for) there was no enemy from Kush, (nor) foe from Syria. Their bows and their weapons reposed in their magazines, while they were satisfied and drunk with joy. 12 Their wives were with them, their children at their side; they looked not behind them, (but) their hearts were confident, (for) I was with them as the defense and protection of their limbs. 13 I sustained alive the whole land, whether foreigners, (common) folk, citizens, or people, male or female. I took a man out of his misfortune and I gave to him breath; 14 I rescued him from the oppressor, who was of more account than he. I set each man in his security, in their towns; I sustained alive others in the hall of petition. 15 I equipped the land in the place where it was laid waste. The land was well satisfied in my reign. I did good to the gods, as well as the men, and I had nothing at all belonging to any (other) people. I exercised my sovereignty over the land as ruler of the Two Lands, while ye were my servants under my feet, without Ye were well pleasing to my heart, for ye did excellently, and ye were zealous for my commands and my commissions.

Ramses III’s Death

RECORD OF THE ROYAL JUBILEE

413. Ramses III commissioned his vizier, Ta, to take charge of the jubilee in the year 29, and it perhaps took place in that year. In that case he was made crown prince a year before his father Setnakht's death. Accepting this, it could not have been long before the celebration that the vizier left the capital (Tanis?) and went south to make preparations for it, as the following paragraph shows:

Year 29, month [one] of the third season, day 28. The vizier Ta sailed north, after he had come to take the gods of the South for the Sed Jubilee.

See § 207. See § 400 on Ramses III's relations with his father.

This accords with the only date of Setnakht's reign, "year 1" (Papyrus Sallier, I, 6).

Spiegelberg, Recueil, 68, 69; from Papyrus Turin 44, 18 f.
414. At El Kab the High Priest of Nekhbet, Setau, recorded in his tomb, as one of the great events of his life, the visit of the vizier on the occasion of the latter's southern voyage (as above) and his visit there, as follows:

'[Year 29] under the majesty of King Ramses III; first occurrence of the Sed Jubilee. His majesty commanded to commission the governor of the (residence) city, the vizier, Ta, to carry out the customary regulations in the houses of the Sed Jubilee, to go to the "House-of-Ramses-Meriamon (Ramses II),-the-[Good-God]." Reception of the bow of the barque of the Divine Hand by the king himself, when he was [in] the Southern City.'

415. This same Setau, in whose tomb the above occurs, was still High Priest of Nekhbet at El Kab in the year 4 of Ramses IX, when his tomb was decorated; so that one man's tenure of a high office (attained, at the earliest, in middle life) includes the period from year 29 of Ramses III to year 4 of Ramses IX. Accepting thirty years for Setau's tenure of the office we have left, after deduction of the known dates of other kings, some fifteen years for the three Ramses, VI, VII, and VIII.

fRemainder of Ramses III's reign 2 years.
Ramses IV 6 years.
Ramses V 4 + x years.
Ramses IX (last date in Setau's term) 4 years.

Total 16 years.
Leaving some fifteen years to insert between Ramses IV and Ramses IX.
RECORDS OF THE HAREM CONSPIRACY

416. Fragmentary and brief as these documents are, they afford a glimpse into the court intrigues and conspiracies of the Orient three thousand and two hundred years ago, which is as picturesque and interesting as it is important. Here are all the materials for a novel or a drama, with the full dramatis personae all present. The first question which arises is: Against whom was the conspiracy, here unfolded, directed? The king who empowers the prosecuting court to try the conspirators is called "ruler of Heliopolis" (§ 423), a term applied to several kings, but especially to Ramses III. One of the conspirators, in the course of their machinations, secured a "magic roll of Ramses III . . . . his lord." It is clear, then, that the conspiracy was directed against this king, and, as we shall see, toward the close of his reign. One of his queens, named Tiy, plots to make way with the old king and to place her son Pentewere upon the throne.

*These records are contained in two documents: (a) the Judicial Papyrus of Turin; and (b) Papyrus Lee and Papyrus Rollin, both parts of one document. The Judicial Papyrus of Turin is a magnificent document, containing six columns, the first being but a mere fragment of the ends of all the lines. The papyrus roll is about twenty inches high, the letters about an inch to an inch and a quarter high, and the horizontal lines are two inches apart. It was published, and for that time well treated, by Devéria in the Journal asiatique, in 1865-68, (but see Chabas' valuable corrections, Mélanges d'archéologie égyptienne, 3*ème* sér., Tome I, 5-47), and again revised by the author, as a "tirage à part" in 1868. The last was republished in the author's collected works (Bibliothèque égyptologique, V). Papyrus Lee contains the lower part of two columns, published by Sharpe (Egyptian Inscriptions, II, 47, 48) in 1855; shortly after by Lee (Hartwell House Catalogue, Pl. II); by Chabas, Papyrus Magique, Harris, 169-74; and Mélanges d'archéologie égyptienne, I, 9, 10; by Devéria, op. cit.; and by Newberry (Amherst Papyri, Pl. II and III, and pp. 19-22); Papyrus Rollin (No. 1888) in the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris contains one short but complete column, published by Chabas, op. cit., by Devéria, op. cit., and by Pleyte, Les Papyrus Rollin, Pl. XVI.

*She may have been the mother or stepmother of Ramses III; see Erman, Aegypten, 87 (Mariette, Catalogue général d'Eléphantos, 1170).

*This was not his name, but a name given him in the court records, which call him "Pentewere, who bore that other name." The chief conspirators are given assumed names by the records, as we shall see.
The "chief of the chamber," Pebekkamen, and a royal butler, named Mesedsure, were her chief coadjutors. The former procured from the overseer of the royal herds, Penhuibin, a number of magic wax figures of gods and men, which were able, in the belief of the owner, to disable or enfeeble the limbs of people. Two other men furnished similar materials, which were smuggled into the harem, and by such agencies the conspirators were empowered, as they thought, to disable or evade the people of the guard, who might otherwise have discovered and betrayed the plot.

417. Pebekkamen and Mesedsure secured the co-operation of ten harem officials of various ranks, four royal butlers, an overseer of the treasury named Pere, a captain of archers in Nubia named Binemwese, who was inveigled by the influence of a sister of his in the harem; Peyes, a commander of the army, three royal scribes in various offices, Pebekkamen's assistant, and several subordinate officials. As most of these people were in the personal service of the Pharaoh, the dangerous character of the complot is evident. Six wives of the officers of the harem-gate were used in securing the transmission of messages, and outside relatives of the inmates, not mentioned by name, are clearly implicated. Binemwese's sister sent him a letter urging him to incite the people to hostility against the king, and such was the purport of all the messages which left the harem. Evidently a revolution outside of the palace was intended to accompany their own coup within it. That the latter involved the assassination of the king is nowhere stated, but is self-evident.

418. Before their plans could be carried out, the conspirators were, in some way, betrayed, and ample evidence of their guilt was obtainable. The king ordered their prosecution, but before they came to trial he died. It would almost appear that he knew his days were numbered when he gave instructions for the prosecution of the conspirators, for at the close of the commission constituting the special court therefor, he uses the remarkable words: (Go on with the prosecution, etc.), “while I am protected and defended forever, while I am among the just kings who are before Amon-Re . . . . and before Osiris, ruler of eternity;” that is, while I am among my deceased fathers. That the plot went so far that the king was injured, and survived his injuries only long enough to direct the prosecution of his assassins, is improbable, in view of a remark in the records, that Re did not permit the hostile plans to succeed; but we may easily believe that it hastened the old king’s end, even if he escaped unscathed.

419. The court commissioned to try the conspirators received its instructions directly from the king, and was given not only full discretion as to the verdict, but also final power to execute punishment, which was otherwise usually fixed by the Pharaoh after trial (§ 541). At the same time Ramses cautioned the judges to be certain of guilt, by the usual procedure in every case, and to punish none but the guilty. The court, thus constituted with such unusual powers, consisted of fourteen officials, viz., two overseers of the treasury, two standard-bearers of the army, seven royal butlers, a royal herald, and two scribes. Among them were a Libyan, a Lycian, a Syrian named Maharbaal (“Baal hastens”), and another foreigner, Kedendenna by name, of uncertain nationality. The unhealthy character of the conditions at the court of Ramses III are thus patent. Foreign stewards and butlers, whose fidelity is purchased, are now the reliance of the Pharaoh. Their flaccid character and the dangerous persistence of the conspirators are shown by the fact that two of the judges, the butler Pebes and the scribe Mai, after their appointment, together with two officers having the prisoners in charge, received in their dwelling some of the women conspirators and the general Peyes, with whom they caroused. These two judges, together with the two officers and another judge, Hori, the standard-bearer, were immediately put on trial for their indiscretion, and the first four were condemned to lose their noses and ears. On the execution of the sentence, Pebes committed suicide; Hori was found to be innocent.

420. The fate of the queen, Tiy, is unknown, as the records preserved do not contain her trial. The records of four different prosecutions are preserved. The judges were not all present at these four prosecutions. Six of them carried on the first, and condemned twenty-two persons, including the arch-conspirators Pebekkamen and Mesedsure, Bin-emwese, the captain of archers in Nubia, and Pere, overseer of the treasury; besides the six wives of the officers of the harem-gate. The penalty is not defined, but it was certainly death. The second prosecution, the judges for which are not mentioned, resulted in the condemnation of six persons, including Peyes, the army commander. All were permitted to commit suicide without leaving the court. Three butlers alone conducted the prosecution of the third group of four conspirators, among whom was the guilty young prince Pentewere. All four were found guilty, and were allowed to take their own lives. These three prosecutions disposed of

*That their indiscretion occurred only after their appointment is, of course, evident. They never would have been appointed had their intimacy with the conspirators occurred before. The object of Peyes and the women could only have been the corruption of the judges in their own interest.
the capital cases. The fourth prosecution was that of the indiscreet judges and their two companions.

421. In the documents containing the above facts, the chief conspirators are given fictitious names, indicative of the abhorrence in which they were held. Thus Mesedsure means "Re hates him," and Binemwese is "Wicked in Thebes." Pentewere, the name applied to the guilty prince, who was in all probability only an unfortunate tool, is not a term of opprobrium, but is not his real name (Col. V, l. 7, § 447).

422. As to the character of the following records, the first document (Turin) omits the evidence, and is, therefore, not a full record of the trials, but forms merely an abstract of the proceedings, evidently for filing in the royal archives. The second document (Lee and Rollin), far less imposing in appearance, is fuller, and may have been part of the original scribal record of the prosecution.

a For the three people tried and executed for practicing magic, whose names are lost in the full account of their trial (§§ 454-56), are probably included in the list of capital prosecutions without designation of their crime as magic. "Collu-

Composition of the Court

426. The overseer of the White House, Mentemtowe;
The overseer of the White House, Pefroi;
The standard-bearer, Kara;
The butler, Pebes;
The scribe of the archives, Mai;
The standard-bearer, Hori.

They examined them; they found them guilty; they brought their punishment upon them; their crimes seized them.

The Condemned and Their Crimes

427. a The great criminal, a Pebekkamen (P³y-b³ky-k³mn), formerly chief of the chamber.

He was brought in because of his collusion with Tiy and the women of the harem. He made common cause with them, and began bringing out their words to their mothers and their brothers who were there, saying: “Stir up the people! Incite enemies to hostility against their lord.” He was placed before the great nobles of the court of examination; they examined his crimes; they found that he had committed them. His crimes seized him; the nobles who examined him brought his punishment upon him.

428. b The great criminal, Mesedsure (Msd-sw-R c), formerly butler.

He was brought in because of his collusion [with] Pebekkamen, formerly chief of the chamber, and with the women, to stir up enemies to hostility against their lord. He was placed before the great nobles of the court of examination; they examined his crimes; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

429. c The great criminal, Peynok (P³-ynywk), formerly overseer of the king’s i—1 of the harem, i in the suite.d

He was brought in because of his making common cause with Pebekkamen and Mesedsure, to commit hostility against their lord.

a This word (ḥrw) literally means “fallen, miserable,” and is the term regularly applied to rebels, foreign foes, and criminals. Chabas’ objections (Mélanges d’archéologie égyptienne, 3me sér., I, 14) to translating “criminal” seem to me rather pedantic and unfair to Devéria.

b Meaning “Re hates him;” see introduction, § 421.

c “The serpent.”

d Lit., “while following” (the king?).
He was placed before the great nobles of the court of examination; they examined his crimes; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

430. The great criminal, Pendua (P-n-dw 3 w), formerly scribe of the king's 1-1 of the harem, in the suite1.a

He was brought in because of his making common cause with Pebekkamen and Mesedsure, the other criminal, formerly overseer of the king's 1-1, and the women of the harem, to make a conspiracy with them, to commit hostility against their lord. He was placed before the nobles of the court of examination; they examined his crimes; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

431. The great criminal, Petewnteamon (P>t 3 w-mdy-Ymn), formerly inspector of the harem, in the suite1.a

He was brought in because of his hearing the words which the people discussed with the women of the harem, without reporting them. He was placed before the great nobles of the court of examination; they examined his crimes; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

432. The great criminal, Kerpes (K 3-r 3 -pw-s 3 ), formerly inspector of the harem, in the suite1.a

He was brought in because of the words which he had heard and had concealed. He was placed before the great nobles of the court of examination. They found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

433. The great criminal, Khamopet (H 3-c-m-yp't), formerly inspector of the harem, in the suite1.a

He was brought in because of the words which he had heard and had concealed. He was placed before the great nobles of the court of examination. They found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

434. The great criminal, Khammale (H 3-c-m-m 3 -n-r 3 ), formerly inspector of the harem, in the suite1.a

He was brought in because of the words which he had heard and had concealed. He was placed before the great nobles of the court of examination; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

435. The great criminal, Setimperthoth (Sty-m-pr-Dhwty), formerly inspector of the harem, in the suite1.a

aLit., "while following" (the king?).
He was brought in because of the words which he had heard and had concealed. He was placed before the nobles of the court of examination; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

436. The great criminal, Setimperamon (Set- y-m-pr-Ymn), formerly inspector of the harem, "in the suite".

He was brought in because of the words which he had heard and had concealed. He was placed before the nobles of the court of examination; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

437. The great criminal, Weren (W- r n), who was butler.

He was brought in because of his hearing the words from the chief of the chamber, and when he had withdrawn from him, he concealed them and did not report them. He was placed before the nobles of the court of examination; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

438. The great criminal, Eshehebsed (št-hb-sd), formerly assistant of Pebekkamen.

He was brought in because of his hearing the words from Pebekkamen; and when he had left him, he did not report them. He was placed before the nobles of the court of examination; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

439. The great criminal, Peluka (P-rw-k), formerly butler and scribe of the White House.

He was brought in because of his collusion with Pebekkamen, having heard the words from him, without reporting them. He was placed before the nobles of the court of examination; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

440. The great criminal, the Libyan, Yenini (Y-ni-ny), formerly butler.

He was brought in because of his collusion with Pebekkamen, having heard the words from him, without reporting them. He was placed before the nobles of the court of examination; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

nobles of the court of examination; they found them guilty; they brought their punishment upon them: six women.

442. ⁴The great criminal, Pere (P³ y-yry), son of Ruma (Rw-m³), formerly overseer of the White House.

He was brought in because of his collusion with the great criminal, Penhuibin (Pn-hwy-byn), making common cause with him to stir up enemies to hostility against their lord. He was placed before the nobles of the court of examination; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

443. ⁵The great criminal, Binemwese (Byn-m-W³ s·t),⁴ formerly captain of archers in Nubia.

He was brought in because of the letter, which his sister, who was in the harem, in the suite, had written to him, saying: "Incite the people to hostility! And come thou to begin hostility against thy lord." He was placed before Kedendenna, Maharbaal, Pirsun (P³ -yr-swn), and Thutrehnefer; they examined him; they found him guilty; they brought his punishment upon him.

III. THE CONDEMNED OF THE SECOND PROSECUTION

444. ⁴Persons brought in because of their crimes and because of their collusion with Pebekkamen, Peyes (P² y-ys), and Pentewere (Pn-t³-wor). They were placed before the nobles of the court of examination in order to examine them; they found them guilty; they left them in their own hands in the court of examination; they took their own lives; and no punishment was executed upon them.

445. ⁵The great criminal, Peyes, formerly commander of the army.
The great criminal, Messui (Ms-swy), formerly scribe of the house of sacred writings.
The great criminal, Perekamene (P³ -R³ k³ mn·f), formerly chief.
The great criminal, Iroi (Yy·r³ y), formerly overseer of the ¹—¹ of Sekhmet.

---

⁴Meaning: "Wicked in Thebes." ⁵Lit., "of Nubia;" he was probably in Nubia at the time. The phrase, "of Nubia," may possibly belong to "archers," but such a rendering is against the usual custom.
⁶See col. 2, l. 2. ⁷The judges.
⁸Ibid., l. 3. ⁹The condemned.
The great criminal, Nebzefai (Nb-dj3 w), formerly butler.
The great criminal, Shedmeszer (Š c d-mṣḏr), formerly scribe of the house of sacred writings.
Total, 6.

IV. THE CONDEMNED OF THE THIRD PROSECUTION

446. 6 Persons who were brought in, because of their crimes, to the court of examination, before Kedendenna, Maharbaal, Pirsun, Thutrekhnefer, and Mertusamon (Mrty-wsy-Ymn).° They examined them concerning their crimes; they found them guilty; they left them in their place; they took their own lives.

447. 7 Pentewere, who bore that other name.
He was brought in because of his collusion [with] Tiy, his mother, when she discussed the words with the women of the harem, being hostile against his lord. He was placed before the butlers, in order to examine him; they found him guilty; they left him in his place; he took his own life.

448. 8 The great criminal, Henutenamon (H n-wtn-Ymn), formerly butler.
He was brought in because of the crimes of the women of the harem; having been among them and having heard (them), without reporting them. He was placed before the butlers, in order to examine him; they found him guilty; they left him in his place; he took his own life.

449. 9 The great criminal, Amenkha (Ymn-h c w), formerly deputy of the harem, f in the suite.
He was brought in because of the crimes of the women of the harem; having been among them, and having heard (them), without reporting them. He was placed before the butlers, in order to examine him; they found him guilty; they left him in his place; he took his own life.

450. 10 The great criminal, Pere, formerly scribe of the king's [—1 of the harem, f in the suite.
He was brought in because of the crimes of the women of the harem; having been among them, and having heard (them), without reporting them. He was placed before the butlers, in order to examine him; they found him guilty; they left him in his place; he took his own life.

°According to I. 7, these are all butlers.

V. THE CONDEMNED OF THE FOURTH PROSECUTION

Col. 6

451. Persons upon whom punishment was executed by cutting off their noses and their ears, because of their forsaking the good testimony delivered to them. The women had gone; had arrived at their place of abode, and had there caroused with them and with Peyes. Their crime seized them.

452. This great criminal, Pebes (P y-b^3-s^3), formerly butler. This punishment was executed upon him; he was left (alone); he took his own life.

3The great criminal, Mai, formerly scribe of the archives.

4The great criminal, Teynakhte (T y-nht^1^1), formerly officer of infantry.

5The great criminal, Oneney (C n-y), formerly captain of police.

VI. THE ACQUITTED

453. *Persons who had been connected with them; they had contended with him, with evil and violent words; he was dismissed; punishment was not executed upon him:

7The great criminal, Hori, who was standard-bearer of the infantry.

aThe king’s instructions. bThe condemned.

cLit., “made a beer-hall” (c’t-hk’t); the same word in Piankhi, l. 134 (§ 880).

dThe constitution of the court is not given.

eCutting off nose and ears; mentioned in l. 1; afterward in despair he kills himself. The others lived and endured the disgrace. Peyes and Mai, the following prisoners, were judges appointed on this trial by the king.

fThe question arises why these men (not judges) are implicated. The analogy of the case of the two judges shows that they must have had something to do with the trial. Looking at their titles, one a military officer and the other a captain of police, it becomes exceeding probable that we have in them the explanation of another difficulty. How could Peyes and the women, already in custody and awaiting trial, gain their freedom to go to the dwelling of one of their judges? The two officers Teynakhte and Oneney must have been in charge of them; and they secretly went with their charges to the judge’s house. They were thus equally guilty with the two judges.

gAs the rubric shows, this is the title of the following list, consisting of one person.

hSo-called, although innocent, his name being here cited from the court docket where it appeared with the above words before it. He bears the same name and title as one of the judges (col. 2, l. 4). If he be the same man, then we may doubtless understand the language of l. 6 above as indicating an altercation in court, in which the prisoners had attempted to implicate one of the judges, an attempt which was thwarted by putting him on trial, and acquitting him.
VII. THE PRACTICERS OF MAGIC

First Case of Magic

454. a1He began to make magic rolls for 'hindering' and terrifying, and to make some gods of wax, and some people, for enfeebling the limbs of people; b2and gave them into the hand of Pebekkamen, whom Re made not to be chief of the chamber, and the other great criminals, saying: "Take them in;" and they took them in. Now, when he set himself to do the evil (deeds) which he did, in which Re did not permit that he should succeed, b he was examined. Truth was found in every crime and in every evil (deed), which his heart had devised to do. There was truth therein, he had done them all, together with all the other great criminals. They were great crimes of death, the great abominations of the land, the things which he had done. Now, when he learned c of the great crimes of death which he had committed, he took his own life.

Now, when Penhuibin (Pn-hwy-byn), formerly overseer of herds, said to him: "Give to me a roll for enduing me with strength and might," she gave to him a magic roll of Usermare-Meriamon (Ramses III), L. P. H., the Great God, e his lord, L. P. H., and he began to aPapyrus Rollin begins here, but the beginning of the case is lost, so that the name and office of the accused are unknown.

bIt is not quite certain whether this remark refers to the failure of the whole conspiracy or only to this man's part in it. The former is more probable.

cThat is, when he learned of what crimes he was charged with. The pronoun is sw, which is possibly for se, "they," viz., the judges; though the papyrus does not contain another example of such an error.

dHere Papyrus Lee begins; the beginning (top of the column) of the report is lost, and it is uncertain who is speaking. The name and office of the accused are also unknown.

e"The Great God" is applied at this time only to deceased kings, though it is used in the Old Kingdom of living kings. It regularly designates the deceased king in Papyrus Harris (passim), but is never applied to him in the vast inscriptions of Medinet Habu made during his life. In Papyrus Abbot, of the same age, the term always designates a deceased king; see also §471 and commonly. A living king as presiding god of a distinct region or temple may receive the words "great god" in his formal cultus titulary (e.g., II, 894), but not otherwise. At the time employ the magic powers of a god upon people. He arrived at the side of the harem, this other large, deep place. He began to make people of wax, inscribed, in order that they might be taken in by the inspector, Errem (\(^2\)-\(\text{ry-m}\)), hindering one troop and bewitching the others, that a few words might be taken in, and others brought out. Now, when he was examined concerning them, truth was found in every crime and in every evil (deed), which his heart had devised to do. There was truth therein, he had done them all, together with the other great criminals, the abomination of every god and every goddess all together. The great punishments of death were executed upon him, of which the gods have said: "Execute them upon him."

Col. 2. Third Case of Magic

456. in the — — upon the measure. He went away enfeebled. Now, when he was examined concerning them, truth was found in every crime and in every evil (deed), which his heart had devised to do. There was truth therein, he had done them all, together with the other great criminals, the abomination of every god and every goddess all together. They were great crimes of death, the great abominations of the land, the things which he had done. Now, when he learned of the great crimes of death, which he had committed, he took his own life. Now, when the nobles, who examined him, learned that he had taken his own life, Re, altogether, of which the sacred writings say: "Execute it upon him."

this court record was made, then, the king was dead; but at the time when the roll was procured he was still living; hence the addition "his lord," meaning "his then lord." The king therefore lived to give the instructions for these prosecutions.

While the rendering is doubtful in details, there is no doubt about the meaning in general, that he began to use the charms in the book.

Some retired place by the wall of the harem, mentioned before in the lost portion of the papyrus, as the demonstrative shows.

With the names of the persons represented, and the necessary charms.

This is some official who has been the victim of the magical arts of the condemned; see Papyrus Rollin, l. 1 (§454).

See §454, l. 5.
REIGN OF RAMSES IV

HAMMAMAT STELA

457. These records on the rocks in the Wadi Hammamat bring us knowledge of the only considerable achievement of Ramses IV known to us.

I. THE FIRST STELA

In the first stela the king narrates how, by direct revelation of the god, he has been guided in a personal visit to the quarries of the Wadi Hammamat, which lie three days' journey from the Nile, on the road from Coptos to the Red Sea. In commemoration of this visit the first stela was then cut in the rocks. Its date shows that the king undertook this arduous desert journey only a little over a year and three months after his accession. The document is as follows:

458. At the top is a relief, in two fields, showing Ramses IV offering an image of Mat, the goddess of truth, to "Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, lord of the highlands and mountains;" "Min, lord of the highlands;" and "Isis, mistress of heaven." Behind him stands Mat. Below this, in the second field, the king appears, making the same offering to Onouris, Osiris of Coptos, Isis, and Harsiese. Behind him is Thoth, writing.

459. Below the reliefs is the following inscription:

1Year 2, second month of the first season (second month), day 12 under the majesty of ....... e 2King Ramses IV.........................

aLepsius, Denkmäler, III, 223, c.
bHe succeeded his father on the sixth of the eleventh month (§ 182), just 1 year, 3 months, and 11 days before this date.
cFull fivefold titulary; see following stela (§ 463).
dI have omitted the usual epithets following the king's titulary, as they contain purely conventional reference to the Pharaoh's power, mentioning Retenu and the Asiatics (c 3 mw).
460. Lo, this Good God, excellent in wisdom, like Thoth, he has entered into the annals \( \text{럽} \), he has perceived the records of the house of sacred writings, his divine heart does excellent things for the lord of gods, his understanding conceives pleasing things like \( \text{럽} \), which Re has repeated to him in his heart, that he might find the place of truth, (\( \text{럽} \)) this monument is founded, forever, hereafter. He gave command to the king's-companions, those who enter in to his majesty, the princes, and the great authorities of the South and North, all of them; the scribes and wise men of the house of sacred writings, to make this monument for the place of eternity in this mountain of Bekhen, before God's-Land. King Ramses IV, beloved of Amon-Re, Harakhte, Min, lord of the desert, Horus, son of Osiris, and Eswere (Isis, the great); given life.

II. THE SECOND STELA

461. The king's personal investigation of the quarries early in the year 2 was followed by an expedition of his officers thither, over a year and nine months later, toward the close of the year 3. The second stela was erected by this expedition which, according to the statements of the stela, was the second largest expedition of the kind in ancient Egypt, of which we have any knowledge. It contained no less than 8,362 men, not including 900 who died from the hardships incident to such a desert journey, and the labor of the quarry in the fierce heat of the desert.

462. After the date and introduction (§463) the stela naturally reverts to the king's visit (§464) and the preliminary search for suitable monumental blocks (§465). It then records in full the personnel of the expedition. It was led by the High Priest of Amon, Ramsesnakht, whose son Amenhotep succeeded to the same great office (§§ 486 ff.). He had under him 9 civil and military officers of rank (Nos. 2–10), 362 subordinate officers (Nos. 11–16, 18, and 21), 10 trained artificers and artists (Nos. 23, 24, 26, and 27), 130 quarrymen and stonecutters (No. 25), 50 gendarmes as police and overseers (No. 22), 2,000 slaves (No. 20), 5,000 infantry (No. 17), who, of course, assisted in the work, and 800 men of Ayan (No. 19). Their supplies were brought from Egypt by a train of ten carts and many pack-bearers.

\[\text{The largest expedition was that of Mentuhotep IV (I, 442).}\]

Date and Introduction

463. The relief at the top shows Ramses IV offering Mat to the Theban triad and Bast. Behind him stand Min, Harsiese, and Isis. Below are the following twenty-two lines:

1Year 3, second month of the third season (tenth month), day 27, under the majesty of Horus: Mighty Bull, Living Truth, Lord of Jubilees, like his father, Ptah; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Protector of Egypt, Binder of the Nine Bows; Golden Horus: Rich in Years, Great in Victory, Sovereign, Born of the Gods, 2Creator of the Two Lands; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Ruler of the Nine Bows, Lord of the Two Lands, Lord of Might: Hekmarea-Setepnamon; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses (IV)-Meriamon, beloved of Amon-Re, king of gods, Harakhte, Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, lord of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands," Mut, Khonsu, Min, and Harsiese; given life.

8His heart is vigilant in the pursuit of benefactions for his father, the creator of his body, who opens for him the way to God's-Land. No one who lived (lit., was) before knew it, (for) its way is far before the people, and they had no desire to enter it.

aThe first half of this name is usually Usermare, as regularly in Papyrus Harris.
bThe omitted portion (ll. 3 to beginning of 8) contains only conventional epithets in praise of the king. It is highly improbable that any of these refer to specific occurrences, as stated by Brugsch (Geschichte, 620). This praise merges gradually (l. 8) into specific reference to the Hammamat expedition.
King's Journey

464. Lo, his majesty took account in his heart like his father Harsiese, and he led the way to the place he desired. He went around the august mountain, in order to make marvelous monuments for his father and his fathers, all the gods and goddesses of Egypt. He set up a stela upon this mountain, engraved with the great name of King Ramses IV, given life like Re.

Preliminary Search

465. Lo, his majesty gave command to the scribe of the house of sacred writings, Ramses-eshehab (R{ms-sw,C 2-hb}); the scribe of crown possessions, Hori; the prophet of the house of Min-Harsiese in Coptos, Usermare-nakht, to seek the "Place of Truth," in the mountain of Bekhen (Bhn), after which were very good, being great and marvelous monuments.

The Expedition

466. Then his majesty commanded to commission: 1. the first prophet of Amon, the chief of works, Ramses-nakht, triumphant, to bring them to Egypt. The butlers and nobles who were with him, were:

2. The king's-butler, Usermare-sekhepersu.

They were pure with great purity, they were \(^c\) commanded\(^d\) that the priests might\(^e\) give \(^f\) Bulls were slaughtered; calves were smitten; incense, it \(^g\) streamed\(^h\) to heaven; shedeh and wine, like a flood; beer \(^i\) overflowed\(^j\) in this place; the ritual priest, his voice \(^k\) presented\(^l\) the pure offering to Min, Horus, Isis, \(^m\) Amon, Mut, Khonsul\(^n\) and all the gods of\(^o\) this mountain. Their hearts were glad, they received the oblations, that they might requite with myriads of jubilees, for their beloved son, King Ramses IV, given life forever.

The 900 dead, as stated in the monument, are not included in this total. The scribe has made an error of 6 in the addition. Spiegelberg makes the discrepancy only 4 (Recueil, XXI, 49), but this is due to an error of 3 which has crept into his figures; viz., he inserts among the items two 3's, whereas there is but one 3 in the entire list. He also excludes the leader, which reduces his error to 2, making his discrepancy 4 instead of 6.

datum, the length of Ramses II's reign, sixty-seven years. The petition of Ramses IV is that he may reign as long as did Ramses II, and the manner in which he reasons with Osiris regarding his desire is of unique interest.

BUILDING INSCRIPTION OF THE KHONSU-TEMPLE

472. Ramses III left the Khonsu-temple at Karnak, for the most part, incomplete. The chambers in the rear were then finished by Ramses IV,\textsuperscript{d} including the smaller hypostyles, which contain the following dedication:\textsuperscript{e}

TOMB DEDICATION

473. Of the nine Ramessids who ruled after Ramses III the tombs of six\(^a\) in the Valley of the Kings' Tombs are known. As a specimen of the dedication inscriptions the following of Ramses V may serve:\(^b\)

Live Horus: Mighty Bull, Great in Victory, Sustaining Alive the Two Lands; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Mighty in Strength, Repulser of Millions; Golden Horus: Rich in Years, like Tatenen (Ptah), Sovereign, Lord of Sed Jubilees, Protector of Egypt, Filling Every Land with Great Monuments in His Name; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Nibmare-Meriamon; Son of Re, of His Body, His Beloved, Lord of Diadems: Amonhirkhepshef-Ramses (V)-Neterhekon, given life, like Re, forever. He made (it) as his monument for his fathers, the gods of the Nether World, making for them a new title,\(^c\) in order that their names might be renewed; that they may give very many jubilees upon the Horus-throne of the living, every country beneath his feet, like Re, forever.

\(^a\)According to Baedeker (1902), these are numbered as follows: Ramses IV (Hekmare), No. 2; Ramses VI (Nibmare), No. 9; Ramses IX (Neferkere), No. 6; Ramses X (Yetamon-Neterhekon), No. 1; Ramses XI (Khepermare), No. 18; Ramses XII (Menmare), No. 4. In Baedeker's list the name of Ramses XII (given as Neferkere) is to be corrected to Menmare.

REIGN OF RAMSES VI

TOMB OF PENNO

474. This official of the Pharaoh lived at Derr in Nubia, where there was a temple to Re or Horus built by Ramses II. Penno was "deputy of Wawat," as his chief office; but he was also "chief of the quarry-service, steward of Horus, lord of Miam" (Mcy-t), so that he had charge of the quarry operations in Wawat, as well as the administration of the property of the Horus-temple at Derr, called at that time Miam (My-em).

His relatives filled important local offices at Ibrim: two of them were "treasurer of the Lord of the Two Lands in Miam (Ibrim);" another was "scribe of the White House and mayor of Ibrim." They thus had charge in the local administration of the treasury, which we see was organized in Nubia just as in Egypt at this period. The inscriptions in the tomb furnish a valuable glimpse of the life of the local Egyptian official in Nubia, as well as of the organization of the country and the conditions under Egyptian rule.

475. Penno had erected a statue of Ramses VI, which stood in the temple of Ramses II at Derr; and as a reward the Pharaoh sent him two vessels of silver. This great distinction is portrayed by Penno in his tomb. He shows there, not merely his own reception of the two vessels from the viceroy of Kush, but the latter also, in the act of receiving the vessels from the Pharaoh, to be conveyed to Nubia.

Relief Scenes

476. Before Ramses VI enthroned, stands the king's-son of Kush, and the accompanying inscriptions record the following:

Inscriptions

Said his majesty to the king’s-son of Kush: “Give the two silver vessels (tbw) of ointment of gums, to the deputy.”

To which the king’s-son of Kush replies:

“I will do (so); lo, the happy day shall be celebrated in every land.”

Relief Scene

477. We now see the viceroy, after his arrival in Ibrim, presenting the two vases to Penno. The viceroy stands before the statue of Ramses VI, of which Penno has charge. Behind him is his steward, bearing a roll of papyrus. Penno, accompanied by two priests, stands before them, bearing in his uplifted hands two bowls containing cakes of ointment, which must be the vessels referred to in the inscriptions. The viceroy addresses Penno as follows:

Inscriptions

May Amon-Re, king of gods, favor thee! May Montu, lord of Hermouthis, favor thee! May the ka of Pharaoh, L. P. H., thy good lord, favor thee, who caused thee to fashion the statue of Ramses VI, son of Amon, lovely like Horus, lord of Miam (M'y^c m) ———. a Hearken, O deputy of Wawat, Penno, to Amon in Karnak. These things were spoken in the court of Pharaoh, thy good lord: “May Amon-Re, king of gods, favor thee! May Harakhte favor thee! 478. The response of Penno, which is very brief, is badly preserved, but contained only a greeting \textit{“for Pharaoh, L. P. H., my good lord.”}

The lands furnishing the income for the maintenance of the offerings presented to Ramses VI's statue were also recorded by Penno in his tomb, the inscription\(^a\) doubtless being a copy of the official records regarding them. The lands comprised five different parcels, each of which is carefully demarked by four boundaries, enumerated as East, South, North, and West.

\textit{Title}

479. \(^1\)Domain of the statue of Ramses VI,\(^b\) which rests in Miam (\textit{My\( ^c\) t}).\(^c\)

\textit{First District}

District north of \textit{“Ramses-Meriamon-in-the-House-of-Re,”}\(^d\) the town; opposite the house of Re, lord of the eastern bend.\(^e\)

\textit{Boundaries}

The South is the lands of the domain of the \(^3\)King's-Wife, Nefretiri, which rests in Miam (\textit{My\( ^c\) t}).

\(^a\)Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, III, 229, \(c\); I was able to control Lepsius' copy and to fill up some of the lacunae from a photograph by Graf Grünau, but it was too small to establish a final text in badly preserved places.

\(^b\)Full name given is: \textit{“Amonhirkhepeshef-Ramses-Nuter-Ruler-of-Heliopolis.”}

\(^c\)Unquestionably identical with the form \textit{My\( ^c\) m} (Lepsius, \textit{Denkmäler}, III, 115, tomb of Huy; cf. II, 1037). See also Brugsch, \textit{Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache}, 1882, 31.

\(^d\)This is the name of Ramses II's temple at Derr (see III, 503, and Brugsch, \textit{Dictionnaire géographique}, 247); the words, \textit{“the town,”} are added to distinguish it from the temple. The scribe means the town, and not the temple.

\(^e\)The Nile makes an immense bend to the east just below Derr; the \textit{“House-of-Re”} may be the temple of l. \(i\), or some small, now vanished chapel of the local Re.
The East is the desert.
The North is the flax fields of Pharaoh, L. P. H.
The West is the Nile.

Second District

480. District of the \( \text{I—} \) behind the land of Miyu (\( M\text{y-\text{yw} \)}) in the lands of the deputy of Wawat.\(^a\)

Boundaries

The South is the lands of the domain of the statue under charge of the first prophet, Amenemopet.
The East is the great mountain.
The North is the flax fields of Pharaoh, L. P. H., which are in the lands of the deputy of Wawat.
The West is the Nile.

Area

REIGN OF RAMSES VII

STELA OF HORI

484. This little stela records a commission intrusted by this almost unknown Pharaoh to Hori, his personal scribe, who is dispatched from Busiris to Abydos to pray at the great temple of Osiris, that the king may be given a long reign.

Above is a mortuary prayer in the name of Osiris of Abydos, Onouris of Thinis, Osiris of Busiris, Harendotes, and Eswere on behalf of King Usermare-Ikhnamon, Ramses (VII)-Menthirkhepeshef-Meriamon, who is also represented offering in a relief at the top. Then follows Hori’s statement.

485. The scribe of Pharaoh, L. P. H., Hori, triumphant; he says:

"I am a servant of thy city (nwt), Busiris, thy city (dmy), which is in the Northland (Delta). I am the son of a servant of thy house, the scribe of Pharaoh, L. P. H., the favorite of Abydos, Pakauti (P3k3wtyw), son of Seny (Sn)3, thy servant. I have been brought from my city of the Northland to thy city, Abydos, being a messenger of Pharaoh, L. P. H., your servant. I have come to worship before you and to beseech for him jubilees. Ye will hear his prayers, according as he is profitable to your ka’s, and ye will accept me from the hand of Pharaoh, L. P. H., and my lord, L. P. H., and ye will give to me favor before him daily. ‘Make your designs, I will cherish (them)’. It is said: ‘Who can reverse your plans?’ Ye are the lords of heaven, earth, and the Nether World, and men do as ye say. And ye will give mortuary offerings of bread and beer, and a sweet north wind for my father, Pakauti, and his son, the scribe of Pharaoh, Hori, triumphant."
486. The high priests of Amon continued to extend their power and influence under Ramses IX. This process was sometimes accompanied by violence and insurrection. A woman testifying in a case which occurred in this reign, and desirous of dating a theft in her father's house, refers very significantly to the occasion when the theft took place:

"Examination: the Theban woman, Mutemuya, the wife of the sacred scribe, Nesuamon, was brought in; the oath of the king, L. P. H., not to lie, was administered to her. She was asked: "What hast thou to say?" She said: "When the revolt of the High Priest of Amon took place, this man stole some things of my father."

487. This may have been our High Priest Amenhotep, or possibly the affair belongs before his time. The records left by this powerful official significantly continue those of the High Priest of Amon, Roy, at the close of the Nineteenth Dynasty (III, 618–29). No connection can be traced between Roy and the high priests of the Twentieth Dynasty, unless we find it in the fact that the second prophet, who accompanies Roy on the Karnak wall, was named Beknekhonsu (§620), while the High Priest of Amon under Ramses III was also a Beknekhonsu. The latter must have been succeeded by Ramsesnakht, whose father, Meribast, was not High Priest, and must have belonged to a collateral branch of the family. Ramsesnakht was the father of our High Priest Amenhotep (§ 489, ll. 23, 24). He lived under Ramses III and IV, appearing as High Priest in year 3 of Ramses IV (§ 466), and was succeeded in the high priesthood by his son Nesuamon, whose brother, our Amenhotep, a second son of Ramsesnakht, followed Nesuamon in the great office.\(^a\)

I. BUILDING INSCRIPTIONS

488. In continuance of the privilege already gained by the high priests of Amon under the Pharaohs of the end of the Nineteenth Dynasty, Amenhotep, High Priest under Ramses IX, undertook the rebuilding of the High Priest's dwelling, connected with the Karnak temple of Amon. It had been erected by Sesostris I, some eight hundred years earlier. The kitchen, or refectory, had been solidly rebuilt by Roy, nearly a hundred years before, but the dwelling itself was now in a ruinous state. It stood on the south of the sacred lake (l. 7), east of the southern pylons, and its scanty remains were found there by Mariette.\(^b\) At the east end of the neighboring pylon (VIII), by the similar record of Roy (III, 619–26), Amenhotep inscribed the following record\(^c\) of his building:

\[^a\] See Legrain, Recueil, 27, 71.

\[^b\] See Mariette, Karnak, 11. This must be the strange building south of the lake (Mariette's plan, Pl. 2, R), the purpose of which was left uncertain by Mariette. He afterward (op. cit., 62, 63) suggests this building as the one meant in our inscription, but strangely states that our inscription furnishes no indication of the location of the building, although it clearly states that the building overlooked the southern lake (l. 7). See also the following note, and Maspero's remarks (Momies royales, 670, 671).

\[^c\] Mariette, Karnak, Pl. 40; Rougé, Inscriptions hiéroglyphiques, 202, 203; Brugsch, Thesaurus, 1322–24; Maspero, Momies royales, 669, 670 (partially); the inscription is on the inside (west) of the wall connecting pylons VII and VIII, at the point marked \(h\) on Mariette's plan (Karnak, Pl. 2). Other references to the High Priest Amenhotep's buildings have recently been discovered (by Legrain, Annales, V, 21) in which he refers to "bringing artificers in every great work, that I might build the great place south of the [lake]" — I built this \(—\) (determina-

490. Another building inscription, which almost certainly belongs to our High Priest, records works in the mortuary temples of the Ramessids, especially those of Ramses III and Ramses VI. Fragmentary as the inscription is, it shows that the High Priest's title, "chief of all the works of the king," gave him full charge of the building connected with the old temples.

II. RECORDS OF REWARDSd

492. As a reward for his pious work of rebuilding in the Karnak temple, Amenhotep was summoned by the king to the temple court, where, at the hands of the nobles and the chief treasurer, by the personal orders of the king, he was decorated with gold collars in the conventional manner.
Splendid vessels of gold and silver, costly unguents, food and drink were also given him. In the king's address of praise to the first prophet, certain dues formerly paid to the palace are now to be paid to the High Priest. Unfortunately this, the most important portion of the document, is so obscurely worded that it is difficult to discern its exact purport. But it probably refers to the portion of the royal impost which, when collected by the king's officers and paid into his treasury, had then formerly been paid to Amon. Such impost is now placed directly in the hands of the High Priest, who can collect it from the people into the temple treasury, without its passing through the royal treasury. This enactment was either twice recorded, or it was repeated and made more sweeping in its scope; for Amenhotep has twice represented the scene of his royal rewards on the temple walls, each time accompanied by this enactment of the king, though in varying language. In both scenes, contrary to the immemorial custom that the representations of the king should show him of heroic stature, towering far above his court and officers; the High Priest is here represented with the same heroic figure as the king. The high priests are gradually rising to equal the power and state of the Pharaoh. In keeping with this is the special mention by Amenhotep, in both scenes, of the fact that he inherited his office from his father, Ramsesnakht.

Scene

493. King Ramses IX stands, scepter in hand, addressing two officials, who are supposed to be hanging golden collars upon the neck of the High Priest of Amon, Amenhotep.

aI have not given the duplicate separate treatment, but the variants from it have been inserted in the notes indicated by "variant." The inscriptions are published by Brugsch, Thesaurus, 1319 f. For the lower portions, not accessible in Brugsch's day, I had a photograph (Berlin, No. 5462), which was too small to insure certain readings everywhere.

bHis throne-name, Nfr-k Reded-Stp-n-Rc, is engraved over his head.
The latter is represented, however, with the same heroic stature as the king, and is, therefore, so tall that the two officials are able to reach but a short way above his waist. Before the king are six stands, bearing sacks of gold, metal vessels, collars, etc. The inscriptions are these:

Before the King

494. The king himself, he said to the princes and companions who were at his side: Give many favors and numerous rewards of fine gold, silver, and myriads of all good things, to the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Amenhotep, triumphant, because of the many excellent monuments which he has made in the house of Amon-Re, king of gods, in (hr) the great name of the Good God."

By the High Priest

495. Hereditary prince, count, High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Amenhotep, triumphant, is in the place of his father, the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, in Karnak, Ramsesnakht, triumphant.

Over the High Priest

Year 10, third month of the first season (third month), nineteenth day, in the house of Amon-Re, king of gods. The High Priest of Amon, king of gods, Amenhotep, triumphant, was conducted to the great forecourt of Amon, called: "One-Tells-His-Praise," in order to praise him with goodly and choice speech. The nobles who came forth to praise him were:

The treasurer of Pharaoh, the king's-butler, Amenhotep, triumphant.

a Dümichen wrongly represents him as smaller than the king.

b Variant inserts: "May Amon-Re, king of gods, favor thee."

The concluding words were not read by Brugsch in the first relief, but Dümichen has as above. The variant confirms it, as the photograph shows "his majesty."

d The second relief inserts: "favorite of his lord."

ε Hr; variant, r. 1 ḥrtw ḫsw'-t-f; Brugsch's ḥrtw-f is incorrect.

Variant connects the preceding and the following, and had a different list of persons, thus: "—— goodly and choice [speech], by the scribe, Khonsu——."

These are the same officials whom we find in Papyrus Abbott (§ 511).
The king's-butler, Nesuamon

The scribe of Pharaoh, the king's-butler, Neferkere-em-Per-Amon, the herald of Pharaoh.

496. The things said to him as favor and praise on this day, in the great court of Ἀμών-Ρέ, king of gods, saying:

"May Montu favor thee! May the ka of Ἀμών-Ρέ, king of gods, Per-e-Harakhte, Ptah, the great, "South-of-His-Wall," lord of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands," Thoth, lord of divine words, the gods of the heaven, and the gods of the earth favor thee! ²May the ka of Ramses IX favor thee, the great ruler of Egypt, the beloved child ³of all the gods, ⁴because of the completion ⁵of every work!"

497. ²"The harvests, the exactions of the impost ⁶of the people of the house of Ἀμών-Ρέ, king of gods, shall be under thy charge, and thine shall be the tribute in full according to their sums. ⁷Thou shalt give ¹their —, causing that they should form ¹part of the court of the treasuries, storehouses, and granaries of the house ¹¹of Ἀμών-Ρέ, king of gods; thus from the tribute of the heads and hands ¹shall be ¹³the sustenance of Ἀμών-Ρέ, king of gods, ¹²which thou didst (formerly) cause to be delivered to Pharaoh, thy lord, the deed of a good servant, profitable ¹³to Pharaoh, his lord; he being mighty to do benefactions for Ἀμών-Ρέ, king of gods, ¹⁴the great god; and to do benefactions ²From here on, variant was evidently quite different. It has: "— the beloved child of [all] the [gods] —— gold, the vessels —— gold, the —— the deed of a [good] servant ——” cf. l. 12 below); while in the context of l. 12 (below) were the words: “—— thy completion ———.” The praise in l. 8 has, in the variant, been partially transferred to l. 12; and that in l. 12 has, in the variant, been partially transferred to l. 8.

²Variant, "The harvests and exactions of the house of Amon ———." ¹Or: "heaps."

²The variant of this passage was not uncovered in Brugsch's day; the photograph is very indistinct, but it will be seen that the variant shows important divergencies here; and has transferred this passage to the end. It has: "—— He fills the [breweries] with all his things, [he being the lord of] heaps of things, together with the gifts — — — which Pharaoh, thy lord, makes in the house of the [great] god — —. Thus from the tribute of [the heads and hands] shall be the sustenance, which thou didst (formerly) cause to be delivered into the halls of the king's-house. The many, mighty deeds, the many, many benefactions, which thou dost in the house of the great god — — — — — — ².

²The uncertain word represents two in the original, viz., "the side;" their connection here is quite obscure.

²Variant, "—— Pharaoh, for his treasuries and storehouses ———."
for Pharaoh, his lord — 15 — which thou doest. Now, behold, command has been given to the overseer of the White House, the butler of Pharaoh, and all [the princes], b to give to thee praise, to anoint thee with sweet oil of gums, and to give [to thee] the vessels of gold and silver, [the reward of] the servant of Pharaoh, thy lord, given to him as a favor [of the king's presence] — the — of Amon on this day ———.

THE RECORDS OF THE ROYAL TOMB-ROBBERIES

499. The papyrus records which inform us of the robberies among the royal tombs of this period, while they are strictly legal documents, afford so many valuable glimpses into the historical conditions under the later Ramessids that a Here follow two lines below the uplifted arm of the High Priest, of which Brugsch saw only the first three words, now appearing at the end of his copy, in the wrong place.

b The legs of the figure for “prince” (sr) are probable in the photograph. “Thy lord” (following “Pharaoh”) is impossible, owing to lack of determinative after it (nb), as regularly in this inscription.

c This inscription of three lines is unpublished. It is badly mutilated, and from the small-scale photograph little can be made of it. The variant also shows three similar lines below the scene, which contain a list of the gifts; but it is badly mutilated and not readable in the photograph. It begins quite differently from the above list.
they cannot be omitted from this historical series. The riches lying in the royal tombs, in the form of splendid regalia adorning the dead, rich coffins, and elaborate furniture, which had been accumulating for five hundred years, furnished an irresistible motive for the violation of such tombs. How far the corrupt officials, by indirect connivance, may have been involved in such robberies we cannot now determine. In our first document there are indications that all was not as it should have been among the officials of the government. Their apparent helplessness, and total inability properly to protect the necropolis, however interpreted, are clear evidence of the decadence in government now in progress. A coffin in the British Museum, doubtless of this age, furnishes significant evidence of the conditions in the Theban necropolis, as shown by the following remark,\(^a\) recorded upon it by a scribe:

Year 3, fourth month of the first season, day 15; day of renewing the burial of Osiris, Tesitnakht \((T^\circ s^\circ t-nht)\); after it had been found, the children of the cemetery having taken its coffins and violated the name thereof. They were restored again.

500. While Thebes as a whole was under the vizier as its governor, the main city, on the east side, was under a mayor; at this time a noble, named Peser. The west side was, likewise, under the control of a second mayor, who was also responsible for the necropolis. Under Ramses IX he was a certain Pewero. Peser, mayor of the east side, had in some way gained information of robberies among the royal tombs and he promptly handed in his information to the vizier, as was his duty. The duty was probably not an unwelcome one, for he seems to have had no love for his rival, Pewero, whose administration of the necropolis he was thus able to compromise.

501. Pursuant to this information, the vizier sent a commission to inspect the cemetery, on the eighteenth of Hathor, in the sixteenth year of Ramses IX. Their report covered ten royal tombs, four tombs of the singing-women of the Amon-temples, and a number of tombs of the nobles and people, the exact number of which is not stated. The last were all found to have been plundered; two of the four tombs of the singing-women were in the same condition; but of the royal tombs, only one, that of Sebekemsañ, had been robbed, although two had been unsuccessfully mined into by the robbers. The part of the royal cemetery visited was the district of Drah abu-'n-Neggah, on the northern margin of the western plain of Thebes, and the royal tombs inspected were those of the Eleventh, Thirteenth, Seventeenth, and early Eighteenth Dynasties. The report on them, besides being historically valuable, affords a most interesting glimpse into the royal cemetery at this time. Perhaps the most remarkable reference in it is the description of the stela of Intef I’s pyramid, bearing in relief the figure of the king, with his hound Behka between his feet (§ 514, ll. 9–11). This very stela was found by Mariette still bearing the figure of the king, and the hound with the name Behka inscribed beside it (I, 421 ff.), as described in the report of three thousand years ago.

502. Luckily for Pewero, he was able to locate the thieves, in any case he handed in to the vizier a list of their names. The next day, the nineteenth of Hathor, the vizier, Khamwese, and the Pharaoh’s secretary, Nesuamon, examined the eight men accused of robbing the tomb of Sebekemsañ.
They confessed, and their story of the robbery is one of the most remarkable documents surviving from ancient Egypt (§ 538). To make the matter certain, the vizier and the Pharaoh's secretary crossed the river with them and made them show where the tomb of Sebekemsaf was located (§ 517). A similar test applied to a coppersmith who had confessed to robbing the tomb of Queen Isis, wife of Ramses III, indicated that the man knew nothing of this queen's tomb, and had evidently confessed that he might be momentarily relieved of the torture. As a matter of fact, the tomb of Queen Isis had been robbed by eight thieves, who can hardly be any other than the eight robbers of Sebekemsaf's tomb, although this fact was not discovered until the next year (§§ 542, 543). Then followed an inspection of "The Place of Beauty," a portion of the cemetery where the families of the Pharaohs were buried; they were found to be uninjured. Regarding the royal tombs as the most important, the officials of the necropolis considered the fact that nine of the ten reported robbed were found uninjured, as a great victory for the administration of the necropolis. They therefore sent the whole body of the necropolis employees over to the east side as an embassy of triumph. Some of these rejoicing subordinates went to the house of the mayor of the east side, Peser, who had furnished the information against them to the vizier, and loudly exulted before his door. Meeting three of them in the streets in the evening, Peser was unable to control his anger and, in the presence of witnesses, quarreled with them, told them their inspection of the necropolis was a farce, and accused them vaguely in grave charges, of which he said he was about to send notice to the Pharaoh. This was irregular, as all such charges could legally be reported only to the vizier.

503. Hearing of his enemy's charges immediately, Pewero was quick to see the opportunity of again humiliating Peser. He reported the whole affair in a long letter to the vizier, dated the next day, the twentieth of Hathor. The vizier called the case the following morning, the twenty-first of Hathor, and, incensed at Peser's reflections upon an inspection which had been sent out from his office and partially conducted by him, the vizier quickly brought the proceedings to a close by summoning the three coppersmiths whom Peser had accused of robbing the ten royal tombs, and placed them at the disposition of the court; at the same time introducing the evidence of his own personal knowledge, gained on his visit to the necropolis. The unhappy Peser, who was himself a judge, and sitting on the bench with his colleagues in this case, was obliged to see the coppersmiths acquitted in their examination, which now followed. Whether he suffered any penalty for his indiscretion is not evident, but his allegations regarding the cemetery were all declared untrue, while the vague charges which he had threatened to make to the Pharaoh were ignored, as they had no legal status at all, unless presented in writing before the vizier.

504. It is clear that the state of affairs in the cemetery was sufficiently bad to justify charges against the officials of the necropolis, and although all the tombs indicated by Peser had not been robbed, the investigation had overlooked the robbery of at least one tomb, that of Queen Isis, so that the action of the vizier in completely exonerating Pewero was not justifiable, and arouses the suspicion that there was some reason for such action not apparent on the surface. It certainly was not calculated to preserve the royal burials from similar depredations in the future.

505. The results were, therefore, what might have been anticipated. Three years later, in the nineteenth year of Ramses IX, just after he had associated with himself his son Ramses X as coregent, Pewero, the mayor of the West, who had learned wisdom, handed in to the vizier a list of sixteen people to be tried for robbery in the necropolis; while less than two months later he reported twenty-nine more, whom we find on the docket. Twenty days later six of these men were convicted of robbing the tombs of Seti I and Ramses II. This robbery, therefore, carries us for the first time from the western plain of Thebes to the Valley of the King's Tombs behind the western cliffs. The robberies were, therefore, spreading from the modest pyramids of the kings just before and after the Twelfth Dynasty in the plain, to the magnificent and, of course, more richly equipped cliff-tombs of the great emperors in the valley behind. Five more men were tried two days later and found innocent.

506. Eight months now elapsed without apparent disturbance among the royal tombs; but the usual contingent of tomb-robbers then appears on the court docket, this time numbering twenty-two persons (two women), who had robbed "the tomb of Pharaoh." Which royal tomb is thus designated we do not know, but a thief, whose confession follows the above list of names, states that he robbed the tomb of a Queen Nesimut, and also that of Queen Bekurel, wife of Seti I. Twenty-seven days later a long list of robbers, the wives of eleven of whom were also implicated, and imprisoned, fills the docket, and a fragmentary record of uncertain date refers to the robbery of the tomb of Amenhotep III.

507. It is evident from these facts that not only the mortuary furniture, but also the very bodies of the greatest kings of Egypt were threatened with destruction. The robberies bBut see III, §§ 32A–32C.

had demonstrably now been going on for more than five years at least, and probably much longer. When Pharaohs like Ramses II and Merneptah were guilty of wholesale appropriation of the mortuary equipment of their great ancestors, the officials were naturally not above conniving at similar robberies for their own profit. The occasional prosecution and conviction of the “small fry” were, therefore, of no avail. Such were the conditions under the last three Ramessids in the royal cemetery at Thebes. The pious, and evidently sincere, efforts put forth on behalf of the royal bodies at the close of the Twentieth and the beginning of the Twenty-first Dynasties (§§ 595 ff., 636 ff.) saved them from destruction only after they had been bereft of their splendid furniture and stripped of their rich regalia, by the thieves whose prosecution is narrated in the following documents. So persistent and thorough was their work of plunder that of all the Pharaohs buried at Thebes, only one, Amenhotep II, has been found still in his sarcophagus in his own tomb. But his body had, in ancient times, already been stripped of all valuables. The tomb was securely closed with an iron grating and locked door by the modern government of Egypt, and the body of the great king left undisturbed in its ancient resting-place, where it had slept 3,400 years.

508. Hearing rumors of fabulous wealth on the person of their great ancestor, the tomb-robbers of modern Thebes, doubtless with the connivance of the necropolis guard, forced the tomb door, entered, and subjected the body of Amenhotep II, after an interval of three thousand years, to a second rifling, which was to all appearances entirely fruitless. Perhaps we shall be inclined to judge more charitably the government of Ramses IX and his successors, when it is added that Mr. Howard Carter, the efficient inspector of the government, after having identified and arrested the guilty parties by tireless zeal in their pursuit, was unable to secure their conviction and punishment at the hands of the modern government. Mr. Carter's official report\(^a\) on the whole matter is a striking modern commentary on the ancient conditions exposed in the following documents, and forms the last chapter in the long and dramatic history of the royal tombs at Thebes.

I. PAPYRUS ABBOTT\(^b\)

509. This document is really the vizier's abstract, taken from his files, recording the case between the two mayors, Peser and Pewero, as narrated above (§§ 499–504). The condition of the royal necropolis is, therefore, only incidental to the demonstration of the truth or falsity of Peser's charges against the necropolis administration. The whole case is concluded with the defeat of Peser, recorded at the end. The conditions in the necropolis, revealed in the document, led the scribe to consult it again after it had been lying for three years in the vizier's files, and on this occasion he recorded upon the back of the roll a list of tomb-robbers then awaiting trial, which had been handed in by Pewero, the mayor of the West. Nearly two months later he took down this same roll, to record a similar list beside the first (§ 535).

Pl. 2. List of Tombs Inspected

513. 1The pyramids, sepulchers, and tombs, investigated on this day, by the inspectors:

Tomb of Amenhotep I

2The eternal horizon of King Zeserkere, L. P. H., son of Re, Amenhotep (I), L. P. H., which is 120 cubits deep (measured) from its superstructure, which is called: "The-High-Ascense," north of the "House-of-Amenhotep,-L.-P.-H.,-of-the-Garden," concerning which the mayor of the city, Peser (P 3 -sr), had reported to the governor of the city and vizier, Khamwese; the king's-butter, Nesuamon, the scribe of Pharaoh, major-domo of the house of the Divine Votress, L. P. H., of Amon-Re, king of gods; the king's-butter, Neferkere-em-Per-Amon, the herald of Pharaoh, L. P. H., and the great nobles, saying: "The thieves have broken into it." Inspected on this day; it was found uninjured by the inspectors.

Pyramid of King Intef I

514. 8The pyramid of the king, the son of Re, Intefo (Yn-[if-] c?), L. P. H., which is on the north of the "House-of-Amenhotep,-L.-P.-H.,-of-the-Court (wb3)," upon which the pyramid is destroyed, before which

This can only be the depth of the passage into the mountain, measured from the building at its front. This passage has never been found, but its entrance was certainly located on the plain, by the tombs of the Eleventh and Thirteenth Dynasties here investigated. A temple of Amenhotep I was found here by Spiegelberg (Zwei Beiträge, i-5). The tomb of Amenhotep I was the last to be located on the front of the western cliffs; his successor, Thutmose I, excavated his tomb in the valley behind, thus for the first time separating sepulcher and chapel. Hatshepsut's terraced temple, piercing into the cliff, brought her temple and her tomb behind it again close together; but those of following kings were again widely separated.

bThis is not the mortuary temple of Amenhotep I, which was called "House-of-Zeserkere (Amenhotep I)-on-the-West-of-Thebes" (Lepsius, Denkmäler, Text, III, 238). With "Amenhotep-of-the-Garden" compare "Amenhotep-the-Image-upon-1—v" (mt) (ibid., 282), and "Amenhotep-of-the-Court," in II, 8, of our document. These are doubtless all different Amenhoteps. See Sethe (Götting'sche Gelehrte Anzeigen) and Spiegelberg (Zwei Beiträge, 3).
its stela (still) stands; the figure of the king stands upon this stela, his hound being between his feet, named Behka ($BH\cdot hw-k$). It was inspected on this day; it was found uninjured.

Pyramid of King Nubkheprure-Intef

515. The pyramid of King Nubkheperre ($Nb\cdot hpr\cdot R$), L. P. H., Son of Re, Intef, L. P. H., it was found in course of being tunneled into by the thieves; they had tunneled 2½ cubits into its masonry (drw), 1 cubit (distant) from the outer chamber of the tomb of the chief of the oblation-bearers of the House of Amon, Yuroi ($Yw\cdot r^\times$), which is in ruins. It was uninjured; the thieves had not been able to enter it.

Pyramid of King Sekhemre-Intef

516. The pyramid of King Sekhemre-Upmat ($Shm\cdot R\cdot Wp\cdot m^2\cdot t$), L. P. H.; Son of Re, Intef ($Yntw\cdot j$), L. P. H. It was found in course of being tunneled into by the thieves, at the place where its stela of its pyramid was set up. Inspected on this day; it was found uninjured; the thieves had been unable to enter it.

Pl. 3. Pyramid of King Sebekemsa

517. The pyramid of King Sekhemre-Shedtowe ($Shm\cdot R\cdot Sd\cdot twy$), L. P. H., Son of Re, Sebekemsa ($Sbk\cdot m\cdot s^3\cdot j$), It was found, that the thieves had broken into it by mining work through the base of its pyramid, from the outer chamber of the tomb of the overseer of the granary of King Menkheperre (Thutmose III), L. P. H., Nebamon. The burial-place of the king was found void of its lord, L. P. H., as well as the burial-place of the great king’s-wife, Nubkhas ($Nb\cdot h^c\cdot s$), L. P. H., his royal wife; the thieves having laid their hand upon them. The vizier, the nobles, and the inspectors made an examination of it, and the manner in which the thieves had laid their hands upon this king and his royal wife, was ascertained.

bOn a Mentuhotep tomb at Thebes, see Carter, Annales, II, 201 ff. The tomb designated in our document was, of course, connected with the mortuary temple of Mentuhotep III, found by Naville and Hall at Der el-Bahri (Egypt Exploration Fund Archæological Report, 1903-4, 1 ff.); and Hall, Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology, XXVII, 173-83. Its name was Yc hw-ys’t (or ys’ wt). Zeseret was the name of the immediate locality in the Theban cemetery.

521. The tombs of the singing-women of the house of the Divine Votress, L. P. H., of Amon-Re, king of gods:

- Found uninjured: 2
- Found broken into by the thieves: 2

Total: 4

These are the tombs and sepulchers in which the nobles, the Theban women, and the people of the land rest, on the west of the city; it was found that the thieves had broken into them all, that they had pulled out their occupants from their coverings and coffins, they (the occupants) being thrown upon the ground; and that they had stolen their articles of house-furniture, which had been given them, together with the gold, the silver, and the ornaments which were in their coverings.

Report of the Commission

522. The mayor and chief of police of the great and august necropolis, Pewero, together with the chiefs of police, and the inspectors of the necropolis, the scribe of the vizier, and the scribe of the overseer of the White House, who were with them, made a report upon them (the tombs) to:

- The governor of the city and vizier, Khamwese;
- The king's-butler, Nesuamon;
- The scribe of Pharaoh, L. P. H., the major-domo of the house of the Divine Votress, L. P. H., of Amon-Re, king of gods, king's-butler, Neferkere-em-Per-Amon, the herald of Pharaoh, L. P. H.;
- And the great nobles. The mayor of the West, chief of police of the necropolis, Pewero, handed in the names of the thieves in writing before the vizier, the nobles and butlers. They were seized and imprisoned; they were examined, and confessed the facts.

Vizier's Inspection

523. Year 16, third month of the first season, day 19; day on which there went to inspect the great seats of the king's-children, the king's-wives, and the king's-mothers, which are in "The-Place-of-Beauty:"\(^a\)

The governor of the city and vizier, Khamwese; and the king's-butler, Nesuamon, the scribe of Pharaoh, L. P. H., \(^b\) after the coppersmith, \(^b\) Pekharu, \(^c\) of the west of the city, son of Kharu, his mother, being Mitshered \(^d\) (\(My't'-\text{šry}\)), a serf of \(^e\) "The-House-of-Usermare-Meriamon (Ramses III), L. P. H., in-the-House-of-Amon," under charge of the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Amenhotep, (being) the man \(^f\) who was found there \(^g\) and arrested, while he was with the three people of the (said) temple, beside the tombs, whom the vizier, Nibmare-nakht, had \(^h\) examined \(^i\) in the year \(^j\) had told, saying: "I was in the tomb of the king's-wife, Isis, \(^k\) L. P. H., of King Usermare-Meriamon (Ramses III), L. P. H.; I carried off a few \(^l\) things from it; I took possession of them."

Examination of the Coppersmith

524. Then the vizier and the butler had the coppersmith taken before them to the tomb, while he was blindfolded as a man \(^m\). He was permitted to see \(^n\) (again), when he had reached them. \(^o\) The officials \(^p\) said to him: "Go before us to the tomb, from which you said: 'I carried away the things.'" The coppersmith went before the nobles \(^q\) to one of the \(^r\) tombs of the king's-children of King Usermare-Setepnere (Ramses II), L. P. H., the Great God, in which no one was buried, which was left open, and (to) the hut of the workman of the necropolis, Amenemyenet (Ymn-m-yn’t), son of Huy, which was in this place, saying: "Behold, the tombs in which I was." The nobles examined the coppersmith with a severe examination in the great valley, (but) he was not found to know any place there, except the two places upon which he had laid his hand. He took an oath of the king, L. P. H., that he should be mutilated (by cutting off) his nose and his ears and placed upon the rack (if he lied), saying: "I know not any place here among these tombs, except this tomb which is open, together with the hut upon which I have laid your hands."

Conclusion of Inspection

525. The officials examined the tombs of the great seats which are in "The-Place-of-Beauty," in which the king's-children, king's-wives, king's-mothers, the goodly fathers and mothers of Pharaoh, L. P. H., rest. They were found uninjured. The great officials caused the inspectors, the administrators, the workmen of the necropolis, the chiefs of police, the police, and all the serf-laborers of the necropolis of the west of the city to go around as a great deputation to the city.

The Indiscrétion of the Mayor of the City (East Side)

526. Year 16, third month of the first season, day 19; on this day, at the time of evening, beside the House of Ptah, lord of Thebes there came along the king's-butler, Nesuamon, the scribe of Pharaoh, L. P. H.; and the mayor of the city, Peser; and they came upon the chief workman, Userkhepesh (Wsr-ḥp荷花); the scribe, Amennakht; and the workman of the necropolis, Amenhotep. The mayor of the city spoke to the people of the necropolis in the presence of the (said) butler of Pharaoh, saying: "As for this deputation which ye have made this day, it is no deputation at all. It is (only) your jubilation, which ye have made?" So spake he to them. He took an oath of the king, L. P. H., in the presence of the (said) butler of Pharaoh, L. P. H., saying: "The scribe of the necropolis, Horishere (Hry-Sry), son of Amennakht, and the scribe of the necropolis, Pebes, have told me five very serious accusations worthy of death against you. Yea, I am writing concerning them to Pharaoh, L. P. H., my lord, L. P. H., that a man of Pharaoh, L. P. H., may be sent to take you all in charge." So spake he.

Pewero's Letter of Complaint

527. Year 16, third month of the first season, day 20. Copy of the letter which the mayor of the west of the city, the chief of police of the necropolis, Pewero, sent to the vizier, concerning the words, which the mayor of the city, Peser, spoke to the people of the necropolis, in the presence of the butler of Pharaoh, L. P. H., and of the scribe of the overseer of the treasury, Paynozem.

528. That which the mayor of the west of the city, Pewero, said, to wit:

"The king's-butler, Nesuamon, the scribe of Pharaoh, L. P. H., happened by, when the mayor of the city, Peser, was with him, while he (the mayor) stood quarreling with the people of the necropolis, beside the House of Ptah, lord of Thebes. The mayor of the city spoke to the people of the necropolis, saying: "Ye exult over me at the door of my house! Oh, indeed! Although I am the mayor who makes report to the ruler, L. P. H., and ye therefore exult over him. Ye were there; it was inspected; ye found it uninjured! Broken into..."
were (the tomb of) Sekhemre-Shedtowe, L. P. H., Son of Re, Sebekemsaf, L. P. H., and (that of) Nubkhas, L. P. H., his royal wife; one great ruler, L. P. H., while he makes ten reports. (I invoke) the severity of Amon-Re, king of gods, this great god, on behalf of his monuments, standing in his hall this day. Then spake the workman, Userkhepesh, who is under the hand of the chief workman of the necropolis, Nakhtemhet, saying: 'But all the kings, together with their king's-wives, king's-mothers, and king's-children, who rest in the necropolis, together with those who rest in "The-Place-of-Beauty," they are uninjured; they are protected and defended forever. It is the goodly designs of Pharaoh, L. P. H., their son, which protect them and examine them closely.'

529. "This mayor of the city spake to him again, a second word, saying: 'The scribe of the necropolis, Horishere, son of Amennakht, came to the chief side of the city, to my place of abode, and he told me three very serious accusations. My scribe and the scribe of the two districts of the city put them in writing. Moreover, the scribe of the necropolis, Pebes, told me two other matters; in all five. They were put in writing likewise. He that hath them cannot keep silence. Forbid, for they are great and capital crimes, worthy of bringing to the block, and of executing every penalty because of them. Now, I shall write concerning them to Pharaoh, my lord, L. P. H., that a man of Pharaoh, L. P. H., may be sent to take you all in charge.' So spake he to them, this mayor of the city. He made ten oaths of the king, L. P. H., saying: 'So will I do.'

530. "I heard these words which the mayor of the city spoke to the people of the great and august necropolis of millions of years, of Pharaoh, L. P. H., on the west of Thebes; and I report them to my lord, for it were a crime for one like me to hear (such) words and conceal them. But I was not able to apprehend the very serious words which the mayor of the city spoke; the scribes of the necropolis who stood among the people told me them, (but) my feet were not present with them. I report them to my lord, that my lord may bring in one who apprehended the words, which the mayor of the city spake, and the scribes of the necropolis told me. 'I am writing of them to Pharaoh, L. P. H.,' said he. This is a crime of these two scribes of the necropolis, that they should have applied to this mayor of the city, to report to him; for their fathers did not report to him, but they reported to the vizier when he was in the South. When he was in the North, however, the necropolis-police of the suite of his majesty, L. P. H., went North to the place where the vizier was, bearing their writings. I have made (this) deposition in the year 16, third month of the first season, day 20, of the words which I have heard from the mayor of the city. I put them in writing before my lord, that those who apprehended them may be summoned for tomorrow.'

Pl. 7. Hearing of Peser's Accusations

531. Year 16, third month of the first season, day 21; on this day in the great court of the city, beside the two stelae of the forecourt of Amon in the gate (called): "Praise."

Composition of the Court

People and nobles who sat in the great court of the city on this day:
1. Governor of the city and vizier, Khamwese.
2. The High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Amenhotep.
4. The king’s-butler, Nesuamon, the scribe of Pharaoh, L. P. H.
5. The major-domo of the house of the Divine Votress, L. P. H., of Amon-Re, king of gods, king’s-butler, Neferkere-em-Per-Amon, the herald of Pharaoh, L. P. H.

II. PAPYRUS, AMHERST

536. This fragment, unlike the Abbott papyrus, is part of the court record of the prosecution of the tomb-robbers guilty of the robbery of the tombs on which Peser had reported. It contains the remarkable confession of the eight men who robbed the tomb of Sebekemsaf and his queen, Nubkhas, and the record of their identification of the tomb, on being conducted to it, in the presence of the vizier. All this is omitted in Papyrus Abbott, and only the trial of the innocent coppersmiths is there recorded. A list of prisoners awaiting trial is also appended.

537. Column 1 is too fragmentary to yield any connected content; but it would appear that someone is mentioning

This vizier is mentioned as having been in office in the fourteenth year of Ramses IX (Abbott, 4, 15), while in the year 16 we have the vizier Khamwese. Here we find Nibmarenakht as vizier again in the nineteenth year, and he appears also in Papyrus Mayer in the same year. We must either suppose that there were two viziers of the South, or that Nibmarenakht's term of office was interrupted for a time.

Part of a roll containing three columns and part of a fourth, now in the collection of Lord Amherst of Hackney. Published by Chabas (Mélanges d'archéologie égyptienne, 3ème sér., Tome II, Pls. I-IV), and by Newberry, The Amherst Papyri (London, 1899), Pls. IV-VII.
"thieves ——— with thee," perhaps admonishing one of the culprits to confess the names of his companions; for we next find someone speaking in the first person, referring to people of the High Priest of Amon (l. 3), and especially to "quarrymen ——— who were with me when I was——." The next two lines continue the mention of people who are known to be implicated in the robbery: Hapi and Setnakht, and reference is made to the "‘year 13," perhaps the date of some earlier theft.

538. In the next column (2) the common confession of all is in progress, having begun in the lost upper portion. It is as follows:

Col. 2

a[1]——— King’s-Wife, Nubkhas, L. P. H., his royal wife in the place of his —, itb being protected — its — with mortar, covered with blocks. We penetrated them [all], we found her 3resting likewise. We opened their coffins and their coverings in which they were. We found this 4august mummy of this king f— — —l. There was a numerous list of amulets and ornaments of gold at its throat; 5its head had a [mask] of gold upon it; the august mummy of this king was overlaid with gold throughout. Its 6coverings were wrought with gold and silver, within and without; inlaid with every splendid costly stone. We stripped off the gold, which 7we found on the august mummy of this god, and its amulets and ornaments which were at its throat, and the coverings wherein it rested. 8[We] found the King’s-Wife likewise; we stripped off all that we found on her likewise. We set fire to their coverings. 9We stole their furniture, which we found with them, being vases of gold, silver, and bronze. We divided, 10and made the gold which we found on these two gods, on their mummies, and the amulets, ornaments and coverings, into eight parts."

aThe number of lines lost above is uncertain, but, judging from the next column, there were at least four.

  10^Total of the people who were in the pyramid of this great god: eight men.

Examination of the Robbers

540. Their examination was held, by beating with a double rod, smiting their feet and their hands. They told the same story. The governor of the city and vizier, Khamwese; the king's-butler, Nesuamon, the scribe of Pharaoh, L. P. H., caused the thieves to be taken before them, to the west of the city, in the year 16, third month of the first season, day 19; and that the thieves should put hand upon the pyramid of this god, in whose sepulcher-chamber they had been. Their examination and their \——— were put into writing; and the vizier, the butler, the herald, and the mayor of the city reported to Pharaoh concerning it.

\a The confession of the thieves is perhaps concluded here. If so, the next column began with a list of the thieves, of which the title occupied one line, and the three lost names, three more lines (each name with its titles occupying a line), making a total loss, at the top of the column, of four lines at least.

\b Omitted by the scribe.

\c This is the date of the expedition of the vizier and Nesuamon, as also related in Papyrus Abbott (col. 4, ll. 11, 12, above § 523); but no mention is there made of bringing out the robbers of Sebekemsaf's tomb, to make them identify it.
Thieves Awaiting Punishment

541. Thieves of this pyramid of this god, who took to flight,\(^b\) having been delivered to the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, to have them taken and placed among the prisoners at the gate of the "House-of-Amon-Re-King-of-Gods," with their companions secretly,\(^c\) that Pharaoh might determine their punishment:

III. TURIN FRAGMENT\(^d\)

542. The coppersmith Pekharu, accused of robbing the tomb of Queen Isis (\(§§\) 523, 524) was found to know nothing about it. It was hence supposed to be uninjured. But in the year 17 our fragment shows that it was found to have been robbed by eight thieves. These can hardly have been any other than the eight thieves of Sebekemsaft's tomb, who must have robbed the tomb of Isis before their arrest in the year 16. Hence it had been robbed when the vizier's inspection was made (\(§\) 523), but he failed to discover the fact. Hence it would appear that Penser's charges against Pewero

543. Year 17, third month of the second season, day 22. The workmen of the necropolis ceased work, and the butler, governor of the city, and vizier, Khamwese; the workmen of the necropolis and their overseers, went up to the place of the (female) singers, to inspect (the tomb of) the king's-daughter, king's-wife, Isis, L. IV. MAYER PAPYRI

544. These two documents are the court records of the prosecution of the tomb-robbers, whose names are recorded on the back of the Papyrus Abbott, in the first year of Ramses X (nineteenth of Ramses IX), and of others in the next year, eight months later. The contents of the document will be found sufficiently indicated above (§§ 505 ff.) without further summary here.

d These two documents are in the Free Public Library Museum of Liverpool, in the Mayer collection. They are called Mayer A and Mayer B. Mayer A has twelve columns varying from 20 to 27 lines; B has but one column (in a different hand) of 14 lines. Many years ago Goodwin published some notes on the two (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1873, 39 ff.; ibid., 1874, 63 ff.), but both are still unpublished. I was unable to use them when I visited the Mayer collection, as they were then in London; hence I owe a great debt to Spiegelberg, who without reserve placed his transcription of the original at my disposal. Spiegelberg has also published a translation of the documents (Free Public Library Museum, Mayer Collection Report, No. 1. Translation of Hieratic Papyri Mayer A and B, Liverpool, 1891), which I found very useful.

H., concerning whom the chief of police, Nesuamon, had reported, in this roll of names; for he was there, standing with the thieves, when they laid their hands upon the tombs; who were tortured at the examination on their feet and their hands, to make them tell the way they had done exactly.

Testimony of the Prisoner, Paykamen

547. Examination. The Paykamen (P^y-k^mn), under charge of the overseer of the cattle of Amon, was brought in; the oath of the king, L. P. H., was administered to him, not to tell a lie. He was asked: "What was the manner of thy going with the people who were with thee, when ye robbed the tombs of the kings which are recorded in the treasury of the House of King-Usermare-Meriamon, L. P. H.?" He said: "I went with the priest Teshere (T^b-yry), son of the divine father, Zedi, of the House; Beki, son of Nesuamon, of this house; Payhehsi of the vizier, formerly prophet of Sebek of Peronekh (Pr-nh); Teti (T^ty) who belonged to Payhehsi, of the vizier, formerly prophet of Sebek of Peronekh; in all six."

\(^a\) Lit., "house of the corridor."

\(^b\) Judging from the connection, this word must mean "tomb," but it is otherwise unknown to me; it is written with the gs-sign and the determinative for a building or tomb.

\(^c\) This is a title (\(^c\)) common among the people of the necropolis, and often occurring in these prosecutions. We have no hint as to its meaning, and I indicate it by X.

Testimony of the Chief of Police

548. The chief of police, Nesuamon, was brought in. He was asked: "How didst thou find these men?" He said: "I heard that these men had gone to rob this tomb. I went and found these six men. That which the thief, Paykamen, has said is correct. I took testimony from them on that day . . . . . . The examination of the watchman of the house of Amon, the thief, Paykamen, under charge of the overseer of the cattle of Amon, was held by beating with a rod, the bastinade was applied to his feet. An oath was administered to him that he might be executed if he told a lie; he said: 'That which I did is exactly what I have said.' He confirmed it with his mouth, saying: 'As for me, that which I did is what [they] did; I was with the six men, I stole a piece of copper therefrom, and I took possession of it.'"

Testimony of the Prisoner, Nesumontu

549. The X, the thief, Nesumontu, was brought in; the examination was held by beating with a rod; the bastinade was applied on (his) feet and his hand(s); the oath of the king, L. P. H., was administered to him, that he might be executed if he told a lie. He was asked: "What was the manner of thy going to rob in the tomb with thy companions?" He said: "I went and found these people; I was the sixth. I stole a piece of copper therefrom, I took possession of it."

Col. 2. Testimony of Karu

550. The watchman of the house of Amon, the X, Karu (K3-rw), was brought in; he was examined with the rod, the bastinade was applied to his feet and his hands; the oath of the king, L. P. H., was administered to him, that he might be executed if he told a lie. He was asked: "What was the manner of thy going with the (sic!) companions when ye robbed in the tomb?" He said: "The thief, the X, Pehenui, he made me take some grain. I seized a sack of grain, and when I began to go down, I hearb the voice of the men who were in this storehouse. I put my eye to the passage, and I saw Paybek and Teshere, who were within. I called to him, saying, 'Come!' and he came out to me, having two pieces of copper in his hand. He gave them to me, and I gave to him 1/2 measures of spelt to pay for them. I took one of them, and I gave the other to the X, Enefsu (n-f-sw).

Testimony of Nesuamon

551. The priest, Nesuamon, son of Paybek, was brought in, because of his father. He was examined by beating with the rod. They said to him: "Tell the manner of thy father's going with the men who were with him." He said: "My father was truly there. I was (only) a little child, and I know not how he did it." On being (further) examined, he said: "I saw the workman, Ehatinofer (h ty-nfr), while he was in the place where the tomb is, with the watchman, Nofer, son of Mrwer (Mr-wr), and the artisan; in all three (men). They are the ones I saw distinctly. Indeed, gold was taken, and they are the ones whom I know." On being (further) examined with a rod, he said: "These three men are the ones I saw distinctly."

Testimony of Wenpehti

552. The weaver of "The House," Wenpehti (Wn-phty), son of paynek, was brought in. He was examined by beating with a rod, the bastinade was applied to his feet and his hands. The oath of the king, L. P. H., was administered, not to tell a lie. They said to him: "Tell what was the manner of thy father's going, when he committed theft in the tomb with his companions." He said: "My father was killed when I was a child. My mother told me: 'The chief of police, Nesuamon, gave some chisels of copper to thy father; then the captains of the archers and the X slew thy father.' They held the examination, and Nesuamon took the copper and gave it to me. It remains in the possession of my mother."

Col. 3. Testimony of Enroy

553. A Theban woman, Enroy (Yn-n-r-y), the mistress of the priest, Teshere, son of Zedi, was brought in. She was examined by beating with a rod; the bastinade was applied to her feet and her hands. The oath of the king, L. P. H., not to tell a lie, was administered to her; she was asked: "What was the manner of thy husband's going when he broke into the tomb and carried away the copper from it?" She said: "He carried away some copper belonging to this tomb; we sold it and devoured it."
Second Trial

554. Fourth month of the third season, day 17; was held the examination of certain of the thieves of the cemetery.

Here follows the trial of five men, with the usual formulæ, only slightly varied from those used above. The tomb which they were accused of robbing is not mentioned. All five were found innocent. The prosecutions which follow (Columns 5–6), do not refer to any particular tombs, but they are followed in turn by a list (Col. 7), headed: “Year 2, first month of the first season, day 13; the names of the robbers of the tomb of Pharaoh.” This list contains the names of twenty-two persons (two women), among whom are some of those above prosecuted.

555. After a gap of a few lines Column 8 proceeds with an important trial, of which the beginning is lost in the gap.

Col. 8

He was again examined by beating with a rod. They said to him: “Tell what were the other places which thou didst break into.” He said: “I broke into the tomb of the King’s-Wife, Nesimut.” He said: “It was I who broke into the tomb of the King’s-Wife, Bekurel (Bk-wr-n-r), wife of King Menmare (Seti I), L. P. H., in all, three (tombs).”

556. After enumerating some of the things stolen, in response to a question of the vizier, the examination of the next man shows him to have been innocent. The fisherman who carried the thieves over to the west side is next examined (Column 9) and discharged; and of the three men whose trial follows, one was innocent. A list of twenty-five thieves fills the next column (10) which is headed: “The thieves of the cemetery whose examination was held, concerning whom it was found that they had been in the tombs.” Column 11 contains a similar list entitled: “The thieves of the tomb, in the second month, tenth day," while the margin bears a list of "the women who were imprisoned," being eleven of the wives of the thieves. The document then closes with proceedings in which some of the accused in the first trial reappear.

The second document (Papyrus Mayer B) is in a different hand, but records proceedings of the same sort. In a connection which is not entirely clear, the tomb of "Amenhotep III, the Great God," is mentioned, and it is evident that it had been robbed.
REIGN OF RAMSES XII

THE REPORT OF WENAMON

557. This unique document is our most important source for the position of Egypt in Syria at the close of the Twentieth Dynasty. It belongs to the fifth year of the last of the Ramessids, when he is but the shadow of a king. Hrihor, the High Priest of Amon, although not called king, is in control at Thebes, and Nesubenebded (Smendes), afterward the first king of the Twenty-first Dynasty, living at Tanis, rules the Delta. Under these circumstances Hrihor dispatches one of his officials, named Wenamon, to procure cedar from the Lebanon forests, for the construction of a new sacred barge for Amon. In accordance with an oracle of Amon, the messenger was intrusted with a certain image of the god called "Amon-of-the-Way," which he was to take with him as an embassy to the prince of Byblos. As the envoy met with extraordinary difficulties in the execution of his commission, he made out an elaborate reportb on his return home to explain the long series of accidents which a Papyrus found in 1891 by fellahin at el Khibeh, opposite Feshn in Upper Egypt, now in the possession of M. W. Golénischeff, of St. Petersburg. It consists of a part of one column, and another almost complete. It was published in transcription by M. Golénischeff in a collection of essays in honor of Baron V. de Rosen's jubilee, with a facsimile of the first twenty-one lines; and again by Golénischeff in revised transcription (Recueil, XXI), with translation. It was translated without alteration of Golénischeff's arrangement of the fragments, by W. M. Müller (Mittheilungen der Deutschen Vorderasiatischen Gesellschaft, 1900, 1); and by Erman (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 38, 1-14) with a rearrangement of the fragments which seems to me unquestionably correct. The following translation, based largely on Erman, I published first in the American Journal of Semitic Languages and Literatures, 1905.

b That our document is Wenamon's authentic report there seems to me, after a study of its characteristics, not the slightest doubt; but there is not space here to discuss the question. See Erman (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 38, 2), who reaches the same conclusion.
had interfered with the success of his mission. Although a large fragment is lacking from the middle of the first column, and the loss of another fragment at the end leaves the narrative unfinished, yet this report is, nevertheless, one of the most interesting and important documents yet discovered in Egypt.

558. On the sixteenth of the eleventh month, in the fifth year, probably of Ramses XII, Wenamon left Thebes and, presenting his credentials to Nesubenebdeed at Tanis, he was kindly received. Fifteen days after leaving Thebes (on the first of the twelfth month), he sailed from Tanis (?) into the Mediterranean in a merchant ship, commanded by a Syrian. Arrived at Dor, the gold and silver which he had brought with him as payment for the timber was stolen from him. Dor was now a petty kingdom of the Thekel, who, with the Peleset-Philistines, had begun entering Syria under Ramses III seventy-five or eighty years before. They had constantly pushed southward after their defeat by Ramses III in his eighth year, and had settled along the eastern coast of the Mediterranean as subjects of the Pharaoh. After the death of Ramses III they must have soon gained their independence. The Thekel chief of Dor gives Wenamon little satisfaction for the loss of his valuables, and after waiting nine days he sails northward to Tyre.

559. The account of the voyage from Dor to Tyre is lost in a lacuna. On the way from Tyre to Byblos he in some way met some of the Thekel with a bag (?) of silver. It weighed thirty deben, and, as he had lost thirty-one* deben of silver, he seized it as security. He arrived at Byblos four months and twelve days after his departure from Thebes, but, as he came in an ordinary merchant ship, and not in a special ship of Nesubenebded, and was without rich gifts and the customary externals of former Egyptian envoys, Zakar-Baal, the prince of Byblos, would not receive him, and ordered him to leave. After nineteen days, one of the noble youths in attendance upon the prince fell into a prophetic frenzy and demanded that Wenamon and his god, "Amon-of-the-Way," be summoned and honorably treated.

560. About to return to Egypt, Wenamon was summoned to Zakar-Baal's palace, but, being without money and without credentials, which he had foolishly left with Nesubenebded at Tanis—having only the above-mentioned image of Amon, supposed to confer "life and health," but not likely to impress the Syrian—he was treated with scant respect. The claims of Hrihor and of Amon upon the Lebanon were scouted, and Zakar-Baal proved from his records that his fathers had been paid for their timber. Wenamon therefore sends to Nesubenebded for money, and the prince shows his good-will by dispatching to Egypt at once the heavy timbers of the hull. The messenger returned from Nesubenebded within forty-eight days (perhaps only nineteen or twenty days) with partial payment of the timber desired, whereupon Zakar-Baal sent three hundred men and three hundred oxen to fell and bring the rest of the timber.

561. Some eight months after Wenamon left Thebes the timber was ready. Zakar-Baal delivers it to him, and with grim humor tells him that he has been better treated than the last envoys from Egypt, who were detained at Byblos seventeen years and died there. The prince charges an attendant to conduct Wenamon to their tomb and show it to him. But Wenamon demurs and takes his leave, promising to see that the balance due on the timber is paid. As he is about to sail, a number of Thekel ships appear, for the purpose of arresting him, doubtless for his seizure of the silver. The unlucky Wenamon sits down upon the beach and weeps, while Zakar-Baal, hearing of his plight, sends him reassuring messages, with food, drink, and a female singer. In the morning the prince interviews the Thekel and sends Wenamon to sea. In some way he evades the Thekel, but is driven by a contrary wind to Cyprus (Alasa), where he is about to be killed by the Cyprians, when he finds someone who speaks Egyptian, succeeds in gaining the favor of the Cyprian queen, and is spared.

562. Here the remarkable report is broken off, and how Wenamon reached Egypt we do not know. It will be seen that in the Lebanon region, once conquered and controlled by the Pharaohs, they are no longer feared. Thus, at the close of the Twentieth Dynasty Egypt, while respected as a source of civilization (§ 579), cannot secure even ordinary protection and civility for her messengers in Syria, and this state of affairs had already existed, probably as early as the reign of Ramses IX, a generation earlier.

Besides the earliest known instance of prophetic ecstasy known to us, the document contains also another significant datum, viz., the princes of Byblos had, for two generations, been keeping their daily business records in a book or roll (‘r). Moreover, among the gifts brought to the prince of Byblos from the Delta were five hundred rolls of papyrus paper. Of course, the Phœnician did not write cuneiform with pen and ink upon these rolls; for a script worse suited to such writing materials than cuneiform can hardly be imagined. It is evident that he wrote upon papyrus the hieratic hand customarily written upon it in Egypt, the only method of writing then known which contained alphabetic signs for the whole alphabet. It thus becomes clear that by 1100 B. C. the cuneiform had been displaced in Phœnia, and before the tenth century the Phœnician scribes, discarding the innumerable syllabic signs of the Egyptian hieratic, had accustomed themselves to employ only its alphabetic signs.

Pl. i. Departure from Thebes

563. Year five, a third month of the third season (eleventh month), day 16, day of the departure of the "eldest of the hall," of the house of Amon, [the lord of the] lands, Wenamon, to bring the timber for the great and august barge of Amon-Re, king of gods, which is on the river — — (called): "Userhet"b of Amon.

Arrival at Tanis

564. On the day of my arrival at Tanis (Dc n), at the place of abode of Nesubenebded (Ns-sw-b ś -nb-dd)c and Tentamon, I gave to them the writings of Amon-Re, king of gods, which they caused to be read in their presence; and they said: "I will do (it), I will do (it) according to that which Amon-Re, king of gods, our lord, saith." I abode until the fourth month of the third season,^ having in Tanis.

Voyage to Dor

565. Nesubenebded and Tentamon sent me with the ship-captain, Mengebet (M-n-g-b-ty), and I descended into the great Syrian (H ś -rw) sea, in the fourth month of the third season, on the first day. I arrived at Dor, a city of Thekel (T ś -k ś -r ś), and Bedel (B ś -dy-r ś), its king, caused to be brought for me much bread, a jar of wine, ^and a joint of beef.

The Robbery at Dor

566. Then a man of my ship fled, having stolen:

- e [vessels] of gold, 11[amounting to] 5 deben
- 4 vessels of silver, amounting to 20 deben
- A sack of silver 11 deben
- 12[Total of what] he [stole] 5 deben of gold
- 31 deben of silver

In the morning then I rose and went to the abode of the prince, and I said to him: "I have been robbed in thy harbor. Since thou art the king of this land, thou art therefore its investigator, who should search for my money. For the money belongs to Amon-Re, king of gods, the lord of the lands; it belongs to Nesubenebed, and it belongs to Hrihor, my lord, and the other magnates of Egypt; it belongs also to Weret, and to Mekmela, and to Zakar-Baal, the prince of Byblos," He said to me: "To thy honor and thy excellence! but, behold, I know nothing of this complaint which thou hast lodged with me. If the thief belonged to my land, he who went on board thy ship, that he might steal thy treasure, I would repay it to thee from my treasury till they find thy thief by name; but the thief who robbed thee belongs to thy ship. Tarry a few days here with me, and I will seek him." When I had spent nine days, moored in his harbor, I went to him, and said to him: "Behold, thou hast not found my money [therefore let me depart] with the ship-captain, and with those who go -- -- -- --."f f Four lines are lost here and an uncertain amount more.

g The total loss between the two parts of Pl. 1 is some twenty-three lines. The bulk of this loss precedes Pl. 3, and only a small portion follows it.

h Three lines containing but a few broken words; among them a reference to searching for the thieves, which shows that Fragment 3 belongs in this place. The journey from Dor to Tyre is somewhere in these lacunae.

i Only the r of Tyre is preserved, but as he is just leaving there, it can hardly be the r of Dor.

j This is not the arrival, but merely the mention of his intended destination.
Seizure of Security from Thekel Travelers

568. I found 30 deben of silver therein. I seized it, saying to them: “I will take your money, and it shall remain with me until ye find my money. Was it not a man of Thekel who stole it, and no thief of ours? I will take it.”

They went away, while I — — —.

Arrival at Byblos

569. [I] arrived — — — the harbor of Byblos. [I made a place of concealment, I hid] “Amon-of-the-Way,” and I placed his things in it. The prince of Byblos sent to me, saying: “Be take thyself] (from) my harbor.” I sent to him, saying: “— — —.”

If they sail, let them take me to Egypt.” — — I spent nineteen days in his [harbor], and he continually sent to me daily, saying: “Betake thyself away from my harbor.”

A Prophet of Byblos

570. Now, when he sacrificed to his gods —, the god seized one of his noble youths (c), making him frenzied, so that he said: “Bring the god hither! Bring the messenger of Amon who hath him. Send him, and let him go.”

Wenamon’s Departure Prevented

571. Now, while the frenzied (youth) continued in frenzy during this night, I found a ship bound for Egypt, and I loaded in all my belongings into it. I waited for the darkness, saying: “When it descends I will embark the god also, in order that no other eye may see him.”

Wenamon is Summoned

572. The harbor-master came to me, saying: “Remain until morning by the prince.” I said to him: “Art not thou he who continually came to me daily, saying: ‘Betake thyself away from my harbor’?

—a few fragments of words for about one-third line.

bThe lacuna here doubtless includes several lines, but it is not so large as the one before Pl. 3; see notes, p. 279. Of the uncertain line numbering I have inserted only every five lines for this fragment.

cLit., “up.” In ecstasy the youth demands the summoning of Wenamon and his image of Amon, and that they be honorably treated and dismissed.
Dost thou not say, 'Remain in the [land'], in order to let depart the ship that I have found? that thou mayest come and say again, 'Away!'? He went and told it to the prince, and the prince sent to the captain of the ship, saying: "Remain until morning by the king."

Wenamon Visits Zakar-Baal

573. When morning came he sent and had me brought up, when the divine offering occurred in the fortress wherein he was, on the shore of the sea. I found him sitting in his upper chamber, leaning his back against a window, while the waves of the great Syrian sea beat against the behind him. I said to him: "Kindness of Amon!" He said to me: "How long is it until this day since thou camest (away) from the abode of Amon?" I said: "Five months and one day until now."a

Zakar-Baal Demands Wenamon's Papers

574. He said to me: "Behold, if thou art true, where is the writing of Amon, which is in thy hand? Where is the letter of the High Priest of Amon, which is in thy hand?" I said to him: "I gave them to Nesubenebded and Tentamon." Then he was very wroth, and he said to me: "Now, behold, the writing and the letter are not in thy hand! Where is the ship of cedar, which Nesubenebded gave to thee? Where is its Syrian crew? He would not deliver thy business to this ship-captain to have thee killed, that they might cast thee into the sea. From whom would they have sought the god then? And thee, from whom would they have sought thee then?" So spake he to me. I said to him: "There are indeed Egyptian ships and Egyptian crews who sail under Nesubenebded, (but) he hath no Syrian crews." He said to me: "There are surely twenty ships here in my harbor, which are in connection with Nesubenebded; and at this Sidon, whither thou also wouldst go, there are indeed 10,000 ships also which are in connection with Berket-el (W-r-k-ty-r) and sail to his house."

aThis would be the twelfth of the fourth month.

bErman thinks this must be some great Phoenician merchant resident in Tanis, and the parallelism certainly points clearly to someone in Tanis.
Wenamon Declares His Business

575. Then I was silent in this great hour. 3He answered and said to me: "On what business hast thou come hither?" I said to him: "I have come after the timber for the great and august barge of Amon-Re, king of gods. Thy father did it, thy grandfather did it, and thou wilt also do it." So spake I to him.

Zakar-Baal Demands Payment as of Old

576. He said to me: "They did it, truly. 6If thou give me (something) for doing it, I will do it. Indeed, my agents transacted the business; 7the Pharaoh, L. P. H., sent six ships, laden with the products of Egypt, and they were unloaded into their 8storehouses. And thou also shalt bring something for me." He had the journal of his fathers brought in, 9and he had them read it before me. They found 1,000 deben of every (kind of) silver, which was in his book.

Zakar-Baal Declares His Independence

577. 10He said to me: "If the ruler of Egypt were the owner of my property, and I were also his servant, 11he would not send silver and gold, saying: 'Do the command of Amon.' It was not the payment 12of 13tribute which they exacted of my father. As for me, I am myself neither thy servant nor am I the servant of him that sent thee. If I cry out to the Lebanon, the heavens open, and the logs lie here on the shore of the sea."

Wenamon has no Equipment

578. "Give me the sails which thou hast brought to propel thy ships which bear thy logs to [Egypt]. 16Give me the cordage which thou hast brought to bind the trees which I fell, in order to make them 17fast] for thee 18ships, and the tops are (too) heavy and they break, and thou die in the midst of the sea when Amon thunders in heaven, and puts Sutekh in his time."

Egypt the Home of Civilization

579. "For Amon 20equips all lands; he equips them, having first equipped the land of Egypt, whence thou comest. 21For artisanship

*Mrk for brk? F² = "pay" is common. Erman suggests that mrk is connected with melek, "king," but f² seems to me, to make this interpretation difficult.
came forth from it, to reach my place of abode; and teaching came forth from it, to reach my place of abode. What (then) are these miserable journeys which they have had thee make?"

_Wenamon Claims Lebanon for Amon_

580. I said to him: "O guilty one! They are no miserable journeys on which I am. There is no ship upon the river, which Amon does not own. For his is the sea, and his is Lebanon of which thou sayest, 'It is mine.' It grows for 'Userhet' (the barge) of Amon, the lord of every ship. Yea, so spake Amon-Re, king of gods, saying to Hrihor, my lord: 'Send me,' and he made me go, bearing this great god. But, behold, thou hast let this great god wait twenty-nine days, when he had landed thy harbor, although thou didst certainly know he was here. He is indeed (still) what he (once) was, while thou standest and bargainest for the Lebanon with Amon, its lord. As for what thou sayest, that the former kings sent silver and gold, if they had given life and health, they would not have sent the valuables; (but) they sent the valuables to thy fathers instead of life and health. Now, as for Amon-Re, king of gods, he is the lord of life and health, and he was the lord of thy fathers, who spent their lifetime offering to Amon. And thou also, thou art the servant of Amon. If thou sayest to Amon, 'I will do (it), I will do (it),' and thou executest his command, thou shalt live, and thou shalt be prosperous, and thou shalt be healthy, and thou shalt be pleasant to thy whole land and thy people. Wish not for thyself a thing belonging to Amon-Re, [king of] gods. Yea, the lion loves his own."

_Wenamon will Secure Payment_

581. "Let my scribe be brought to me, that I may send him to Nesubenebed and Tentamon, the rulers whom Amon hath given to the North of his land, and they will send all that of which I shall write to them, saying: 'Let it be brought;' until I return to the South and send thee all, all thy trifles again." So spake I to him.

*a*Lebanon.

*b*This was four months and twelve days after leaving Thebes; he must therefore have reached Byblos three months and thirteen days after leaving Thebes.

*c*Ramses III built a temple of Amon in Syria (§219); Thutmose III gave three cities of the southern Lebanon district to Amon (II, 557); Zakar-Baal had a butler named Penamon, and there is no doubt that Wenamon's statement was correct.
Timber is Shipped; Messenger Brings Payment

582. He gave my letter into the hand of his messenger. He loaded in the keel, the head of the bow and the head of the stern, with four other hewn timbers, together seven; and he had them taken to Egypt. His messenger went to Egypt, and returned to me, to Syria in the first month of the second season. Nesubenebted and Tentamon sent:

- Gold: 4 $T_b$-vessels, 1 $K^3 k-mn$-vessel;
- Silver: 5 $T_b$-vessels;
- Royal linen: 10 garments, 10 'hm-hrd';
- Papyrus: 41500 rolls;
- Ox-hides: 500;
- Rope: 500 (coils);
- Lentils: 20 measures;
- Fish: 30 measures ($m$t$^2$);

She$^c$ sent me:

- Linen: 425 ' — 1, 5 'hm-hrd';
- Lentils: 1 measure;
- Fish: 5 measures ($m$t$^3$).

More Timber Felled

583. The prince rejoiced, and detailed 300 men and 300 oxen, placing overseers over them, to have the trees felled. They spent the second season therewith. In the third month of the second season (seventh month) they dragged them [to] the shore of the sea. The prince came forth and stood by them.

Timber Delivered to Wenamon

584. He sent to me, saying: "Come." Now, when I had presented myself before him, the shadow of his sunshade fell upon me. Penamon, a butler, he stepped between me, saying: "The shadow of Pharaoh, L. P. H., thy lord, falls upon thee." He was angry with him, saying: "Let him alone!" I presented myself before him, and he answered and said to me: "Behold, the command which my fathers formerly executed, I have executed, although thou for thy part hast not done for me that which thy fathers did for me. Behold, there has arrived the last of thy timber, and there it lies. Do according to my desire and come to load it, for they will indeed give it to thee."

Fate of a Former Embassy

585. "Come not to contemplate the terror of the sea, (but) if thou dost contemplate the terror of the sea, thou shalt also contemplate my own. Indeed, I have not done to thee that which they did to the messengers of Khamwese, when they spent seventeen years in this land. They died in their place." He said to his butler: "Take him, and let him see their tomb, wherein they sleep."

Zakar-Baal's Great Distinction

586. I said to him: "Let me not see it! As for Khamwese, (mere) people were the messengers whom he sent to thee; but people there was no [god among] his messengers. And yet thou sayest, 'Go and see thy companions.' Lo, art thou not glad? and dost thou not have made for thee a tablet, whereon thou sayest: 'Amon-Re, king of gods, sent to me Amon-of-the-Way,' his divine messenger, and Wenamon, his human messenger, after the timber for the great and august barge of Amon-Re, king of gods? I felled it, I loaded it, I supplied him (with) my ships and my crews, I brought them to Egypt, to beseech for me 10,000 years of life from Amon, more than my ordained life, and it came to pass.' Then in future days when a messenger comes a The chief of Byblos.

b Who this Khamwese was is not entirely certain. Erman recalls the occurrence of Khamwese as part of the name in the cartouche of Ramses IX, and it is not improbable that he is meant, for as the messengers have been some time dead, and this document is dated in the fifth year of Ramses XII, they must have left Egypt some twenty-five years earlier, which would certainly carry us back into the reign of Ramses IX.

c This phrase "in their place" in connection with dying must have some particular meaning. It is frequently so used in the inscriptions of Ramses III, and of the conspirators against him, who committed suicide; but its idiomatic force is not clear. from the land of Egypt, who is able to write, and reads thy name upon the stela, thou shalt receive water in the West, like the gods who are there.” He said to me: “It is a great testimony which thou tellst me.”

Payment of Balance Promised

587. I said to him: “As for the many things which thou hast said to me, when I reach the place of abode of the High Priest of Amon, and he shall see thy command in thy command, a [he] will have something delivered to thee.”

Thekel Ships Lie in Wait

588. I went to the shore of the sea, to the place where the timbers lay; I spied eleven ships coming from the sea, belonging to the Thekel, saying: “Arrest him! Let not a ship of his (pass) to Egypt!” I sat down and began to weep. The letter-scribe of the prince came out to me, and said to me: “What is the matter with thee?” I said to him: “Surely thou seest these birds which twice descend upon Egypt. Behold them! They come to the pool, and how long shall I be here, forsaken? For thou seest surely those who come to arrest me again.”

Zakar-Baal Reassures Wenamon

589. He went and told it to the prince. The prince began to weep at the evil words which they spoke to him. He sent out his letter-scribe to me, he brought me two jars of wine and a ram. He sent to me Tentno (Tynt-nwšt), an Egyptian singer (feminine), who was with him, saying: “Sing for him; let not his heart feel apprehension.” He sent to me, saying: “Eat, drink, and let not thy heart feel apprehension. Thou shalt hear all that I have to say in the morning.”

Interview with the Thekel

590. Morning came, he had (the Thekel) called into his e—f, he stood in their midst and said to the Thekel: “Why have ye come?”

a The text is translated verbatim; but it is perhaps corrupt.

b The report, otherwise, so full, abbreviates here; he means that they were under orders, of which he introduces the purport by the word “saying.”

c Lit., “until what comes.”

d This word points to earlier trouble with the Thekel, and doubtless explains the “twice” above.
They said to him: "We have come after the stove-up ships which thou sendest to Egypt with our comrades." He said to them: "I cannot arrest the messenger of Amon in my land. Let me send him away, and ye shall pursue him, to arrest him."

Escape to Alasa

He loaded me on board, he sent me away — to the harbor of the sea. The wind drove me to the land of Alasa; those of the city came forth to me to slay me. I was brought among them to the abode of HeteB (H –ty–b), the queen of the city. I found her as she was going forth from one of her houses and entering into her other. I saluted her, I asked the people who stood about her: "There is surely one among you who understands Egyptian?" One among them said: "I understand (it)." I said to him: "Say to my mistress: ‘I have heard as far as Thebes, the abode of Amon, that in every city injustice is done, but that justice is done in the land of Alasa; (but), lo, injustice is done every day here." She said: "Indeed! What is this that thou sayest?" I said to her: "If the sea raged and the wind drove me to the land where I am, thou wilt not let them take advantage of me to slay me; I being a messenger of Amon. I am one for whom they will seek unceasingly. As for the crew of the prince of Byblos whom they sought to kill, their lord will surely find ten crews of thine, and he will slay them, on his part." She had the people called and stationed (before her); she said to me: "Pass the night ————."

RECORDS OF THE RESTORATION OF THE ROYAL MUMMIES

We have already seen (§ 545) that the tombs of Ramses II and Seti I had been broken into in the first year of Ramses X (the nineteenth of Ramses IX). Under Ramses XII, in his sixth year, the High Priest of Amon, Hrihor, sent some of his people to restore the bodies, and to place them again in their coffins and sarcophagi. They left a record of this pious work on the coffins:

LETTER TO THE VICEROY OF KUSH

595. This letter, the content of which is in itself of slight consequence, is important because of the person to whom it is addressed, the viceroy of Kush. Already in the Nineteenth Dynasty the gold-lands of Nubia had passed into the hands of Amon, though they were administered by the viceroy of Kush (III, 640). The next step was the administration of these Nubian gold-lands and the assumption of the office of viceroy of Nubia by the High Priest of Amon. This was done by Hrihor (§615), but the following letter shows that he had not yet done so in Ramses XII's seventeenth year, at which time the king still exercises his authority over the viceroy, and sends him after a tardy butler, who needs prodding in the execution of the king's commission to collect building materials, and to finish a shrine.

The temple of Khonsu is the only monument in which we can clearly trace the fall of the last Ramessid and the succession of the High Priest of Amon, Hrihor. This transition will be found briefly discussed in connection with Hrihor's inscriptions (§ 608). The dedications occupying the official place on the architraves of the hypostyle are all in the name of Ramses XII, as if he were in full enjoyment of the usual powers of the Pharaoh; while those around the base of the wall in the same hall (§§ 609, 610) contain but the scantiest reference to the king. On the rôle played by the king in the wall scenes in the same hall, see §§ 611-13.

The architrave dedications are as follows:

THE TWENTY-FIRST DYNASTY
THE TWENTY-FIRST DYNASTY

604. While these volumes are not intended to furnish discussions and reconstructions of the dynasties, the Twenty-first Dynasty is, nevertheless, so unusual in character, that it is impossible to classify the brief and fragmentary documents which it has left us, without some indication of its peculiarities.

605. Already under the last Ramessid (before his fifth year) we have seen, in the report of Wenamon, that a local dynast of Tanis, Nesubenebde, had assumed the sovereignty of the Delta. When Ramses XII died and the Twentieth Dynasty was ended, Nesubenebde became king of Lower Egypt, and the founder of the Twenty-first Dynasty of Manetho. At Thebes, the High Priest of Amon, Hihihor, became king of Upper Egypt. Of the Tanite kings we know next to nothing; but we are at least able to follow the high priests at Thebes from generation to generation without a break. They form the only connected thread along which we can trace the course of the dynasty. At Hihihor's death they were not able to maintain their royalty, and Nesubenebde ruled the whole country for a time. Hihihor's grandson, Paynozem I, having, while High Priest, married Makere, the daughter of Pesibkhenno I of Tanis, likewise became sole king for a long reign. Otherwise the Tanites were dominant; but probably not on hostile terms with the high priests, who remained powerful princes, more or less independent, and boasting many of the titles of royalty.

606. Possessing only a few names of Tanite kings in northern monuments of their own, we are obliged to turn to Thebes for the materials with which to reconstruct the dynasty. The difficulty with these materials is that they *aSee Maspero, Momies royales, 692–98.

frequently, indeed prevailingly, record royal dates with only the year, omitting the name of the Tanite king to whom the year belongs. From such documents it is now possible to reconstruct the following table of the dynasty. Space and the purpose of these volumes do not permit its discussion here, but some explanations will be found with the inscriptions upon which it is based. An asterisk with a number indicates that the king's name accompanies it in the original document; and the dagger, that the name of the High Priest occurs with it. It will be seen that there are only three dates with both. The numbers show that the Twenty-first Dynasty lasted 134 + 6x years. As one x is the entire reign of Hrihor (Nesubenebded), we must credit it with not less than 145 years.

*a They will be found, with one exception, in the following translations (§§ 608-92).

*b The former discussions, as well as an exhaustive treatment of the Twenty-first Dynasty, will be found in Maspero's Momies royales (Mémoires de la mission française au Caire, I, 640-730). A modification of Maspero's reconstruction was proposed by Petrie, who proved that Hrihor and Siamon were distinct (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archeology, XVIII, 59, 60). New material found on the priestly mummies discovered in 1891 confirmed this conclusion. This material was published by Daressy (Revue archéologique, 28, 75-78), who furnished further modifications of Maspero's reconstruction, but did not employ all the available material. Another modification was proposed by Torr (Revue archéologique, 28, 296-98), who added a new High Priest. The above table agrees in the main with Daressy, but employs all the material and adds some corrections. No comparison with the data of Manetho is here necessary, as his account of the dynasty is almost worthless.

*c The order of these kings is certain, but the connections between them are very loose, so that there is room for an ephemeral king who may be inserted somewhere in the second half (especially between Amenemopet and Siamon or Siamon and Pesibkhenna II), to make up the seven kings given by Manetho in this dynasty.

<sup>b</sup>Noticed by Mr. Cecil Torr on a now missing coffin, on which the deceased calls himself: "son of the High Priest Zekhonsefonekh, son of King Paynozem" (Revue archéologique, 1896, 28, 298). His position above is not quite certain, but as we do not know who was High Priest in Paynozem I's seventh and eighth years, he may well fall in that gap.

<sup>c</sup>As Torr (Revue archéologique, 1896, 28, 296 ff.) has noticed, Paynozem II as High Priest under King Amenemopet calls himself in several places both son of the High Priest Menkheperre and son of King Pesibkhenno, showing that both the latter names belong to the same man. As Menkheperre occurs in a cartouche, e.g. (Revue archéologique, 28, 75), and likewise Pesibkhenno in a cartouche is once called High Priest, there is no doubt that Torr is correct in supposing that Menkheperre is the prenomen of Pesibkhenno. He thus assumed royal honors, and may possibly have ruled for a while alone. As he would not assume the throne-name till he had gained the throne, that is, until after Paynozem I's death, the High Priest Pesibkhenno whom we find in a fourth and twelfth year must be a different man. Hence I cannot agree with Torr that this Pesibkhenno is the same as Menkheperre, whose father regularly has the cartouche, while this Pesibkhenno is called simply son of Paynozem (without cartouche).

REIGN OF HRIHOR

INSCRIPTIONS OF THE TEMPLE OF KHONSU

608. The inscriptions and reliefs in the temple of Khonsu at Karnak form the chief source for tracing the rise of Hrihor as High Priest of Amon, until his usurpation of the kingship, and they clearly establish the early contentions of Rougé, so ably supplemented by Maspero, as against those of Lepsius, regarding the close of the Twentieth and the beginning of the Twenty-first Dynasty. The adytum and rearmost chambers of the temple were built by Ramses III and his immediate successors (§§ 214, 472). The hypostyle, the court before it, and the pylon were the work of Ramses XII and Hrihor, the hypostyle having been built by them both in common, and the court and pylon by Hrihor alone. Hence, in passing from the hypostyle outward to the court, the political change can be traced on the walls as one goes. We have seen the dedications of Ramses XII on the architraves of the hypostyle (§§ 601-3). The dedications around the base of the wall, however, as well as the scenes in the same hall, show the dominant position held by Hrihor and the subordinate rôle played by the king.

Dedication

609. High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, commander in chief of the armies of South and North, the leader, Hrihor, triumphant; he made it as his monument for “House-of-Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest;”

making for him a temple for the first time in the likeness of the horizon of heaven, extending his temple as an eternal work, enlarging his monument (more than) before. Lo, the desire of his majesty was to enlarge the house of his father, "House-of-Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest," in order that his shrine might be covered, by doing benefactions for his ka; that which the Son of Re, Ramses XII, beloved of Khonsu, made for him.

Over Amon

Utterance of Amon . . . .: O my son, of my body, my beloved, Menmare-Setepneptah (Ramses XII), my heart is glad, rejoicing — [in] thy monument, etc. . . . .

613. In other scenes which follow, Hrihor officiates while the name of Ramses XII appears behind him. The High Priest thus performs the official religious functions in which hitherto only the Pharaoh has been portrayed on temple walls, while the name of the Pharaoh, and the promises of the god to him, usual on such occasions, are still inserted.

614. The door leading out from this hypostyle to the court in front shows the power of Hrihor still increasing; he has become overseer of the granaries, the source of Egypt's greatest wealth, and viceroy of Kush. These titles appear side by side beneath the name of Ramses XII, in a date (unfortunately now lost) at the head of a very interesting, but fragmentary, inscription which narrated a prodigy in favor of Hrihor, doubtless connected with his advance in power. He appeared before Khonsu with a petition for "life, prosperity, health, and many good things," the blessings usually desired; but it is evident that some great event in Hrihor's favor was to take place within a year; though it is not clear what that event was. Khonsu's approval was expressed by numerous nods of the god's head, and news of this was taken to Amon, who also nodded violently in approval, adding the audible promise that he assured Hrihor twenty years, meaning, of course, twenty years' more of power; but whether as king or High Priest is not stated in the scanty fragments preserved. However, it is highly probable that this is the narrative of the divine oracle declaring Hrihor king. In any case, he was very anxious to make the whole event a matter of record, and immediately secured Amon's approval of recording the prodigy "upon stone." The place where the incident is recorded on the door, between the portion of the temple erected by Hrihor in conjunction with Ramses XII, and the court erected by Hrihor alone, suggests that in it we have the divine sanction of the transition which takes place at that point. The record is as follows:

Date

615. Ramses XII, beloved of Amon-Re, king of gods, given life forever.

Hrihor before Khonsu

High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, king's-son of Kush, overseer of the granaries. Then the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, repeated to him: "[Thebes], thy city." \[a\]Brugsch, Recueil de monuments, Pl. XXI; Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 248, b; see also Text, III, 64. Lepsius, Denkmäler, is hardly readable; Brugsch is much better. See also Maspero, Momies royales, 671. The inscription is on the door-post of the door leading from Hrihor's court to the hypostyle; it is marked g in Lepsius' plan (Text). Only the ends of twenty-eight horizontal lines are preserved.

\[b\]So read by Brugsch, by Lepsius (Text) and by Maspero (Momies royales, 671).

\[c\]There is not the slightest doubt that these titles belonged to Hrihor. He is the only High Priest of Amon known under Ramses XII, and his name occurs in this inscription below as the chief actor. From now on, the high priests during their ascendancy, are also viceroys of Kush; see, among other examples, a statue recently found by Legrain at Karnak (Annales, IV, 9). We are therefore to supply the name of Hrihor in the above lacunae following the titles.
Re, king of gods, the father [Then the god nodded his head] exceedingly, exceedingly, saying: "A space of 20 years is [that which] Amon-Re, king of gods, gives to thee [because of] the good deeds which thou hast done for Mut, Khonsu, and her children formerly.

Record of the Prodigy

617. Then the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Hrihor, triumphant, repeated it to him, saying: "O my good lord [Shall we record these] marvels upon stone?" The god nodded (his) head exceedingly, exceedingly. Then repeated to him [the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Hrihor, saying]: "Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest, thy saying; grant that they make a stela— [Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest, which he made."
The god nodded (his) head exceedingly, exceedingly.

Hrihor's Gratitude

618. eternity shall come to thee, and millions of years shall be in — generations shall come to talk of these marvels of — generations, children shall make — the words which came, shall be [which] thou sayest to me, that givest to me the space of twenty years."

Then Hrihor gave command to erect this stela in putting it, a copy.

619. With the outer court, then, begins the sole rule of Hrihor, the divine approval of which is doubtless narrated in the preceding document, recorded on the door where we leave Ramses XII behind. Here only Hrihor's name appears, and here he only is the recipient of the blessings of the gods, which up to this time, and in the hypostyle behind, were always accorded the Pharaoh alone. Hence in the relief scenes in the court, Khonsu addresses Hrihor thus:

Utterance of "Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest": "O my son, my beloved, Lord of the Two Lands, Siamon-Hrihor; how beautiful is this beautiful, pure, and excellent monument which thou hast made for me! My heart is satisfied in seeing them (sic!), and I give to thee reward for them, even life, stability, satisfaction, and the kingdom of the Two Lands in peace, like Re."

621. As king, therefore, Hrihor built the forecourt and the pylon before it, as is amply borne out by the following dedications on the architraves and the pylon, giving him the full Pharaonic titulary. In this he boldly published his real office, putting the title "High Priest of Amon" into the first cartouche, as if it were his given name, before he gained the throne.

622. Live Horus: Mighty Bull, Son of Amon, Maker of Monuments, Establishing for Him Who Begat Him, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Great Ruler of Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: High Priest of Amon. He made (it) as his monument for his father, Amon-Re, king of gods, making for him a colonnade, for the first time; it is made like the beauty of the horizon; all people are in joy at seeing it, the lord of silver and mistress of gold, comprehending every splendid, costly stone; the deed of a son in love of him who [placed] him on his throne, giving to him eternity as King of the Two Lands, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: High Priest of Amon, beloved of Amon-Re, king of gods, lord of heaven, ruler of the gods; that he might be given life forever.

623. Live the Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Satisfying the Gods, Building their House, Furnishing the Satisfaction of their ka's; Son of Re, Amiable Lord of the Palace, Lord of Diadems: Siamon-Hrihor, divine seed of the lord of gods, his splendid emanation, whom

624. Live Golden Horus: Doing Benefactions in Karnak for his father, Amon, Creator of his Beauty, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Beloved of the Great Divine Ennead, Lord of the Two Lands: High Priest of Amon; king amiable, like Re, making festive Karnak, protecting it for the gods, setting the lords of Thebes to rejoicing, their hearts glad, when they see the “House-of-Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest,” like the horizon in heaven. All people, they praise its beauty, they acclaim [to] heaven. King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Beloved, Lord of the Two Lands: High Priest of Amon, beloved of Khonsu-Re; that he may be given life.

REIGN OF NESUBENEBDEN

GEBELÈN INSCRIPTION

627. This, the only surviving inscription of King Nesu­benebded (Smendes), the founder of the Twenty-first Dy­nasty, narrates some catastrophe at Thebes, due to the par­tial collapse of a wall around the Luxor temple, built by Thutmose III. Exactly what happened is not, however, certain. The king sent his officials with 3,000 men to the quarry at Gebelèn, to secure stone for repairing the damage, and one reference (l. 16) may indicate that the king himself finally came.

The document shows that Nesubenebded ruled at Thebes, and, of course, controlled all Egypt. Hrihor must, there­fore, have died before the close of Nesubenebded’s reign.

628. bLo, his majesty was in the city of Memphis, his august resi­dence of might and victory, like Re [Ptah], lord of “Life-of­the-Two-Lands,” Sekhmet the great, beloved of Ptah, — —, Montu and the great gods residing in Memphis. Lo, his majesty sat, in the hall [of his palace, when there came messengers, informing] his majesty, that the canal-wall, forming the limits of Luxor, which King Menkheperre (Thutmose III) had built, had begun [to fall to ruin] ——— forming a great flood, and a powerful current therein, on the great pavement of the house of the temple. It encircled [the front] [Said his majesty] “As for this matter reported to me, there has been nothing in the time of my majesty from of old, like it. . . . . . .”

aEngraved on a pillar in the quarry at Gebelèn; over one-third of a line is lost at the beginning of each line; published by Daressy, Recueil, X, 136, 137. The portion preserved is often so uncertain, and has been so inaccurately published, that some omissions have been necessary.

bI have omitted the titulary.
629. His majesty [dispatched master-builders, and 3,000 men with them, of the choicest of the people of his majesty. The command of his majesty to them: "Hasten to the mountain — people of his majesty as the companions of (his) feet this quarry, from the time of the ancestors to the present day, Gebelén..."

630. They engraved this decree, which perpetuates his majesty [forever]. His command arrived to beautify the work on the stela. [Never] was done the like of it in the time of the ancestors. Lo, his majesty passed by, in excellent virtues like Thoth. The reward therefor is might and victory, and to appear upon the Horus-throne [of the living, forever].

I. Paynozem I as High Priest

BUILDING INSCRIPTIONS

631. On Hrihor's death his family were unable to maintain their royalty. His eldest son, Payonekh, followed him as High Priest of Amon, but evidently died soon after gaining the office. Hrihor's second son, Paynozem, succeeded to the high priesthood, but, as we have said, not immediately to the throne. He continued the unfinished portions of the Khonsu-temple, especially the pylon of his father, as recorded in the following building inscriptions:

632. Live the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, lord of offerings, Paynozem, triumphant, son of the High Priest of Amon. . . . .

Payonekh, triumphant. He made (it) as his monument for his father, "Khonsu-in-Thebes-Beautiful-Rest," making for him a great and august pylon, over against his temple. The great flagstaves approach heaven, their [tops] are of electrum; all people rejoice when they see (it). . . . .

. . . . . . making for him a very great pylon anew, in the likeness of his horizon in heaven. The great gods are possessed of joy and satisfaction of heart, because of what he has made in the great house. They give millions of years of satisfying life, to the High Priest, etc. . . . .

Thou makest festive my house anew, thou buildest a dwelling of electrum, thou increasest the daily offering, thou multipliest that which was formerly. The reward therefore is the satisfying life of Horus."

634. Paynozem also restored the Eighteenth Dynasty temple of Medinet Habu, and left the following record of his work there:

"Live, the Good God, son of Amon, who came forth from his loins, to equip the Two Lands, whom Mut nourished, to fashion (statues of) the gods, to build their adyta; doing benefactions for all the gods of Thebes; while they are satisfied in heart [because of] what he has

635. To work in Karnak he refers vaguely in the following record, repeated on the rams of Ramses II:

I have enlarged monuments greater than (for) any gods. I made for him very great monuments in silver and gold, engraved with my name forever."

RECORDS ON THE ROYAL MUMMIES

636. As High Priest Paynozem gave much attention to the restoration and preservation of the violated royal mummies. His successive efforts to this end are recorded on the coffins and wrappings. These records are all dated, and such dates, while not mentioning the name of the king, evidently belong to the reign of Pesibkhennon I, the successor of Nesubenbened in Tanis. Of these, perhaps, the most important is the note of the year 17, recording the transfer of Ramses II's body to the tomb of Seti I.

\(^a\)Another short inscription near by (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 251, d) contains only the usual restoration formula, but it gives him the title: "Commander in chief of the armies of the South and North."

HIGH PRIESTHOOD OF MENKHEPERRE

STELA\textsuperscript{a} OF THE BANISHMENT

650. Masaheret, Paynozem I’s son, whom we find restoring the royal mummies as High Priest of Amon, in his father’s sixteenth year (§ 647), must have died before the king’s twenty-fifth year, when, according to our present document, the king’s son, Menkheperre, was High Priest of Amon. Another son of Paynozem I, Zekhonsefonekh, must have held the high priesthood, and died also before the twenty-fifth year. But it is yet impossible to determine certainly the order of these two sons.

We find Menkheperre coming from the north, supposedly from Tanis, to Thebes in Paynozem I’s twenty-fifth year, and the remarkable errand which brought him thither is intentionally narrated in such veiled language that it is impossible to determine exactly what its nature was. He came to put down certain unknown enemies, and to restore affairs in Thebes to their ancient status (ll. 6 and 7). This probably indicates a rising of some sort among the Thebans. When this had been quelled Menkheperre appeared before Amon, and with the usual prodigies, customary, at least since the time of Hrihor, he secured an oracle from the god permitting the return to Egypt of all those who had been banished to the Southern Oasis. Furthermore, he also obtained the god’s consent to a decree forever forbidding

It is a black granite stela, very difficult to read; published by Brugsch, \textit{Recueil de monuments}, I, Pl. XXII, 39 f.; and again, \textit{Reise nach der Grossen Oase}, Pl. XXII (much better). such banishment in the future, and our stela is the permanent record of that decree. The interview with Amon closed with the god's consent that all murderers should be slain.

651. The interesting question as to the identity of the banished, who are thus pardoned, is one on which our document is studiously silent. Were they Thebans, on whose behalf the city had risen in insurrection (ll. 6 and 7)? And were they recalled to appease and quiet the turbulent city? And is the last grim enactment of the god a reminder to the violent of what they might expect in case of further insurrection?

Date and Introduction

652. Year 25, third month of the third season, day 29, corresponding to the feast of Amon-Re, king of gods, at his [beautiful] feast*

——— 2Nesuhor b in their increase thereof. The majesty of this august god was ——— 3Thebes. Then he took (his) way to the scribes, inspectors, people ———.

Departure for Thebes

4Year 25, first month of the — [season, day] —. Then spake his majesty1 to the people: "Amon-[Re], lord of Thebes ——— 5their heart is firm — — — their multitude — — — the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, commander in chief of the army, Menkheperre,c triumphant, son of King Paynozem-Meriamon ——— 6his — — — companion of his footsteps, while their hearts rejoiced because he had

*This cannot be the Feast of Opet, as restored by Brugsch (Geschichte, 645), for that feast took place in the second month. About two-thirds of a line are lost here, and the same is true of ll. 2-4.

bThis man's connection with the events narrated is entirely obscure.

cThis is the first mention of Menkheperre in the inscription, and he here bears his title of High Priest. Hence there seems to me no support for the supposition that he was nominated as High Priest on this visit to Thebes.
desired to come to the South in might and victory, in order to make satisfied the heart of the land, and to expel his enemies, that he might give they were in the time of Re.

Arrival at Thebes

653. He arrived at the city (Thebes) with a glad heart; the youth of Thebes received him, making jubilee, with an embassy before him. The majesty of this august god, lord of gods, Amon-Re, [lord of] Thebes, appeared (in procession) — — — that he might him very greatly, very greatly, and establish him upon the throne of his father, as High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, commander in chief of the armies of the South and North. He (the god) decreed to him many gracious wonders, (such as) had never been seen since the time of Re.

New Year's Feast

654. [Now, after the fourth month of the third season, on the fifth day of the (feast), "Birth of Isis," corresponding to the feast of Amon at the New Year, the majesty of this august god, lord of gods, Amon-Re, king of gods, appeared (in procession), came to the great halls of the house of Amon, and rested before the inclosure wall of Amon. The High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, commander in chief of the army, Menkheperre, triumphant, went to him and praised him exceedingly, exceedingly, many times, and he founded [for him] his offering, even [every] good thing.

Recall of the Banished

655. Then the High Priest of Amon, Menkheperre, triumphant, recounted to him, saying:

"O my good lord, (when) there is a matter, shall one recount it — ?"

Then the great god nodded exceedingly, exceedingly. Then he went again to the great god, saying: "O my good lord, (it is) the matter of these servants, against whom thou art wroth, who are in the oasis, whither they are banished." Then the great god nodded exceedingly, while this commander of the army, with his hands uplifted was praising

_Slaying of Murderers_

658. Then the High Priest of Amon, Menkheperre, triumphant, went to the great god, saying: "As for any person, of whom they shall report before thee, saying, 'A slayer of living people (is he);' thou shalt destroy him, thou shalt slay him.' Then the great god nodded exceedingly, exceedingly.

_RECORD OF RESTORATION*

659. Menkheperre was the author of works extending over a wide territory, but they are accompanied only by his name and titles. A restoration in the temple of Luxor is, however, recorded as follows:

Restoration of the monument, which the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Menkheperre, triumphant, son of the Lord of the Two Lands, Meriamon-Paynozem I, made, in the house of his father, Amon of Luxor.

 RECORDS ON THE ROYAL MUMMIES

661. Menkheperre continued the care of the royal necropolis, and we find him renewing the wrappings of Seti I in the seventh year of a king not mentioned, who can only be the successor of his father, Paynozem I, Amenemopet of Tanis. It was probably in the interim between the two reigns that he gained royal privileges and the throne-name Pesibkhenno, which he never employed in his father’s time. We are unable to determine whether he ever reigned alone or not.

RECORDS ON THE PRIESTLY MUMMIES

662. The 153 mummies of the priests of Amon, found at Thebes in 1891 bore a few inscriptions of historical value. They show that Menkheperre was succeeded in the high priesthood by a certain Nesubenebed, who is known from the Karnak decree to be a son of Menkheperre. Nesubenebed was early succeeded by another son of Menkheperre named Paynozem, the second of the name, in the high priesthood of Amon, which he entered upon under the Tanite king Amenemopet, probably before that king's twenty-second year, as the following records show. They likewise carry his administration at Thebes to the year 10 of Siamon.

RECORDS ON THE ROYAL MUMMIES

664. These rough notes, hurriedly recorded on the royal mummies, offer graphic testimony to the insecurity of the times at Thebes.

In Paynozem II’s time, though his name is not mentioned in the records on the coffins, the bodies of Ramses II and Ramses I, which had been removed to the tomb of Seti I, as well as that of Seti I himself, were again transferred and deposited for safety in the tomb of Queen Inhapi. This was done in the sixteenth year of the Tanite king Siamon.

The place was sealed up, and the following record was written with the pen on the doorpost by one of the accompanying scribes. He states that it was left by him in situ, although Wiedemann (Wiedemann, Aegyptische Geschichte, 543), places it in the Boulak Museum ("Salle historique de l'est, No. 93"), and seems to have copied it. Published by Mariette, Abydos, II, 36, 37; Mariette, Catalogue général d'Abydos, No. 1225. The upper portion is wanting, and an unknown amount of the inscription is lost. The copy of Mariette is very incomplete and inaccurate; a better copy was impossible, as the present location of the stone is unknown.

first king of the Twenty-second Dynasty, was a powerful chief of the Meshwesh\(^a\) who had achieved place and influence in Egypt. His great-grandfather, Musen, had gained control at Heracleopolis (§787, No. 2), and five generations later the family had seized the throne, as the Twenty-second Dynasty. The family retained their old native titles or an Egyptian rendering of them, but our Sheshonk was so thoroughly Egyptianized that he buried his deceased son, Namlot, in Abydos, with all the accompaniments of Egyptian mortuary belief. He later found that the officials in charge of his son’s mortuary endowment had been appropriating the income. He went to Thebes, under the jurisdiction of which the crime fell, and from some unnamed king, who must have been either Amenemopet or Siamon, he obtained redress. The case, like all other matters of the kind in this period, was carried before Amon, and the stela, of which the first lines are lost, begins the middle of an address to the god by the king. As it continues, the god renders an oracle condemning the guilty officials to death. Sheshonk then conveyed his son’s statue to Abydos, where full record of his son’s mortuary endowment was entered in the temple archives, with their value in silver, furnishing useful data for determining the ancient values of various property in modern standards.\(^b\)

670. The decree of Amon in this criminal case is of the greatest interest, and characteristic of the time. The case of those banished to the oasis, who are pardoned by the god at the High Priest Menkheperre’s request (§§650–58), is more or less political, but such is not the character of this case. A similar case, also under the high priesthood of Paynozem II, is that of certain temple officials who were slain for dishonesty in the temple accounts. Recorded with it is the remarkable acquittal of a certain major-domo named Thutmose, the method of whose trial is sufficiently evident from the following translation,\(^a\) without further explanation.

Appearance of Amon

671. \(\ldots\) On this day in the house of Amon-Re, king of gods, on the sixth day of the month, appeared the august god, \(^2\) the lord of gods, Amon-Re, king of gods; Mut the great, mistress of Ishru; and "Khonsu-in-3Thebes-Beautiful-Rest," on the silver pavement of the house of Amon — —. The High Priest of Amon-Re, \(^4\) king of gods commander in chief of the army, Paynozem, triumphant, son of Men-\(\text{[kheper]re} [\text{triumphant}]\), took counsel of the affairs of \(^5\) this land, before the great god.

Condemnation of the Guilty

In the second month, on the sixth day, — the great god \(^6\) who is far from injustice, had not (yet) been taken up to Opet at \([\text{the Feast of}]\(^c\) Opet in this year. \(^7\) Lo, this great god determined \([\text{that}]\) which the scribes, \(^8\) inspectors and administrators had done, who committed \(^9\) fraudulent acts in Thebes, his city. \(^10\) Then the great god condemned the scribes, \(^11\) inspectors, and administrators, because of the acts of \(^12\) fraud which they had committed.

The Two Writings

672. This great god appeared upon the pavement of silver in the house of Amon at the morning hour. The High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Paynozem, triumphant, came \(^13\) before this great god.

\(^a\)This inscription, of which only the first part is translated above, was found on one of the southern pylons at Karnak in Maspero's excavations there in 1881. It was published and treated by Naville, Inscriptions historiques de Pinodjem III (our Paynozem II), Paris, 1883. See Maspero, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1882, 135.

\(^b\)Naville numbers this line 1; at least one line, containing the date, is lost before it. In the long inscription below it, oracles of the god in the years 2 (l. 8 and 10), 3 (l. 12), and 5 (l. 13) are recorded; hence this date will not be less than year 5.

\(^c\)So also Naville; this was not long before the beginning of the Feast of Opet (see note on Papyrus Harris, § 237).
This great god saluted violently. He placed two tablets of writing before the great god; one writing said: "O Amon-Re, king of gods, my good lord; it is said that there are matters which should be investigated in the case of Thutmose, triumphant, son of Sudiamon (Sw-dy-Ymn), triumphant, the major-domo;" the other writing [said: "O Amon-Re, king of gods], my good lord; it is said that there are no matters which should be investigated in the case of Thutmose, triumphant, the son of Sudiamon, triumphant, the major-domo."

The [High Priest] of Amon-Re, king of gods, Paynozem, triumphant, repeated before this great god, saying: "O my good lord, thou shalt judge — — —, thou prosperest beyond all wonders." [The] great god saluted violently.

The Acquittal

673. These two tablets of writing were placed before the [great god]. The great god took the writing which said: "O Amon-Re, my good lord; it is said that there are no matters [which should] be investigated in the case of Thutmose, triumphant, son of Sudiamon, triumphant, the major-domo." The great god [rejected] the other writing which said: "O Amon-Re, king of gods], my good lord; it is said that there are matters which should be investigated in the case of Thutmose, triumphant, son of Sudiamon, triumphant, the major-domo."

[Then the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, went again] to this great, great god, to put his two tablets of writing the second time before the great god. [The great god] took [the same writing as before] ————. They bore witness, saying: "There are no matters which should be investigated [in the case of Thutmose, triumphant, son of Sudiamon, triumphant, the] major-domo."

674. The legal functions assumed by Amon at this period will be sufficiently illustrated by this and the following example. Even the wills and the property conveyances of the numerous relatives of the high priests are issued as oracles and decrees of the god. They form a remarkable class of legal documents by themselves, which will be treated later in this series.\(^a\) We can understand, therefore, why the case of the Libyan chief Sheshonk was brought by the king before Amon. It is as follows:

\textit{Speech to Amon}

\textbf{675.} \textit{------} \textit{rb}great chief of chiefs, Sheshonk, triumphant, his\(^c\) son in the glorious place by his father, Osiris, \textit{rb}that he might\(^d\) lay his beauty \textit{rb}to rest\(^a\) in the city of Abydos (\textit{Nf-wr}), over against \textit{rb}— — —\textit{rb}. Thou wilt let him survive to attain old age, while his \textit{rb}heart\(^b\)\textit{rb} — — —\textit{rb}. Thou wilt let him join the feasts of his majesty, receiving full victory." This great god saluted exceedingly.

\textit{Amon Condemns the Thieves}

\textbf{676.} Then his majesty spake again before this great god: \textit{"O my good lord, thou shalt slay the \textit{rf—r}d the administrator, the scribe, the inspector, every one who was sent on any commission to the field, of those who stole of his \textit{rf}things\(^3\) from the offering-table of the Osiris, the great chief of Me, Namlot, triumphant, son of Mehetnusekhet, who is in Abydos; \textit{rf}all the people who plundered from his divine offerings, his people, his cattle, his garden, his every oblation and all his excellent things. Thou wilt do according to thy great spirit throughout; fill them up and fill up (\textit{rf}the number of\textit{rf}) the women \textit{rf}and their children."} The great god saluted exceedingly.

\textit{Final Prayer to Amon}

HIGH PRIESTHOOD OF PESIBKHENNO

RECORDS ON MUMMY-WRAPPINGS

688. We have no records of this High Priest beyond the usual note on the temple linen used in swathing the bodies of the Amon priests found in 1891. These show that he was a son of Paynozem II, and that he was in office at least from the year 4 to the year 12 of a king who must be Pesibkhenno II, under whose predecessor, Siamon, he must have succeeded his father, on the latter's death in Siamon's sixteenth year (§ 668).

Linen which the High Priest of Amon, Pesibkhenno, son of Paynozem (II), made for his lord, Amon, in the year 4.

Linen which the High Priest of Amon, Pesibkhenno, son of Paynozem (II), made for his lord, Amon, in the year 12.

BURIAL OF NESIKHONSU

689. Nesikhonsu, wife of Paynozem II, died in the fifth year of a king, who must be Pesibkhenno II of Tanis. Her husband's tomb, originally that of Amenhotep I, was opened, and she was likewise buried there. When the door was sealed again, one of the scribes recorded the burial on the doorpost. It contains the names of some of the same officials who had buried her husband, not less than five years before.

Mummy No. 17 of the cache of priests' mummies discovered at Der el-Bahri in 1891; published by Daressy (Revue archéologique, 28, p. 6 (of the tirage à part)).
Nesikhonsu

Year 5, fourth month of the third season (twelfth month), day 21, day of the burial of the chief of favorites, Nesikhonsu, by the divine father of Amon, overseer of the White House, Zekhonsefonekh, together with Paynozem, the prophet of Amon-Re, king of gods, Enkhofamon (\textit{nlh \textasciitilde j-Ymn}); Nesipai — —; the divine father of Amon, the chief treasurer, Nesupekeshuti (\textit{Nsqw-p \textasciitilde k-\textasciitilde suty}). The seals which are upon of this place; the seals of the overseer of the White House, Zekhonsefonekh; the seals of the scribe of the White House, Nesu.

RECORDS ON THE ROYAL MUMMIES

690. With these two records the history of the royal mummies in ancient times, so far as we know it, closes. The bodies of Seti I and Ramses II were taken from the tomb of Queen Inhapi in the tenth year of Pesibkhenno II, and deposited in the great cache at Der el-Bahri, in the tomb of Amenhotep I, where Nesikhonsu had been buried five years earlier. In all probability the other royal mummies were brought to the same place at this time also. The door was sealed up for the last time, not earlier than the eleventh year of Sheshonk I (§ 699); the shaft leading to it was soon filled with detritus from the cliffs above, and all knowledge of the place was lost. Thus the great kings of Egypt at last found undisturbed rest for three thousand years. Then, some time in the early seventies of last century, they were discovered by the native tomb-robbers of modern Thebes, the descendants of those who were prosecuted under Ramses IX.

REIGN OF OSORKON I

RECORD OF TEMPLE GIFTS

729. In his fourth year Osorkon I, for some reason, compiled a record of all the statues, images, vessels, utensils, and the like, which he had presented to the temples of Egypt. The amounts of gold and silver involved are sufficiently large to be of economic importance. The smaller items of gold amount to 20,538 deben, or about 5,005 pounds troy; and those of silver reach a total of 72,870 deben, or over 17,762 pounds, troy. The weight of many articles is, however, not indicated. On the fragments we find mentioned 2,000,000 deben, or about 487,180 pounds troy, of silver, and again 2,300,000 deben, or about 560,297 pounds troy, of gold and silver. How far these last amounts include the others, of which they might be the totals, is not determinable. That such sums could be given to the temples, evidently in addition to their fixed incomes, is important evidence of the great wealth and prosperity of the Twenty-second Dynasty kings. These records also show that Osorkon I controlled the oases of Dakhel and Khargeh (l. 5) and hence, of course, the other oases also.

Address to the King

730. ______ their bodies repose in all their favorite places; there is none hostile toward them --1, since the time of former kings;

aFound by Naville in a small temple beyond the outskirts of the tell of Bubastis, dating from the time of Ramses II. The inscriptions are engraved on four sides of a red granite pillar, now in twenty-nine small fragments, of which two may be put together, giving the beginnings (from one-fourth to two-thirds of the line) of six lines. Now in Cairo Museum, No. 675 (Guide, 177, without name of king). They are published by Naville (Bubastis, I, Pls. 51, 52), from drawings by Madame Naville, made from squeezes.

bIt is not clear who is here speaking to the king.
there is none like thee in this land. Every god abides upon his throne, and enters his abode with glad heart, since thou art installed to be thee, building their houses, and multiplying their vessels of gold, silver, and every genuine costly stone, for which his majesty gave instructions, in his capacity as Thoth (Hnty-hsr't).

REIGN OF TAKELOT I

STATUE OF THE NILE-GOD DEDICATED BY THE HIGH PRIEST SHESHONKA

738. Maspero’s surprise that this monument should formerly have been so strangely misunderstood, was well grounded. The monument is one of a common class, dedicated to a god, for the sake of the well-being of the donor, which he craves from the god in a prayer inscribed upon it. The character of the donor, his origin, and his prayer are, in the case of this statue, of great historical importance. He is the High Priest of Amon, Meriamon-Sheshonk, son of Osorkon I. As his mother, Makere, is stated to be the daughter of King Pesibkenno, this king can be no other than the second of that name, the last king of the Twenty-first Dynasty.

739. It thus appears that Sheshonk I strengthened his dynasty by an alliance with the old ruling house, the Twenty-first Dynasty of Tanis, by marrying his son, Osorkon I, to the daughter of Pesibkhenno II. As High Priest of Amon at Thebes, the son of this marriage, Sheshonk, assumed royal honors, placed his name in a cartouche, and commanded all the military of Egypt. Characteristic of the turbulent conditions of the time is his prayer for “all valiant might, to take captive his land.” His power again shows how truly Thebes

FLOOD INSCRIPTIONa

742. As in the days of Nesubenebded, some two hundred years earlier, the inundation again flooded the temple of Luxor in the third year of Osorkon II, and the water rose to a depth of over two feetb on the temple pavement. "All the temples of Thebes were like marshes." Amon was brought forth from the temple in his sacred barque, and the priests prayed that he might abate the flood.

743. tYear 3, first month of the second season, day 12,c under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, Usermare-Setepnamon, L. P. H.; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems, Osorkon (II)-Siese-Meriamon, given life forever.

The floodd came on, in this whole land; it invaded the two shores as in the beginning. This land was in his power like the sea, there was no dykee of the people to withstand its fury. All the people were like birds upon its f—l, the tempest — his —, suspended — — like the heavens. fAll the temples of Thebes were like marshes.

On this day Amon caused to appear in Opet, the [barque] of his (portable) image —; when he had entered the "Great House"f of his barque of this temple.

god a long hymn of forty-two lines, consisting mainly of conventional phrases common in such compositions, but it contained, of course, an appeal to moderate the inundation, which is, however, too fragmentary to be intelligible.

STATUE INSCRIPTION\textsuperscript{a}

\textbf{745.} This inscription contains only a prayer of the king, but the blessings for which he prays are of great political significance. He desires that his descendants may rule over the high priests of Amon, the chiefs of the Meshwesh, and the prophets of Harsaphes. The power of the last is evident from the long genealogy of Harpeson, whose ancestor, Namlot, a son of Osorkon II, was appointed by this king as High Priest of Harsaphes at Heracleopolis and governor of the South, with military command (§ 787, No. 11).\textsuperscript{b}

\textbf{746.} The distribution of territory among these nobles was evidently thus: Thebes controlled at least from lower Nubia to Siut;\textsuperscript{c} Heracleopolis, probably from Siut to the Delta; and the Meshwesh chieftains held the Delta cities, as formerly. Egypt was thus clearly divided at this time into feudal principalities, more or less responsible to the Bubastite Pharaoh. It is for the control of this tottering state by his descendants, that Osorkon II prays as follows:

\textsuperscript{a}Granite stela, held by a kneeling statue of Osorkon II, at Tanis, doubtless the one published by Petrie (Tanis, XIV, No. 3; VI, 41, A.C.D.), as Daressy has noticed (Recueil, 18, 49); although Petrie thought the statue was one of Ramses II usurped by Osorkon II (op. cit., 25). It was seen and copied by de Rougé (Inscriptions hiérogliphiques, 71, 72), and published again by Daressy (loc. cit.).

\textsuperscript{c}The northern boundary is fixed by the will of Yewelot (§ 741); the southern is probable from the mention of “\textit{gold of Khenthennofer}” given by the High Priest of Amon, Osorkon (§ 770), although this gold might have been secured in trade. For Heracleopolis we have no data as to its boundaries, except that it probably began control where that of Thebes ended, viz., at Siut.
747. May my issue —, the seed that has come forth from my limbs, rule a — b the great — of Egypt, the hereditary princes; b the high priests of Amon-Re, king of gods, the great chiefs of Me and — c the prophets of Harsaphes, king of South and North, while I command that his servant come down to — d and he inclines their hearts toward the Son of Re, Meriamon-Sibast-Osorkon (II); may he put them — e. JUBILEE INSCRIPTIONS f

748. In his twenty-second year Osorkon II celebrated his first jubilee. At Bubastis the king erected a hall in the temple for the celebration of this feast, which he therefore called the "jubilee-hall." One of the surviving blocks carries the following record of the erection of the building:

Appearance of the majesty of this august god, beginning the way, to rest in the jubilee-house, which his majesty made anew, of — —; all its walls are of electrum, the columns — —.

a Lit., "command" (lš).
b I take it that, in apposition with the preceding, three classes are enumerated: (1) high priests of Amon; (2) chiefs of the Meshwesh and — — (?); (3) prophets of Heracleopolis.
c According to Daressy, this word ends in tyw and has the determinative of foreigners; but Rougé gives it the ending k, with the same determinative. It may therefore be the Libyan Kehek (khk).
d One would expect "female children" in the lacuna, but there is hardly room, and the restoration would not fit the following context.
e A name of foreigners ending in ywd! The fragments of the remaining five lines I do not understand.
g Naville, op. cit., Pl. VI.
h The appearance of the procession bearing Amon in his shrine; this was depicted in a relief which the inscription accompanied.
i Or possibly: "for the first time."
The walls of this building bore a long series of reliefs depicting the elaborate ceremonies accompanying the celebration of the jubilee. These are almost all of religious significance and connection; but one of the ceremonies is of great historical importance. It was, perhaps, the opening rite of the jubilee, for it commemorated the assumption of power by the king. He is shown in a relief seated on a portable throne, of the greatest simplicity, and borne on the shoulders of his servants. The scene is accompanied by the words:

Carrying the king, sitting upon the portable throne; procession of the king to the palace.

Beneath the throne are inscribed the words:

All lands, all countries, Upper Retenu, Lower Retenu, all inaccessible countries are under the feet of this Good God.

Above the scene is an inscription which indicates clearly the nature of the particular event commemorated, viz., the assumption by the king of the responsibility for the protection of the land. That this was a characteristic, if not the chief, ceremony of the jubilee (ḥb-šd) is shown by the words of the conquered Hermopolitans to Piankhi: "Celebrate for us a jubilee (ḥb-šd), even as thou hast protected the Hare nome" (§ 848, l. 61). It is not evident why the ministering women of the Theban temple should be given so much attention. The prominence of Amon, who dominates the ceremony, is noteworthy. Probably the most important fact furnished by the inscription is the statement that Thebes is exempt from inspection by the royal fiscal officers, who do not even go thither. It would thus appear that Thebes was not taxed by the Bubastites, at least not by Osorkon II. This conclusion is substantiated by the long list of offerings to Amon, recorded by the High Priest of Amon, Osorkon, in his own name, under Takelot II and Sheshonk III (§§ 756 ff.).

JUBILEE INSCRIPTIONS

751. The inscription is as follows:

_Assumption of Government_

Year 22, fourth month of the first season (occurred) the appearance of the king in the temple (ḥ't-ntr) of Amon, which is in the jubilee-hall, resting on the portable throne; and the assumption of the protection of the Two Lands by the king, the protection of the sacred women of the house of Amon, and the protection of all the women of his city, who have been maid-servants since the time of the fathers, even the maid-servants in every house, who are assessed for their service yearly.

_Royal Offerings_

Lo, his majesty sought great benefactions for his father, Amon-Re, when he (Amon) decreed the first jubilee for his son, who rests upon his throne, that he might decree for him a great multitude (of jubilees) in Thebes, mistress of the Nine Bows.

_Exemption of Thebes_

Said the king in the presence of his father, Amon: "I have protected Thebes in her height and in her breadth, pure, delivered to her lord. No inspectors of the king's-house (pr-stny) journey to her; her people are protected forever, in the great name of the Good God."

REIGN OF TAKELOT II
GRAFFITO OF HARSIESE

752. This document, while furnishing some data of importance regarding hereditary claims among the priests of Amon, is valuable also for its confirmation of the arrival of Osorkon as High Priest at Thebes in the eleventh year of Take­lot II. It is dated four months and eleven days after the date of the beginning of his annals (§ 760), and furnishes us the exact day of his arrival in Thebes. The occasion is the feast of Khonsu, and a priest in the Karnak temple of Thutmose III, probably named Harsiese, improved the opportunity of the new High Priest’s presence to present a family claim. The document is as follows:

Date

753. Year 11 under the majesty of the king, the Lord of the Two Lands, Meriamon-Siese-Take­lot (II), given life forever; the first month of the third season, day 11.

Arrival of the High Priest

On this day there arrived at Thebes, the victorious, the eye of Re, mistress of temples, bright dwelling of Amon of the hidden name, his city of 1 —1, the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, commander in chief of the army, Osorkon, triumphant, royal son of the Lord of the Two Lands, Take­lot II, living forever; at his beautiful feast of the first (month) of the third season.

*bAs the bulk of his term of office fell in the reign of Sheshonk III, the five years of his annals falling under Take­lot II are herein placed with the reign of Sheshonk III (§§ 756–70).

*cThe Feast of Khonsu, after whom the month is named.
Claim of Harsiese

There came the great priest (w c b) of the house of Amon, serving his month in "Glorious-in-Monuments," in the third phyle, Hars[ese] triumphant, before the governor of the South, saying: "I am the k-priest of Karnak, I am the son of the great prophets of Amon, through my mother."

Harsiese then presents some hereditary claim, the nature of which is not entirely clear, but probably he claimed the hereditary right to cleanse the temple, its utensils, or the wardrobe of the god. The High Priest granted him his claim; whereupon he immediately exercised his family privilege, and, to prevent any further question as to his rights, he engraved the above record of the facts on the roof of the great Karnak temple.

STELA OF KEROME

This monument is primarily important because it furnishes the highest known date of Takelot II's reign, year 25. It records the gift of 35 stat of land to a princess, and singer of the temple of Amon, Kerome; but whether for her tomb or for her support in the temple, does not appear. A relief at the top shows Amon and Khonsu on the left, before whom, emerging from a chapel or possibly a sarcophagus on a ḫw mww; evidently a designation of the Amon-temple; the same building is mentioned on a mummy of the Twenty-first Dynasty (Daressy, Annales, IV, 10 of tirage à part); and as early as Haremhab the goddess Amonet (feminine of Amon) is once called "Resident in 'Glorious-in-Monuments'" (Recueil, 23, 64) on her statue found in the great temple of Karnak. The place of our inscription on the roof of the hall of Thutmose III shows what part of the temple was so called. The name is therefore clearly the one which he gave it, shortened by the omission of his name at the beginning. See II, p. 237, n. f., and II, 560.

b The name and titles of his father filled the lacuna.

c Found in an Osiris-chapel by the pylon of Thutmose I at Karnak, by Legrain in 1902; published by him in Annales, IV, but without data as to size and material.
the right, appears Kerome, holding a roll of papyrus, and praying to the said gods. The roll is probably to be considered as the deed for the land. Below is the following:

Year 25 of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Takelot (II),* living forever; the High Priest of Amon, Osorkon.

On this day were confirmed the 35 stat of citizen-lands, to the singer of the temple of Amon, the king’s-daughter, Kerome.

*The name as written contains no indication by which we can determine which of the two Takelots is meant; but as there is no known High Priest of Amon, Osorkon, under Takelot I, it is evident that we are dealing with Takelot II, under whom we know from other monuments (§§ 752 ff.) that there was a high priest Osorkon. Legrain’s statement that this High Priest Osorkon became King Osorkon II, is thus an error.
REIGN OF SHESHONK III

ANNALS OF THE HIGH PRIEST OF AMON, OSORKON*

756. This High Priest is better known to us than any of the princes of the Bubastite family who held that office, although the remarkable records which he left, owing to their mutilated condition, have never been studied or understood in their entirety. He began his term in the eleventh year of Takelot II, and was still in office in the thirty-ninth year of Sheshonk III (§ 698, No. 17); he thus served at least fifty-four years. He left a series of temple records in the great Karnak temple, which may be fairly termed his annals. They cover fifteen years of Takelot II's reign, and much of the following reign of Sheshonk III; but they cannot be conveniently divided, and are, therefore, treated here under the reign of Sheshonk III. They begin with Osorkon's appointment to the office of High Priest of Amon; or, if not his appointment, at least some significant date (the first of Tybi), four months and eleven days before his arrival at Thebes to take up the duties of his office (§ 753). This took place at the Feast of Khonsu, in his father's eleventh year, and was accompanied by rich offer-

*These records are the longest inscriptions on the Bubastite gate. They are all on the inside (north side) of the gate on both sides of the door, and begin at the east side of the door (year 11), jump to the west wall at right angles to the door-wall west of the door (years 12-15), and, turning the corner, proceed on the door-wall, west of the door (year 11 of Takelot II to 29 of Sheshonk III). The vertical lines of the inscriptions are surmounted by a relief on each side of the door. The inscriptions are in a frightfully mutilated state, and no modern copy from the original has been published. The publications and materials at my disposal will be found with the translations.

bThey are in such a fragmentary condition and so insufficiently published that of many parts only a summary could be given, in the following translations. Closer study would bring out some facts not noted in the following sketch.
ings, many signs of the god's favor, and the acclamations of all Thebes. In response to the flattery of the priests, he introduces a new calendar of offerings.

757. In the year 15 there occurred a remarkable prodigy of uncertain nature, but in some way connected with the moon. This natural phenomenon was accompanied by a long and serious civil war. Osorkon left Thebes and, as we afterward find him with his father's courtiers, we might suppose that he went to Bubastis, but for the fact that his return journey to Thebes was northward. With some of his father's court, therefore, he withdrew to the south. One of his sisters, Shepnesopdet, had married Zekhonsefonekh, a great noble of Thebes, who bore all the titles of power except those of the king and the High Priest, and the presence of such a son-in-law of the king at Thebes would be a fruitful source of jealousy and friction. Years of hostility between the former followers of Osorkon's father passed; Osorkon's part in these events is not entirely clear, but he at last constrains his father's followers to peace, and some compromise with his enemies must have been effected. The unhappy events passed are attributed to the displeasure of the god, Osorkon orders his people to prepare a great propitiatory offering, and with many ships and a numerous following he returns amid great rejoicing to Thebes.

758. Here he consults Amon, as the offering is presented, regarding the god's purposes toward Thebes. Osorkon's question, "Dost thou do to Thebes as thou hast done to them?" shows that not only other revolters, already punished, but also Thebes had been implicated in the hostility against himself. It is evident that the compromise involved the exemption of the Thebans from punishment, for, in response to Osorkon's question, the god delivered an oracle in their favor; whereupon the Thebans broke out in praise of their magnanimous High Priest. Although not recorded in his annals, Osorkon's struggles to maintain himself were not yet passed; for in the sixth year of Sheshonk III we find another High Priest named Harsiese at Thebes ($ 698$, No. 16). How and when Osorkon regained his power at Thebes the second time* it is not possible to determine.

759. Osorkon's annals pass on from his first return to a long list of offerings to the Theban temples, beginning in the eleventh year of Takelot II, and continuing to the twenty-eighth year of Sheshonk III. A final line adds those of the year 29. This table is important, for it shows that the temples of Thebes were supported at this time by the High Priest, and his offerings were recorded in his name alone, with no reference to the Bubastite king. From a graffito in the temple ($ 753$), as already stated, we know that Osorkon ruled at least ten years longer at Thebes. That is, until the thirty-ninth year of Sheshonk III.

I. EAST OF DOOR

760. A relief in duplicate at the top shows Takelot II, accompanied by his son, the High Priest of Amon, Osorkon, before Amon. The accompanying inscriptions, containing

*Should it turn out that the stela of Kerome of year 25 ($ 755$) belongs to Takelot I, and not to Takelot II (which would give us another high priest Osorkon under Takelot I), then the civil war and Osorkon's withdrawal from Thebes in the year 15 were caused by the death of Takelot II, and the intervening rule of the other high priest, Harsiese, till year 6 of Sheshonk III, is an incident in the same series of events. In that case Osorkon was expelled but once from Thebes.

bPublished: Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 257, a; Lepsius, Auswahl der wichtigsten Urkunden, 15; Champollion, Monuments, 277, 1; Champollion, Notices descriptives, II, 20, 21 (last three containing only reliefs or accompanying inscriptions, "Beischriften").
the titles of those depicted, add nothing to the content of the inscription below, which is as follows:

Appointment of Osorkon

"Year 11, first month of the second season, day 1, under the majesty of King Takelot II ———— . . . . . . . . . . a [went] the High Priest of Amon-]Re, commander in chief of the whole army, the leader, Osorkon, born of the hereditary princess, great in favor, great king's-wife [Kerome], ————.

Here follows the same long series of epithets of praise, belonging to the High Priest Osorkon, as in the inscription of the year 12 (§ 762). These merge into the acclamations of Thebes, as in l. 5: "Thebes betakes herself to thee." Osorkon then apparently entered the city and offered sacrifice to Amon (l. 6). Then, probably on a second appointed day, he entered the temple (l. 8), and performed the ritual of Amon, at the same time presenting an offering (l. 9), which was the first installment of a new and richer calendar of offerings (l. 10).

761. The god then appeared in procession (l. 11), and the High Priest in his capacity as "Pillar-of-his-Mother" (yn-mw't f) presented himself (l. 11). The god visibly expressed his satisfaction, as when a father receives marks of affection from a son (l. 12), whereupon the whole priesthood of the temple, of all ranks, came forward (l. 12), and all together, with one accord, joined in praising Osorkon as him whom Amon had appointed to his high office (l. 13). Their speech continues probably to l. 17, and apparently contained no more than the phraseology usual on such occasions. In l. 18 Osorkon is speaking, and announcing the new and rich calendar of offerings, which he is founding. The content of his further address (ll. 18–25?) is uncertain,

but it probably concludes with an exhortation to the officers of the temple faithfully to administer his foundations. He then enumerates the lists of the new calendar of offerings (ll. 26–35), which is very fragmentary, but shows the usual items where preserved. It concluded with the customary curse:

As for him who shall injure this stela, which I have made, he shall fall under the blade of Amon-Re.

II. WEST OF DOOR

762. A relief at the top showing Osorkon offering before Amon, surmounts the following inscription:

Date

1Year 12, first month of the first season, day 9, under the majesty of Horus: Mighty Bull, [Shining] in Thebes, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, Lord of Offering: Kheperhezre-Setepnere; Son of Re, of his body: Meriamon-Siese-Takelot (II).

Lo, his eldest son was in the land [the High Priest of Amon-Re], king of gods, commander in chief of the army, Osorkon — — —.

Lines 2–5 then proceed with a series of conventional epithets of praise and laudation, usually applied to kings, which, owing to the mention of the High Priest Osorkon at the end of l. 1, must refer to him.

a On the arrangement of this inscription, see § 756, note; published: Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 256, a, 258, a, b; Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1225–30 (only upper ends of lines). The passage regarding the alleged eclipse, is in confusion in Lepsius, Denkmäler, two sheets of the squeeze having exchanged places. This error was corrected by Goodwin (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1868, 25 ff.) from the rough copy in Young's Hieroglyphics. I had a collation of the Berlin squeezes by Mr. Alan Gardiner, who kindly placed it at my disposal; it covered the first half of the monument (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 256, a).

b The same occur in the corresponding place in the inscription of year 11 (§ 760, ll. 2–5). Mr. Gardiner noticed that they express Osorkon's favor and power with the king, in successive phrases, taking up the latter's titles in the order of the fivefold titulary.
Arrival of Osorkon

763. Then 1. 6 narrates that
He came in our time, in the year [1]r, a — — bearing her b festal offerings, that he might set her in festivity ————. They rejoiced at seeing him, making festive her offerings, and supplying her altars with every good, pure, and pleasant [thing], in order to increase the daily offerings.

Civil War

764. Now, afterward, in the year 15, fourth month of the third season, day 25, under the majesty of his august father, c the divine ruler of Thebes, before heaven devoured the moon, d great e wrath arose in this land like — — the hated f and the rebels. They set warfare in the South and North ———— not ceasing to fight against those who were therein and those who g followed his father; while years passed e [in] hostility (hsf-£) (each) one seizing upon his neighbor, [not] h remembering his son to protect him who came forth from him. He was satisfied in his heart, leading excellent — to his every beautiful hall.

Osorkon's Address to the Court

765. Said this governor of the South to his nobles, the companions of his father who were by his side: "................"

The details of this speech are totally obscure, but it is evident that Osorkon is exhorting them to peace. He appeals (l. 9) to his authority in Thebes, and apparently attributes the disturbance to Re, who must be appeased with offerings.

Fidelity of the Court

766. "[Now,] when he had finished speaking these words to his hearers, their hearts rejoiced." They assured him: "All thy designs, they come to pass. Now, when we offer to the god, he will restore the land." The remainder of the speech is again uncertain, but the fragments show that they were faithful to him (l. 11).

Return to Thebes

767. Then said to them this governor of the South: " — — [gather] this army into one place, that we may build for him a colonnade."

---

*Gardiner's collation. This son may be the heir to the throne at Bubastis, or Osorkon, the High Priest.

*bFrom here to the close of the paragraph I have no idea of the connection or meaning.

*cThe High Priest, Osorkon.

*dI can make out: "Ye were (un·ti) the counselors of him who begat me ye shall not fight" (l. 8).

*eHe says: "I found not a way of knowing her welfare."

*fMr. Gardiner read the determinative as the legs; but after the verb "build," "colonnade" is the only noun that can possibly be rendered for the consonants wdy·t. One naturally thinks of the Bubastite colonnade at the gate bearing this inscription, but its architraves bear the name of Sheshonk I. Its continuation, however, on the same side of the forecourt, and the entire opposite side, are uninscribed. The remainder of our inscription, moreover, does not refer to the collection of building material, but the gathering and bringing of offerings. But it must be remembered that much of the inscription is lost.
Then it was done according to that which [he] had said. They brought their — to the ships, even all his things that were numbered as his property. [Then came] those who followed him, both men and women, the court of his father, the troops of his following, without number. Moreover, there were many ships, every one thereof [bearing] their offerings.

All these people brought their gifts and came with heart rejoicing, because he was justified in their hearts like the son of Osiris."

Arrival at Thebes

768. "Then he stationed people before his advance and behind him, rejoicing to heaven." They proceeded on the voyage toward Thebes in festivity, like Horus sailing north at the Feast of Rekeh (Rkh). His troops were like a flock of wild fowl. He arrived at the time of verdure, they came before him, with a heart of love to his victorious city. Then they found Thebes rejoicing and Karnak in [jubilee] because of the arrival in her in Southern Heliopolis.

Presentation of the Offering

Then he made a great oblation bulls, gazelles, antelopes, oryxes, fattened geese in tens of thousands and thousands a flood of wine flowers, honey, and shedeh likewise, measures (ddmt) of incense. Then he presented these [things to] the great god in Thebes. This august god was brought forth in procession, to adorn this his oblation, while his divine ennead, with rejoicing heart, were receiving it.

Amon Pardons Thebans

769. "The High Priest of Amon, Osorkon, spake to the great god, and his army spake in praising [him]: ‘. . . . ’" They now address appealing questions to the god, among a Lit., “of him that begat him,” as in 1.8 (§ 765).

b This evidently indicates the direction of Osorkon's voyage, not that of Horus only.
which can be discerned: "Dost thou do to Thebes as thou hast done to them?" But the following three lines (18–20), containing but a few scattered signs, fail to reveal the nature of their further address. Their appeal was successful, for the god responded (l. 1) with the usual signs of favor and acquiescence. Thebes was thus spared, and the Thebans joined in praise of Osorkon and Amon, promising the god the most plentiful offerings (ll. 2–4).

Summary of Osorkon's Offerings

770. The narrative now passes over a long period and begins a retrospect of Osorkon's benefactions from the beginning of his rule at Thebes, which Osorkon himself states as a "list of all the benefactions which I did for them for the first time, from the year 11 under [the majesty of Takelot II] to the year 28, under the majesty of Sheshonk III."

After a list of myrrh, incense, honey, and oil (l. 7) follows a statement of precious metals given to Amon, Mut, and Khonsu, among which "fine gold of Khenthennojer" twice appears (ll. 8 and 9). Later are offerings of "the High a Meaning: "wilt thou punish Thebes as thou hast punished them?" for the preposition is r, lit., "against." Who is meant by "them" is uncertain, but it would appear that other revolters had been severely punished, and that Thebes, being implicated, appeals to Amon for mercy.

b The inscription now passes from the west to the south wall, and Lepsius begins a new numbering of lines (Lepsius, Denkmäler, III, 258, a, b = Brugsch, Thesaurus, V, 1227–30); but he knew that the inscription of the south wall was the continuation of that of the west wall (Text, III, 11).

c As we know that Osorkon arrived in Thebes in the year 11 of Takelot II, and that he made his first offering calendar in that year (§ 753), there can be no doubt about the restoration. Osorkon's term of office at that time, from year 11 of Takelot II to year 28 of Sheshonk III, thus rests on better evidence than that heretofore drawn from this inscription (Maspero, Momies royales, 741, 742). Of course, the interruption by the civil war just narrated is taken for granted, and not referred to in giving the chronological limits of his term of office, at the time when the record was made.
Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, Osorkon, from the year 22\textsuperscript{a} to the year 26\textsuperscript{b} (l. 12), among which appears the income of the goddess Mat (l. 15); after which the income of Amon in the year 25 is itemized (l. 17), followed by that of Mut (l. 17). The last line (22), perhaps added later, contains the income of Amon and Hathor in the year 29.\textsuperscript{c}

FIRST SERAPEUM STELA OF PEDIESE\textsuperscript{d}

771. This Libyan commander was a great-grandson of Osorkon II, who lived in the time of Sheshonk III, in whose twenty-eighth year he erected, in the Serapeum, the votive stela under discussion. He gives his genealogy, which is as follows (adding his two sons):

1. King Osorkon II

2. Hereditary Prince Sheshonk

3. Great Chief of Me, Takelot—King's daughter,\textsuperscript{e} Thesperebast

4. Great Chief of Me, Pediese—Tere (sister-wife)

5. High Priest of Ptah, Pefnefdibast Sem priest of Ptah, Takelot

\textsuperscript{a}It is not evident why he should begin a subsection with the year 22. This is his earliest date under Sheshonk III. Does it mark the beginning of Osorkon's restoration to office after the rule of Harsiese, who was High Priest in his absence?

\textsuperscript{b}So Lepsius and Maspero, \textit{Momies royales}, 741 (collation of original); Brugsch has 28.\textsuperscript{b}

\textsuperscript{c}The mention of Sheshonk III in l. 7 shows clearly that this date belongs to his reign. Maspero's attribution of it to Takelot II (\textit{Empires}, 165, note 2) is therefore an inadvertence. He attributed it correctly, \textit{Momies royales}, 741.

\textsuperscript{d}Found by Mariette in the Serapeum; now in the Louvre (No. 18); published by Mariette, \textit{Fouilles}, Pl. 36 (not seen); Mariette, \textit{Le Sérapéum de Memphis}, III, Pl. 24; Chassinat, \textit{Recueil}, 22, 9, 10. I had also my own copy of the original.

\textsuperscript{e}Not on our stela, but on another of the second year of Pemou (§ 781), as noticed by Lepsius, \textit{Zweiundzwanzigste Dynastie}, 276, note.
As the Sheshonk mentioned (No. 2) is distinctly called "great first hereditary prince," it can hardly be doubted that he is the prince who became Sheshonk II; but as his name is not inclosed in a cartouche, we may regard this as another evidence that he was never more than co-regent, as indicated by the quai-records at Karnak (§ 696, No. 13). His son Takelot cannot be Takelot II; otherwise we should expect him to be called king. The above quai-record, furthermore, calls Takelot II son of Osorkon II.

The burial of an Apis in the twenty-eighth year of Sheshonk III having given Pediese opportunity to erect this stela, he took part in the search for the new Apis in the same year, and conducted its burial twenty-six years later in the second year of Pemou, when he erected a second stela (§§ 778–81).

The first stela is as follows:

Year 28, King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Setepnamon; Son [of Re], Lord of Diadems: Meriamon - Sibast - Sheshonk (III) - Nuterhekon.

Below, three men are praying before the sacred bull. They are accompanied by the following inscriptions, showing them to be father and two sons:

1. His beloved favorite, the great chief of Me, Pediese, triumphant, son of the great chief of Me, Takelot, triumphant; his mother was Thesperebast (Ts-B*s*t-pr*), triumphant; son of the great first hereditary prince of his majesty, Sheshonk, triumphant, royal son of the Lord of the Two Lands, Usermare-Setepnamon (Osorkon II), given life like Re.

RECORD OF INSTALLATIONb

775. This brief document is a graffito such as the officials of this age were wont to cut upon the walls at Karnak, in commemoration of their installation or promotion in office. It bears the latest surviving date of the High Priest Osorkon, and also informs us that his brother, Bekneptah, was commander at Heracleopolis in the year 39 of Sheshonk III. Bekneptah must, therefore, have interrupted the succession of Harpeson's family in that office at Heracleopolis. Osorkon and Bekneptah are here making common cause, "overthrowing all who fought against them."

776. This can hardly be a reminiscence of the trouble which interrupted Osorkon's rule at Thebes (§ 758). The interim in the power of the ruling family at Heracleopolis, by the installation of Osorkon's brother, Bekneptah, doubtless explains the origin of the trouble referred to. Osorkon and Bekneptah, sons of Takelot II, probably expelled from Heracleopolis the line established there by Osorkon II. This offers an interesting parallel to the expulsion from Thebes of the High Priest Osorkon himself, and suggests, at least, that he may have owed his expulsion to the Heracleopolitans, on whom he has now retaliated. Did their recov-

REIGN OF PEMOU
SECOND SERAPEUM STELA OF PEDIESE

778. Pediese, who had erected a stela at the burial of an Apis in the twenty-eighth year of Sheshonk III (§§ 771-74), records the successful search for another in the same year, and the death of the sacred animal twenty-six years later, in the second year of Pemou. Pediese has, meantime, become High Priest of Ptah; as such he conducted the burial of this Apis, and recorded the whole in this second stela. The length of life of the animal, given as twenty-six years, enables us to establish the length of Sheshonk III’s reign, thus:

Apis born in year 28 of Sheshonk III.
Apis died in year 2 of Pemou.
Apis lived 26 years.
Length of Sheshonk III’s reign, 52 years.

779. The stela is surmounted by a relief showing the Apis in human form, with head of a bull, accompanied by the goddess of the west. Three people, praying before them, are designated as:

1. Great chief of the Me, Pediese, triumphant, son of the great chief of the Meshwesh, Takelot, triumphant.

in duplicate; the second (Louvre, No. 36): Mariette, Le Sérapéum de Memphis, this Apis: Louvre, No. 35; Mariette, Le Sérapéum de Memphis, II, Pl. 28; and Louvre, No. 276, not published by Mariette.

father of Pediese, occurs as “chief of Me,” on the preceding stela (§ 774).
2. Sem priest of Ptah, Harsiese ———.
3. ———.

780. Below them is the following inscription:

[Year] 2,\(^a\) second month of the second season, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Setepnamon, given life; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Meriamon-Pemou,\(^b\) given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever, beloved of Apis, son of First of the Westerners, the great god.

On this day the god was conducted in peace to the beautiful west, (to) his burial in the cemetery, to lay him to rest in the eternal house, in his everlasting seat. Now, he was born in the year 28 in the time of the majesty of King Sheshonk III, triumphant. They sought his beauty in every place of the Northland, and he was found at the temple of Shedebod\(^c\) (\(\tilde{S}d\)-\(ybd\)), after three months, when they had gone around the regions of the Delta, and every district of the Northland.

781. He was conducted to Memphis, to his father, “Ptah-South-of-his-Wall,” by the High Priest of Ptah, sem priest in the house of Ptah, great chief of the Meshwesh, Pediese, son of the High Priest of Ptah, sem priest, [great chief of] the Meshwesh, Takelot, born of the king’s-daughter, of his body, his beloved Thesperebast; in the year 28, second month of the first season. The beautiful life\(^d\) of this god was 26 years.

\(^a\)I read a fragmentary first stroke immediately following the lacuna, making three; but another stela (No. 276, my own copy) gives the date as “year 2, second month of the second season, day 1.” The two other stelae relating the burial of this Apis have lost still more, and do not aid in restoring the number.

REIGN OF SHESHONK IV

STELA OF WESHTEHET

782. This interesting stela records Weshtehet’s gift of land to the temple of Hathor in an unknown town, probably in the western Delta, called Pesebek. The importance of the monument lies in Weshtehet’s office as chief caravaneer of Pharaoh, controlling the intercourse with the oases of the Libyan desert; and that of his immediate superior, who was the great chief of Libya, Hetihenker, the Pharaoh’s governor of a portion of the western Delta, and, perhaps, some uncertain extent of Libyan country also, including the oases. These arrangements are doubtless only the continuation of the organization of Sheshonk I. The barbarous names borne by these men are, of course, Libyan, but the chief caravaneer’s mother bore a name of Egyptian formation, and he himself conveyed an endowment of land to the Hathor of the town, which doubtless lay at the Egyptian terminus of his caravan route to the oases.

783. A relief at the top of the stela shows two scenes: on the left a man praying before Hathor, with the inscription: “May she give life, prosperity, health, to the great chief of Libya (R-b°);” on the right a similar scene, with the inscription: “May she give life, prosperity, health, to the chief caravaneer of Pharaoh.” These two men are the donator of the land, and his superior, as shown in the following inscription:

SERAPEUM STELA OF HARPESONb

785. This remarkable stela, while of the usual form of votive stela in the Serapeum, contains facts of fundamental importance in the study of the origin and internal affairs of the Twenty-second Dynasty. It was erected by one Harpeson, the military commander and High Priest of Harsaphes

---

aThis is undoubtedly the rendering here, although the determinative of the preposition (r ℓt) is not usually the legs. To render it “after” (m ℓt) and connect it with the verb “crave” (dbh), ignoring the preposition, “in order to” (r), as the editor of the text has done, is not a solution of the difficulty which need be discussed.

bDiscovered by Mariette in the Serapeum, now in the Louvre (No. 278); published by Lepsius, Die Zweiundzwanzigste ägyptische Königsdynastie, 267-69; Mariette, Le Sérapéum de Memphis, III, Pl. 31. I had also my own copy of the original.
at Heracleopolis in the thirty-seventh year of Sheshonk IV; that is, practically at the close of the Twenty-second Dynasty.

786. After recording, in the usual manner, the interment of an Apis-bull in that year, Harpeson appends the customary prayer on his own behalf, adding to his name his genealogy, ascending through fifteen generations. We thus have enumerated sixteen generations of an important family, extending from the close of the Twenty-second Dynasty back through the entire dynasty (ten generations), and six generations preceding it. The ten generations of this family thus correspond in length to the nine kings of the Twenty-second Dynasty. More important than this, however, is the fact that with the sixth generation back of Harpeson, his genealogy merges with the royal line in the person of Osorkon II. This will be clearer from the following table:* *aThe names of kings are in spaced capitals.

1. The Libyan, Buyuwawa

2. Divine father of Harsaphes, great chief, Musen

3. Divine father of Harsaphes, great chief, Nebneshi

4. Divine father of Harsaphes, great chief, Pethut

5. Divine father of Harsaphes, great chief, Sheshonk—king's-mother, Mehntenuskhet

6. Divine father of Harsaphes, great chief, Namlot—Divine mother, Tentsepeh

7. King Sheshonk I—Divine mother, Kerome

8. King Osorkon I—Divine mother, Temehkhonsu

9. King Takelot I—Divine mother, Kepes

10. King Osorkon II—Uzmutenkhos

11. Count, governor of the South, High Priest of Heracleopolis, commander of the army, Namlot—Priestess of Harsaphes, Tentsepeh

12. (Same titles), Uzptahenkhof—King's-daughter, Tentsepeh

13. (Same titles), Henptah—Priestess of Harsaphes, Thenekemet

14. (Same titles), Harpeson—Priestess of Harsaphes, Petpetdedes

15. (Same titles), Henptah—Prophetess of Hathor, Ireteru

16. (Same titles), Harpeson (year 37 of Sheshonk IV)
788. Back of Osorkon II, therefore, the genealogy of Harpeson becomes that of the Twenty-second Dynasty, and the Libyan, Buyuwawa, the father of his line is, therefore, the ancestor of the Twenty-second Dynasty. His immediate descendants (Nos. 2–5) also bear Libyan names, and among them is that chief of the Meshwesh, Sheshonk (No. 5), whom we found endowing his deceased son Namlot's (No. 6) tomb at Abydos (§§ 669 ff.). Their ancestor, Buyuwawa, bears no Egyptian title, but his son, Musen, became priest of Harsaphes at Heracleopolis, and was a "great chief," of course, of the Meshwesh, like his great-grandson, Sheshonk (No. 5). These warlike chiefs of the Libyan mercenaries so husbanded their power that after five generations at Heracleopolis they seized the throne. There is no intimation in this document of any connection with Bubastis.

789. It is evident, therefore, that for at least a hundred years before the Twenty-second Dynasty, Heracleopolis had been the seat of a powerful family. Of the fortunes of its rulers during the first three reigns of the dynasty we learn nothing; but our genealogy shows Osorkon II appointing his son Namlot as High Priest and military commander there, with the title of governor of the South, like the High Priest of Amon. Indeed, this Namlot became also High Priest a As the name of Namlot's mother, Mehetmusekhet, and the name of his father, Sheshonk, are the same in our genealogy and in the Abydos stela, there can be no question about their identity.

b On the Abydos stela, § 677.

c We can only suppose that during the Twenty-first Dynasty the family had gained control of Bubastis, and that Sheshonk I, perceiving the necessity of a stronghold in the eastern Delta, took up his residence there, thus gaining for his family the name Bubastites; but the family was clearly not of Bubastite origin.
of Amon, as Lepsius long ago saw.\(^a\) The principality of Thebes, added to that of Heracleopolis, gave to one man the control of all Upper Egypt, from the Delta into Nubia, creating a dangerous rival of the royal house. How long Namlot held both principalities is uncertain,\(^b\) but the family held possession of Heracleopolis for five generations more, six in all (§ 787, Nos. 11 and 16).

790. But in the thirty-ninth year of Sheshonk III, Bekneptah, a son of Takelot II, not appearing in our genealogy, was in control at Heracleopolis (§§ 775, 776) and making common cause with Osorkon, High Priest at Thebes. Namlot's descendants\(^c\) must therefore have lost and recovered control at Heracleopolis. The support of their enemy, Bekneptah, by the High Priest of Amon at Thebes, suggests earlier hostility between the two principalities, and is evidently only one example of the petty wars in which the dynasts of Egypt were now constantly embroiled. Thus, while Thebes did not succeed in maintaining a dynasty under the Bubastites, that of Heracleopolis, beginning early in the Twenty-first Dynasty, continued for fifteen generations, interrupted for four generations by the accession of the line to the throne as the Twenty-second Dynasty, and by the probably short usurpation of Bekneptah (see §§ 745, 746). The power and importance of Heracleopolis continued through the Ethiopian and Saitic periods. It is mentioned in the annals of Ashurbanipal and Isaiah saw the envoys of Judah going to Tanis and Heracleopolis (CDH, Isaiah 30:4) for assistance.

\(^b\)Evidently not into the reign of Takelot II; see Wreszinski's list (Die Hohenpriester des Amon, § 47), where a high priest of Amon, Amenhotep, is between Namlot and the High Priest Osorkon, who was appointed in year 11 of Takelot II (§ 760).

Apis Record

791. This god was introduced to his father, Ptah, in the year 12,\(^a\) fourth month of the second season, fourth day, of King Okheperre, \(^b\) Son of Re, Sheshonk (IV), given life. He was born in the year 11 of his majesty; he rested in his place \(^c\) in Tazoser (the cemetery) in the year 37, third month of the first season, day 27, of his majesty.

Sixteenth Generation

792. May he grant life, prosperity, health, and joy of heart to \(^d\) his beloved son, the prophet of Neit, Harpeson;

Fifteenth Generation

Son of the count, governor of the South, chief prophet in Heracleopolis, commander of \(^e\) the army, Henptah; born of the prophetess of Hathor of Heracleopolis, his sister, the matron, Ireteru (\(\text{Yr'}\text{-}\text{r-w}\));

Fourteenth Generation

\(^f\)Son of the like, \(^c\) Harpeson; born of the chief sistrum-bearer of Harsaphes, king of the Two Lands, ruler of the two shores, \(^g\) Petpetdedes;

Thirteenth Generation

Son of the like, Henptah; born of the like, Thenekemet (\(T\text{'-n-km't}\));

Twelfth Generation

Son of the like, \(^h\) Uzphatenkhof (\(Wd-Pth-<\text{nkh}\)); born of the prophetess of Hathor of Heracleopolis, king's-daughter, the matron, Tentsepeh (\(Tnt-sph\));

Eleventh Generation

Son of the like, Namlot, \(^i\) born of the chief sistrum-bearer of Harsaphes, king of the Two Lands, ruler of the two shores, Tentsepeh;

Tenth Generation

Son of the Lord of the Two Lands: Osorkon (II), born of Uzmut-enkhos;

Ninth Generation

Son of King Takelot (I), \(^j\) and the divine mother, Kepes;

\(^a\)His predecessor was buried in the year 11, the twenty-eighth of Paophi (Mariette, \textit{Le Sérapéum de Memphis}, Pl. 30).

\(^b\)The genealogy ascends from father to grandfather here; I have indicated each generation by a paragraph.

\(^c\)Meaning that the father bore the same titles and filled the same offices as the son. \textit{"The like"} may also be applied to the females of the line, as in l. 8.
Eighth Generation
Son of King Osorkon (I) and the divine mother, Temehkhonsu;

Seventh Generation
Son of King Sheshonk (I) and the divine mother, 12Kerome;

Sixth Generation
The divine father, the great chief, Namlot, and the divine mother, Tentsepeh;

Fifth Generation
Son of the like, Sheshonk, born of the king's-mother, Mehetnusekhet;

Fourth Generation
Son of the like, Pethut (P 3-tw);

Third Generation
Son of the like, Nebneshe (Nbn3y);

Second Generation
Son of the like, Musen (M 3-w 2-sn);

First Generation
Son of the Libyan (Tyhn), Buyuwawa (Bw-yw-w 3-w 3).

Abiding, abiding, remaining, remaining, enduring, enduring, flourishing, flourishing, in the temple of Harsaphes, king of the Two Lands, ruler of the two shores, one man the son of another man, without perishing, forever and ever, forever and ever, in Heracleopolis.

The omission of "Son of" is noticeable, but might easily happen in such a long series. Petrie (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, XXVI, 284) thinks this couple the same as that of the eleventh generation, so that the genealogy stops at the seventh and goes back to begin again with the eleventh (= sixth) and carries it back (6 to 1) parallel with 11 to 7; 11 to 7 being the ancestry of Namlot, and 6 to 1 the ancestry of his wife Tentsepeh. To this reconstruction there are three fatal objections: (1) If 6–1 is the genealogy of Tentsepeh alone, why has her husband's name been inserted before hers in 6? (2) If 6–1 is the genealogy of a woman, why does it proceed (fifth generation) with "son" and not daughter? (3) The titles in 6 and 11 are not the same, but in 6 we have the old Libyan title of Namlot, whereas in 11 (carried back from 15) we have the Egyptian titles which we should expect after the Egyptianization of the family. It is unfortunate that the above possibility of evading the Libyan origin of the Twenty-second Dynasty should be used as an argument for the Assyrian origin of that dynasty; although we have proof positive that at the rise of the Twenty-second Dynasty, Assyria was in a state of decline, and had absolutely no power in the west.
THE TWENTY-THIRD DYNASTY
RECORDS OF NILE-LEVELS AT KARNAK

793. These records, continuing those of the Twenty-second Dynasty (§§ 695-98), are of great importance. They show that the new Twenty-third Dynasty controlled Thebes, probably from its accession (about 745 B.C.), but at least twenty-three years thereafter. Its conquest by Piankhi must, therefore, fall after this period and after the reign of Pedibast, which concluded those twenty-three years. The interruption of the Twenty-third Dynasty at Thebes by Piankhi was, therefore, not earlier than 722 B.C., and his campaign not earlier than about 720 B.C. (see §§ 812, 813). The remainder of the Twenty-third Dynasty will be found discussed in the notes and introduction to the Piankhi Stela (§§ 811-13). The question whether it may have been parallel with the Twenty-second Dynasty is also taken up there (§ 813). See also Appended Remark, p. 404.

APPENDED REMARK

After these pages were in type, and as they go to press, I have received from Mons. Legrain, a letter in which he has had the great kindness to review the evidence from his brilliant excavations at Karnak, relating to the chronology of the Twenty-third Dynasty. He concludes from this evidence that the Twenty-third Dynasty was contemporary with the end of the Twenty-second. I wish to thank him very cordially here for the labor and time which he has so kindly devoted to this valuable letter, and to congratulate him upon the remarkable success of his work at Karnak, although I am as yet unable to see that the evidence adduced proves the alleged contemporaneity.

aThe following records (Nos. 5–21) cannot belong to Osorkon I, whose second name is Meriamon-Osorkon, as here; nor are they of Osorkon II, whose second name is Meriamon-Sibast-Osorkon. Hence they evidently belong to Osorkon III, whose second name was likewise Meriamon-Osorkon, as here. This also relieves us of an impossible series of otherwise unknown High Priests of Amon, who cannot be made sons of Osorkon I.
REIGN OF OSORKON III

WILL OF YEWELOT

795. The introduction to this will contains historical facts, too important to be omitted here, even though this series is not designed to include legal documents. I have, therefore, given below the introduction and the conclusion which furnish the framework of the document. According to the custom since the Twenty-first Dynasty, at least, all such legal instruments are decrees of Amon. Yewelot, son of Osorkon III and High Priest of Amon at Thebes, had founded a landed estate there in his youth, in the tenth year of his father’s reign. He wills this estate to his son, Khamwese. In the introduction he indicates the northern limit of his military command as Siut.

1 Said Amon-Re, king of gods, the great god, great in the beginning of being: “As for the landed estate, which the High Priest of Amon-Re, king of gods, commander in chief of the army, who is at the head of the great army of 2 the South as far as the region of Siut, Yewelot, triumphant, founded; which lies in the district of the highland northwest of 1 Thebes, and is called ‘Beautiful Region;’ while he was a youth in the time of his father, King Meriamon-Osorkon (III), 3 in the year 10, fourth month of the third season, last day . . . . . . 22. . . . in all 556 1 stat1 of various land, and 35 men and women, their dykes, their 23 trees, their large and small cattle; I confirm them to the prophet of Amon-Re, king of gods, the chief of a district, b Khamwese, triumphant, his son, whom the daughter of a king’s-daughter, 24 Tedenetnebast (T 3 dn’t-n-B 3 s’t), bore to him, forever.”

A relief at the top in two parts shows: on the right a priest with panther-skin offering a statuette of Truth to Amon and Khonsu; on the left, the same person in the same ceremony before Amon and Mut. REIGN OF PIANKHI

THE PIANKHI STELA

796. This stela is the most instructive surviving document in respect of the internal political condition of Egypt in a time when no strong central power and no aggressive monarch controlled the whole country. The conditions pictured in this record are undoubtedly typical of similar periods throughout the historic age in Egypt, and in reading it the student clearly perceives why certain epochs in the history of the Nile-dwellers have left us no monuments. That we consequently know almost nothing of such periods is, in view of the revelations of the Piankhi Stela, probably no great loss, as far as political conditions are concerned. We may safely picture them to ourselves as essentially like this period first revealed to us by our great stela.

The Piankhi Stela discloses the Nubian kingdom

a Large and splendid stela of pink granite, with rounded top, 180 cm. high, 184 cm. wide, and 43 cm. thick; in the Museum of Cairo (No. 160, Guide, 111, b). It was discovered in the temple at Gebel Barkal (Napata) by a native Egyptian officer of the Sudanese government in 1862, and a rude copy made by him was used by de Rouge for his essay on the stone in 1863 (Revue archéologique, 1863,* n. s. VIII, 94 ff.). The original having arrived in Cairo in 1864, a copy was made by Devéria, and published in 1867 (Fouilles exécutées en Egypte, en Nubie et au Soudan, d’après les ordres de son Altesse le Vice-Roi d’Egypte, par Auguste Mariette-Bey; folio; Paris: Franck, 1867; I (texte), 1-2; II (planches), Pls. 1-14). This work was for some reason withdrawn from sale a few days after publication, and only the few copies sold now exist. It was then published from the copies of Deveria in Rouge’s Chrestomathie, fasc. IV (1876), and in Mariette, Monuments divers, Pls. I-VI. The publications are very good; I had also a collation of the original by Schaefer, and my own collation of the Berlin squeeze, from both of which sources a few corrections have been inserted. The best and most recent translation is that of Griffith (A Library of the World’s Best Literature, 5275-95). See bibliography of older treatments, by Maspero (Mariette, Monuments divers, 1, 2, and Maspero, The Passing of the Empires, p. 166, n. 6). The geographical notes which I have appended are chiefly drawn from Brugsch, Dictionnaire géographique. 406 already in existence as a full-fledged power. King Piankhi must have come to the throne in Napata about 741 B.C., but his records offer no hint of the development of the kingdom which must have preceded him. Its character as an Amonite theocracy or hierarchy sufficiently indicates its Theban origin. When, moreover, we remember that the Nubian "gold-country of Amon," with its own governor, already existed toward the close of the Nineteenth Dynasty;\(^a\) that the Theban High Priest of Amon became viceroy of Kush at the end of the Twentieth Dynasty;\(^b\) and, finally, that the sacerdotal princess of Thebes in the Twenty-first Dynasty was "viceroy of Kush, and governor of the Southern Countries,"\(^c\) it will be seen that over four hundred years before Piankhi's reign the Theban hierarchy had a strong hold on Nubia, and that some two hundred years later this had strengthened into full possession of the country.

797. The transfer of the Pharaonic seat of power to the Delta and the prominence of Ptah in the family of the Twenty-second Dynasty, had alienated the Amon priests from the northern dynasties. What was the specific occasion of the priests' withdrawal and the foundation of a new government at Napata, the old Eighteenth Dynasty seat of Amon worship by the fourth cataract, we do not know. As the later generations of the Twenty-second Dynasty weakened, petty dynasts arose throughout the Delta and as far south as Hermopolis. The Twenty-third Dynasty, at Bubastis,\(^d\) although acknowledged for at least twenty-three years at Thebes during the reign of its first king, Pedibast (§§ 793, brought no order out of the chaos; for, as the Nubian kingdom now (about 722 B. C.)\(^a\) suddenly emerges upon our view, we find it in possession of Thebes and Upper Egypt, as far north as Heracleopolis just south of the mouth of the Fayûm.\(^b\)

798. The occasion of the Nubian conquest of the farther North, narrated in our document, was a disturbance in the situation just described, occasioned by the aggressiveness and rapid rise of Tefnakhte, a local dynast of Sais in the western Delta, whose career at this point illustrates that of almost every founder of a Pharaonic dynasty. Had the Nubian conquest not put an end to his brilliant career, he, too, like Ahmose of Thebes, and Sheshonk of Heracleopolis (later Bubastis), would have headed a dynasty of Pharaohs. In Piankhi’s twenty-first\(^c\) year, in the first month of the calendar year, his vassals in Upper Egypt reported to him that Tefnakhte had defeated the dynasts of the entire western Delta, and of both shores of the Nile above the Delta, almost as far south as the vicinity of Benihasan. Besides these, he had also gained control of all the eastern and middle Delta princes (l. 19), so that he was practically king of all lower Egypt, and of the lower portion of Upper

\(^a\)Or possibly a little later. The reasons why Thebes could not have fallen much later will be found at the close of this discussion, §813. The correctness of this dating of Piankhi’s appearance in Lower Egypt some fifty years later than has been heretofore done by other historians, is not only rendered certain by the chronological data of the preceding period (dead reckoning from accession of Eighteenth Dynasty), but also by the fact that Piankhi was the father of Taharka, who began to reign in 690 or 691 B. C.; the fact that Bocchoris, the son of Tefnakhte, Piankhi’s enemy, was the opponent of Shabaka; so that Piankhi and Shabaka cannot have been far apart.

\(^b\)The Ethiopian period in Egypt thus includes Dynasties 23 (excepting the first reign), 24, and 25, the last of which only, is called Ethiopian by Manetho, because it was not until the overthrow of the ephemeral Twenty-fourth Dynasty, in the Delta that the Ethiopians established themselves permanently there.

\(^c\)As he must have been holding Upper Egypt for some time before this, we must place his occupation of Thebes a year at least before these reports.
Egypt. Only Heracleopolis was holding out against him, and was suffering a siege at his hands, all his vassal princes lending him aid against it.

799. The wily Piankhi, desirous of drawing his enemy far southward, away from the safety of the impenetrable Delta swamps, quietly awaited developments. A second appeal from the north (§ 819) then informed Piankhi of the submission of Namlot, king of Hermopolis, to Tefnakhte (§ 820). Piankhi thereupon sent his commanders, with the troops then in Egypt, northward to check Tefnakhte's further southern advance, and besiege Hermopolis (§ 821). This they did, while Piankhi was, at the same time, dispatching from Nubia a second army for their support (§ 822). Having left Thebes, the second army met Tefnakhte's fleet coming up, and defeated it, capturing many ships and prisoners (§ 825). Continuing northward, probably down the Bahr Yusuf, they struck Tefnakhte's army, which was besieging Heracleopolis, with the assistance of the Delta dynasts, as we have already stated. The northerners were defeated, both by land and water, and fled to the west side of the Bahr Yusuf (§ 831), whither they were pursued by the Nubians the next morning, again discomfited and forced to retreat toward the Delta.

800. Namlot, king of Hermopolis, escaped from the disaster, and returned southward to protect his own city, Hermopolis, which had not yet surrendered; whereupon the Nubian commanders returned up the Bahr Yusuf to Hermopolis which they closely beset (§ 833).

801. On receiving reports of these operations, Piankhi was enraged that the northern army had been allowed to escape to the Delta. It was now late in the calendar year, and Piankhi determined, after the celebration of the New Year at home, to proceed to Thebes to celebrate there the great Feast of Opet in the third month, and then to lead the campaign against the North in person (§§ 835, 836). Meanwhile, his commanders in Egypt captured Oxyrhyncus, Tetchen, and Hatbenu (§§ 837–39), although Hermopolis still held out against them.

802. Piankhi then proceeded northward early in the calendar year, celebrated the Feast of Opet at Thebes in the third month, and went on to assume charge of the siege of Hermopolis, which had now been going on for certainly four, and probably five months (§ 840). He pressed the siege so vigorously that the city was soon at his mercy, and Namlot, finding that gifts, even his own royal crown, availed nothing with Piankhi, sent out his queen to plead with Piankhi’s women that they might intercede with him in Namlot’s behalf (§§ 842–44). This move was successful and, assured of his life, Namlot surrendered and turned over all his wealth to Piankhi, who immediately entered the city (§§ 845–50). One of the most remarkable touches in this remarkable inscription is the wrath of Piankhi as he visits Namlot’s stables and finds that the horses have suffered hunger (§ 850). All of Namlot’s wealth was assigned to the royal treasury of Piankhi and the sacred fortune of Amon (§ 851).

803. Heracleopolis, being already exhausted after a siege at the hands of Tefnakhte, its king, Pefnefdibast, now came to greet Piankhi and praise him for his deliverance (§ 852). The advance to the Delta, sailing down the Bahr Yusuf, was then begun, and all the chief towns of the West surrendered one after another on seeing Piankhi’s force, except Crocodilopolis, in the Fayûm, which would have carried him too far from his course by Illahun. On the other hand, he did not touch Aphroditopolis, which lay on the east side of the river, equally far removed from his route, past Medûm and Ithtowe to Memphis (§§ 853-57). Piankhi offered sacrifice to the gods in all the cities which he passed, and took possession of the available property for his own treasury and the estate of Amon.

804. On reaching Memphis, it was found to be very strongly fortified and, in answer to Piankhi's demand to surrender, the Memphites closed the gates and made a sortie, which was evidently not very effective (§§ 857, 858). Under cover of night, Tefnakhte entered the city, and exhorted the garrison to rely on their strong walls, their plentiful supplies, and the high water which protected the east side from attack, while he himself rode away north for reinforcements (§§ 859, 860). Having landed on the north of the city, Piankhi was surprised at the strength of the place. Some of his people favored a siege, others desired to storm the walls upon embankments and causeways raised for the purpose (§ 861). Piankhi decided to storm, devising a shrewd plan of assault which speaks highly for his skill as a leader.

805. The lofty walls on the west side of the city had been recently raised still higher, and it was evident that the east side, protected by high waters (artificially raised ?), was being neglected. Here was the harbor, where the ships now floated so high that their bow-ropes were fastened among the houses of the city. Piankhi sent his fleet against the harbor, and quickly captured all the shipping. Then, taking command in person, he rapidly ranged the captured craft and his own fleet along the eastern walls, thus furnishing footing for his assaulting lines, which he immediately sent over the ramparts and captured the city before its eastern defenses could be strengthened against him (§§ 862-65). A great slaughter ensued, but the sanctuaries were, of course, respected and protected, and Ptah recognized Piankhi as king (§§ 865, 866).

806. The entire region of Memphis then submitted (§ 867), whereupon the Delta dynasts also came to Memphis with gifts for Piankhi, and signified their submission (§ 868). After dividing the wealth of Memphis between the treasuries of Amon and of Ptah, Piankhi crossed the river, worshiped in the ancient sanctuary of Khereha-Babylon, and followed the old sacred road thence to Heliopolis, where he camped by the harbor. Among the important religious ceremonies here was his entrance alone into the holy of holies of the Re-temple, that he might view the god and be recognized by him as king, according to the immemorial custom* (§ 871).

807. Before he left Heliopolis, King Osorkon III of Bubastis surrendered and visited Piankhi. Having moved his camp to a point just east of Athribis, by a town called Keheni, he there received the submission of all the petty kings, princelets, chiefs, and dynasts of the Delta (§§ 872, 873). Among these, Pediese of Athribis showed himself especially loyal to Piankhi and invited him thither, placing all his wealth at the Nubian’s disposal. Piankhi, therefore, entered Athribis, received the gifts of Pediese, and, in order to choose for himself the best horses, especially entered the stables, which the shrewd Athribite, observing his love of horses, had particularly invited him to do. Fifteen Delta dynasts were here dismissed, at their own request, that they might go back to their cities and return to Piankhi with further gifts, in emulation of Pediese (§§ 873–76).

808. Meantime the desperate Tefnakhte had garrisoned

*See II, §§ 134, 221 ff.
Mesed, a town of uncertain location, but probably somewhere on his frontier. Rather than have them captured by Piankhi, he burned the ships and supplies which he could not save. Piankhi then sent a body of troops against Mesed, and they slew the garrison. Tefnakhte had, meanwhile, taken refuge on one of the remote islands in the western mouths of the Nile. The season was far advanced; many miles of vast Delta morass, and a network of irrigation canals, separated Piankhi from the fugitive. It would have been a hazardous undertaking to have dispatched an army into such a region. When, therefore, Tefnakhte sent gifts and a humble message of submission, requesting that Piankhi send a messenger with whom he might go to the neighboring temple and take the oath of allegiance to Piankhi, the Nubian king was very ready to accept the proposal (§ 880). In this less humiliating, not to say much less dangerous manner, Tefnakhte then accepted the suzerainty of Piankhi, and when the two kings of the Fayûm and Aphroditopolis, whom he had not molested on his way northward, appeared with their gifts (§ 882), a Nubian Pharaoh was lord of all Egypt.

809. The vassals, having paid Piankhi a last visit, he loaded his vessels with the wealth of the North and sailed away for his southern capital, amid the acclamations of the people. Arrived at Napata, he had erected in the temple of Amon our magnificent granite stela, recording how he, the son of Amon, had humiliated the rivals of that god in the North. The language of the inscription is good, and clear Egyptian in the narrative portions; but in the speeches, especially those of Piankhi himself, it is in places quite unintelligible, and produces the impression of a composition by one not perfectly familiar with the language. Apart from the Annals of Thutmose III, and possibly the documents of Ramses II on the Battle of Kadesh, the inscription of Piankhi is the clearest and most rational account of a campaign which has survived from ancient Egypt. It displays a good deal of literary skill, and an appreciation of dramatic situations which is notable, while the vivacious touches found here and there quite relieve it of the arid tone usual in such hieroglyphic documents. The imagination endues the personages appearing here more easily with life than those of any other similar historical narrative of Egypt; and the humane Piankhi especially, the lover of horses, remains a man, far removed from the conventional companion and equal of the gods, who inevitably occupies the exalted throne of the Pharaohs in all other such records, except, possibly, the Annals of Thutmose III.

810. Tefnakhte, while he had nominally submitted to Piankhi, only awaited the withdrawal of the Ethiopian to resume his designs. He eventually assumed the Pharaonic titles; and a gift of land near Sais by a priest of Neit, to this goddess, is dated in Tefnakhte’s eighth year as Pharaoh. He must have greatly increased the power and prestige of Sais, for his son Bocchoris was the founder of the Twenty-fourth Dynasty (about 719–713 B.C.).

811. In Upper Egypt, Piankhi’s rule continued for an uncertain but brief period. In the temple of Mut, at Thebes, he left a relief representing a festal voyage of his ships, perhaps his return from the North. Among the ships appears a Stela in hieratic in the museum of Athens, first noticed and partially published by Mallet (Recueil, 18, 4 ff.); then fully by Spiegelberg in transcription (ibid., 25, 190–93); the relief at the top by Maspero (Empires, 181).

the state barge\textsuperscript{a} of Sais, of course captured from Tefnakhte’s fleet in the northern war. Osorkon III of Bubastis finally recovered Thebes, perhaps about 720 B.C., and together with an otherwise unknown Takelot (III) ruled there for a few years.\textsuperscript{b} Some years later\textsuperscript{c} Tefnakhte’s son Bocchoris ($W^3h-k^3-R^c$) ascended the throne as the first and, as far as we know, the sole king of the Twenty-fourth Dynasty (see following table).

\textsuperscript{a}The Somtu-tefnakhte, who appears here as a naval commander of Piankhi and prince of Heracleopolis, cannot possibly be the same as the Saite Tefnakhte, who, besides the difference in the name, was not prince of Heracleopolis.

\textsuperscript{b}See note, § 872, l. 106.

\textsuperscript{c}Who ruled at Thebes during these years we do not know. Osorkon III’s, coregent, Takelot III, may have continued there. As Osorkon III’s successor Africanus and Syncellus give a certain Psammus, with ten years, and Africanus follows Psammus with one Zet (thirty-one years); but neither of these two kings has been found on the monuments.

Notes
- Thebes probably lost around 717 BC.
- End of Twenty-third Dynasty around 712 BC.
- The twenty-fourth dynasty begins around 712 BC.
- The table is a timeline showing key events during the twenty-third dynasty.
813. The preceding table will show how the complicated history of the time is probably to be restored. The Twenty-third Dynasty ruler, Osorkon III, is a Bubastite, and not a Tanite, as Manetho states. Hence the Twenty-third Dynasty, being clearly Bubastite, could not have been parallel with the close of the Bubastite Twenty-second Dynasty, but must have followed it. Again, both Pedibast and Osorkon III of the Twenty-third Dynasty, controlled Thebes (§§ 793, 794) as did all the later kings of the Twenty-second Dynasty. Hence they could not have been contemporary. There are two other possible parallels: first, the last few years of the Twenty-third Dynasty, with the reign of Bocchoris, but Bocchoris could not have been regarded as the founder and sole king of a new dynasty, if he had not ruled the country as a whole for a time; second, the early years of Shabaka may have been parallel with the close of Bocchoris’s reign. The whole period involved by these two parallels could not have been more than ten years, and was probably less, if it existed at all.

814. Returning now to the Piankhi Stela, it is crowned by a relief, showing Amon of Napata enthroned, with Mut standing behind him. Before the divinities stands Piankhi. Approaching him a king, wearing upon his forehead the royal serpent-crest (uraeus), leads a horse with the left hand, and in the right hand carries a sistrum; above him the words: “King Namlot.” This incident is afterward a On the position of Osorkon III and his relation to Thebes and Piankhi, see § 872, l. 106, note; and § 941.

b The new materials found by Legrain in the great cache at Karnak (Recueil, 27, 78, 79) have led him to think that the old conclusion of the contemporaneity of the Twenty-second and Twenty-third Dynasties is supported by them. In so far as published, they do not prove this conclusion. [Later: See Appended Note, p. 404.]

c On date of Bocchoris, see § 884.

d The fragmentary words inscribed beside him, refer to the “pure mountain,” or Gebel Barkal, by Napata.
described in the great inscription (l. 58). A woman, standing with uplifted right hand, preceding Namlot, represents "the king's-wives," the women of Namlot, who appeared before Piankhi in the palace at Hermopolis (ll. 62–64). Three kings, with the royal uraeus upon their foreheads, are kissing the earth at Piankhi's feet. They are designated as: (1) King Osorkon; (2) King Yewepet; (3) King Peñefdibast.

815. Five other princes approach Piankhi, of whom one, without the uraeus, but wearing the sidelock of youth, was "[Prince] Teti." The other four, who are also without the uraeus, but wear the feather plume on the head, are:

(1) The prince (h^2 ty^-c),² Pethenef (P^2^-tnf); (2) The prince (h^-ty^-c), Pemou (P^2^-m^-n^-t); (3) Great chief of Me, Akenesh (P^-k^-n^-f^-s^-n^-f); (4) Great chief of Me, Zeamamefonekh.

The words of these conquered dynasts, or at least of Namlot, inscribed before them, are too fragmentary for restoration, but they began: "Be appeased, Horus, lord of [the palace]," in which we recognize the opening words of Namlot's speech before Piankhi (ll. 55, 56). The figure of Piankhi has been chiseled away by his political enemies.

Beneath the relief the great inscription then follows, as translated below:

Date

816. ¹Year 21,² first month of the first season, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Meriamon-Piankhi³ (P^-c nhy), living forever.

²The old "counts" have now become practically independent "princes," and the old title, h^2 ty^-c, should generally be so rendered in this age.

²This date may be either that of the first events in the following record, or that of the return of Piankhi and the erection of the stela. Piankhi, having celebrated the New Year's feast at Napata, departed for Thebes, which in turn he left in the third month, for his campaign in the north. The above date, nine months later, would allow enough for his campaign and the return to Napata. Again, if it be the date of the first report of Tefnakhte's aggressions, Piankhi's departure was a year later (his commanders operating in Egypt meanwhile), so that his departure and campaign fell in the year 22.

³For this name I have retained the traditional spelling, although it is evident
Introduction

817. Command which my majesty speaks: "Hear of what I did, more than the ancestors. I am a king, divine emanation, living image of Atum, who came forth from the womb, adorned as a ruler, of whom those greater than he were afraid; whose father knew, and whose mother recognized that he would rule in the egg, the Good God, beloved of the gods, achieving with his hands, Meriamon-Piankhi."

Announcement of Tefnakhte's Advance

818. One came to say to his majesty: "A chief of the west, the great prince in Neter, Tefnakhte (\(T \cdot \hat{n}t \cdot t\)) is in the nome of —, in the nome of Xois, in Hapi (\(H \cdot p\)), in — in Ayan, in Pernub, and in Memphis. He has seized the whole west from the back-lands to Ithtowe, coming southward with a numerous army, while the Two Lands are united behind him, and the princes and rulers of walled towns are as dogs at his heels. No stronghold has closed its doors in the nomes of the South: Mer-Atum (Medêm), Per-Sekhemkheperre, from the two reed-leaves at the end that the vowel followed the \(b\). The \(p\) or \(py\) is certainly the demonstrative "pay." The name of Hrihor's son, Payonekh, owing to the lack of the \(y\) at the end, evidently had nothing to do with Piankhi. Hence the political connection between Thebes and Napata, however probable on other grounds, cannot be based on the supposed identity of these two names, as is commonly done.

\(a\) A region in the central Delta near modern Behbeit, the Iseum or Isidis oppidum of classic geographers; see also § 878, No. 5, note.

\(b\) This name is an abbreviation, the full form being: \(X \cdot (\text{divine name}) \cdot \hat{n}t \cdot t = \text{tefnakhte, \("(the god) X is his Strength."}\) See Schaefer, Festschrift für Georg Ebers, 93, note 2. The full form occurs on the Theban blocks of Piankhi (Benson and Gourlay, The Temple of Mut in Asher, 375). Feminine form \(X\)-tesnakhte (§ 918).

\(d\) Lit., "\(Nile,\)" a Nilopolis supposed by Brugsch to be somewhere in the western Delta.

\(e\) Uncertain.

\(f\) There was a Per-Nub near Sais (Brugsch, Dictionnaire géographique, 325) in the western Delta. The following generalization, "the whole west, etc.," shows that all these places are to be distributed in the western Delta from Memphis to the coast. Ithtowe was between Medêm and Memphis.

\(g\) Lit., "House of Osorkon I;" the place was therefore a foundation of this king. Its exact site is no longer known, but it must have been near Illahûn at the mouth of the Fayûm."

Behold, [he] besieges Heracleopolis, he has completely invested it, i not letting the comers-out come out, and not letting the goers-in go in, fighting every day. He measured it off in its whole circuit, every prince knows his wall; j he stations every man of the princes and rulers of walled towns over his (respective) portion.”

Piankhi's Indifference

819. Then [his majesty] heard [the message] 6 with courageous heart, laughing, and joyous of heart.

Second Appeal of the North

Submission of Hermopolis to Tefnakhte

820. “Namlot, prince of Hatweret (H 't-wr), he has overthrown the wall of Nefrus (Njrws), he has demolished his own city, for fear of him who might take it from him, in order to besiege another city. Behold, he goes to follow at his (Tefnakhte’s) heels, having cast off allegiance to his majesty (Piankhi). He tarries with him (Tefnakhte) like one of [his vassals in] the nome of Oxyrhyncus, and gives to him (Tefnakhte) gifts, as much as he desires, of everything that he has found.”

Piankhi Commands the Capture of the Hare Nome

821. Then his majesty sent to the princes and commanders (mr) of the army who were in Egypt: the commander (tü), Purem (P-w 3-r-m c); and the commander (tü), Lemersekeny (Rw- 3-mr-s-k-n-y); and every commander (tü) of his majesty who was in Egypt (saying): “Hasten into battle line, engage in battle, surround —, capture its people, its cattle, its ships upon the river. Let not the peasants go forth to the field, let not the plowmen plow, beset the frontier of the Hare nome, fight against it daily.” Then they did so.

Piankhi Sends His Army; His Instructions

822. Then his majesty sent an army to Egypt, charging them earnestly: “[Delay] not [day nor] night, as at a game of draughts; (but) fight ye on sight. Force battle upon him from afar.” If he says to the infantry and chariotry of another city, 'Hasten;' (then) ye shall abide until his army comes, that ye may fight as he says. But if his allies be in another city, 11 (then) let one hasten to them; 8 these princes, whom he has brought for his support: Libyans (Thnw) and favorite soldiers, force battle upon them first. 8 Say, 'We know not what he cries in mustering troops. 8 Yoke the war horses, the best of thy stable; draw up the line of battle! Thou knowest that Amon is the god who has sent us.'"

Instructions as to Thebes

823. "When ye arrive at Thebes, before Karnak, ye shall enter into the water, ye shall bathe in the river, ye shall dress in fine linen; unstring the bow, loosen the arrow. Let not the chief boast as a mighty man; there is no strength to the mighty without him (Amon). He maketh the weak-armed into the strong-armed, so that multitudes flee from the feeble, and one alone taketh a thousand men. Sprinkle yourselves with the water of his altars, sniff the ground before him. Say ye to him, 'Give to us the way, that we may fight in the shadow of thy sword. (As for) the generation whom thou hast sent out, when its attack occurs, multitudes flee before it.'"

Reply of the Army

824. Then they threw themselves upon their bellies before his majesty (saying): "It is thy name which endues us with might, and thy counsel is the mooring-post of thy army; thy bread is in our bellies on every march, thy beer quenches our thirst. It is thy valor that giveth us might, and there is strength at the remembrance of thy name; (for) no army prevails whose commander is a coward. Who is thy equal therein? Thou art a victorious king, achieving with his hands, chief of the work of war."

a If Tefnakhte should send his allies to fight them, they are to await the attack; but if the allies remain in some city, Piankhi's forces are to seek them.

b T'py-3, evidently parallel with m w ("from afar") in l. 10.

c The meaning is uncertain; possibly: we are indifferent to his battle-cry, in encouraging his troops. The remainder is a defiance to Tefnakhte, to be spoken by Piankhi's army.

d P m, lit., "young men," or, in the military organization of the country, a "class," as they successively fall due for military service (see § 402).
Advance to Thebes

825. They sailed down-stream, they arrived at Thebes, they did according to all that his majesty had said.

Battle on the River

They sailed down-stream upon the river; they found many ships coming up-stream bearing soldiers, sailors, and commanders; every valiant man of the Northland, equipped with weapons of war, to fight against the army of his majesty. Then there was made a great slaughter among them, (whose) number was unknown. Their troops and their ships were captured, and brought as living captives to the place where his majesty was.

Arrival at Heracleopolis

They went to the frontier of Heracleopolis, demanding battle.

List of the Northern Enemy

830.e List of the princes and kings of the Northland, namely:
1. King Namlot and
2. King Yewepet (Yw-\(\nu\)-\(\nu\)-\(\nu\)-\(\nu\)-\(\nu\)).
3. Chief of Me, Sheshonk, of Per-Osiris (Busiris), lord of Ded.

830.e The addition is significant; the advance through Nubia had been largely by land. The exact place of the battle is uncertain; but as Piankhi's commanders were already besieging Hermopolis, it could hardly have been south of that city.

830.e The meaning of this word (\(\text{bn} \cdot \text{t}\)) is here uncertain; it is possibly "houn" (of ehoun), "into." As the troops of Tefnakhte were besieging Heracleopolis, the battle which now took place must have been by the city far from the Nile; and the capture of ships would indicate that the Nubians had descended the Bahr Yusuf, as Schaefer has suggested to me. See § 831 and note.

830.e Omission of Nos. 826-29 in the section numbering is intentional.

830.e The term is loosely used here, for Namlot, the first king, was king of Hermopolis, the second nome south of the Fayûm. A fuller list of the Delta dynasts is given later (§§ 878, ll. 114-17).

830.e See § 794; p. 437, n. d; and § 878.

830.e This mercenary commander from Busiris is subordinate to Pemou, prince of that city (l. 116). They are contemporary, and neither bears royal titles; hence they cannot have been identical with Pemou and Sheshonk IV, the last kings of the Twenty-second Dynasty. Moreover, both Pemou and Sheshonk IV held Memphis to the end of their reigns, but Memphis has now long been held by Tefnakhte, who was sem priest of Ptah there.
4. Great chief of Me, Zeamonefonekh, of Per-Benebed (Mendes), together with
5. His eldest son, who was commander of the army of Per-Thutuprehui (Pr-Δhwty-Wp-rhw(y)).
6. The army of the hereditary prince, Beknenef (Bk-n-njy), together with
7. His eldest son, chief of Me, Nesnekedi (Ns-n^ - ^ - c^y, sic!) in the nome of Hesebka (Hsb-k^).
8. Every chief wearing a feather who was in the Northland;
together with
9. King Osorkon, who was in Per-Bast (Bubastis) and the district of Ranofer (Rc-njr).
10. Every prince, the rulers of the walled towns in the West, in the East, (and) the islands in the midst, were united of one mind as followers of the great chief of the West, ruler of the walled towns of the Northland, prophet of Neit, mistress of Sais, sem priest of Ptah, Tefnakhte.

Battle Opposite Heracleopolis

831. They went forth against them; then they made a great slaughter among them, greater than anything. Their ships were captured upon the river. The remnant crossed over and landed on the west side before Per-Peg.

^a^ His name, Enekhor, will be found in the other list (§ 878, No. 4).
^b^ Hermopolis Parva, in the western Delta.
^c^ L. 116 has Ns-n^ - kd-y.
^d^ Eleventh nome of Lower Egypt.
^e^ How many names this term may include is uncertain, but doubtless the chiefs of Me, enumerated in the second list, are meant.
^f^ This word (yr) has a common plural, referring to the canals of Egypt, and does not necessarily designate the Nile. Schaefer suggested to me that the Bahr Yusuf is meant here. It then occurred to me that all the cities taken by Piankhi as he went north, were far from the Nile, on the west side, until he reached Khreha-Babylon, and that he left the Fayûm on one side and Atfih-Aphroditopolis on the other side untouched, passing north between them, as is shown by the later surrender of their kings (l. 145, note). This would have been almost impossible in the case of Atfih, had Piankhi been descending the Nile. He probably reached the river again below Atfih by the ancient connection between Heracleopolis and Alexandria (Wilcken, Archiv für Papyrysforshung, II, 317; see also Papyrus Harris, § 224, note), of which we do not know the exact course. See also l. 76 (§ 853, n. a), which is the main proof of this hypothesis.
^g^ This town is uncertain; but seeing that the Nubians had already reached Battle at Per-Peg

832. When the land brightened early in the morning, the army of his majesty crossed over against them. Army mingled with army; they slew a multitude of people among them; horses of unknown number; a rout ensued among the remnant. They fled to the Northland, from the blow, great and evil beyond everything.

List of the slaughter made among them:
People: —b men.

Hermopolis Besieged

833. King Namlot fled up-stream southward, when it was told him: "Hermopolis (Hmnw) is in the midst of the foe from the army of his majesty, who capture its people and its cattle." Then he entered into Hermopolis (Wnw), while the army of his majesty was upon the river, in the harbor of the Hare nome. Then they heard of it, and they surrounded the Hare nome on its four sides, not letting the comers-out come out, and not letting the goers-in go in.

Report to Piankhi

834. They sent to report to the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Meriamon-Piankhi, given life, on every conflict which they had fought, and on every victory of his majesty.

Piankhi Determines to go to Egypt Himself

835. Then his majesty was enraged thereat like a panther (saying):
"Have they allowed a remnant of the army of the Northland to remain? allowing him that went forth of them to go forth, to tell of his campaign?

the vicinity of Heracleopolis (l. 17), it must have been on the west side of Bahr Yusuf close to that city, and almost certainly further north. Maspero's identification with hardly seems phonetically possible, and hardly fits the conditions (Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology, 20, 123–25).

aSee Piehl, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1887, 124 f.
bThe sculptor has omitted the numeral, although he left room for it.
cThe nome names are commonly used in this inscription as here, for the chief city of the nome. The harbor was evidently on the Bahr Yusuf, on the east side of which Heracleopolis lies (see Schaefer's plan, Archiv für Papyrusrorschung, II). They must therefore have returned up the Bahr Yusuf.

not causing their death, in order to destroy the last of them? I swear:
as Re loves me! As my father Amon favors me! I will myself go northward, that I may destroy that which he has done, that I may make him turn back from fighting, forever."

Piankhi Would Visit Thebes

836. "Now, afterward when the ceremonies of the New Year are celebrated, I will offer to my father, Amon, at his beautiful feast, when he makes his beautiful appearance of the New Year, that he may send me forth in peace, to behold Amon at the beautiful Feast of Opet; that I may bring his image forth in procession to Luxor at his beautiful feast (called): "Night of the Feast of Opet," and at the feast (called):
"Abiding in Thebes," which Re made for him in the beginning; and that I may bring him in procession to his house, resting upon his throne, on the "Day of Bringing in the God," in the third month of the first season, second day; that I may make the Northland taste the taste of my fingers."

Capture of Oxyrhyncus

837. Then the army, which was there in Egypt, heard of the wrath which his majesty felt toward them. Then they fought against Per-Mezede of the Oxyrhynchite nome, they took it like a flood of water, and they sent to his majesty; (but) his heart was not satisfied therewith.

Capture of Tetehen

838. Then they fought against Tetehen, great in might. They found it filled with soldiers, with every valiant man of the Northland.
Then the battering-ram was employed against it, its wall was overthrown, and a great slaughter was made among them, of unknown number;
also the son of the chief of Me, Tefnakhte. Then they sent to his majesty concerning it, (but) his heart was not satisfied therewith.

Capture of Hatbenu

839. Then they fought against Hatbenu (H.t-Bnw), its interior was breached, the army of his majesty entered into it. Then they sent to his majesty, (but) his heart was not satisfied therewith.

Piankhi Goes to Hermopolis

840. First month of the first season, ninth day; his majesty went northward to Thebes, and completed the Feast of Amon at the Feast of Opet. His majesty sailed northward to the city of the Hare nome (Hermopolis); his majesty came forth from the cabin of the ship, the horses were yoked up, the chariot was mounted, the terror of his majesty reached to the end of the Asiatics, every heart was heavy with the fear of him.

Piankhi Rebukes His Army

841. Then his majesty went forth to hate his soldiers, enraged at them like a panther (saying): "Is the steadfastness of your fighting this slackness in my affairs? Has the year reached its end, when the fear of me has been inspired in the Northland? A great and evil blow shall be smitten them."

Siege of Hermopolis

842. He set up for himself the camp on the southwest of Hermopolis (Ḥmnw), and besieged it daily. An embankment was made, to inclose the wall; a tower was raised to elevate the archers while shooting, and the slingers while slinging stones, and slaying people among them daily.

The City Pleads for Mercy

843. Days passed, and Hermopolis (Wnw) was foul to the nose, without her (usual) fragrance. Then Hermopolis (Wnw) threw herself upon her belly, and plead before the king. Messengers came forth and descended bearing everything beautiful to behold: gold, every splendid costly stone, clothing in a chest, and the diadem which was upon his head, the uraeus which inspired the fear of him; without ceasing during many days, pleading with his diadem.

Namlot's Queen Intercedes

844. Then they sent his wife, the kings'-wife, and king's-daughter, Nestent, to plead with the king's-wives, king's-concubines, king's-daughters, and king's-sisters, to throw herself upon her belly in the harem before the king's-wives (saying): "We come to you, O king's-wives, king's-daughters, and king's-sisters, that ye may appease Horus, lord of the palace, whose fame is great and his triumph mighty. Grant that he — — — me; lo, he — — — —[Speak] to him, that he may incline to the one that praises him — — — — —."

Piankhi Addresses Namlot

845. Lo, who has led thee? Who, then, has led thee? Who has led thee? — — — thou didst forsake the way of life. Did heaven rain with arrows? I am when the Southerners do obeisance and the Northerners (say): ‘Put us in thy shadow.’ Lo, it is evil bearing his food. The heart is a steering-oar; it capsizes its owner through that which is from the god. It seeth flame as coolness the heart. There is no old man, Thy nomes are full of youths.”

Namlot's Reply to Piankhi

846. He threw himself upon his belly before his majesty (saying): "[Be appeased], Horus, lord of the palace, it is thy might which has done it. I am one of the king's slaves, paying impost into the treasury their impost. I have brought for thee more than they.”

847. Then he presented much silver, gold, lapis lazuli, malachite, bronze, and all costly stones.

848. Then he filled the treasury with this tribute; he brought a horse in the right hand and a sistrum in the left hand, of gold and lapis lazuli.

Piankhi's Triumphant Entry into Hermopolis

849. Then his majesty appeared in splendor in his palace, proceeded to the house of Thoth, lord of Hermopolis (Hmnw), and he slew bulls, calves, and fowl for his father, lord of Hermopolis (Hmnw), and the eight gods in the house of the eight gods. The army of the Hare nome acclaimed and rejoiced, saying: "How beautiful is Horus, resting in his city, the Son of Re, Piankhi! Celebrate for us a jubilee (hb-5d), even as thou hast protected the Hare nome."

Piankhi Visits Namlot's Palace

850. His majesty proceeded to the house of King Namlot, he entered every chamber of the king's-house, his treasury and his magazines. He caused that there be brought to him; the king's-wives and king's-daughters; they saluted his majesty in the fashion of women, (but) his majesty turned not his face to them.

Piankhi Visits Namlot's Stables

851. His majesty proceeded to the stable of the horses and the quarters of the foals. When he saw that they had suffered hunger, he said: "I swear, as Re loves me, and as my nostrils are rejuvenated with life, it is more grievous in my heart that my horses have suffered hunger, than any evil deed that thou hast done, in the prosecution of thy desire. It has borne witness of thee to me, the fear of thy associates for thee. Didst thou not know that the god's shadow is over me? and that my fortune never perishes because of him? Would that another had done it to me! I could not but condemn him on account of it. When I was being fashioned in the womb, and created in the divine egg the

Loyalty of Heracleopolis

852. The ruler of Heracleopolis Pefnedefbast (Pj-nj-dyy-B²s²t) came, bearing tribute to the palace: gold, silver, every costly stone, and horses of the choicest of the stable. He threw himself upon his belly before his majesty; he said: "Hail to thee, Horus, mighty king, Bull subduer of Bulls! The Nether World had seized me, and I was submerged in darkness, upon which the light has (now) shone. I found not a friend in the evil day, who was steadfast in the day of battle; but thou, O mighty king, thou hast expelled the darkness from me. I will labor together with thy subjects, and Heracleopolis shall pay taxes into thy treasury, thou likeness of Harakhte, chief of the imperishable stars. As he was, so art thou king; as he perishes not so thou shalt not perish, O King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Piankhi, living forever.

dThe following description refers to the struggle of his city with Tefnakhte, and the relief brought by Piankhi.

eLit., "those which cannot perish (yhm[w-sk]);" an epithet applied to the stars of the northern heavens (Brugsch, Aegyptologie, 321).
Per-Sekhemkheperre is Summoned to Surrender

853. His majesty sailed north to the opening of the canal\(^a\) beside Illahun \((R\,^2\,-hn\,-t')\); he found Per-Sekhemkheperre\(^c\) with its wall raised, and its stronghold \((h\,t\,m')\) closed, filled with every valiant man of the Northland. Then his majesty sent to them, saying: "Ye living in death! Ye living in death! Ye insignificant and miserable ones! Ye living in death! If an hour passes without opening to me, behold, ye are of the number of the fallen; and that is painful to the king. Close not the gates of your life, to be brought to the block this day. Love not death, nor hate life \(^{-1}\,\,79\,\,{-1}\) before the whole land."

Surrender of Per-Sekhemkheperre

854. Then they sent to his majesty, saying: "Lo, the shadow of the god is over thee; the son of Nut, he gives to thee his two arms; the thought of thy heart comes to pass immediately, like that which comes forth from the mouth of a god. Lo, thou art fashioned as the face of a god; we see by the decree of thy hands. Lo, thy city, his stronghold; \(^8\,\,[dol']\) thy ['pleasure'] therewith. Let the goers-in go in there, and the comers-out come out. Let his majesty do what he will." Then they came out, with the son of the chief of Me, Tefnakhte. The army of his majesty entered into it, without slaying one of all the people. He found \(^8\,\,{-1}\,\,{-1}\,\,\,e\) and treasurers to seal his possessions. His treasuries were assigned to the Treasury, and his granaries to the divine offerings of his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes.

Surrender of Medûm

855. His majesty sailed northward; he found that Mer-Atum (Medûm), the house of Sokar, lord of Sehez, had been closed, and was inaccessible. It had set fighting in its heart, taking \(^8\,\,{-1}\) Fear [‘seized’] them; terror sealed their mouth. Then his majesty sent to \(^a\)I read mr, "canal," on the squeeze in place of Mariette's ḥs (so also Schaefer), "lake." The irrigation canal leading into the Fayûm is meant, and the "opening" is the gap in the hills, through which it still flows. It would have been impossible for him to "sail north" to this gap, unless he was descending the Bahr Yusuf.

\(^b\)The text here passes to the back of the stela, and the lines increase in length.

\(^c\)The name means "House of Osorkon I," who must therefore have built a town in the vicinity of Illahun.

them, saying: "Behold, two ways are before you; choose ye as ye will: open, and ye shall live; close, and ye shall die. My majesty will not pass by a closed city." Then they opened immediately; his majesty entered into this city, and offered a [to] Menhy of Sehez. His treasury was assigned [to the Treasury], his granaries to the divine offerings of Amon of Karnak.

Surrender of Ithtowe

856. His majesty sailed north to Ithtowe (Yty-t^2wy); he found the rampart closed, and the walls filled with the valiant troops of the Northland. Then they opened the stronghold, and threw themselves upon [their] bellies before his majesty (saying): "Thy father has assigned to thee his inheritance. Thine are the Two Lands, thine is what is therein, thine is all that is on earth." His majesty entered to cause a great oblation to be offered to the gods residing in this city, consisting of bulls, calves, fowl, and everything good and pure. Then his treasury was assigned to the Treasury, and his granaries to the divine offerings of Amon.

Piankhi Demands the Surrender of Memphis

857. [His majesty sailed north to] Memphis; then he sent to them, saying: "Shut not up, fight not, thou abode of Shu in the beginning. As for him that would go in, let him go in; as for him that would come out, let him come out; and let not them that would leave be hindered. I would offer an oblation to Ptah and to the gods dwelling in Memphis (Ynbw hd), I would sacrifice to Sokar in the mysterious place (ṣt^2·t), I would behold 'Him-Who-is-South-of-His-Wall,' that I may sail north in peace. The people of Memphis [shall be] safe and sound; not (even) a child shall weep. Look ye to the nomes of the South (Tp-rs); not a single one has been slain therein, except the enemies who blasphemed against the god, who were dispatched as rebels."

Memphis Resists and Makes a Sortie

858. Then they closed their stronghold; they sent forth an army against some of the soldiers of his majesty, being artisans, chief builders and sailors — the harbor of Memphis.

---

aThe lacuna contained either the objects offered, or possibly "to Sokar," the other god mentioned at Sehez (1. 81).

bOmitted in original.
Tefnakhte Enters Memphis

859. Lo, that chief of Sais (Tefnakhte) arrived at Memphis in the night, charging his infantry and his sailors, all the best of his army, a total of 8,000 men, charging them very earnestly: "Behold, Memphis is filled with troops of all the best of the Northland; (with) barley and spelt and all kinds of grain, the granaries are running over; (with) all weapons of war. It is fortified with a wall; a great battlement has been built, executed with skilful workmanship. The river flows around the east side, and no (opportunity of) attack is found there. Cattle yards are there, filled with oxen; the treasury is supplied with everything: silver, gold, copper, clothing, incense, honey, oil."

Tefnakhte Goes for Reinforcements

860. "I will go, and I will give something to the chiefs of the North, and I will open to them their nomes. I will be — ["There will be but a few days"] until I return." He mounted upon a horse, he asked not for his chariot, he went north in fear of his majesty.

Plans for Taking Memphis

861. When day broke, at early morning, his majesty reached Memphis. When he had landed on the north of it, he found that the water had approached to the walls, the ships mooring at the walls of Memphis. Then his majesty saw that it was strong, and that the wall was raised by a new rampart, and battlements manned with mighty men. There was found no way of attacking it. Every man told his opinion among the army of his majesty, according to every rule of war. Every man said: "Let us besiege — ; lo, its troops are numerous." Others said: "Let a causeway be made against it; let us elevate the ground to its walls. Let us bind together a tower; let us erect masts

*The alleged mention of this fact by Tefnakhte is one of the numerous rhetorical devices of the author of the inscription; for it was on this very side that Piankhi stormed the city (11. 95, 96).

*Tefnakhte intends to marshal reinforcements among the Delta chiefs. What he means by opening their nomes is not clear; Griffith suggests that he means: relinquish his claims upon them as suzerain.

and make the spars into a bridge to it. We will divide it on this (plan) on every side of it, on the high ground and — on the north of it, in order to elevate the ground at its walls, that we may find a way for our feet."a

Piankhi Decides to Assault

862. Then his majesty was enraged against it like a panther; he said: "I swear, as Re loves me, as my father, Amon who fashioned me, favors me, this shall befall it, according to the command of Amon. This is what men say: "The Northland" and the nomes of the South, they opened to him from afar, they did not set Amon in their heart, they knew not what he commanded. He (Amon) made him (Piankhi) to show forth his fame, to cause his might to be seen.' I will take it like a flood of water. I have commanded — — ."

Harbor of Memphis Captured

863. Then he sent forth his fleet and his army to assault the harbor of Memphis; they brought to him every ferry-boat, every cargo-boat, every transport, and the ships, as many as there were, which had moored in the harbor of Memphis, with the bow-rope fastened among its houses. There was not a citizen (nds) who wept, among all the soldiers of his majesty. c

Piankhi Orders Assault of Memphis

864. His majesty himself came to line up the ships, as many as there were. His majesty commanded his army (saying): "Forward against it! Mount the walls! Penetrate the houses over the river. If one of you gets through upon the wall, let him not halt before it, so that the (hostile) troops may not repulse you. e It were vile that b The exact character of these two kinds of boat (mhn and shry) is unknown.

c Either all were considered in the distribution of the spoil, or no man was injured in the assault.

d This word (sk), used of ranging troops in line of battle, is here applied to lining up ships. The king in person ranged the captured ships, and his own fleet under the walls on the inundated (east) side of the city. This arrangement gave his troops footing for the assault. The nature of the attack is quite evident.

e They are not to stop on the wall, but to press over it immediately into the city.
we should close up the South, should land [in] the North and lay siege in 'Balances of the Two Lands.'"a

Capture of Memphis

865. Then Memphis was taken as (by) a flood of water, a multitude of people were slain therein, and brought as living captives to the place where his majesty was.

Protection of Memphis

Now, afterward, 97when it dawned, and the second day came, his majesty sent people into it, protecting the temples of the god. Heb 1 the holy of holies of the gods, offered to the community of gods of Hatkeptah (Memphis), cleansed Memphis with natron and incense, installed the priests in their places.

Piankhi's Recognition by Ptah

866. His majesty proceeded to the house of 98[Ptah], his purification was performed in the Dewat-chamber, and every custom that is practised upon a king was fulfilled upon him. He entered into the temple, and a great oblation was made for his father, "Ptah-South-of-His-Wall" (Rṣy-ynbʿj), consisting of bulls, calves, fowl, and everything good. His majesty proceeded to his house.c

Region of Memphis Surrenders

867. Then all the nomes which were in the district of Memphis, heard (of it): Herypedemy,d Penineywe (Pny-ṛ q  y  w c), the Tower of Beyew (Byw), the Oasis of Bit; they opened the strongholds, and fled away; none knew the place whither they had gone.

aEvidently a name for the locality dividing Upper from Lower Egypt, where Piankhi now was. The same phrase (mḥḥ t ḫwy) occurs in a hymn to Amon (Berlin Papyrus, 3048, Band II, Taf. 45, l. 6), where the god is called: "One whose word is the balances of the Two Lands." I owe the reference to Schaefer. Piankhi means that, having cut off the South from Tefnakhte, it would be humiliating, after reaching the North, to sit down for a siege on its threshold.

bThe text is not in order here.

cEvidently a palace in Memphis, now taken possession of by Piankhi.

dOr: "Hery the city." These places in the region of Memphis, cannot be exactly placed at the present day.
Submission of Delta Dynasts

868. King Yewepet came, and the chief of Me, Akenesh (\( ^3-k^3-n-\text{sw} \)), and the hereditary prince, Pediese, together with all the princes of the Northland, bearing their tribute, to behold the beauty of his majesty.

Wealth of Memphis Assigned

Then the treasuries and granaries of Memphis were assigned to the divine offerings of Amon, of Ptah, and of the gods dwelling in Hatkeptah (Memphis).

Piankhi Worships in Khereha

869. When the land brightened, very early in the morning, his majesty proceeded eastward, and an offering was made for Atum in Khereha, the divine ennead in the house of the ennead, the cavern and the gods dwelling in it; consisting of bulls, calves, and fowl; that they might give life, prosperity, and health to the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Piankhi, living forever.

Piankhi Goes to Heliopolis

870. His majesty proceeded to Heliopolis (\( Ynw \), upon that mount of Khereha, on the highway of (the god) Sep to Khereha. His majesty proceeded to the camp, which was on the west of Eti.\(^a\) His purification was performed, and he was cleansed in the pool of Kebeh, and he bathed his face in the river of Nun, in which Re bathes his face.

Ceremonies in Heliopolis: the "Sand-hill"

Proceeding to the Sand-hill in Heliopolis, a great oblation was made upon the Sand-hill in Heliopolis, in the presence of Re, at his rising, consisting of white oxen, milk, myrrh, incense, and every sweet-smelling wood.

Temple of Re

871. He came, proceeding to the house of Re, and entered into the temple with great praise. The chief ritual priest praised the god, that rebels might be repelled from the king. The Dewat-chamber was visited, that the sedeb-garment might be fastened on; he was purified with incense and libations; garlands for the pyramidion-house were presented to him, and flowers were brought to him. He ascended the steps to the great window, a to behold Re in the pyramidion-house. The king himself stood alone, he broke through the bolts, opened the double doors, and beheld his father, Re, in the glorious pyramidion-house, the Morning-Barque of Re, and the Evening-Barque of Atum. He closed the double doors, applied the clay, and sealed (them) with the king's own seal. He charged the priests: "I have proved the seal; no other shall enter therein, of all the kings who shall arise." They threw themselves upon their bellies before his majesty, saying: "To abide, to endure, without perishing, O Horus, beloved of Heliopolis."

Temple of Atum

872. He came and entered into the house of Atum, following the image of his father, Atum-Khepri the Great, of Heliopolis.

Submission of Osorkon

King Osorkon d came to see the beauty of his majesty.

Piankhi Camps near Athribis

873. When the land brightened, very early in the morning, his majesty proceeded to the harbor, and the best of his ships crossed over to the harbor of the nome of Athribis (K°-km). The camp of his

d This Osorkon can be no other than Osorkon III of the Twenty-third Dynasty. For the invasion of Piankhi was later than Pedibast. Another connection is: that King Yewepet, one of the Delta kings who submitted to Piankhi, is mentioned as coregent with Pedibast at Thebes. Yewepet must therefore have survived Pedibast. Osorkon III recovered the conquest of Piankhi, and together with an otherwise unknown Takelot (III) recovered Thebes, where they built an Osiris chapel together, the remains of which were found by Legrain at Karnak (Recueil, 22, 128–34). That their control of Thebes did not begin at the death of Pedibast and precede the invasion of Piankhi, is evident from the fact that Yewepet, who ruled in Thebes with Pedibast, survived him, and would have continued there. Osorkon III must therefore have ruled several years, a conclusion corroborated by the dates of the Nile-levels at Karnak in the years 5, 8, and 14 of his reign. It is evident, then, that the whole occupation of Lower Egypt by Piankhi must fall within the reign of Osorkon III.
majesty was set up on the south of Kehenia\textsuperscript{a} ($K^{3} - h- ny$), on the east\textsuperscript{107} of the nome of Athribis ($K^{3} - km$).

\textit{Submission of Delta Dynasts}

Then came those kings and princes of the Northland, all the chiefs who wore the feather, every vizier, all chiefs, and every king's-confidant, from the west, from the east, and from the islands in the midst, to see the beauty of his majesty.

\textit{Piankhi is Invited to Athribis}

874. The hereditary prince, Pediese, threw himself upon his belly\textsuperscript{108} before his majesty, and said: "Come to Athribis ($K^{3} - km$),\textsuperscript{b} that thou mayest see Khentikhet ($Hnt - hty$), that thou mayest worship Khuyetc\textsuperscript{c} ($Hwy - t$), that thou mayest offer an oblation to Horus in his house, consisting of: bulls, calves, and fowl; and that thou mayest enter my house. My treasury is open to thee, to f--- thyself with my paternal possessions. I will give to thee gold, as much as thou desirest;\textsuperscript{109} malachite shall be heaped up before thee; many horses of the best of the stable, and the first of the stall."

\textit{Piankhi in Athribis}

875. His majesty proceeded to the house of Harkhentikhet, and there were offered bulls, calves, and fowl to his father, Harkhentikhet, lord of Kemwer ($Km - wr$). His majesty went to the house of the hereditary prince, Pediese; he (Pediese) presented to him silver, gold,\textsuperscript{110} lapis lazuli, and malachite, a great heap of everything; clothing of royal linen of every number;\textsuperscript{d} couches laid with fine linen; myrrh and ointment in jars ($h hh b$); horses, both stallions and mares, of all the best of his stable.

\textit{Speech of Pediese of Athribis}

So be it to me, till ye a bear witness of the servant there, b in all that ye know of me; say ye, (whether) I have concealed (aught) from his majesty, of all the possessions c of my father’s house: [of] gold, silver; of costly stone; of all kinds of vessels, d—I; of golden bracelets, of necklaces, and collars wrought with costly stones; amulets for every limb, chaplets for the head, rings for the ears: all the adornments of a king; all the vessels of the king’s purification, in gold and — all costly stones. All these I have presented d in the (royal) presence: garments of royal linen by thousands of all the best of my house, where­with I knew thou wouldst be pleased. Go to the stable that thou mayest choose as thou desirlest, of all the horses that thou wiltst.” Then his majesty did so.

Delta Dynasts Dismissed

877. Said these kings and princes to his majesty: “Dismiss us to our cities, that we may open our treasuries, that we may choose as much as thy heart desires, that we may bring to thee the best of our stables, the first of our horses.” Then his majesty did so.

c On this Osorkon, see above, l. 106, § 872.
d This king had ruled in Thebes together with the now deceased Pedibast, beginning with the latter’s sixteenth and his own second year (§ 794). He had thus been ruling some eleven or twelve years at this time, and, as he survived Pedibast, he had probably continued in Thebes, and was expelled by Piankhi about 722 B. C.
e The reading of c ym is not quite certain; both these places are of uncertain location. In the case of c ym, I am inclined to identify it with Ayan of l. 3. Brugsch identifies with “Daneon Portus” of Pliny (Brugsch, Dictionnaire géographique, 124). f Identified by Foucart (Recueil, 20, 163 f.) with a modern Shuneh Yusuf, about 16 kilometers from Tell Tmai (Mendes), though he does not consider his identification as certain.

a This place is identified by Brugsch (Dictionnaire géographique, 489) with Iseum, modern Behbeit, which is probably correct. But in that case, Neter, the home of Tefnakhte (l. 2) cannot also be wholly identified with Iseum, for it is here held by Prince Akenesh.

He presented him with silver and gold, clothing and every splendid, costly stone. He went forth to the temple, he worshiped the god, he cleansed himself with a divine oath, saying: "I will not transgress the command of the king, I will not overstep that which the king saith. I will not do a hostile act against a prince (h3ty-)

bSee §451, note.

cThere is probably a reminiscence of this in Diodorus (I, 45), where it is related that Tefnakhte was on a campaign, els rhu 'Apaflav, and, being without supplies, was obliged to resort to the coarsest food from the hands of common people. Upon finding it very appetizing, he cursed Menes (who had introduced luxury) and thereafter ate only simple food.

without thy knowledge; I will do according to that which the king says, and I will not transgress that which he has commanded." Then his majesty was satisfied therewith.

Submission of the Fayûm, Atfih, and the Last Kings of the Delta

882. One came to say to his majesty: "The temple of Sebek, they have opened its stronghold, Metenu (Mtnw) throws itself upon its belly, there is not a nome closed against his majesty of the nomes of the South and North; the west, the east, and the islands in the midst are upon their bellies in fear of him, causing that their possessions be presented at the place where his majesty is, like subjects of the palace." When the land brightened, very early in the morning these two rulers of the South and two rulers of the North, with serpent-crests (uraei), came to sniff the ground before the fame of his majesty, while, as for these kings and princes of the Northland who came to behold the beauty of his majesty, their legs were as the legs of women. They entered not into the king's-house, because they were unclean and eaters of fish; which is an abomination for the palace. Lo, King Namlot, he entered into the king's-house, because he was pure, and he ate not fish. There stood three upon their feet, (but only) one entered the king's-house.

Piankhi's Return to the South

883. Then the ships were laden with silver, gold, copper, clothing, and everything of the Northland, every product of Syria (H2-rw), and all sweet woods of God's-Land. His majesty sailed up-stream, with

THE TWENTY-FOURTH DYNASTY
REIGN OF BOCCHORIS

SERAPEUM STELÆ

884. Bocchoris, the only king of the Twenty-fourth Dynasty, the son of Tefnakhte, has left only a few Serapeum stelae, and a wall inscription, which record the burial of an Apis in his sixth year. It was interred in the same chamber as the one which died in the thirty-seventh year of Sheshonk IV. These documents give his name as: King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Wohkere (W R k), Son of Re, Beknerane. As Africanus also gives his reign as six years, he probably did not reign longer. Counting back from 663, the beginning of the Twenty-sixth Dynasty, his accession was about 718 B. C.

THE TWENTY-FIFTH DYNASTY
RECORDS OF NILE-LEVELS AT KARNAK

885. Like those of the preceding dynasties, these records of the Twenty-fifth Dynasty are of great chronological value. They enable us, for the first time, to arrange the kings of the Ethiopian dynasty in order of succession, the position of Shabaka having heretofore been uncertain. The record here (No. 4) shows that Shabataka's third year was near 700 B.C., and, as it is impossible in that case to insert Shabaka between Shabataka and Taharka, the only other possible order is: Shabaka, Shabataka, Taharka—an order which is confirmed by the datum of Manetho, that Shabaka overthrew the Twenty-fourth Dynasty, having defeated and slain Bocchoris. If Shabataka's third year was near 700 B.C., and he was the predecessor of Taharka, whose accession was in 688 B.C., then Shabataka must have begun to reign, at the latest, about 700, and his reign lasted some twelve years, which is exactly what Syncellus gives him. The whole dynasty may then be restored thus:

REIGN OF SHABAKA

BUILDING INSCRIPTION a

889. As a memorial of his rule in Thebes, Shabaka left the following record of a restoration by him on the fourth pylon of the Karnak temple:

[King Shabaka; he made (it) as his monument for his father], Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, presider over Karnak, restoring the great and august gate b (štꜣ): "Amon-Re-is-Mighty-in-Strength," making for it a great overlay of fine gold, which the majesty of King Shabaka, c living forever, brought from the victories, which his father, Amon, decreed to him; the great hall d (ḫyꜣ) being overlaid with fine gold, the south column and the north column e being wrought with gold, the two lower lips being of pure silver, made ————.

REIGN OF TAHARKA

TANIS STELA

892. b This unfortunately fragmentary stela was erected by Taharka at Tanis to commemorate the coming of his mother thither from Napata, after his coronation in Lower Egypt. He narrates how he came north from Nubia as a youth of twenty years with some king. This would have been on the invasion of Lower Egypt by Shabaka. Many years then elapsed before he became king, during which he did not see his mother, and must, therefore, have spent these years in the north. As a son of Piankhi, he must have occupied a prominent position. When it is recollected that the Hebrew records (2 Kings 19:9) state that the enemy of Sennacherib at Altaqû in 701 B. C. (some thirteen years before Taharka’s accession) was Taharka, the conclusion cannot be resisted that Shabaka sent Taharka in command of the Egyptian and Ethiopian forces, against the Assyrians. It is evident, therefore, that the Hebrew writer, reporting the matter at a later date, long after Taharka’s reign, supposes him to have been already king in 701. c

893. The beginning of the stela is too fragmentary for a Fragmentary stela in two parts, left lying as found in the ruins of Tanis. The lower fragment, containing 19 lines, was first seen and copied by de Rougé, (Inscriptions hiérogliphiques, 73; and “Etudes sur des monuments du règne de Taharka,” Mélanges d’archéologie égyptienne et assyrienne, I, 21–23); again published by Birch, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1880, 22 ff. Petrie then found the upper part, and published both parts in his Tanis (II, Pl. IX, No. 136). It was first understood historically by Schaefer (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1900, 51, 52).

b The omission of two in numbering the sections is intentional.

c See also Griffith, Stories of the High Priests, 10, 11.
translation, but it is evident that someone, of course the king, gave the young Taharka, who narrates it all in the first person, a fine field (l. 1), which the gods protected against grasshoppers (l. 2), so that Taharka reaped ("w") from it (l. 3) a plentiful yield of all grain and fruit of the ground. Meanwhile he was brought up among the royal children (l. 5) and someone, again of course the king, loved him more than the royal children (l. 6). Taharka then says:

My father, Amon, ["vouchsafed"] to me to place all lands under my feet [the east as far as the rising of Re, and the west as far as his setting].

894. Whether the restorations are correct or not it is evident that Taharka is here relating his accession in the conventional terms, which always make such a usurpation an act of the gods. Immediately thereupon, Taharka narrates the coming of his mother from Napata, which leads him to revert to the long separation from her, caused by his departure for the North years before. He says:

895. a["The queen-mother"] was in Napata as King's-Sister, amiable in love, King's-Mother. Now, I had been separated from her as a youth (hwn) of twenty years, accompanying his majesty when he came to the Northland (Delta). Then she went north to the Northland where I was after a long period (hnty) of years, and she found me crowned as king upon the throne of Horus. I had taken the diadems of Re, and I had assumed the double serpent-crest, as as the protection of my limbs. She rejoiced greatly when she saw the beauty of his majesty, as Isis saw her son, Horus, crowned upon the throne while he was a youth in the marsh of all countries. They bowed to the ground to this King'saThis would connect directly with the above beginning of l. 11.

bThis reading, first noticed by Schaefer (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1900, 51, 52), is certain.

Mother, while she greatly. Their old as well as their young ones gave praise to] this King's-Mother, saying: "Isis hath received, she hath — her son, King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Taharka, living forever.

896. Here follow four lines of conventional praise addressed to Taharka, closing with a comparison of his kindness toward his mother with that of Horus to his mother, Isis:

for his mother, Isis, when thou wast crowned upon the throne.

BUILDING INSCRIPTION IN LARGE CLIFF-TEMPLE OF NAPATA

897. The following dedications in the larger temple at Napata record Taharka's building activity there:

aTaharka, living forever; he made (it) as his monument for his mother, Mut of Napata; he built for her a temple anew, of fine white sandstone, his majesty having found this temple built of stone, by the ancestors, of bad workmanship. His majesty caused that this temple should be built of excellent workmanship, forever.

898. The same hall as the above conclusion has:

cHe made (it) as his monument for his mother, Mut, mistress of heaven, queen of Nubia (T² pd⁻t); he built her house, he enlarged her temple anew, of fine white sandstone.

899. A cella beside the main adytum has:

dHe made (it) as his monument for [his] mother, Mut, Eye of Re, Mistress of Heaven, queen of gods, residing in Napata; building her house of fine white sandstone.

aLepsius, Denkmäler, V, 5: frieze inscription in the first hall.
bThe inscription as published stops abruptly here, and the frieze inscription of the next hall as published (Lepsius, Denkmäler, V, 7, a) begins with equal abruptness, and fits the inscription of the first hall exactly. Whether this is an accident of preservation, or was originally intended, is immaterial.

INSCRIPTION OF MENTEMHET

901. The history of the principality of Thebes after the middle of the Twenty-second Dynasty, until the latter part of the Ethiopian period is almost entirely unknown. We see it in the possession of Piankhi toward the end of the Twenty-third Dynasty, but its local history is still totally obscure until the reign of Taharka, when we find a certain "prophet of Amon, prince of Thebes, Nesuptah,"c ruling there. His son Mentemhet succeeded him, and evidently maintained himself during Taharka's reign in power and wealth.d His titles are of importance. Although he was prince of the Theban principality, he was only fourth prophet of Amon. At the same time, he was "chief of the prophets bIn a niche-like chamber of the temple of Mut at Karnak. It had contained a statue of Mentemhet (Mariette, Karnak, Texte, 64), probably one of those found by Miss Benson (Recueil, XX, 188–92; Benson and Gourlay, The Temple of Mut in Asher, 261–63, Pl. XXIII-XXIV, 350–57). Our inscription is published by Dümichen, Historische Inschriften, II, 48 (without relief), and Mariette, Karnak, 42–44; both are very inaccurate, and an exhaustive publication is much needed.

cKrall, Studien, III, 77 A. The genealogy of the family is carried back four generations beyond Nesuptah by the statues in the great Karnak cache. See Legrain, Recueil, 27, 80; but he does not indicate whether or not these four generations were already princes of Thebes.

dBesides those above referred to, numerous monuments of this man are known. His tomb in the Assasif at Thebes was excavated by Eisenlohr (Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 1885, 55), and its inscriptions (only titles and family) were published by Krall (Studien, III, 76–80). Two neighboring tombs of his family were found beside it, and the inscriptions bearing on Mentemhet also published by Krall (ibid., 80–82). A list of his smaller monuments is given by Wiedemann (Recueil, VIII, 69) and by Newberry (Benson and Gourlay, The Temple of Mut in Asher, 356, 357).
of all gods of South and North." He, therefore, held the sacerdotal primacy of Egypt without being High Priest of Amon. The High Priest of Amon had, therefore, been deprived of his temporal power as prince of the Thebaid, as well as of his sacerdotal supremacy. This is confirmed by the relative position of Mentemhet and the High Priest of Amon in the Adoption Stela (§§ 949-52). As Mentemhet's father was prince of Thebes before him, these changes may have taken place at the advent of the Ethiopian dynasty under Shabaka.

902. The activity of Mentemhet in the building and restoration of the monuments under Taharka at Thebes renders his rule there notable. This work was all done before Taharka's death, and the renewal of so many costly cultus images of the gods, besides references to the purification of all the temples in the South, and vague allusions to a great catastrophe, make it extremely probable that the mooted capture and sack of Thebes (667 B.C.) in Ashurbanipal's first campaign, although not certain from his confused records, actually took place. The restoration recorded by Mentemhet must have been done, therefore, between 667 and 661 B.C. The wealth which he was able to devote to restoring his plundered city must have been considerable; but it all fell a prey to the Assyrians at the second capture of the city by Ashurbanipal in 661 B.C., when it was frightfully laid waste. Of any attempted restoration by Mentemhet after this we hear nothing. He continued as ruler of the Thebaid, survived the rise of the Twenty-sixth Dynasty, and bFor the current and widespread conclusion that the high priesthood of Amon was now held by the Ethiopian kings themselves, I find no support. It is evident from the Adoption Stela that the High Priest of Amon had been stripped of his power; and this fully explains why we have no records of him at this time.

maintained his position into the reign of Psamtik I (§ 945). But his son Nesuptah did not succeed him, and the family cannot be traced any farther.

903. Mentemhet's record consists of a relief on the rear wall of the temple chamber, and an inscription occupying the two side walls. The relief shows Taharka worshiping the goddess Mut, while behind him are Mentemhet, the latter's father Nesuptah, and son Nesuptah. Above these figures are depicted the statues and images replaced or restored by Mentemhet. On the right of the relief his narrative begins thus:

Titles of Mentemhet

904. 1—all gods, fourth prophet of Amon, prince of Thebes, governor of [the Southland], Mentemhet, son of the prophet of Amon, prince of Thebes, Nesuptah; he saith:

Sacred Barge

I fashioned [the sacred barge of Amon] of 80 cubits in its length, of new cedar of the best of the terraces. The "Great House" was of electrum, inlaid with every genuine costly stone — of the last day — equipped.

Purification of Temples

905. I purified all the temples in the nomes of all Patoris, according as one should purify [violated] temples, — after there had been [an invasion of unclean foreigners in] the Southland. — — — — 1 — all these things which I have brought before you, there is no [lying] speech therein, no contradiction — deceit. There is no lie in the place of my mouth.

aA relief in Abydos (Mariette, Abydos, I, Pl. 2, b) shows Psamtik I before Orisis and Horus. He is accompanied by the "Divine Voitress, Nitocris," and "the prince (h ty- c) of Thebes, governor of the South, — chief steward of the Divine Voitress, Pedihor." It is thus clear that Nesuptah did not succeed his father, Mentemhet, although it is barely possible also that Pedihor was another son, and that Nesuptah had died.

bThe name of the father is preserved in the relief.
Prosperity and Plentiful Offerings

906. My mistress is satisfied with all that I have done for Thebes, [the Horizon of] him of the hidden name, Eye of Re, Mistress of temples a — I satisfied her lord with the things of his desire, bulls of the largest, and calves of the best. His granaries swelled with the first fruits [which came to] him down-stream in their season, and up-stream in their time. They made festive in his totals, to celebrate the feasts; that he might provision the prophets, priests, — and lay priests of the temples in the nomes, great and small — — making for me an overflow for my city, the land having moisture, the cities and nomes fatness.

bOr possibly the “best” of the grain.

cThis is evidently a reference to a siege, as in Piankhi, e.g., § 854, l. 80.
The inscription proceeds to praise of his son (ll. 21 and 22), and concludes with a prayer in the first person plural, of no historic interest (ll. 24–29).

On the other side of the relief, Mentemhet then continues an enumeration of his buildings and other works for the temples, as follows:

Works for Min-Amon

I brought forth Min-Amon to his stairway in the southern house (Luxor) at his beautiful feast plenty. I presented the oblations of the eight gods in the second month of the third season, twenty-eighth day, in order that of electrum and every splendid costly stone. I fashioned the august image of Khonsupeekhrod overlaid with gold (called): “His-Every-Emanation-is-Crowns.” I made a throne for this god, the legs of pure silver, inlay-figures of his stipulations — — them after a long space (hnty) of years, beginning to decay.

Temple of Mut?

I built her temple of stone [the doors were of] new cedar, and kedet (kd’t) wood, mounted with Asiatic copper; the inlay-figures thereon were of electrum, the bolts and fastenings gold inlaid with every costly stone. I erected for her a hall with thirty-four columns of fine white sandstone. I constructed her pure and beautiful lake of fine white sandstone; I erected for her, her storehouse for the storage of her divine offerings therein; I multiplied the offering-tables.

SERAPEUM STELAb

917. This stela, recording the burial of an Apis at Memphis in the twenty-fourth year of Taharka, is important as showing that in 664 B. C. the priests of Memphis regarded Taharka as still reigning there, although he had been driven out by Ashurbanipal in 668. As the stela was hidden far down in the subterranean passages of the Serapeum, the priests could have safely so dated the monument, even though the city was under Assyrian government. Hence, it is not safe to conclude, from this stela, that Taharka actually held Memphis in 664 B.C.

REIGN OF TANUTAMON

STELA OF TANUTAMON

919. This stela brings us to the close of Ethiopian rule in Egypt. Lower Egypt was in control of Assyrian vassals, resulting from the defeat of Taharka by Ashurbanipal's army, not long after the latter's accession in 668 B.C. The Delta vassals had been discovered in their subsequent plotting with Taharka against their Assyrian overlord. Necho, the Saitic dynast, after being sent to Ninevah, was pardoned and reinstated at Sais. His son, likewise, was made vassal king in Athribis, and at this juncture, according to the records of Ashurbanipal, Taharka died.

920. The stela of Tanutamon records the course of political events in Upper Egypt during the last days of Taharka, and the short reign of Tanutamon over all Egypt. It shows us Tanutamon coregent with Taharka during the latter's last year (663 B.C.), which was the first of Tanutamon; and narrates how he proceeded from some place in Upper...
Egypt (probably Thebes), of which he was king, to Napata, where he was crowned sole king, so that Taharka's death must have been the occasion of his assumption of sole power.\(^a\) He had been summoned by a dream, before going to Napata to seize also the Northland, then in Assyrian hands, and, leaving Napata, he then undertook the recovery of the North. He captured Memphis, perhaps slew Necho of Sais in battle,\(^b\) and, although unable to subdue the Delta dynasts, accepted what he construed as their submission, which they offered in person. He then ruled in Memphis as nominal king of all Egypt, and at this point the narrative of his stela closes. The presence of the Assyrians in the land is ignored throughout, and the inglorious conclusion of his reign in Egypt at the approach of Ashurbanipal's second great invasion in 661 B.C. is naturally not added at the end.

\(^a\)Ashurbanipal calls Tanutamon the son of Taharka's sister, and the son of Shabaka (Winckler, \textit{op. cit.}, 105); hence Shabaka must have married Piankhi's daughter, which explains his claim to the throne. Tanutamon was thus Piankhi's grandson.

\(^b\)The battle is recorded by Tanutamon (ll. 16, 17), but he does not mention the slaying of Necho. This is probable from the remark of Herodotus (as Eduard Meyer first perceived, \textit{Geschichte des alten Aegyptens}, 353) that Necho was slain by an Ethiopian king, who, Herodotus thought, was Shabaka. But, according to Manetho, Necho's death must have occurred in 663 B.C., that is, the year of Tanutamon's expedition against Memphis.

\(^c\)That is, "king."

The Dream

922. In the year 1, of his coronation as king — — 4his majesty saw a dream by night: two serpents, one upon his right, the other upon his left. Then his majesty awoke, and he found them not. His majesty said: 5“Wherefore [has] this [come] to me?” Then they answeredb him, saying: “Thine is the Southland; take for thyself (also) the North­land. The ‘Two Goddesses’c shine upon thy brow, the land is given to thee, in its length and its breadth. [No] 6other divides it with thee.”

Journey to Napata

923. When his majesty was crowned upon the throne of Horus in this firstd year, his majesty went forth from the placee where he had been, as Horus went forth from Khemmis. He went forth from—, while there [came] 7to him millions and hundreds of thousands coming after him. Said his majesty: “Lo, the dream is true! Itf is profitable for him who sets it in his heart, (but) evil for him who understands [it] not.” His majesty went to Napata, while none stood 8before him.g

Coronation in Napata

924. His majesty arrived at the temple of Amon of Napata, residing in the Pure Mountain. As for his majesty, his heart was glad when he saw his father, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes (Nswt-t³-wy), residing in the Pure Mountain. Garlands for this god were brought to him; 9then his majesty brought forth in splendor Amon of Napata; and he made for him a great festival offering, founding for him a feast: 39 oxen, 40 jars (³š) of beer, and 100 šw.

Departure for the North

925. His majesty sailed down-stream toward the Northland, that he might behold Amon, whose name is hidden from the gods.

Ceremonies at Elephantine

His majesty arrived at Elephantine; then his majesty sailed across to Elephantine, he arrived at the temple of Khnum-Re, lord of the cataract, and he caused this god to be brought forth in splendor. He made a great festival offering, and he gave bread and beer for the gods of the two caverns. He appeased Nun in his cavern.

Ceremonies at Thebes

926. Then his majesty sailed down-stream to the city Thebes of Amon. His majesty sailed to the frontier of Thebes (W s t), and he entered the temple of Amon-Re, lord of Thebes. There came to his majesty the servant of the great —, and the lay priests of the temple of Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, and they brought to him garlands for Amon, whose name is hidden. As for his majesty, his heart rejoiced when he saw this temple. He brought forth Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, in splendor, and there was celebrated a great feast in the whole land.

Departure for the Delta

927. His majesty sailed down-stream to the Northland, while the west and the east made great jubilee, saying: "Welcome is thy coming, and welcome thy ka! To sustain alive the Two Lands; to erect the temples which have begun to fall to ruin; to set up their statues in their shrines; to give divine offerings to the gods and goddesses, and mortuary offerings to the glorified (dead); to put the priest in his place; to furnish all things of the sacred property.” As for those who had fighting in their hearts, they became rejoicers.

_Capture of Memphis_

928. When his majesty arrived at Memphis, there came forth the children of rebellion, to fight with his majesty. His majesty made a great slaughter among them; their number being unknown. His majesty took Memphis, and he entered into the temple of Ptah, “South-of-His-Wall;” he made a great festival oblation for Ptah-Sokar; he appeased Sekhmet, the great, who loves him.

_New Buildings in Napata_

929. As for his majesty, his heart was glad in giving to his father, Amon, of Napata. His majesty issued a command concerning it, to Nubia (T₂pd't), to build for him a hall anew; it was not found built in the time of the ancestors. His majesty caused it to be built of stone, mounted with gold; its panel was of cedar incensed with myrrh of Punt. The double doors thereof were of electrum, the two bolts (krty) of tin (Tyhty). He built for him another hall at the rear exit, for furnishing his milk of his numerous herds, in tens of thousands, thousands, hundreds, and tens; the number of the young calves with their mothers was unknown.

_Campaign in the Delta_

930. Now, after these things, his majesty sailed north, to fight with the chiefs of the North. Then they entered their strongholds as beasts crawl into their holes. Then his majesty spent many days before them, (but) there came not forth one of them to fight with his majesty. Then his majesty sailed southward to Memphis.

_Arrival of the Delta Dynasts_

931. He sat in his palace deliberating and counseling with his heart how to cause his army to reach and to them. Then his army said that one had come to report to him, saying: “These chiefs come to the place where his majesty is, [O king], our lord.” Said his majesty: “Come they to fight? Come they to submit, they shall live from this hour.” They said to his majesty: “They come to submit to (bk) the king, our lord.” Said his majesty: “As for my lord, this august god, Amon-Re, lord of Thebes, residing in the Pure Mountain, great and excellent god, whose name is known, vigilant for his beloved, and giving valor to him who serves him; he who possesses his plans does not go astray; nor doth he whom he leads err. Behold, he told (it) me by night, and I behold (it) by day.” Said his majesty: “Where are they in this hour?” Said they before his majesty: “They are here, waiting at the hall (cry).”

Submission of the Delta Dynasts

932. Then his majesty went forth from his palace to —, as Re shines in his bright dwelling. He found them prostrate upon their bellies, kissing the ground to his majesty. Said his majesty: “Lo, it is true that which he uttered, the word of his design. Lo, he knows what shall happen. It is the decree of the god; (hence) it comes to pass. I swear as Re loves me, as Amon favors me in his house, behold, I saw this august god, Amon of Napata, residing in the Pure Mountain, while he was standing by me, he said to me: ‘I am thy leader in every way. Thou mayest not say: ‘Would that I had . . .’” Then they answered him, saying: “Lo, this god, he hath revealed to thee the beginning; he hath completed for thee the end in prosperity. Lo, thou dost not that comes out of his mouth, O king, our lord.” Then the hereditary prince of Per-Soped, Pekrur, rose to speak, saying: “Thou slayest whom thou wilt; and lettest live whom thou wilt.” They answered him with one accord, saying:

Schaefer suggests: “That which he told me by night, I have seen by day.”

Compare the dream of Merneptah, III, 582. Lit., “to every way.”

The conclusion of Tanutamon’s speech is fragmentary, and hopelessly obscure. Enough remains to show that it consisted only of pious phrases of no historical importance. It is evident that he is telling the subject chiefs that their submission is only the fulfilment of Amon’s promise to him.

The heart of his majesty rejoiced when he heard this word, \(^{39}\) and he gave to them bread, beer, and every good thing.

Dismissal of the Delta Dynasts

THE TWENTY-SIXTH DYNASTY REIGN OF PSAMTIK I

ADOPTION STELA OF NITOCRIS

935. This document has thrown a flood of light on the dynastic connections in the Ethiopian and Saitic period, and its discovery was especially welcome, in view of the paucity of contemporary monuments from this age. It may be described as a decree of adoption and property-conveyance. It records the adoption of Nitocris, the daughter of Psamtik I, by a Shepnupet, daughter of Taharka, the Divine Votress, or sacerdotal princess, at Thebes. Shepnupet transfers all her property to Nitocris, and the purpose of the adoption was that the family of Psamtik I might legally gain control of this property, as well as the position which it entailed at Thebes.

936. The beginning of the document is lost, and it now commences in the middle of a speech of Psamtik I to his court, announcing his purpose to have his daughter Nitocris adopted by Shepnupet. The court responds with the usual encomiums. In the ninth year of Psamtik I, therefore, Nitocris proceeds to Thebes, where she is received with acclamation, and the property of Shepnupet is formally conveyed to her, a full invoice of her estate being appended.

937. The stela shows that Psamtik had gained full control of Thebes by his ninth year, and that Tanutamon had, therefore, lost Upper Egypt before that time. The status of Thebes is much the same as under the Ethiopians, Men-temhet, the favorite of Taharka, was still its prince, showing that some of the old feudal dynasts still survived under Psamtik I. The High Priest of Amon occupies a completely subordinate position; he possesses no political influence, and his subordinate, the third prophet of Amon, contributes as much as he to the revenues of Nitocris.

The adoption of Nitocris, and the similar adoption of her predecessor, Shepnupet, as well as the adoption of Amenirdis by the same Shepnupet, render it clear that this was the usual method of succession in the Ethiopian and Saitic periods, and much simplifies the royal family connections of the time. Already, as early as 1885, Erman had noticed that Nitocris was but the adoptive mother of Enekhnesneferibre. A stela, recounting this adoption, which is a second Adoption Stela (§§ 988A–988J) has now been discovered at Karnak. They furnish the following chronology of the Theban princesses:

Adoption of Nitocris: year 9 of Psamtik I, 654 B.C.

Death of Shepnupet II: Unknown date

Induction of Nitocris: unknown date

Adoption of Enekhnesneferibre: year 1 of Psamtik II, 593 B.C.

aThat this is the same Mentemhet as the one under Taharka, is shown by the name of his eldest son, Nesuptah, the same whom we find in the records of Mentemhet under Taharka (§ 903).

bThe old principality of Heracleopolis also still survived, at least into the third generation of the Saite line; for there was a prince of Heracleopolis named Hor, son of Psamtik. The father must have been born not earlier than the time of Psamtik I. Hor built considerably on his own account at Heracleopolis; cf. statue inscription in Louvre (see §§ 967 ff.). A chapel was also built by one Pdrps (in the year 51 of Psamtik I at Pharbaethus), who may also have been a local prince; cf. Berlin stela (No. 8438); Brugsch, Thesaurus, IV, 797—Revillelout, Revue égyptologique, I, 33). Compare also the buildings or temple works of Nesuhor at Elephantine (§§ 989 ff.).

cIn Schweinfurth, "Alte Baureste im Uadi Gasûs" (Abhandlungen der Berliner Akademie, 1885).
Death of Nitocris: year 4 of Apries, 584 B. C.
Induction of Enekhnesneferibre: year 4 of Apries, 584 B. C.

Death of Enekhnesneferibre: after Psamtik III, not earlier than 525 B. C.

939. These stelae and other contemporary monuments enable us to reconstruct the following genealogy, tracing the succession of these sacerdotal princesses from the Twenty-third to the Twenty-sixth Dynasty. Incidentally, this reconstruction discloses important relationships among the Ethiopian rulers.

Names of princesses are in italics; dotted lines indicate adoption. Essentially the same table in so far as the princesses are concerned was drawn up by Daressy, Recueil, XX, 84; then by Erman, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 35, 29.

941. In this table the most important difficulty is the identity of Piankhi, a question not raised in Erman's discussion. There were at least three Piankhis, and nowhere is Piankhi, brother of Amenirdis I, identified by his throne-name; nor do we know the throne-name of the great Piankhi. In view of the fact that Piankhi, brother of Amenirdis I, appointed her to succeed the daughter of an Osorkon, and we know that Piankhi the Great overthrew an Osorkon of the Twenty-third Dynasty (§ 872), it can hardly be doubted that Amenirdis I's brother is the great Piankhi. The chronological considerations (§§ 810 ff.) also demand that the great Piankhi shall be dated in the same general period involved in the position occupied by Piankhi, brother of Amenirdis I in the table.

Hence I give her to her, to be her 'Great Daughter' as her father conveyed her to (his) sister.

Response of the Court

943. Then they bowed to the ground, they gave thanks to the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Wahibre (Psamtik I), living forever; and they said: "Abiding and enduring through eternity! Thy every command shall abide and endure. How beautiful is this which the god doeth for thee! How excellent is that which thy father doeth for thee! . . . .6 . . . . He loves to remember thy ka, and he rejoices at the mention of thy name, O Horus, 'Great-of-Heart,' King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Psamtik I, living forever. He has done this as his monument for his father, Amon, lord of heaven, ruler of gods. He hath given his beloved eldest daughter, Nitocris (Nt-ykr耨), whose 'beautiful name' is Shepnupe, to be Divine Consort, to play the sistrum before his (Amon's) beautiful face."

Nitocris Proceeds to Thebes

944. In the year 9, first month of the first season (first month), day 28, went forth his eldest daughter from the king's family apartments, clad in fine linen, and newly adorned with malachite. The attendants conducting her were legion in number, and marshals cleared the path, for beginning the goodly way to the harbor, to turn up-stream for Thebes. The vessels bearing her were very numerous, the crews were mighty men; and they were deeply laden with every good thing of the king's-palace. The commander thereof was the sole companion, nomarch of Heracleopolis, commander in chief of the army,

As she advanced, she found (all) Thebes, men and women alike, standing, rejoicing at her approach, surrounding her with great offerings, a multitude in number. Then they said: "The daughter of the King of Upper Egypt, Nitocris, comes to the house of Amon, that he may receive her and be satisfied with her. The daughter of the King of Lower Egypt, Shepnupet, comes to Karnak, that the gods therein may honor her. Every monument of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Psamtik (I), abides and endures forever and ever. Amon, lord of heaven, king of gods, hath received what his son, Horus, 'Great-of-Heart,' living forever and ever, made for him. Amon, ruler of gods, hath praised that which his son, Favorite of the Two Goddesses, Nebe (Neb-), living forever and ever, made for him. The reward therefore is with Amon, and with Montu, even a million years of life, a million years of stability, a million years of satisfaction. All health and joy of heart are with them for their beloved son, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, Wahibre, Son of Re, Psamtik (I), living forever and ever."

Conveyance of the Fortune

946. Now, afterward when she came to the Divine Votress, Shepnupet, she saw her, was satisfied with her, and loved her beyond everything. She conveyed to her the fortune \( (ymy-pr) \) which her father and her mother had conveyed to her and to her 'Great Daughter,' Amenardis, king's-daughter of King —, triumphant. It was put into writing concerning them, saying: "We\(^a\) have given to thee\(^b\) all our property in field and in town. Thou abidest upon our throne, abiding \(^c\) and enduring forever and ever." The witnesses concerning them were the prophets, the priests and all the adherents of the temple.

Inventory of the Fortune

947. List of all the property given to her \(^{by [them]}\) in the towns and nomes of the South and North:

Lands

948. That which his (sic!) majesty gave to her in seven nomes of the Southland:

1. In the district of Heracleopolis, the nome \(YW-n\) called Yuna \( (Yw-n\) ), which is in the district thereof lands, 300 stat

2. In the district of Oxyrhyncus, the estate of Putowe \( (Pw-t\) wy\), which is in the district thereof lands, 300 stat

3. In the district of Sep, the estate of Kewkew \( (K w-k\) w\), which is in the district thereof lands, 300 stat

4. In the district of the Hare nome, (Hermopolis), the estates of Nesumin, which are in the district thereof 600 stat

5. In the district of Aphroditopolis, (the town of) Kay \( (K y\) \), which is in the district thereof 300 stat

6. In the district of — 1, the estate of Harsiese, which is in the district thereof 200 stat

All this added together lands, 1,800\(^d\) stat together with all the income thereof from field and town; with their arid lands, and their canals.

\(^{a}\) The pronoun refers to Shepnupet (II) and Amenardis.

\(^{b}\) Feminine.

\(^{c}\) There should be seven nomes, according to the heading. The lacking nome, which was omitted by error of the scribes, has been added at the end of the inscription.

\(^{d}\) The total is 2,000, but the discrepancy is, perhaps, explained by the uncertainty of the third item.
Revenues

949. Bread and beer given to the temple of Amon for her:

STATUE INSCRIPTION OF THE CHIEF STEWARD, IBEb

958A. This inscription records part of the career of Ibe, one of the nobles in attendance upon Nitocris, the daughter of Psamtik I, after her appointment as sacerdotal princess of Thebes. Ibe describes her installation (year 9), at the ceremonies of which he was present (§§ 958D–958E); and then narrates his appointment by the king as her chief steward [seventeen years later, in the year 26 (§ 958G)], for the purpose of restoring her palace. He arranged the affairs of the princess, and she spent a day with him in the temple, looking over her papers. He then conducted the restoration of her palace, involving the erection of one building a hundred cubits high (over 172 feet!). This is the only literary reference to the height of a dwelling in earlier Egypt. Ibe also built a palace-chapel of Osiris, assisted in the celebration of the feasts of Amon, and aided in the restoration of the Osirian tomb at Thebes.

*The scribe omitted this piece of land from the list in seven nomes (§ 948).

bLimestone statue bought at Luxor by Legrain in 1903; it represents a standing figure broken off at the waist, the upper portion missing. A stela held before the figure bears the inscription. Published by Daressy, Annales, V, 94–96. The stone is friable and the surface much eroded, so that the text is very uncertain.
Introduction

958B. 1 — chief steward of the Divine Consort, Ibe (Yb?), son of the priest (mry’ntr), Enekhhor (c nh-Hr) 2 — — — . . . 2  — — — chief [steward] of my queen, his daughter, the Divine Consort — — — .

Appointment of Nitocris

958C. A lacuna at this point evidently contained the statement that Psamtik I commanded the appointment of his daughter, 5His beloved, the great favorite of Amon, the sweet —, [daughter of] the beloved of Mut, Mehethnusekhet (Mḥ’t-m-wsh.t) to be Divine Consort, Divine Votress of Amon-in Karnak.

Installation of Nitocris

958D. 6The chief ritual priest, divine scribe, prophets, divine fathers, priests (w c b), and the great companions of his majesty, were the suite of their queen. The whole land was in great festivity; an oblation — filled with every offering, jubilating to him, satisfying the heart; by the glorious one, great among the great, his beloved, the Divine Votress, Nitocris, who liveth; while the lay priesthood of the temple were following [her] . . . There was performed for her every customary ceremony, like the fashion of the coronation of her good lord, Amon — — radiance, like the sun (šw). She caused — — that there be presented a great oblation; the lay priesthood brought the incense of favor, love, life, prosperity, and health for her father, Wahibre (W ḫ-yb-R c, Psamtik I).

Nitocris Arrives at Her Theban Palace

958E. Her majesty proceeded — — to the palace, seated in her palanquin (ḏnt²’t), the poles (thereof) being made anew, of silver and gold, inlaid with every genuine costly stone, and she caused that there be offered — — .

Decay of the Palace of Nitocris

958F. Year 26, second month of the first season, day 3. On this day, his majesty — — — —. His majesty sent those who were in his suite, — — of the Southland, prophets, and priests (w c b) of Amon, and sacred women of Amon. They came, saying: “His majesty has heard that the house of the Divine Votress of Amon is beginning to fall to ruin.”

Appointment of Ibe as Chief Steward of Nitocris to Carry Out Restoration

958G. These people also bring with them a command of the king that

There should be appointed the king’s-confidant, Ibe, as chief steward of the Divine Consort, and that there should be collected for him all his things which should go for the payment of the works, [an]d that they should be delivered to all the scribes and inspectors sent with the business of the house of the Divine Votress, as many as they were. The list of every day — — utensils of silver, gold, copper, —, [everything] of the White House.

Ibe’s Administration

958H. I filled her granaries with wheat, spelt, and all fruits. I multiplied her cattle yards with bullocks, [obliged] her officials to pay dues — — all of them. I conserved everything by exaction in — throughout.

Nitocris Spends a Day Inspecting Her Affairs

958I. — — he went to receive her in the temple of Amon — —. She spent the day sealing — — of the house.

Here she seems to have inspected

Ibe Conducts the Restoration of the Palace of Nitocris

Celebration of Amon's Feasts

958L. Ibe then narrates how the god (Amon) was brought further in procession, with his sacred women who accompanied Ninocris,

At his feast which the land celebrated for him on the sixth of the month; there whereof the like was done 1 beside the upper gate of Amon-Re

FIRST SERAPEUM STELA\textsuperscript{a}

\textbf{959.} This is the important stela which shows that Taharka immediately preceded Psamtik I. The deceased Apis died just before the beginning of Psamtik I's twenty-first year, having lived twenty-one years, two months, and seven days. As the animal was born in the twenty-sixth year of Taharka, it is evident that Taharka was the predecessor of Psamtik I, with a possible interval between them of not more than one or two months. The stela is further important as indicating that the years of the king's reign coincided with the years of the civil calendar. The Apis died on the twenty-first of the twelfth month in Psamtik's twentieth year. At the expiration of the ceremonial seventy days, the burial took place on the twenty-fifth of the second month in the king's twenty-first year. The transition from year 20 to year 21 evidently fell on New Year's Day (see also § 984).

\textit{Death of Apis}

\textbf{960.} Year 20, fourth month of the third season (twelfth month), day 21; under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Wahibre (\textit{\textit{W} h-\textit{yb}-\textit{R} \textit{c}}); Son of Re, of his body, Psamtik (\textit{Psmtk}) I; went forth the majesty of Apis, the Living Son, to heaven.

\textit{Burial of Apis}

\textbf{961.} This god was conducted in peace to the Beautiful West in the year 21, second month of the first season (second month), (on) the twenty-fifth day.

\textit{Birth and Age}

\textbf{962.} Now, he was born in the year 26 of King Taharka; he was received into Memphis in the fourth month of the second season (eighth month), (on) the ninth day; which makes 21 years, 2 months 17 days\textsuperscript{b}.

\textsuperscript{b}After the "2 months" there is a hieratic 7, and before it a half-circle, which is probably the sign for day.
SECOND SERAPEUM STELA

963. This inscription has heretofore been understood as recording both repairs in the Serapeum or a sanctuary of Apis, and the burial of an Apis deceased under Psamtik I. The true import of the inscription is totally different. There is no reference to an Apis which died in Psamtik I's reign, but only the record of the restoration by him, of an old interment, on receiving a report that the coffin was so fallen to pieces that the body of the sacred animal was exposed to view.

Date

964. In the year 52 under the majesty of this Good God (Psamtik I), came one to say to his majesty:

Message

965. "The temple of thy father, Osiris-Apis, and the things therein are beginning to fall to ruin. The divine limbs are visible in his coffin, decay has laid hold of his (mortuary) chests."

Restoration

966. His majesty commanded restoration in his temple, and that it should be more beautiful than that which was there before. His majesty caused that there be done for him all that is done for a god on the day of interment. Every office had its duties, that the divine limbs might be splendid in ointment, wrappings of royal linen, and all the bBrugsch (Geschichte, 741, 742) and Wiedemann (Aegyptische Geschichte, 619, 620).

cHis fivefold titulary immediately precedes.

dAs the context shows, "temple" (h.t-nr) is here the sepulcher of an Apis, and must mean an alcove of the Serapeum, in which an Apis was entombed. If this stone had not been found in the Serapeum, we should think such a burial chapel as that erected by Amenhotep III for an Apis, was meant.

eThis (wm) must have been a wooden coffin, which was so decayed that the body of the Apis could be seen.
raiment of a god. His (mortuary) chests were of ked wood, meru wood, and cedar wood, of the choicest of every wood. Their troops were subjects of the palace, while a king's-companion stood over them, levying their labor for the court, like the land of Egypt.

May he be given life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever and ever.

STATUE INSCRIPTION OF HOR

967. This fragmentary inscription, like that of Pefned-dineit (§§ 1015 ff.) and Nesuhor (§§ 989 ff.) illustrates the excessively religious spirit of the Saitic age. Hor was military commander at Heracleopolis, where he executed considerable additions, or at least restorations, in the temple of Harsaphes. These he has recorded upon his votive statue in some detail. His reference to the use of cedar from the royal domain would be more important if the king under whom he served were mentioned, as it shows that the forests of Lebanon were under the control of the Pharaoh at this time.

Introduction

968. ——— benefactions in Heracleopolis, watchful in restoring Ner (N c r), making Heracleopolis prosper, repelling her obstructors aThis word is written with three standing men with feathers upon their heads. The reference to "Egypt" at the end would indicate that they were not Egyptians, and the feathers point to Libyans. The antecedent of "their" is also in doubt.

bRead c h c.
cSpiegelberg's interpretation (Recueil, 26, 43, 1) involves making "kings-companion" plural, while the text shows a singular.
dOr: "collecting their impost into the court."

*Other examples of nobles building temples will be found in the Northern Oasis (Steindorff, Königlich-Sächsische Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften, 1900, 226).

gOur insertion of the inscription in the reign of Psamtik I is conjectural.
when the filthy lay in her streets as in a stable; repelling from her district, chief of Heracleopolis, commander of the army, Hor, son of the chief of militia (ṣṣ) in the district of Busiris, Psamtik, born of the matron, Nefrusebek; he saith:

This is the phrase applied to the sun-god, Aton, in the great hymn (see my De Hymnis in Solen sub Rege Amenophide IV Conceptis, 47, l. 50, where the end is to be amended thus: ntr w c nn ky hr sp w).)

Feast of Bast

973. "I brought out Bast in procession to her barge, at her beautiful feast of the fourth month of the second season (eighth month), the fifth day until f—l."

Concluding Prayer

REIGN OF NECHO

SERAPEUM STELA

974. This stela furnishes the data for computing the exact length of Psamtik I's reign. Having lived sixteen years, seven months and seventeen days, this Apis died in the sixteenth year of Necho, on the sixth of the second month. The bulk of his life fell in the reign of Necho, and he was only one year, six months, and eleven days old at the accession of Necho. This period of his life thus coincided with the last year, six months and eleven days of Necho's predecessor, Psamtik I. Now, the Apis was born in the fifty-third year of Psamtik I, on the nineteenth of the sixth month; hence the total length of Psamtik I's reign was the sum of

\begin{align*}
52 \text{ years}, & 5 \text{ months}, 19 \text{ days} \\
& 1 " 6 " 11 " \\
\text{or} & 54 \text{ years}, 0 \text{ months}, 0 \text{ days}.
\end{align*}

975. This would indicate that Psamtik ruled an even number of complete years, but we cannot suppose that Psamtik I died on the last day of the year; it is evident that he died in the fifty-fifth year of his reign, and that the fraction of that incomplete year was, after his death, included in the first year of his successor, Necho. It is thus clear that the years of the king's reign in the Twenty-sixth Dynasty began on New Year's Day. We have already reached the same conclusion from the first Serapeum Stela of Psamtik I (§ 959).

aLouvre, No. 193; published by Piehl, Inscriptions, I, XXI, A; Chassinat, Recueil, 22, 21. I had also my own copy of the original.

bThe scribe's computation ignores the 5 epagomenæ; the Apis was really 16 years, 7 months, and 22 days old.
Date

976. Year 16, fourth month of the first season (fourth month), day 16, under the majesty of Horus: Wise-hearted (Sy^3-Ψb); King of Upper and Lower Egypt; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Triumphant; Golden Horus: Beloved-of-the-Gods; Uhemibre; Son of Re, of his body, his beloved: Necho, living forever, beloved of Apis, son of Osiris.

Burial of Aphis

977. The day of the interment of this god. This god was conducted in peace to the necropolis, to let him assume his place in his temple in the western desert of "Life-of-the-Two-Lands," after there had been done for him all that is done in the pure house, as it was done formerly.

Life of Aphis

978. He was born in the year 53, second month of the second season (sixth month), day 19, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Wahibre; Son of Re: Psamtik (I), triumphant. He was received into the house of Ptah in the year 54, third month of the first season (third month), day 12. He departed from life in the year 16, second month of the first season (second month), day 6. The total of his length of life was 16 years, 7 months, and 17 days.

Tomb and Equipment of Aphis

979. The majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Necho, living forever, made all the coffins and every thing excellent and profitable for this august god. He built for him his place in the necropolis, of fine limestone of Ayan, of excellent workmanship. Never happened the like since the beginning. That he might be given all life, stability, satisfaction, health, and joy of heart, like Re, forever and ever.

---

This title has been inserted by the scribe in the wrong place after the Horus-name.

The date at the top; it is just 70 days after his death, as dated in the document (l. 7).
 BUILDING INSCRIPTION

980. The inscription shows that Uzahor superintended the quarries at Assuan during the building operations of Necho. Like the old officials stationed at this place from the Sixth Dynasty on, he was "governor of the door," or frontier post, of the southern countries.

Revered by the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Uhemibre (Necho), like Re. Hereditary prince and count (\(rp^c\) ty, \(h\) ty-\(c\)), governor of the door of the countries, Uzahor (\(Wd^2-Hr\)), he says: "I was commander of works upon the mountain ———, to make great obelisks of granite, and all monuments of diorite (\(bh\)n) and granite for the ———."

REIGN OF PSAMTIK II

STATUE INSCRIPTION OF NEFERIBRE-NOFER

981. This fragmentary document contains a few references to the building activity of Psamtik II, of whose reign we know so little. Neferibre-nofer was a "magazine overseer," who can have been no other than the Neferibre-nofer, of another statue at Cairo, who held the same office under Psamtik II, and bore also the name Irhoro (Yry-hr-c). Besides being tutor and guardian of the king, he also held the rank of "hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, and sole companion."

Omitting unessential and fragmentary self-praise, the building references are these:

982. . . . . Neferibre-nofer, to whom the Two Lands recount their hearts, and repeat to him all their thoughts; [who pleases] King Neferibre (Psamtik II) by doing that which is his desire, when he commands to protect their holy places, beautifying the Two Lands—fine limestone of Ayan; obelisks of Elephantine granite, houses for the first time for Neit; a (portable) barque-shrine (wts-nfr·t) of fine gold, inlaid with every splendid costly stone.

983. The very fragmentary remainder (ll. 10–16) contains references to liberal offerings to the gods, "for the sake of the life, prosperity and health of King Psamtik (II), living like Re."

REIGN OF APRIES

SERAPEUM STELA

984. From this stela we can compute the length of the combined reigns of Necho and Psamtik II. The Apis commemorated died on the twelfth day of the eighth month in the twelfth year of Apries, being seventeen years, six months, and five days old; hence his life began five years, ten months, and twenty-three days before the accession of Apries. As the animal's birth fell on the seventh of the second month in the sixteenth year of Necho, the lapse of time from the accession of Necho to that of Apries (or to the death of Psamtik II) is the sum of

\begin{align*}
15 \text{ years} & \quad 1 \text{ month} & \quad 7 \text{ days} \\
5 \quad \text{and} \quad \frac{10}{10} \text{ months} \quad 23 \quad \text{“} \\ \text{or} \\n21 \text{ years} & \quad 0 \text{ months} & \quad 0 \text{ days}.
\end{align*}

The combined reigns of Necho and Psamtik II, therefore, lasted exactly twenty-one years. It is noticeable, also, that, as above (§ 975), the fraction of Psamtik II’s last or incomplete year is not counted, but his reign is concluded with the end of his last complete year, as if Apries had begun to reign on New Year's Day.

985. Since the above was written the conclusion reached has received interesting confirmation by the discovery of the second Adoption Stela (§§ 988A-988J) at Karnak. It furnishes the two following data for the length of Psamtik II’s reign:

I also had my own copy of the original.

1. In the first year of Psamtik II’s reign, in the eleventh month, on the twenty-ninth day, his daughter, the princess Enkhnesneferibre, arrived at Thebes to be adopted by the Divine Consort, Nitocris.

2. In the seventh year of his reign, in the first month, on the twenty-third day, Psamtik II died.

The adoption was a political device which would be carried out by the Pharaoh without delay; hence we are safe in concluding that Enekhnesneferibre arrived in Thebes not long after Psamtik II’s accession, which thus fell late in the calendar year. His first regnal year thus consisted of no more than a month or two. Of his last year (the seventh), but twenty-three days had elapsed when he died. He thus actually reigned but five years and two or three months. From the twenty-one years above obtained as the total length of the successive reigns of Necho and Psamtik II, combined, we may then deduct the latter’s reign of a little over five years, furnishing practically sixteen years as the length of Necho’s reign. This coincides with the fact that our highest known date of Necho is the sixteenth year (when the Apis of the following stela was born), and with Herodotus, who gives Necho sixteen years, and Psamtik II six years.

b The stela also states that his son Apries then succeeded him.

c The late date (year 9) for the adoption of Nitocris under Psamtik I was, of course, due to the fact that he did not gain control of Thebes immediately.

d This date is the 106th day of the sixteenth year (§ 976); hence there is plenty of margin for the few months in excess of the five years reigned by Psamtik II.
Date

986. 1Year 12, second month of the third season (tenth month), day 21, under the majesty of King Apries (Hec -yb-Re), beloved of Apis, son of Osiris.

Interment of Apis

The god was conducted in peace to the Beautiful West, to let him assume his place in the necropolis, the western desert of Memphis; after there had been done for him all that is done in the pure house. Never was done the like before.

Life of Apis

987. The majesty of this god went forth to heaven in the year 12, fourth month of the second season (eighth month), day 12. He was born in the year 16, second month of the first season (second month), day 7, under the majesty of King Necho, living forever. He was installed in the house of Ptah in the year 1, third month of the third season (eleventh month), day 9, under the majesty of Psamtik II. The beautiful life of this god, was 17 years, 6 months, 5 days.

Mortuary Equipment

988. The Good God, Wahibre (Apries), made all the coffins, everything, excellent, and every profitable thing, for this august god; that he (the king) might be given life and health therefore, forever.

STELA OF THE DIVINE CONSORT ENEKHNESNEFERIBRE

988A. This new monument furnishes several important facts in the history of the Twenty-sixth Dynasty, enabling us to confirm our reconstruction of the chronology and family history of this dynasty. These new facts are:

1. The final proof that Psamtik II was the father of Enekhnesneferibre.

2. The date of Psamtik II's death, and thus the exact length of his reign.

aFull fivefold titulary.

bStela of alabaster, o. m. 74 c. high, o. m. 42 c. wide, o. m. 13 c. thick, now in the Cairo Museum. It was discovered by Legrain in the great cache at Karnak, and was published by Maspero, with translation in Annales, V, 84–90.
3. Apries was the son of Psamtik II.
4. The date of the adoption of Enekhnesneferibre.
5. The date of the death of Nitocris.
6. The date of the accession of Enekhnesneferibre.

988B. The stela narrates the arrival of Enekhnesneferibre at Thebes in the first year of her father, Psamtik II, and her adoption there by Nitocris, as Nitocris herself had once been adopted by Shepnupet II, at the decree of Psamtik I (§§ 935 ff.). At this adoption she received the title of High Priest of Amon. Five years and fifty-nine days after her arrival at Thebes, Enekhnesneferibre's father, Psamtik II, died, and was succeeded by his son, Apries. In the fourth year of this king, just eight years, four months, and ten days after Enekhnesneferibre's adoption, Nitocris died, and twelve days later Enekhnesneferibre succeeded to her office. This she held into the reign of Psamtik III, when she was at least eighty years old (see table, § 938).

Arrival of Enekhnesneferibre at Thebes

988C. Year 1, third month of the third season, day 29, under the majesty of Horus: Menekhib (Mnh-yb); Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Mighty of Arm; Golden Horus: Beautifying the Two Lands; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Neferibre; Son of Re: Psamtik II, given life. On this day the king's-daughter, Enekhnesneferibre, arrived at Thebes.

Adoption of Enekhnesneferibre by Nitocris

988D. Her mother, the Divine Consort, Nitocris, who liveth, came forth to behold her beauty, and they went together to the House (pr) of Amon. Then was conducted the [divine] image from [the House of] Amon, to — — in order to make her titulary as follows:

"The Greatly Praised in Flower in the Palace, of the — —"
of 5Amon, High Priest of Amon, King's-Daughter, Enekhnesneferibre. She shall be a in the Presence of her Father, Amon-Re, Lord of Thebes, Presider over Karnak."

Death of Psamtik II

988E. 6Year 7, first month of the first season, day 23, went forth this Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Psamtik II to heaven. He joined the sun, the divine limbs mingling with him who made him (yr-sw).

Accession of His Son Apries

988F. Then was crowned his son, in his place, (even) Horus: Wahib; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Lord of Might; Golden Horus: Making Verdant the Two Lands; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Apries (Hyc-yb-R); Son of Re: Wahibre (W3h-yb-R), who liveth.

Death and Burial of Nitocris

988G. Year 4, fourth month of the third season, 8day 4, of this king; went forth the Divine Votress (Dw2·t-ntr), Nitocris, triumphant, to heaven. She joined the sun, the divine limbs mingling with him who made her. Her daughter, the High Priest, Enekhnesneferibre, did for her all that is done for every excellent king.

Induction of Enekhnesneferibre

988H. Now, when twelve days had elapsed after these events, (in) the fourth month of the third season, day 15, went the king's-daughter, 10the High Priest, Enekhnesneferibre, to the House of Amon-Re, king of gods; while the prophets, the divine fathers, the priests (wcb), ritual priests and lay priests of the temple of Amon 11were behind her, and the great companions were in front thereof. There were performed for her all the customary ceremonies of the induction of the Divine Votress (Dw2·t-ntr) of Amon into the temple, by the divine scribe 12and nine priests (wcb) of this house (pr). She fastened on all the amulets and ornaments of the Divine Consort (Hm·t-ntr), and the Divine Votress (Dw2·t-ntr) of Amon, crowned with the two plumes, the diadem of 13her forehead, b to be queen (hn·t) of every circuit of the sun.

aOr possibly the titulary closes with her name, and the following should be rendered: "While she was, etc."

bIt is possible that the word rendered "forehead" (dhn) may be the verb "appoint" (dhn).
Titulary of Enekhnesneferibre

Her titulary was made as follows:

"Hereditary Princess, Great in Amiability, Great in Favor, Mistress of Loveliness, Sweet in Love, Queen (hn't) of all Women, Divine Consort, Divine Votress, Heknefrumuta (Hk3 nfr w-Mw't), Divine Hand, Enekhnesneferibre, who liveth, King's-Daughter of the Lord of the Two Lands, Psamtik (II)."

Reign of Enekhnesneferibre

There were done for her all the customary rites and all the ceremonies as was done for Tafnut in the beginning. The prophets, the divine fathers, and the lay priests of the temple came to her at all times when she went to the House of Amon, at his every festal procession.

INSCRIPTION OF NESUHOR

The remarkable, and often misunderstood, narrative contained in this document furnishes an interesting corroboration of the tale of the mutiny of Psamtik I's troops, as narrated by Herodotus (II, 30, 31). Our Nesuhor was commander of the fortress and garrison at Elephantine, where he had assumed the responsibility for many pious works for the local divinities, in accordance with the increased religious spirit of the Saitic age. On one occasion the foreign mercenaries of the garrison mutinied and, like the Automoloi of Herodotus, planned to migrate to Upper

I had also my own copy of the original which added a number of corrections, and a collation of the Berlin squeeze by Schaefer, which furnished the proper reading of the name of Nesuhor's mother. The inscription was first properly understood by Schaefer (Beiträge zur alten Geschichte, IV, 152-63), who also gives a final text (ibid., Tafel, I-II).
Nubia, to a region called Shas-heret. Nesuhor succeeded in dissuading them and delivered them to Apries, who accordingly punished them. Believing that the gods had delivered him from his dangerous predicament among a horde of turbulent foreign soldiery, Nesuhor did not fail to narrate the event on his statue as a motive for his good works to the divinities of the first cataract. It thus furnishes graphic contemporary evidence of the dangerously unstable character of the military, of which the power of the Saite kings consisted. A similar but more widely-spread disaffection was the occasion of the overthrow of Apries by Amasis.

Qualities of Nesuhor

990. a as his lord — his equal; whom his majesty appointed to a very great office, the office of his eldest son, governor of the Door of the Southern Countries, to repel the countries that rebel against him. When he hath spread the fear of him in the southern countries, they flee into their valleys for fear of him. Who did not relax [vigilance in] seeking benefits for his lord; honored of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Apries (H c -yb-R c), favored by the Son of Re, Wahibre (W h-yb-R c), Nesuhor, whose beautiful name is Ib-Psamtik-menekh ("The-Heart-of-Psamtik-is-Excellent"), son of Ifrer (Ywirr), born of the mistress, Tesenethor (T sn't-Br), triumphant.

Nesuhor's Prayer

991. He says: "O lord of might! Fashioner of gods and men! Khnum, lord of the Cataract, Satet, and Anuket, mistress(es) of Elephantine! I rejoice in your names, I praise your beauty. I am free from laxity in doing that which you desire; I fill my heart with you in every design which I carry out. May my ka be remembered because of that which I have done in your house.

*a The upper half of this (vertical) line is lacking; the document begins with epithets of praise applied to Nesuhor.

*b The southern country under the empire was governed by a viceroy, who was originally the king's eldest son. This old tradition is now applied to the governor of Elephantine.

*c Lit., "your ka's."
Good Works for the Gods

992. I have splendidly equipped your temple with vessels of silver; numerous cattle, ducks, and geese; I have made secure their maintenance by (an endowment of) lands, as well as (that of) their custodians forever and ever. I built their shelters in your city. I gave very fine wine of the Southern Oasis, spelt and honey into your storehouses, which I built anew in the great name of his majesty. I gave illuminating oil for lighting the lamps of your temple. I appointed weavers, maid-servants and launderers for the august wardrobe of the great god and his divine ennead. I built their quarters in his temple, established forever by decree of the Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Apries, living forever.

Requital of Good Works

993. Remember ye him in whose heart was the beautification of your house, (even) Nesuhor, whose name is abiding in the mouth of the citizens; as a reward for (all) this. Let my name abide in your house, let my ka be remembered after my life, let my statue abide and my name endure upon it imperishably in your temple.

Rescue of Nesuhor

994. 6For ye rescued me from an evil plight, from the mercenaries Libyans, Greeks, Asiatics, and foreigners, who had it in their hearts to —, and who had it in their hearts to go to Shas-heret (S > yf-hr’). His majesty feared because of the evil which they did. I re-established their heart in reason by advice, not permitting them to go to Nubia (T > -pd’), (but) bringing them to the place where his majesty was; and his majesty executed their [punishment].

995. Here follows a mortuary prayer, containing the following titles of Nesuhor:

Hereditary prince, count, wearer of the royal seal, beloved sole companion, great in his office, grand in his rank, official at the head of the people, governor of the Door of the Southern Countries.

REIGN OF AMASIS (AHMOSE II)

ELEPHANTINE STELA\(^a\)

996. This, perhaps the most important document of the Saitic period, is, unfortunately, so badly preserved that a consecutive translation is totally impossible.\(^b\) In the following I have rendered only what is capable of safe translation, and have then connected the few scattered translatable passages, by statements of their probable relation to each other, as indicated by the intervening uncertain context.

997. The drift of the historical facts furnished by the document is thus, in the main, discernible, in spite of the uncertainties and obscurities in details. In his third year as king of Egypt, Amasis finds Apries advancing against him from the north with a force of Greeks and a fleet. Apries assumed the offensive, and advanced to the vicinity of Sais, where Amasis, having mustered his forces, met and defeated him. The army of Apries was scattered, but the dethroned king escaped, and his troops continued to rove the North, infesting the roads and, of course, living by plunder. Meantime, Apries was a fugitive, with a few Greek (?) ships. When four or five months had passed in this way, Amasis was obliged to dispatch his forces, to exterminate the remnant of Apries' army, and while this went on, Apries was slain.

998. The narrative of Herodotus begins at an earlier

\(^a\)A large stela of rose granite, 5 feet 9 inches high and three feet wide, found as part of a doorway in a house in Cairo, now in the Cairo Museum. Published by Daressy (Recueil, XXII, 2, 3). The stone is much worn, and so illegible that sometimes not a single sign is certain for half a line or more.

\(^b\)The rendering by Daressy (ibid.) is nine-tenths conjecture, and the English version of Hall (Oldest Civilisation of Greece, 323, 324) is chiefly a translation of Daressy's French.
point in the usurpation of Amasis than does our stela. It would seem that after the defeat of Apries, and his dethronement by Amasis, as related by Herodotus, Apries had taken advantage of Amasis' kindness, had after some three years made his escape and had gathered an army of Greeks, who were again defeated by Amasis, as recorded on our stela. If this reconstruction be correct, then this second battle, as being much like the first, was not properly distinguished by Herodotus, who says nothing of it. This seems to me more probable than to identify the battle of our stela with that of Herodotus, in which case Amasis had ruled over two years, at least, before he was attacked by Apries; and there would also be no sojourn of Apries in the custody of Amasis, as so particularly related by Herodotus.\(^a\) The account of Apries' death, as given by Herodotus, is difficult to harmonize with that on our stela on any hypothesis; but both sources agree in the statement that Amasis gave Apries honorable burial, according to Herodotus, among his ancestors at Sais.

999. There is contemporary evidence of the gradual rise of Amasis; for long after his assumption of the royal cartouche he continued to use his titles as a noble and a powerful palace official. Thus he inscribed his mother's sarcophagus\(^b\) as follows:

1000. Revered by her husband, royal confidante of Wahibre (\(W^\text{3}h\text{-}yb\text{-}R\text{3}, Apries\)), Teperet. Her lifetime was 70 years, 4 months, 15 days. The name of her mother was Mer-Ptah-Si-Hapi. It was her son who made it for her, the wearer of the royal seal, sole companion, chief of

\(^a\)Unless we suppose that Apries was captured in the battle on our stela (which does not mention the fact), sojourned with Amasis four or five months, and then escaped to the Greek ships, there to be slain.

\(^b\)Now in the Museum of Stockholm; published by Piehl (Petites Etudes, 32, and Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 28, 10); and Revillout (Revue égyptologique, II, 97).
the palace, prophet of Isis, master of the judgment-hall, aAhmose (Amasis), — Si-Neit.

1001. His mother was thus associated with, and perhaps related to, Apries, and Amasis' powerful connections thus aided him in usurping the throne. Herodotus' stories of his low birth are, therefore, unfounded.

1002. Year 3, second month of the third season (tenth month), under the majesty of King Amasis, beloved of Khnum, lord of the Cataract, and Hathor, residing in Zeme (D\(^2\)mw\(\text{t}\)), given all life, stability, satisfaction, like Re, forever.

1003. Here follows the statement that his majesty was in the palace-hall, deliberating the affairs of the land, when one came to say to his majesty: "Apries (H\(\text{c}\)-yb-R\(\text{c}\)), he has sailed southward — ships of f—1, while Greeks without number are coursing through the Northland — —1. They are wasting all Egypt; they have reached Malachite-Field, and those who are of thy party flee because of them."

1004. Then his majesty caused the royal companions and f—1 to be called, and informed them of what had happened. He addressed them with reassuring exhortations (ll. 5–7), and they replied with praise of Amasis, declaring that Apries had acted like a dog at a carcass (ll. 7–10).

\(\text{a}\)In cartouche. A libation basin in the Louvre (Pierret, Recueil d'inscriptions, I, 82; Revillout, Revue égyptologique, I, 51, and II, 69 ff.); Piehl, Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache, 28, 12, enumerates his titles, before he assumed the cartouche, thus: "Prince, sole companion, chief of the palace, master of the throne f—1, chief of temples, master of secret things of all affairs of the king, favorite of his lord, strong in mind for his lord, chief of the royal council-halls, master of the judgment-hall, Ahmose-Si-Neit-Wahibre, born of Tepert." It is, perhaps, to his mother's connection with Wahibre-Apries that the addition "Wahibre" to his name is due. Daressy's suggestion of another woman as the mother of Amasis (Recueil, 22, 143, 144) is without support in the monument adduced.

\(\text{b}\)Full fivefold titulary. Epithets belonging to the royal name.

\(\text{d}\)Possibly: "Now he hath remembered their place in Ph-c-n." Ph-c-n is a part of the Andropolite nome in the western Delta, but the reading of the name is quite uncertain.

\(\text{e}\)Sh-t-m/jk (sic!) is probably the same as Pr-H\(\text{t}\)-hr-M/jk, near Sais and Buto; see Daressy's note, Recueil, XXII, 8.
Said his majesty: "Ye shall fight tomorrow! Every man (hr-nb) to the front!" His majesty mustered his infantry and his cavalry. His majesty mounted upon his chariot; he took arrows and bow in his hand, he arrived at Andropolis, the army jubilating and rejoicing on the road.

1005. The introduction to the battle is totally unintelligible. Then follows (l. 12):

His majesty fought like a lion, he made a slaughter among them, whose number was unknown. Numerous ships took them, falling into the water, whom they saw sink as do the fish. Amasis triumphed.

1006. 14 Year 3, third month of the first season (third month), day 8, came one to say to his majesty: "The enemy infest the ways, there are thousands there, invading the land; they cover every road. As for those who are in the ships, they bear hatred of thee in their hearts without ceasing."

1007. Amasis then gave his troops instructions to scour "every road, not letting a day pass," without pressing the enemy (ll. 15, 16); whereupon the army greatly rejoiced, and proceeded to their task (l. 16). The enemy's ships were taken (l. 17), and Apries was probably surprised and slain while taking his ease on one of the vessels. "He (Amasis) saw his favorite fallen in his — which he had made before the water." Amasis had him buried as befitted a king, forgot the "abomination of the gods," which he had committed, and "he (Amasis) founded divine offerings in great multitude," for the mortuary observances of the fallen Apries.

SERAPEUM STELA

1008. As this stela records the life of an Apis, the duration of which fell entirely in Amasis' reign, it furnishes no data as to the exact length of his reign.

STATUE INSCRIPTION OF THE GENERAL AHMOSE

1013. The titles and epithets borne by this officer are the only contemporary evidence for the foreign campaigns of the latter part of the Saitic age. Ahmose's "beautiful name" shows that he was born under Psamtik II. He could hardly have become a general, therefore, before the reign of Ahmose II, under whom his duties in Nubia doubtless fell. His titles in the inscription are as follows:

1014. Commander of the army, Ahmose, whose beautiful name is Neferibre-nakht.

King's-messenger, fighting for his lord's sake in every country, doing what his majesty desires in Nubia (T³-pd't), governor of the two doors in the northern countries, prophet of Soped, lord of the East, Ahmose, etc. (as above).

same offices under the latter, becoming, likewise, his "chief physician." The Louvre statue was erected in Abydos, and bears an inscription narrating Pefnefdineit's notable achievements in support of Osiris and his temple. He claims the consideration of the god and his priesthood, because he constantly presented the needs of Abydos to King Amasis and secured wealth and buildings for the Abydos temple. Some of this work he personally superintended at Abydos, and he participated in the presentation of the Osirian drama there. His incessant activity for the cult of Osiris, although he was not a member of the royal family, is a striking example of the excessive religious zeal of the age, pictured so graphically by Herodotus.

1016. One of his achievements on behalf of Osiris is striking. A descendant of the ancient Thinite family, whose counts we still find in the Eighteenth Dynasty, was dispossessed of his income from the Great Oasis and from the local ferry, and Pefnefdineit had these revenues diverted to the treasury of Osiris. The income from the oasis was then devoted to meet the funeral expenses of the people of Abydos.

Titles of Pefnefdineit

1017. 1 The hereditary prince, count, sole companion, chief of the palace \((h\rho p-c \ h^c)\), chief physician, overseer of the gold-treasury, great one of the hall, great revered one in the king's-house, chief steward. Pefnefdineit, begotten of the chief of strongholds, local governor of Dep, prophet of Horus of Pe, Sisebek, says:

I was one distinguished by reason of what he had done, an excellent craftsman, establishing his house."

Attention to Abydos

1019. "I transmitted the affairs of Abydos to the palace, that his majesty might hear (them). His majesty commanded that I do the work in Abydos, in order that Abydos might be furnished. I did greatly in improving Abydos, I put all the things of Abydos in order; (whether) sleeping (or) waking, seeking the good of Abydos therewith. I besought favor from my lord every day, in order that Abydos might be furnished."

Temple and Equipment

1020. "I built the temple of the First of the Westerners in excellent and eternal work, as was commanded me from his majesty. He saw the prosperity in the affairs of the Abydos nome. I surrounded it with walls of brick, and the necropolis with granite, an august shrine of electrum, the adornments and the divine amulets, all the tables of the divine offerings (yhn-tr) were of gold, silver, and every costly stone. I built Wpīg, I set up its altars (ch), I dug its lake, planted with trees."

Temple Income

1021. "I provisioned the temple of the First of the Westerners, increasing that which came in to him, established as daily income. His magazine was settled with male and female slaves. I gave to him 1,000 stat of lands, of the fields of the Abydos nome; equipped with people and all small cattle; its name was made: 'Establishment (grīt)-of-Osiris,' in order that the divine offerings might be furnished from it throughout eternity. I renewed for him the divine offerings more plentifully than what was formerly there. I made for him arbors, planted with all date trees, and vineyards (with) people therein of

MORTUARY STELÆ OF THE PRIEST PSAMTIK

1026. The historical value of these stelæ consists solely in the chronological data which they furnish. From these data it is possible to establish the exact length of the Twenty-sixth Dynasty, and also the length of the reign of Apries, otherwise uncertain. The calculation is as follows:

Psamtik was sixty-five years, ten months, and two days old at his death in the twenty-seventh year of the reign of Amasis, on the twenty-eighth day of the eighth month. He was, therefore, born thirty-nine years, two months, and four days before the accession of Amasis. Now, the date of his birth is given as the first day of the eleventh month in year 1 of Necho; hence, Necho's accession was exactly forty \(^b\) years before that of Amasis. The length of the dynasty is, then, the total of the following items:

\begin{align*}
\text{Psamtik I} & \quad 54 \text{ years} \\
\text{Necho} & \quad 40 \quad " \\ \text{Psamtik II} & \quad 40 \quad " \\ \text{Apries} & \quad 44 \quad " \\ \text{Amasis} & \quad 44 \quad " \\ \text{Total} & \quad 138 \quad " \end{align*}
\]

\(^a\)Small stelæ in Leyden (V, 18 and 19), written with ink and rapidly becoming illegible; published by Piehl, (Inscriptions, III, XXVIII, G and H). I had also my own copy of the original which I collated with an old manuscript copy of Lefmanns, made while the stelæ were more legible than at present.

\(^b\)The computation is as follows:

\begin{align*} \text{Lifetime,} & \quad 65-10-2 \\
\text{Date of death,} & \quad 26-7-28 \\
\text{From birth to accession of Amasis,} & \quad 39-2-4 \\
\text{Date of birth in reign of Necho.} & \quad 10-1 \\
\text{Total} & \quad 40-0-5 \end{align*}
\]

The five days are, of course, the five epagomenæ.
As the fall of the dynasty occurred in 525 B.C., its accession took place in \((525 + 138) 663\) B.C.

1027. The length of the reign of Apries may also be determined from the same data, thus: the total of all the other reigns in the dynasty is as follows:

<table>

<th>Years</th>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amasis</td>

<td>119</td>

</tbody>

This total deducted from the 138 years’ duration of the dynasty leaves nineteen years for the reign of Apries.\(^a\) From the Elephantine Stela of Amasis we know that Apries lived over two years (i.e., into the third year) after the accession of Amasis, but these two years fall within the reign of the latter, and are not included in the nineteen years of Apries’ sole reign. The text is as follows:

1028. Year 1, third month of the third season, day 1, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Uhemibre \((Whm-\text{yb-Rc})\), Son of Re, Necho \((N-k^2w)\).

1029. On this good day was born the divine father, Psamtk, begotten of Ahuben \((Y^2h-wbn)\), born of Enkhetesi \((^c nhts)\). His good life was 65 years, 10 months, 2 days. Year 27, fourth month of the second season, day 28, was his day of departure from life. He was introduced into the Good House,\(^b\) and he spent 42\(^c\) days under the

\(^a\)A stela in Berlin (No. 15393) is dated in the seventeenth year of Apries.

\(^b\)This was the place of the embalmers, where he spent 42 days in process of embalmment, as is evident from the following context, Anubis being the embalmer. For a clear narrative of such mortuary proceedings, see the Miramar stela (Bergmann, Hieroglyphische Inschriften, VI, l. 10).

\(^c\)Leemanns read 42; I could see only 30 and a stroke, with room between for another 10, and at the end for several strokes (units). Piehl read 30+\(x\). The duplicate has clearly 42; but see next note.
hand of Anubis, lord of Tazoser. He was conducted in peace to the Beautiful West in the first month of the third season (ninth month), day $1$; and his life in the necropolis is forever and ever.

*aMerely the day-sign with no numeral. On the duplicate I could not read the numeral; Leemanns gives 2, and Piehl read 1. None of these numerals fits the case; 42 days after his death would bring the burial on the tenth of the tenth month.
As our texts both give ninth month, the 42 is evidently an error. It cannot be more than 32.*

PREFACE TO VOLUME V

These indices are the work of my friend and former pupil, Dr. O. A. Toffteen. I would take occasion to express to him here my thanks and appreciation for the labor and care which he has expended upon them. While the author has constantly supervised the compilation, yet the work has been that of Dr. Toffteen, and he is fully responsible for it. It should be said in justice to him, as well as perhaps to the author also, that the latter’s return to the Orient for another season left the compiler only a little over two months in which to complete his heavy task. He was obliged to work more hours a day and with more speed than was his desire, but I am sure that the usefulness of his work, and the persistent industry with which he has compiled his lists, will deserve lenient judgment, should any occasional errors in numbers be found. I hope also that the necessity for the separate publication of such exhaustive indices in a volume by themselves will be evident to any who may have expected to find them included in Volume IV. Aside from the fact that it would have rendered that volume (already far the largest of the set) much too bulky, it was thought highly desirable to give such a cyclopædia of the subject separate existence as a volume, rather than to absorb it in Volume IV, where it would be constantly lost to use, whenever anyone might be using Volume IV for some other purpose. Likewise if bound up with Volume IV, the employment of the indices by a reader would also have involved the needless use of Volume IV with them. The compilation of the index has disclosed an occasional inconsistency in rendering, and in a few cases also in the orthography of proper names, in view of which the author would only recall the long period of time and the numerous modifications involved in the slow progress of such a work as this.

In view of some remarks in one of the first reviews which have appeared, it should be stated that it was necessary to close the manuscript of these Records to any additions on October 1, 1904. Any works or texts which appeared after that date could not be included. An advance proof kindly sent me by Eduard Meyer enabled me to employ his invaluable Chronologie in revising the chronology in Volume I; and wherever possible I endeavored to insert in the proof important facts appearing in new books and current journals. But I could take up no new texts. The omission of Abydos texts, mentioned by Foucart (Journal des Savants, June, 1906, p. 336), was intentional, as no translatable document of importance is in Abydos, Volume I, the only volume out when my manuscript was handed in. Among these the inscription of "Nakhiti," which Foucart says I have overlooked, is in our own Haskell Museum, where it was received not long after its discovery. I was therefore not very likely to overlook it.

As I have stated in the general preface, circumstances beyond my control obliged me to read the proofs of these volumes, as well as those of my History of Egypt, between April and September, 1905, a period in which fell also the preparations for the expedition to Egypt under the auspices of the Oriental Exploration Fund, University of Chicago. There are therefore doubtless more typographical errors and corrigenda than I could wish. I have already noticed the following:

Vol. I, §182. The verb after "Ptah" is doubtless part of the name, so that the ny is dative and not the n-form. We should then render, "Ptahyutnai (PtH-ywH-ny), who made this for him, etc."

Vol. I, §185. For "field judge who," read "field judge, Kemethnenet (Kmtnnt), who."

Vol. I, §538. For "count of Siut," read "official of Siut."

Vol. I, before §707, at top of p. 313. Insert as a title, "REIGN OF AMENEMHET III."

Vol. II, p. 305, note a. For "has," read "have."

Vol. II, §854. For "Ibbet," read "Ibhet."

Vol. III, §309. For "K²-r²-ky-k$²" read "K²-r²-ky-$²."

Vol. III, §498. For "H²," read "H²m." This change is due to a collation of the original at Abu Simbel.

Vol. IV, §240. For "s²-mw," read "s³-mw."

Vol. IV, §455. For "r²-ry-m," read "r²-ry-m."

Vol. IV, §493. For "N²-r³-R³," read "N²-r³-R³."

Vol. IV, §815. For "Zeamamefonekh," read "Zeamonefonekh."

Vol. IV, §853. For "htm," read "htm."

Vol. IV, §874. For "Hnt-Hty," read "Hnt-Hty."

Vol. IV, §918. For "N²-c²-p²-ys-nht-t," read "N²-c²-p²-ys-nht-t."

Vol. IV, §921. For "B²-k³-R³," read "B²-k³-R³."

Vol. IV, §1028. For "whm," read "whm."

I would also note that the inscription recording a campaign in Syria, supposed to belong to Thutmose II (Vol. II, §125), has been shown by Sethe's examination of the original probably to belong to Thutmose I. Hence Naville was right in attributing the monument to the last-mentioned king (Deir-el-Bahari, Vol. III, p. 17). This makes the reign of Thutmose II still more ephemeral and unimportant.

The temples (Index II) will be found supplementary to the geography in Index VI. Inscriptions, however, are not placed under temples. The inscriptions of all sites will be found in the geographical index (VI). In compiling the list of temples it was found difficult to distinguish between the different temples in a given city, when such temples have perished, as, for example, at Memphis and Heliopolis. The differentiations made are probably not always correct. The index of Pharaohs includes also such queens as actually ruled; otherwise the queens will be found in Index IV. The documents, monuments, wars, etc., of the Pharaohs will be found under the numbered name, not under the throne-name. Thus, look for Thutmose III under Thutmose III, not under Menkheperre; the references to the latter name will be found appended to those of the former.

The historical development of terms should not be forgotten in using these lists. "Count," "mayor," and "prince" are all renderings of the same Egyptian term at different periods. In the same way, different connection often demands a different rendering of the same title; thus, "chief," "overseer," "master," and "governor" may be rendered from the same Egyptian title. Such a series is also "lord," "nomarch," and "ruler."
